CITY'S NEW MAGISTRATE

Judge William G De Meza Inducted into Office Amid Floral Display.

CONGRATULATED BY THE BAR.

A Hundred Friends Extend Congratulations While Bar Association Presents Floral Horseshoe.

Scores of citizens augmented a delegation from the Plainfield Bar Association yesterday morning in a greeting extended to Judge William G. De Meza, who sat in the city court for the first time. Judge De Meza was the recipient of congratulations at the hands of the visitors and his desk was a mass of flowers contributed by members of the bar and merchants of the city.

No prisoners were to be arraigned and immediately after the announcement of adjournment of the court until this morning, Counsellor J. Henry Crane arose and in behalf of the members of the bar presented to Judge De Meza an immense floral horseshoe and said:

"May it please your honor, on behalf of the members of the bar of the city it is my pleasure to felicitate you on your elevation to the bench of this court. The people of Plainfield have signally honored you and we join with them in approval of their choice. Your forte has been as an advocate before the bar of criminal justice and now you are called to the criminal bench.

"Your experience as an advocate, your deep knowledge of human nature, your broad sympathetic disposition, all eminently fit you for the honor conferred upon you and to uphold and maintain the honor and dignity with which it has been maintained by the eminent gentleman whom you have succeeded.

"We present to you this tribute of our esteem, the emblem of good fortune and bespeak for you happiness and success in your judicial career."

Judge De Meza responded happily, accepting the horseshoe which he said he believed represented the sentiments of his friends. He declared that he would endeavor to fill the position satisfactorily to everybody and that he would act without fear or favor dispensing justice in a manner to win the approval of his friends and the public at large.

Other floral pieces were sent in by Frank Linke, W. A. Schorb and others. Among the lawyers present were Winfield S. Angleman, Martin B. Stutsman, J. Henry Crane, Judge Rene V. P. Von Minden, Robert Newton Crane. Among the citizens were Charles H. Hand, P. J. Reville, Frank Linke, and many others. Many of those who had never been at headquarters before took the opportunity of inspecting the police building.

Judge De Meza is the second of the family to assume the judgeship of the city court. His brother, George De Meza, preceded Judge William N. Runyon, having served for two years and ten months, his term ending with his death in 1898. He is the son of the late George W. De Meza and Charlotte De Meza, of West Second street, and has a record as a practitioner in the criminal courts which is unique. In his thirteen years' practice but two cases have been decided against him. Judge De Meza is married and lives at 52 Sandford avenue, where he recently purchased a home.

Judge De Meza enjoys the esteem and friendship of a majority of the residents of this city and is well known for his courteous and urbane characteristics. It is believed that he will make an admirable magistrate. His commanding personality inspires confidence and that he will carry out his announced program of impartiality cannot be doubted.

Judge De Meza formally took over the office on Sunday at noon, receiving the keys of the desk and other appurtenances of his office as well as the congratulations of his predecessor, Judge William N. Runyon.

FIRST BAPTIST CHOIR REPEATS XMAS MUSIC

The quartet and chorus choir of the First Baptist church repeated the Christmas music at the church, Sunday evening, under the direction of Howard M. Case, organist and choirmaster, and was assisted by the Schill String Quartet, of Newark. The program was given entire and was thoroughly enjoyed by an audience that about filled the lower floor of the edifice. In the rendition of the anthems, the work of the choir seemed to be even better than on Christmas Sunday, while the singing of the soloists, Miss Ruth Harris, soprano; Miss Hazel Hatfield, contralto; William Holmes, baritone, and George Smith, tenor, left nothing to be desired.

Besides accompanying the choir in the rendition of anthems, the string quartet rendered Processional to the Cathedral, from Lohengrin; Album Leaf, Hollander; March from Athalie, Mendelssohn, and the execution was perfect. During the service, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor, delivered a twenty minute sermon appropriate to the occasion.

C. A. FREDERICKSON WEDS MISS MARIE E. THOMAS

Miss Marie E. Thomas, daughter of Mrs. Helen Thomas, of Spooner avenue, was married on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock to Charles A. Frederickson, son of Captain Christian Frederickson, of the local police department. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, in the parlor of the home which was prettily decorated for the occasion. The bridesmaid was Miss Jennie Thomas, a sister of the bride; the best man was Otto Frederickson, a brother of the groom.

After a reception and collation Mr. and Mrs. Frederickson left for a honeymoon trip to Binghamton, N. Y. Mr. Frederickson is in the employ of the Scott Printing Press Works and on his return from Binghamton will go either to Cuba or to Dallas, Texas, on business for the company.

Organ Broke Down.

The electrical apparatus connected with the organ of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church broke down Sunday morning just before the service began and the choir had to begin their service unaccompanied. Repairs were made and in the evening the organ recital was given by Alexander Russell, the organist, but owing to the illness of Miss Watt, the soprano of the quartet, the original musical program was not sung. Mr. Pilcher sang beautifully "My Soul Is Athirst for God" from Gaul's Holy City.

Masquerade Dance.

The Young Ladies' Sodality of St. Mary's church will hold a masquerade dance at St. Mary's school hall, this evening. The grand march will begin at 10 o'clock and there will be a prize for the most original costume.

To Act On Pastor's Resignation.

FOUGHT TWELVE ROUNDS

Two Colored Pugilists From Newark Fight for $50. Purse in Borough.

"BUDD" WHITE'S SECONDS QUIT.

Threw Up the Sponge When Their Man Was All but Knocked Out —Battle Fought in Broad Day Light.

Why North Plainfield was selected as the battle ground by Newark sports on Saturday afternoon will probably never be known, but that a twelve round prize fight was pulled off under the very noses of the police is an indisputable fact. The fight lasted for twelve rounds and the backers of "Budd" White went home broke as "Flatnose" Burrows made White quit, his seconds throwing up the sponge near the end of the twelfth round when White was bleeding from his eyes, ears and mouth.

The tip was quietly passed around at noon Saturday that there would be a scrap and lots of the colored gentry were put wise to the place and time. Between thirty and forty colored men surrounded the improvised ring when time was called for the first round in a patch of woods not more than a mile away from the brook which separates the two municipalities in the East End.

The affair was so quietly conducted that no white person witnessed the affair, and it was only after persistent sleuthing around that the details with the names of the principals were obtained. It was said that the affair was the outcome of a personal grudge growing out of a clash between lovers. White's face looked as though he had been hit by a battering ram while Burrows showed only a puffed eye and a split lip. Nearly all the men including the principals came here from Newark and after White was patched up and traces of the battle removed they returned to their homes some via trolley and others by an afternoon train. The purse fought for was said to have been $50.

DR. SCHENCK'S MOTHER PASSED AWAY YESTERDAY

Mrs. Catherine E. Schenck, daughter of the late Isaac Stryker and Gertrude Brokaw, died at 3 o'clock yesterday morning at the home of her son, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, on West Front street, aged eighty-five years. Her death was due to old age primarily, but the immediate cause was heart dropsy. This household has been sorely afflicted and the sympathy of a wide circle of friends and acquaintances is expressed for the bereaved family. Only a few weeks ago, Mrs. Schenck suffered the loss of her mother, Mrs. Jane Williams, and since then Mrs. Schenck has been very ill. This fact together with the severe affliction of Dr. Schenck has aroused the deepest sympathy.

Mrs. Schenck was born at Millstone, and was the widow of Josiah Schenck. She spent her girlhood days there, later removing to New Brunswick. Of late years she divided her time between New Brunswick and this city, living with her two sons, Rev. Isaac V. Schenck, of the former place, and Dr. Cornelius Schenck, of this city. She was a devoted and faithful member of the First Reformed church, of New Brunswick. Mr. Schenck came to Plainfield last Wednesday and was then in feeble health. She failed rapidly since that time, despite every care.

There were four children who lived to maturity, Rev. Jacob W. Schenck, pastor of the Reformed church at West Ghent, N. Y., who died in 1879, aged 29 years; Miss Annie B. Schenck, who died in 1882, aged 27 years. Rev. Isaac S. Schenck and Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, the last two, are living.

Mrs. Schenck was a life-long Christian. Her piety was deep, but undemonstrative. Her strong characteristics were loyalty, industry, unselfishness and throughout her long years she spared not herself in doing whatever her hands found to do for others.

Private funeral services will be held at the home of Rev. Dr. Schenck tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock and the interment will be at Millstone.

New Year's Receptions.

New Year's Day receptions were held yesterday at the homes of United States Senator John Kean and Congressman Charles N. Fowler in Elizabeth, and each one was largely attended by men more or less prominent from all parts of the State, including some from this city.

MESSAGE IN NUTSHELL

Following are the important points made in Mayor Moy's first annual message:

"We should discourage favoritism."

"Be ever watchful against extravagance."

"Firmly convinced that a very large majority of the people desire and expect that a municipal water supply will be installed."

Favors installation of municipal water works "without delay," obtaining supply "from our own underground."

Sewage disposal beds "inadequate to sustain for very long the burden imposed upon them." Must find a remedy.

Taxes "have not been equally assessed" and property not assessed at true value. The law should be enforced.

Weights and measures ordinance should be passed and an inspector appointed.

"All city supplies should be controlled by a purchasing department in charge of an officer appointed for that purpose."

Municipal control of disposal of garbage and ashes not of vital importance now, but will refer to it later.

Wants stop put to beer being distributed in wagons by dealers from other counties paying no license.

Favors expenditure of reasonable sum for a free dental clinic for poor children.

Demands enforcement of the law providing for keeping a record of bail money and unclaimed goods in the police department.

Trusts that playground movement be extended.

"City officials should receive an adequate salary for their service and all fees should be abolished."

"Recommends appointment of a board of guardians to stop sale of liquor to habitual drunkards and minors.

Sale of cigarettes to youths, violations of automobile speed laws, smoke, noise and bon-fire nuisances should be stopped.

"I do not think the city is receiving fair treatment from the P. S. C. in the matter of trolley service and I suggest that pressure be brought to bear to have this service improved. The same may be said of the street lights."

"Politics can have no place in the chamber set apart for the carrying on of the people's business."

"The people are at all times entitled to the fullest information concerning all things pertaining to the public welfare."

"Secret conclaves and caucuses are the relics of a by-gone age."

CHARLES BARRY DIES SUDDENLY AT HIS HOME

Charles Barry, the well known cabman, died suddenly at his home on Howard street at 1 o'clock this afternoon. He had been indisposed for the past week and remained in the house this morning. He was seated in a chair when a stroke of apoplexy came upon him and he passed away in a moment. Dr. Pittis was summoned but could do nothing.

Mr. Barry was fifty-four years old and had lived here for nearly half that time. He had been engaged in the cab business for a long time and through it was widely known in the city and borough. He is survived by a wife and six children.

MISS BARBARA FLEMING INTRODUCED TO SOCIETY.

MAYOR MOY'S MESSAGE

New Executive Refers to City's Needs in Addressing Common Council.

FOR "M. O." WATER PLANT.

That and Sewage Disposal System of Prime Importance—Better Trolley Service and Other Valuable Suggestions.

Mayor George W. V. Moy assumed his official duties on Sunday in an informal manner. Former Mayor Charles Joel Fisk presented the keys of his office to the incoming Chief magistrate on Saturday and during the evening gave a helping hand to Mr. Moy in re-arranging his office. There was no formal reception held yesterday, the Mayor simply receiving the calls of a large number of taxpayers and well-wishers with a cordial shake of the hand and a hearty wish for a happy and prosperous new year.

The new Mayor's first message delivered to the Common Council last night follows:

"Plainfield, N. J., Jan. 2, 1911.

"To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield, N. J.

"Gentlemen—Pursuant to what appears to be the usual custom, and in obedience to what I believe to be my duty under the law, I beg to submit my views on the following matters, as being of some interest to your honorable body. Aside from the custom, it is quite proper that the Council should have, as near as may be, a forecast of the policy to be pursued by the incoming administration, which policy must be predicated upon the platform, if any, upon which the Mayor has been elected, for it must be regarded as the wish of the people to have the platform upon which the candidate is elected, carried out, and in this respect it may not be improper for me to refer briefly to some things upon which I have heretofore made public comment.

"I believe in giving to the public service the best there is in us. We should discourage favoritism, be ever watchful against extravagance and always economical with the people's money (and 'tis oft times difficult, and requires a nice discrimination to distinguish between a real and a fancied need). Economy does not imply niggardliness; however, we must keep abreast of the times to successfully carry on the city business, even as we would our own affairs.

"The first duty of the governing body is to determine upon that which is absolutely necessary to be done, to protect the lives and the health of the community, and then, having taken care of the essentials, turn to those things which, though not absolutely indispensable, yet may be said to add to the comfort and enjoyment of all, and effect a real betterment of conditions for the advantage of all.

"There are two questions of the greatest importance affecting this community which should have your first consideration. The one is water supply; the other is sewage disposal. I am firmly convinced that a very large majority of the people desire and expect that a municipal water supply will be installed. I recognize that it requires considerable courage on your part to vote a bond issue necessary to carry on this matter to a final completion, and in my opinion it must be done and without delay, and I may say further that it seems proper that the water should be obtained from our own underground supply.

"The sewage disposal beds appear, from the report of the committee on sewers, which is before you, to be inadequate to sustain for very long, the burden imposed upon them. It will therefore, be your duty to determine the course to be pursued in finding a remedy for this difficulty. Both of these questions might well

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The election for fire department officers will be held tonight in the company rooms. It is reported that Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company will not put a ticket in the field as they are satisfied that the Bucket and Engine Company can outvote them. The Bucket and Engine Company members, however, do not intend to be caught napping and will hustle to get out the full vote.

The People's Ice Company started to harvest its winter crop of ice on Sunday. The two houses were about half filled when the rain began and the work had to be abandoned for the time being. Only one accident occurred during the day, Albert Walpole faking an involuntary bath. Handy ice hooks were used and Albert was dragged out colder but none the worse for the plunge.

The year 1911 was ushered in here with noise. The members of the Baptist church held a social and old-fashioned watch meeting. The day itself was more quiet as everyone seemed to be satisfied with the opening welcome.

One good 1911 resolution: Have the Daily Press left at your door every night during the year and keep in touch with local affairs.

The public schools reopened this morning after a holiday vacation of ten days, which has been fully enjoyed by scholars and teachers.

Miss Harriett M. Squires has returned from a week's stay at Atlantic City.

Mrs. Alfred Lacey, of Plainfield, has been visiting friends in town.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The public school pupils of Dunellen and New Market assembled for studies today after the Christmas holidays. The majority of the teachers were away during the vacation and returned yesterday. Principal Guy H. Reutschler, of the borough schools, spent the time at his old home in Pennsylvania.

The watch-night service in the Methodist church New Year's eve, was well attended. The congregation is now interested in the evangelistic services that will be continued during the next two weeks.

Charles E. Tinsman, of the borough, entered upon his new duties today in the real estate office of Greenway, Park & Davis, of 178 Broadway, New York. He will have charge of the farms department.

The Dunellen Board of Education will meet tonight. It will be the first session of the year but no business of importance is on the slate.

Miss Estelle Tomlinson, of New Market, has returned home after a week's visit with relatives in New York.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church will hold a meeting at the home of Mrs. J. P. G. Kinney.

Samuel B. Merrill has returned from a three weeks' visit with his son in Newark.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Henry Suydam has recovered from a severe attack of poison, which he contracted while cutting wood in the swamp on the Ohl farm.

The Baraca Class of the Baptist church gave a moving picture entertainment in the church Saturday evening.

John Linnaberry, ticket agent at the Lehigh Valley station, is detained at home by illness.

PERSONAL

Mrs. William Bright, of Boston; Miss Esther Jones and Miss Cornelia McKee, of Brooklyn, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Leader, of Duer street, from Saturday until today. Miss McKee and Mrs. Leader are sisters.

Rev. J. T. Shock, of Duer street, officiated Saturday afternoon at the funeral of Richard D. Brokaw at Bound Brook. When Mr. Shock was pastor of the Reformed church at Bound Brook, he married Mr. Brokaw.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Alfred Cooper, who plays the part of Hezekiah Jenke, in Edgar Selwyn's brightest comedy of city life, "The Country Boy," which Henry B. Harris will present at the Plainfield theatre tonight, is a Chicago boy, who has made rapid progress on the stage. Mr. Cooper received his early education in his native city and was interested in the production of amateur plays, and at last determined to go on the professional stage. He secured a position with a stock company at St. Paul and his clever work there attracted the attention of the New York managers. Mr. Harris heard of Mr. Cooper and secured him for his special company of "The Country Boy." Besides being an actor of ability, Mr. Cooper has written many short stories. His bright novelette, "Elgo," attracted much attention last year and Mr. Cooper is now at work on a series of humorous stories about the different phases of life an actor sees in his travels on the road. This is a broad field and as Mr. Cooper has a delightful sense of humor his stories will undoubtedly have the same effect on the reader as "The Country Boy" has on the audience; namely, that of dispelling that feeling of depression we all suffer with at times.

REPEATED XMAS MUSIC AT FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

Only a small congregation heard the repetition of the Christmas music in the First Presbyterian church on Sunday evening, but those who braved the rain were amply repaid. This quartet has never sung better than it did on Sunday, the soloists admirably sustained by Organist Clifford A. Braider, literally sang their way into the hearts of all who heard them.

Harry Rowe Shelley's "Star of the Orient" and Harker's cantata, "The Star of Bethlehem" were both rendered in masterly fashion. There were solos for each of the four parts all splendidly sung. Miss De Cant sang her solo, "How Beautiful Upon the Mountains," with delicious freshness and beauty of tone. Mrs. C. Kendall Mason, Aleck MacGowan and C. P. Titsworth all contributed their share to a successful interpretation of the music.

VAN ARSDALE MADE PRESIDENT

Chief Executive Says Harmony Prevails and Re-appoints all Officials—Some of His Suggestions.

The North Plainfield Common Council met in the borough chambers yesterday for the purpose of re-organization and the beginning of business for the new year. Mayor N. B. Smalley was in the chair and the newly elected members of the body, Alex Milne, was escorted to his seat by Councilman VanArsdale.

According to his annual custom, Mayor Smalley addressed the Council on the important questions apt to be brought up and a general review of the borough affairs. He stated at the outset that such complete harmony existed in all departments he would make practically no changes in his appointments and hoped that the same condition of things would prevail during 1911.

"I will appoint no borough counsel," the mayor continued, "as we have had none for some time but secured our advice from time to time as we needed it. The sewage commission has been guided in this way and will do so until some other arrangement is made."

The mayor said that in past years economy had always been practised in all departments of the borough and he intimated that it would be wise to adhere to absolute economic lines.

"The location of our borough," Mr. Smalley went on, "limits us to a great extent to our needs and I hope the time will come when we will not have to call upon the township of North Plainfield for things we want. The location of the proposed sewage disposal beds is an instance of this kind, but I believe this matter will be taken care of at Trenton during the month.

"The mention of sewers brings to mind that all large improvements mean more taxes and for this reason anything that can be done to secure a revenue as well as keeping the rate down is sure to revert to the benefit of the community. Taking this view, I favor and always have favored, the installation of a public water plant in North Plainfield. I believe there is a plentiful supply about us that can be pumped at less cost than the people are now paying and at the same time add something to the borough treasury. There are lots of towns in New Jersey that are doing it profitably and there is no reason why we should not."

The mayor told the councilmen he hoped they would not hesitate to express their opinions while in session and to introduce any resolution they believed would be for the public good. He said if he agreed with them he would back them up, and if he didn't he would oppose them honestly.

"During the coming year," he went on, "I hope some one in this Council will introduce an ordinance to widen Somerset street from Jackson avenue north. We have had an opportunity to see the benefit derived from the improvement in the lower end and know that it will be appreciated. I also want to see the macadamizing of upper Watchung avenue attended to."

Referring to the underground conduit commission recently appointed, the mayor said he could not say anything as he had not received any report. When he does, he said, he would act upon any suggestion made and either continue or dismiss the commission. The opinion prevailed that a favorable report will be made to have public conduits installed while the streets are torn up for sewers.

The mayor announced these appointments, afterward ratified by the Council: Borough clerk, Frederick A. Martin; borough physician, Dr. D. C. Adams; overseer of the poor, Fred Becker; borough engineers, H. C. Van Emburgh and F. J. Hubbard; recorder, Charles Dolliver; members of the Board of Health, A. E. Kenney and C. H. Rugg; chief marshal, George Weiss; chief of fire department, William McCullough; tillermen, Albert Fritz, William Hogaa

Mayor Smalley also made the usual appointments of special marshals and call men for the fire department. The councilmanic committees were announced and include but few changes.

Later in the session Morris C. Van Arsdale was elected president of the Council, Mr. Woolston making the nomination. After passing the customary salary resolutions, no changes occurring, Council adjourned to meet in regular session next Friday night.

Offers Cheap Interest for a Home Builder or Buyer

It figures out about like this, as a series will run out in twelve years: If $2,000.00 is borrowed (other amounts in same proportion),

| He pays $10.00 a month dues for 144 months | $1,440 00 |
| He pays $10.00 a month interest for 144 months at 6 per cent. | 1,440 00 |
| Entrance fee, search, etc., about | 25 00 |
| Total amount paid | $2,905 00 |
| He has the use of | 2,000 00 |
| At a cost for 12 years of | $ 905 00 |

Which is actual net interest of only 3¾ per cent. per annum.

This is on a basis of 6 per cent. When no money is on hand, the Association will provide money for the borrower at a very slight premium.

The regular meetings of the association are held at its rooms, 109 Park Avenue, on the third Monday evening of each month. New series are opened at each regular meeting. # MAYOR MOY'S MESSAGE be discussed at considerable length, but I know that you are so familiar with them that it would be useless for me to say more.

Taxes.

"It is apparent to anyone who has taken the trouble to consider the matter that taxes have not been equally assessed in the city; that the law has not been complied with, requiring that all property be assessed at its true value. This is a matter perhaps not within your immediate power and control, and yet it is full worthy of your consideration. The law should be enforced, and your moral support to its enforcement should be given.

Weights and Measures.

"From the somewhat startling results of investigations in other municipalities disclosing practices of dishonest dealers, it would appear that the ordinance which I understand has been drawn, relating to weights and measures, should be passed, and an inspector appointed. This we owe to the public, and to honest dealers, as a protection against dishonest dealers.

Purchasing Department.

"The purchase of all city supplies should be controlled by a purchasing department in charge of an officer employed for that purpose, and I strongly urge that you give to this your earnest consideration.

Municipal Control of Disposal of Garbage and Ashes.

"This subject has been before various councils at various times, and the only result thus far has been the acquisition of a worthless disposal plant, on which the city has been paying interest for a number of years. The question of garbage disposal is one to which I have not given much thought, nor do I deem it of vital importance at this time; it is, however, worthy of mention, and I will, with your permission, address you again at a future time concerning the same.

Depository of Public Moneys.

"The public money should be deposited equally in the various banking institutions of the city, carrying checking accounts, and the balances equally maintained so far as conveniently may be. There certainly should be no favoritism shown in this matter.

Sale of Liquor.

"My attention is directed to the fact that beer is being distributed around the city in wagons by dealers from other counties, without the payment of any license to this city. This is a peculiar situation presenting a nice legal question, but I trust we shall be able to put a stop to this practice, at any rate we will make a strong effort.

Dental Clinics.

"The question of establishing a dental clinic has been placed before me, and I feel that the expenditure of a reasonable sum for this purpose would result in great benefit, especially to the poor children of the city.

Bail Money and Unclaimed Goods.

"I have made inquiry as to the disposition of bail money and unclaimed goods coming in the hands of the police department, and I find that for the past several years no record has been kept of these matters. This should be inquired into and the law of 1909, Chapter 214, relating to money and goods coming into the hands of the police department and providing for the disposition of the same, should be enforced.

Children's Play Grounds.

"I have been very glad indeed to note the utilization of the school yards as children's play grounds during the warm season, and I trust this work may be extended and other school yards made use of. Anything that shall appear to be of real benefit to the children will always have my earnest sympathy and support.

Fees and Salaries.

"City officials should receive an adequate salary for their service, and all fees should be abolished.

"I may say generally, that I observe too many cigarette smoking boys; too many drunken men; too many automobiles violating the speed laws by reckless running, violating the health law with smoke and noise; too many bonfires kindled in the streets with the resultant litter of unburned fragments and of ashes blown hither and yon, all of which may be corrected by an enforcement of the laws.

"Cigarettes may not be sold or given to boys of less than eighteen years of age; liquor may not be sold or given to habitual drunkards, or those likely to become such, provided a Board of Protectors be appointed under the act of 1909, having power to direct liquor dealers to desist from selling or giving liquor to habitual drunkards, or those likely to become such and I recommend the appointment of such a board.

"The automobile law regulates the running of automobiles, and the Board of Health has control over that which is detrimental to the health of the community and therefore, over the smoke and noise of the automobiles; so it is after all the enforcement of the existing laws that is required.

"I have not attempted, as you will observe, to enter into an acute analysis of the doings of the various city departments for the past year, for the reason that you have before you, embodied in the reports for the year, much fuller information that I could possibly give you. I may say that I do not think the city is receiving fair treatment from the Public Service Corporation in the matter of trolley service, and I suggest that pressure be brought to bear to have this service improved. The same may be said of the street lights.

"Some of the matters touched upon may appear to you as being trivial, and it may not be amiss for me to state that it was with considerable diffidence that I brought myself to the task of presenting to a body of seasoned legislators (for with one exception you have all seen councilmanic service) the views of one who is for the time being somewhat of a novice in the handling of municipal affairs, and in reading and considering this, my maiden effort, you will, I trust, consider my lack of experience. Permit me to say that I consider that the acceptance of a public office, either elective or appointive, carries with it an unvoiced pledge of absolute fidelity to the duties of that office. Politics can have no place within the chamber set apart for the carrying on of the people's business. The people are entitled at all times to the fullest information concerning all things pertaining to the public welfare. Secret conclaves and caucuses are the relics of a bygone age, and should be relegated to that place in history to which they belong. You are the law making body, and upon you devolves the responsibility for the laws enacted by you. The Mayor is the chief executive officer of the city upon whom falls the burden of enforcing the laws of the State and the city, and in this particular the Mayor will endeavor to do his duty.

"I am your obedient servant,

"GEORGE W. V. MOY,

ready to receive any communication. Mr. Mygatt presented the Mayor's message to be read.

Mayor Moy appointed R. H. B. Dalley, Robert McCormick and John J. King as special policemen for the year, and the same were confirmed on motion of Charles C. Randolph, head of the police committee. The usual resolution offered by Mr. Randolph, and adopted, provided that each special deposit $5 upon his appointment, $2.50 of which will be deposited in the police pension fund, according to law and the balance returned to the officers.

The council adjourned to meet Tuesday night, January 10.

MUCH BEING DONE TO END CONSUMPTION

With a record of 28 per cent. of all cases treated during the year apparently cured, the board of managers of the New Jersey Sanatorium for Tuberculosis Diseases in their annual report to the Governor show what they believe to be most gratifying results in the war that is being waged against the great white plague. The board is much encouraged by the results attained, and calls attention to the fact that the efficient work of the sanatorium cannot be gauged alone by the number of patients treated, but that in its benefits must be included the missionary work in the anti-tuberculosis battle which is being done by discharged patients upon their return to their homes and workshops.

During the last year 287 patients were treated for a period longer than one month, and the results were that 80 were apparently cured, 112 were arrested, 65 improved and one died. The 28 per cent. of cures of all the cases treated meant that 192 patients left the institution in physical condition of a calibre to enable them to be self-sustaining.

Among the improvements at the institution noted in the report is the enlargement of the original shack and the addition of a new shack in course of erection, which will increase the capacity of the sanatorium by fifty patients, which will make a total capacity of 175 patients. An artesian well has been sunk and paid for out of an appropriation of $7,500 made by the last Legislature for the establishment of an adequate water supply, which is still in process of development. The sum of $20,000 was spent for the building of an improved road leading from the railway station at Glen Gardner to the institution.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Martine's Title to the Senatorship.

Thirteen out of the twenty-one counties in New Jersey elected Democratic Assemblymen at the November election. The total vote for Democratic Assembly candidates at the primaries in these thirteen counties was 78,647. At the same primaries in these same counties 58,156 Democratic voters expressed their preference for United States Senator, and of these 42,502 voted for Mr. Martine.

It thus appears that in those counties to which the Democrats owe their majority in joint session and their ability to elect a United States Senator, seventy-five per cent. of those who voted on the Senatorial matter expressed a preference for Mr. Martine. It also appears that almost fifty-five per cent. of all who voted for Democratic Assemblymen in these thirteen counties also voted for Mr. Martine for United States Senator.

This effectually disposes of the claim that the vote in the Senatorial primary was a farce and was never intended to be taken seriously.

To assert that claim is to convict more than one-half of the voters who named the present Democratic Assembly majority of insincereity, and if they were not sincere in voting for Mr. Martine it is but logical to conclude that they were equally insincere in voting for the Assembly candidates.

On that basis Mr. Martine's title to the office which he seeks is just as valid as that of any of the Democratic Assemblymen who will be called upon to vote for a Senator.

When one remembers that the Democratic party is on record as favoring the popular election of United States Senators, that a Democratic Assembly unanimously passed the law under which the vote was taken and that Mr. Martine received a majority of thetotal number of Democratic votes cast at the primaries in the counties which eleced Democratic Assemblymen, it is difficult to see how his title to the office could be more perfect and indisputable in the absence of a constitutional amendment.—Newark Evening News.

REV. DR. J. A. CHAMBLISS CHAMPIONS MR. MARTINE

That James E. Martine, the popular choice for the United States Senate has other champions than those politically identified with him, is evident from the letter of Rev. Dr. John A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, published in the Newark Evening News. Dr. Chambliss takes pains to tell the public that notwithstanding the sarcastic references of some of the newspapers to Mr. Martine's candidacy, the "farmer orator" is by no means deficient in the qualifications necessary for this high office. Dr. Chambliss says in part:

"If we are to judge of the 'necessary requirements' for the Senate of the United States by the men who have been too often chosen (from New Jersey, for example, and New York and Pennsylvania, not to say Montana) it is not too much to Mr. Martine's discredit to admit that he is not of that calibre. But if incorruptible honesty in politics and in business, together with good education, vigorous intelligence, unblemished name among neighbors and the manners of a gentleman are included among the true 'requirements' for the United States Senate then, so far forth, Mr. Martine is well furnished.

"It is not here in Plainfield, where his life has been passed, that the 'general opinion' concerning him, referred to above, exists. Plainfield is a Republican stronghold and, as you know, has some reputation for culture and refinement, and yet here the 'general opinion' of Mr. Martine is just that which I have indicated.

"The fact that he is commonly spoken of as the 'farmer orator' has perhaps led strangers to suppose he is rustic and uncouth in manners and speech. On the contrary he is gentlemanly in bearing, and his speeches when the occasion requires, are graceful and appropriate, and often beautiful."

The sentiments of Dr. Chambliss find echo in the hearts and minds of many of the cultured and refined of this city and today many were loud in their praise of the open stand taken by Dr. Chambliss and for his splendid tribute to the character and accomplishments of Mr. Martine.

THE HARVEST MOON

Dora had appeared at rehearsal promptly on Tuesday, and this fact, coupled with her apparent happiness, braced Holcomb for what was already a trying ordeal. He had made some suggestions for changes in the cast, but the management had its own not particularly high minded reasons for inflicting on him absolutely incompetent people, and, to make matters worse, Ludlow, who had been his friend, seemed to take a special delight in thwarting him and letting the performance down frequently. Playing opposite to Dora as he did, the leading man seemed to get particular pleasure out of annoying Holcomb by being just a shade too familiar with the young lady. Despite all this, the rehearsals moved fairly rapidly, and they were ready for production three weeks after they had started. To add to Holcomb's troubles, however, it had been decided against his better judgment and fervent pleadings to open "flat" in New York city.

He had been an actor long enough to know that at least three or four performances outside of the metropolis were necessary for an adequate presentation of a play, at least on the part of the actors. Only those who have come in intimate contact with the spectacle can appreciate the overwrought and hysterical attitude that the average actor takes toward his first appearance in New York. For some reason the majority of the managers encourage this high strung attitude, explaining their belief in it by the statement that the actor gives a better performance when he is in a hysterical condition than when he is calm. Actors themselves have gone so far as to say that an actor who has all his self possession on the first night is not endowed with genius.

Dora had been stopping with Mrs. Winthrop, whose son, having completed his wanderings, was taking his amatory defeat with a new calm. Mrs. Winthrop had done everything possible to make Dora happy, and at her suggestion Holcomb invited Mrs. Winthrop, her son and Judge Elliott to be present at the dress rehearsal which was to begin on Sunday night. Had Holcomb been in charge absolutely the play would have progressed very smoothly, for even with his limited experience he had definite ideas of what he wanted and a gift for expressing them precisely. Being a young author, however, his authority was limited purely to the lines and the actors, while almost an entire regiment of "bottle holders" had final say on matters that were considered their departments.

He had intended to run through the play act by act without interrupting. His plan was to make notes as they went along of such changes as he desired and have the corrections made when the act was finished. The two managers who had the final say in all matters had a different method, and these, aided by costumers, a so called expert on lights, the scene builder and an officious consulting playwright, dragged the first act along until 1 o'clock.

There was a pause for coffee and sandwiches before the tired company and a few faithful auditors, scattered about the darkened auditorium, entered on the second act. At the conclusion of this part of the play Holcomb, to add to his other troubles, saw that Ludlow was giving an entirely different interpretation of the part from that which the author had intended. Instead of making the young lover that he played a fresh, romantic creature of circumstance, Ludlow was endowing him with all the sinister qualities that made his own off the stage character interesting if not healthy. He had interrupted the actor time and time again to ask him to get back to the original key and had always been answered with a polite and sometimes mocking "Yes, sir," but had succeeded in making no change. Dora, too, he had been obliged to criticise, for she seemed to be taking Ludlow's cue.

When, therefore, the two came to their "big lovemaking scene" in the third act Holcomb completely lost control of himself. As he looked back at it afterward he knew that he had done wrong, but he excused himself on the ground of the nervous tension under which he had been working and the fact that this particular scene as interpreted by Dora meant even more to him than did his play.

Not only did they give the speeches that they delivered a character that he had never thought of, but they introduced "bits of business" which were to him repulsive interpolations.

"Stop it!" he shouted in the middle of their scene, jumping from his seat and rushing down the aisle. "Stop it, for God's sake! The whole thing is damnably vulgar! What do you mean?" And then, directing his words to Ludlow, he said:

"If you can't play this part the way I rehearsed it I don't want you to play it at all. This man whom you are playing is a gentleman, and he acts like a gentleman."

"Are you quite sure," said Ludlow, with a sneer, "that you are able to recognize a gentleman?"

But, enraged as he was, Holcomb was hardly prepared for Dora's remark.

"Do you think, Mr. Holcomb," she said, apparently as uncontrolled as he was, "that you could rehearse one in the manners of a gentleman?" And without another word she walked off the stage.

Holcomb rushed through the stage box and tried to pacify her.

"Don't talk to me," she said. "In a way I am glad that this has happened. It has shown me what I am to expect."

"But, Dora, dear, you don't understand what you were doing. You don't appreciate how it looked from the front. This man Ludlow was pitching things in a key that was absolutely repulsive and vulgar."

"And you expect me," exclaimed the girl, "to allow you to call me vulgar in public?"

"My dear girl," began Holcomb, but at this moment Mrs. Winthrop, Judge Elliott and Graham made their way back on the stage and, turning away from the unfortunate young author, she made for her dressing room and closed the door on him with a bang.

"I think you made a lot of fuss over nothing," said the two managers, who had also come through the stage box.

"But that isn't what I wanted, and it's my play.

"Yes," said the senior partner, "but you don't want to forget that it's our money, and Ludlow is the best man in his line in America, and, while you may be able to write a play, you can hardly teach him how to act."

There were more words of the same nature, Ludlow standing by indifferently, and the act was concluded, the stage manager reading Dora's part.

As for Holcomb, he had quarreled with Dora. He could hardly understand how he had allowed such a disheartening circumstance to occur, and her defiant attitude toward him seemed to sound a warning note to him as of impending disaster.

It cannot be said that the Winthrops and Judge Elliott viewed this scene with any great sorrow. To them it simply seemed that Holcomb had played into their hands and that the explosion would result in Dora's giving up her idea of going on the stage and surely that of marrying the dramatist. As they drove home little was said except what was soothing to the girl's feelings, though they were hardly prepared for her parting statement that, provided an apology was forthcoming from Holcomb, she would appear the next night and would continue in the part until the management had had an opportunity of obtaining and rehearsing some one else. But, even in the face of this, Mrs. Winthrop, whose love for her son was an abiding and dominant part of her life, had hopes that it would once more reinstate him in Dora's affections and bring about a match which she had long planned and eagerly desired.

Holcomb had left several cards and made many telephone calls at the apartment of Mrs. Winthrop before he was able to see Dora the next day. He had no sleep, for after the rehearsal he had a long argument with the manager and an even sharper wrangle with Ludlow and had then set to work making some changes that the officious consulting playwright had insisted upon.

When Dora did see him near noontime it was against the advice of her friend and her father's attorney, who, with a tact that is sometimes purely legal, had sent a telegram to Professor Fullerton, suggesting that his presence on the ground might bring about the desired result of having Dora go back home, a telegram that drew—not Fullerton, but Aunt Cornelia.

"Dora," pleaded the young man the moment he entered the room, "you cannot mean what you say in this letter"—one that she had written and sent by messenger before she had gone to bed that morning.

"I do mean it," she replied. "A man cannot say that he loves a woman when he treats her in public in the way you treated me last night."

"But that isn't what I wanted, and it's my play.

"Yes," said the senior partner, "but you don't want to forget that it's our money, and Ludlow is the best man in his line in America, and, while you may be able to write a play, you can hardly teach him how to act."

When Dora did see him near noontime it was against the advice of her friend and her father's attorney, who, with a tact that is sometimes purely legal, had sent a telegram to Professor Fullerton, suggesting that his presence on the ground might bring about the desired result of having Dora go back home, a telegram that drew—not Fullerton, but Aunt Cornelia.

"Dora," pleaded the young man the moment he entered the room, "you cannot mean what you say in this letter"—one that she had written and sent by messenger before she had gone to bed that morning.

UNION COUNTY COURT OPENS THIS MORNING

The January term of court opened at Elizabeth, this morning, with Justice James J. Bergen and Judge Edward S. Atwater on the bench. There was the usual large number of lawyers from all parts of the county in court. Judge E. Clark Wittemore, on behalf of the Union County Bar Association, presented a set of resolutions recognizing the death of Craig A. Marsh, and they were ordered spread on the minutes of the association.

The Plainfield members of the Grand Jury for the present term are Julius Williams, Augustus F. Jenkins, Cornelius VanHerwerden and Henry Leifke. The term gives promise of being a short one so far as the number of cases is concerned.

WEDDING PLANS CHANGE DUE TO SISTER'S ILLNESS.

Owing to the fact that Miss Anna G. Fisk, the youngest daughter of former Mayor and Mrs. Charles Joel Fisk, is ill at her home with scarlet fever, the home in West Seventh street is quarantined. Consequently a change in the wedding plans of Charles W. Fisk and Mrs. Katharine G. Felton has been made. The ceremony will take place at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, Thursday afternoon.

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, will officiate, and only a few relatives and friends will be present.

Miss Fisk was taken ill on Saturday, but it was not determined until yesterday that she had scarlet fever. The Board of Health was notified and Health Officer O'Brien went to the Fisk home, fumigated all those who desired to leave the premises and then quarantined the house.

MISS ROMONA HARPHAM NOW MRS. CHARLES DIEHL.

Miss Romona Harpham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Harpham, of 214 East Fifth street, and Charles Diehl, of this city, were married at 8 o'clock last evening at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Frank Diehl was the matron-of-honor, and Frank Diehl, brother of the groom, was best man. A reception and supper followed. After a trip the couple will reside with the bride's parents. The groom is employed by J. G. Williams & Co., the West Front street grocers.

Week of Prayer at Grace M. E.

The week of prayer service will be observed in Grace M. E. church this week for four nights, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Each meeting will be in charge of a different organization of the church, the Sunday school acting in this capacity tonight. The speaker for this evening will be Rev. E. S. Lewis, of New York, associate editor of the Methodist Sunday school periodicals. All interested are invited to attend.

HEALTH BOARD REPORT

There Were 497 Births and 318 Deaths in Plainfield Last Year.

STATISTICS OF INSPECTIONS.

It Cost $8,813.83 to Run the Department for Twelve Months—Want City to Collect Garbage.

The twenty-second annual report of the Board of Health presented to the Common Council, Monday night, contains a great deal of interesting information. The most important work for the year was the inspection of milk. During November, all the samples of milk obtained from the twenty-nine distributors had a bacterial count under 50,000 cubic centimeter. There were nineteen with less than 30,000, six with less than 10,000 and one with only 3,850.

A vigorous house to house inspection was made in the most congested portions of the city during the spring and early summer. This work will be continued. A new apparatus has been installed for analyzing air and during the winter it is proposed to test the ventilation and atmosphereic conditions present in the public schools, theatres, shops and public meeting places generally.

Progress is being made in the preparation of the new health code. The old one dates back to 1902. The board has decided to furnish free of charge to the indigent poor of the city, curative and immunizing doses of antitoxin. The question of the collection and disposal of garbage is still unsolved. It is hoped that some conclusion will be reached this year.

The report of the treasurer, E. W. Dunn, shows the total receipts with last year's balance to be $8,813.83 and disbursements of $8,020.25, making the present balance, $793.60.

The routine work of the year has been carried on as usual and in addition the pure food law has been enforced at a considerable cost of time and effort. The board recommends that the Common Council appoint a committee to co-operate with the board in the adoption of some proper method of municipal garbage collection and disposal.

During the year there were 190 marriages, 497 births, 19 still-births and 318 deaths. Of the deaths 159 were male and 159 female, while 276 were white and 42 colored. The rate per thousand population was 15.47 which is a little higher than for the previous year. Over 52 per cent. of the deaths were persons over forty years of age.

The number of communicable diseases during the year, as shown by the following table, is not abnormal in any way: Scarlet fever, 72, two deaths; diphtheria, 48, two deaths; typhoid fever, 25, three deaths; tuberculosis, 62, 37 deaths; measles, 80; chicken-pox, 82; anterio poliomyelitis, 2, a total of 321. In addition, three cases of scarlet fever and seven cases of typhoid fever were brought to the hospital from out of town for treatment.

According to the usual custom, formaldehyde was used for disinfecting. In all 682 rooms were disinfected for various diseases, 191 houses, 14 carriages, three cases at the hospital.

The report devotes much attention to the desired improvement of garbage and refuse collection and the need of it. Twenty-one men licensed by the department collect the garbage from a possible two-thirds of the houses in Plainfield. They have no particular territory and the majority of the wagons traverse nearly the entire city.

"After the garbage is collected it is taken out of the city and fed to hogs; it may be suggested at this point that it returns to Plainfield in the form of pork." During the year 9,254 inspections of all kinds have been made. From time to time, the work of a sanitary survey of the entire city has been attempted, but for various reasons, principally from lack of funds, it has never been contemplated. During the year 856 houses were thus inspected and 640 of these properties were found to be in good shape. On 215 properties nuisances or violations of the code were found. There was a total of 398 plumbing permits issued and 1,047 inspections made.

Nearly all the ice cream sold in the city is of local manufacture. Only two dealers purchase their supply from out of town. During the year ice cream was sold from forty-eight different places, eight drug stores, twelve large manufacturers, four small manufacturers and twenty-four stores, restaurants, etc. The inspections of these places showed a marked improvement in general conditions.

The work on the milk supply has been continued during the year along the usual lines and with good results. The milk was distributed by seventy-four dealers, twenty-eight of whom

URGE AMENDMENT OF THE GAME LAWS

Uniformity in the game laws arising from dividing the State into the northern and southern districts is urged by the Board of Fish and Game Commissioners in its annual report to Governor Fort. In the report twenty-nine recommendations are made.

Among the most important of these roecommendations is that a bag limit be fixed for game birds to be taken in one day, as follows:

Quail, not to exceed 10; English pheasant, 3; Hungarian partridge, 3; woodcock, 10; ruffled grouse, 3; reed birds, 50; rail birds, 25; ducks, 20; geese, 10; brant 10; shore birds, 25.

In suggesting one law for the entire State the board would fix the open season from November 1 to December 15 for quail, partridge, grouse, English or ring-neck preasant, Hungarian partridge, wild turkey, prairie chicken, woodcock, squirrel and rabbits. The board would make the open season for water fowl from November 1 to February 1.

The enactment of an Audubon law is also suggested which would provide that no person shall kill or catch or have in possession, living or dead, any wild bird other than a game bird, or purchase, offer or expose for sale any such wild bird after it has been killed or caught. It is suggested that the law should provide that no part of the plumage, skin or body of such wild birds that are protected by law and not game birds shall be sold or had in possession for sale.

Other recommendations are: Protecting upland plover for five years; fixing the season for shore birds from June 1 to January 1; providing for one or more game farms; providing that all wild State land shall be game refuges; prohibiting the use of silencers on guns of any kind; prohibiting the sale of all protected game, including water fowl, or the export of the same from the State all the year, except in case of non-resident licensees; amending section 24 of the act of 1903 by striking out the provisions containing therein reference to deer and dogs; fixing the salary of wardens at $75 a month and the salary of the protector at $1,800 a year, and providing for an assistant protector at a salary of $1 200 a year; permitting battery shooting on Tuesdays and Fridays, the owner of each battery paying a license fee of $10 a year; prohibiting the use of any gun over ten-guage, under a penalty of $100; fixing the cost of non-resident license at $5 to residents of States where the non-resident license is $5; fixing a bag limit of twenty-five a day on trout; prohibiting the taking of bluefish under twelve inches in length; providing that striped bass be regarded as a game fish and for a period of five years shall be taken only with hook and line; providing a license of $200 for each fish pound; prohibiting any pound within three miles of any inlet, on the ocean front or in the inlets; prohibiting the use of hauling seines in Raritan or Sandy Hook bays; fixing the season for crappie, calico bass, black bass, pike, white and yellow perch, white bass and pickerel from June 15 to November 30 in fresh waters and for white perch in salt waters; abolishing netting fish under ice in salt waters; stopping all netting in salt waters between May and June, excepting fykes; providing for a fish hatchery for trout black bass, etc.; providing that fines in fish and game cases shall be paid to the commission for the use of the commission; amending the penalty section inth e Barnegat bay law; making the illegal taking of menhaden a misdemeanor; providing for a rod license in fresh water for non-residents.

DAVID BISPHAM HERE ON THURSDAY, JAN. 12.

An opportunity will be given to the music lovers of Plainfield, Thursday evening, January 12, of hearing one of the most famous singers before the English speaking world. David Bispham, the baritone, is scheduled to give a song recital at the Plainfield High School auditorium, which will be the third of the McIntyre concert series.

Mr. Bispham is the foremost champion of English songs and English opera for English speaking people and assserts that good translations of them are more acceptable that any foreign song ever sung. There is nothing the matter, he said, with the English language for any singer who cares to study it properly. It is as noble and singable as any. As a convincing proof that he speaks with authority and that the people believe him to be right he points to his overwhelming success at his English worded recitals. His opening recital this season in Carnegie Hall drew an audience that filled the immense auditorium to the doors and the enthusiasm of his hearers bespoke the quality of the appreciation.

VACCINATION OF PUPILS

School Authorities Act to Prevent Any Mild Epidemic of Small Pox.

BOARD SELECTS OFFICERS.

Leander N. Lovell Re-elected President—Playground Apparatus for the Irving School—Committees Named.

That the State Board of Health fears a mild attack of small pox in this part of the State is evident from disclosures made at the meeting of the Board of Education last evening when the local health board urged the vaccination of all the pupils in the public school schools at once. The move is thought advisable and the school board ordered it accordingly.

All the members of the board were present last evening and as it was the annual election Floyd T. Woodhull was made temporary chairman and the following officers were elected: President, Leander N. Lovell vice-president, William S. Tyler; secretary, Floyd T. Woodhull. Messrs. Lovell and Tyler were appointed to the Board of School Estimate for the current year. The other committees remain the same as last year.

The medical inspector reported having examined 380 pupils during December making the proper recommendations in each case. The Collector of Taxes reported school moneys collected in December as $145,772.83 and the balance in the hands of the custodian of school funds on December 31 was $34,361.75.

A communication was read from George P. Mellick, president of the Playground Commission, asking permission from the board to equip Irving School yard with playground apparatus similar to that in use in the other school yards. The request was granted.

The local Board of Health received information from the State Board that it thought it likely that smallpox was liable to break out in a mild form at any time in this part of the State and urged the local health board to see to it that all children in the schools of Plainfield be vaccinated at once. The education board acted on the suggestion by resolution and will advise all parents to have their children vaccinated at an early date.

REPRESENTATIVE MEN EULOGIZE MR. MARTINE AT BIG DEMONSTRATION OF FELLOW TOWNSMEN

Former Mayor Saunders, Ex-Assemblyman Swackhamer Mr. Atterbury, Assemblyman-Elect Brodhead, Mayor Moy, Rev. Mr. Maguire and Others Pay Tributes to Their Neighbor. —Citizens Pass Resolutions.

Ringing speeches advocating the obedience of the Legislature to the will of the people as expressed at the Senatorial primaries and the election of James E. Martine to the United States Senate were made at a mass meeting of the candidate's fellow-townsmen at Reform Hall last night. It was an enthusiastic gathering of representative men of all parties for the purpose of voicing in no uncertain terms the confidence and esteem in which the Democratic warhorse is held by the people among whom he has lived since boyhood days. The speakers with the exception of Mayor G. W. V. Moy were men prominent in Democratic councils among them were A. H. Atterbury, who acted as chairman; William L. Saunders, former mayor of North Plainfield and Samuel S. Swackhamer, formerly an Assemblyman. Former Assemblyman Joseph Tumulty, of Jersey City, also made an eloquent speech in behalf of Mr. Martine and Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire made a few remarks.

The following resolution introduced by Mr. Atterbury was passed unanimously: "Resolved that, we, citizens of Plainfield and North Plainfield heartily endorse our fellow townsman, James E. Martine, for the United States Senate. He is a man of honor and integrity, an orator and debater of wide experience; a hard worker and a staunch upholder of Democratic principles. We believe that he is in all respects worthy of this high honor and we hope that the legislature will elect him.

Resovled further, that it is our firm conviction that the recent primary election was a true indication of the voice of the majority of the Democrats of this State and we earnestly hope that the Democratic members of the legislature give heed to that voice and elect James E. Martine to the United States Senate."

Resolved, further, that we heartily endorse the course which Woodrow Wilson has pursued in this matter and pledge him our earnest support."

A letter replying to an invitation to be present at the meeting was received from Governor-elect Woodrow Wilson which was read by Mr. Atterbury and is as follows:

"I am sincerely sorry that I cannot have the pleasure of being present at the meeting tomorrow evening (last night) and I beg that you will allow me in this way to extend to you and to all concerned in the matter my very warm assurances of sympathy and support.

"It is delightful to see the public opinion of the State assert itself in the matter of the choice of Senator and I believe that every true friend of popular government must wish to see the choice fall upon James E. Martine."

Mr. Saunders speech follows:

"I am in favor of the election of Mr. Martine to represent the State of New Jersey in the U. S. Senate. You people of Plainfield do not need to be told why but that the voice of this meeting might be heard throughout the state let us reason together about our friend and neighbor. Is he fit as a man and a Democrat to hold the high office of Senator?

"It is safe to say at the outset that we know him. We know him morally and intellectually, hence it must be inferred that we know what we are talking about when we discuss him. He has lived here all his life and he was not born yesterday. Nor has he lived here as a hermit; his candle has burned here not under a bushel, but before our eyes. Yes, it has been burning in our very ears. No man can live an active life for a long period and fail to stamp his character for good or evil upon the minds of those who know him. A man may be honest and square and yet his purposes may be ulterior. He may labor for selfish ends. In this he may fool the people at large, but he cannot fool his neighbors. A man's true measure is taken by his honest neighbors who speak the truth without fear, favor or prejudice.

"We love the slogan "Character, the grandest thing." Mr. Martine has character and I give this as the first reason governing one's choice of a representative for any public office from pound keeper to U. S. Senate.

"The thing that we need most in out political life is integrity, integrity of purpose as well as of action. We want men in office who say what they mean and who mean what they say—right or wrong give me the man who has opinions, one who is not half baked but roasted with ideas on public questions. If the failing of such a man is lack of judgment the evil that may follow his mistakes is less than that which goes with wisdom and selfishness when exercised in high places.

"My next point then is that Mr. Martine is a man of high character, integrity of motive and outspoken in expression. My second point is that he is a man of intelligence, and ability. His knowledge of political affairs comes not from personal experience in office, but from a position just outside the breastworks where he has seen the fight during and after the campaign.

"He is ripe with a knowledge of the things done and the things left undone by others. His own views on public questions are not like the laws of the Medes and Persians, but he has modified them through honest conviction and not through policy. If you ask me if his ability is of that order which fits a man to direct a railroad or a great corporation, I say no. If you ask me if he is fit to build a tunnel under the Hudson, or to govern the people of the Philippines, I say no; but a U. S. Senator is not a Moses leading the people through the wilderness. He is a servant of the people, a member of a large assemly, chosen to sit in judgment upon acts initiated by others.

"My third point is that he is a true and loyal Democrat. He loves the people and believes in their sovereignty. This is no sham with him, but it comes through honest conviction. It comes because of close touch with the masses. He is a good mixer and knows the people. No one has sacrificed more for the party than he. Some have given money, others thought and labor, but he has given his all. The party owes him much.

"My fourth and most important point is that through the election of Mr. Martine the Democratic party will prove true to its principles and will advance a great Democratic reform. We have always advocated the popular initiative in the choice of U. S. Senators. Now is our time to make good. This is our first and it may be our only chance to establish this great Democratic reform. We cannot now turn our faces from the record of history. A Democratic assembly unanimously passed the law under which the people voted in the recent senatorial primary. To disregard that law on any ground is to step backward in the march towards our best ideals of popular government.

"My fifth and last point is that the vote in the recent primary election is a substantial evidence of the choice of the Democrats of the State and as such it gives Mr. Martine a right superior to that of any other man to ask the members of the Legislature to send him to the Senate.

"There are twenty-one counties in the State. Thirteen of them elected Democratic Assemblymen in the recent election. At the primaries in these thirteen counties the total vote for Assembly candidates was 78,647. At the same time 58,156 Democratic votes expressed their preference for U. S. Senator in these thirteen counties, 42,502 votes having been cast for Mr. Martine. Let us see what these figures mean. In the counties in which Democrats have their majorities about seventy-five per cent. of Democratic voters at the primaries expressed a preference on the senatorial matter and about seventy-five per cent. of those voting on the question of senator expressed a preference for Mr. Martine. The figures also show that more than half of all the Democratic voters expressing their choice for Assembly candidates also voted for Mr. Martine.

"This is, to say the least, a very strong popular endorsement. Mr. Martine's total vote in the State primaries was 48,400. This is a very large vote in a non-contested primary, and at a time when it was the general belief that the Legislature woul be Republican. It showed that the drift of popular sentiment is with Mr. Martine. It is a safe presumption that this drift represents the wish of a majority of all the Democratic voters in the State and to act contrary to this wish, without a better reason than has yet appeared, is to assert that a representative in the Legislature is sovereign and not a

SALOONKEEPERS CLOSE BARS NEW YEAR'S DAY.

No doubt the saloonkeepers and hotelmen in the city had a desire to make a record which should go down in history to the credit of the municipality for promptly at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon they closed their bars and thereafter no liquor was sold.

The result was highly satisfactory as not a single arrest was made on a charge of intoxication, or for anything else. Not one single case has come before Judge William G. DeMeza since his induction into the office of city magistrate on Sunday at noon.

Falls Unconscious In Street.

Walter Cuming, of Putnam avenue, a young man of eighteen, while walking down Park avenue on Thursday evening, was taken suddenly ill and fell to the sidewalk exclaiming "Oh my head!" Since then for nearly all the time he has been unconscious and the cause of his illness remains a mystery to his physician. He has intervals of consciousness only to relapse into coma again. He is critically ill.

Sunday School Anniversary.

The Sunday school of Hope chapel was twenty-three years old on Sunday. G. Herbert Condict, superintendent, called attention to the fact. Despite the bad weather the attendance was 243. Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Struthers, Randolph Marsh, F. H. Andrews and Miss Jessie Munger were among the six members present on the first Sunday.

Trinity's Turkey Supper.

The Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church has selected Thursday and Friday evenings, January 26 and 27, as the dates for the annual turkey supper in the lecture room of the church. Mrs. E. T. VanWinkle, who so successfully managed last year's supper, will be the chairman of committees again this year.

Drowned While Skating.

Mr. and Mrs. Miles Roberts, of Putnam avenue, have received word of the death of their nephew at Derby, Conn. The boy, who was about nine years of age, was drowned while skating on a lake at Derby. A year ago he almost lost his life saving another boy's life while skating.

$1,500 a Front Foot.

George J. Finger has bought the property now occupied by him and the Daley Bros. grocery on West Front street. The consideration is said to have been $55,000. The property fronts 36.9 feet on West Front street which brings the rate to $1,500 per front foot.

They Stole Tobacco.

Buglars, presumably youthful ones, forced an entrance to the store of F. J. Skinner, corner of West Second street and Central avenue, on Saturday night and stole cigars and cigarettes to the value of five dollars. There is no clue.

Scandinavian Society Concert.

The Scandinavian Society held an entertainment in Coward's hall on Saturday evening at which over a hundred guests were present. A fine program of instrumental and vocal music was rendered and the New Year welcomed in true old world fashion.

CASE AFTER CASE.

Plenty More Like This In Plainfield.

Scores of Plainfield people can tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills. Many a happy citizen makes a public statement of his experience. Here is a case of it. What better proof of merit can be had than such endorsement?

Robert Love, 44 Duer street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "For eight or nine years I was a victim of kidney complaint. Every cold I contracted, settled in my kidneys and caused my back to ache severely. Any heavy lifting or much standing gave me additional pain. In the morning upon arising, my back was very lame and this did not disappear until I exercised for some time. I doctored and used several so called kidney cures, but it was only a waste of money. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended in the newspapers, I procured a box at Randolph's Pharmacy and began their use. When I had taken about half the contents of the box, my condition was greatly improved and before long the pain left me entirely. I will always stands ready to speak a good word for Doan's Kidney Pills."

DRUNKEN COLORED MAN FIGHTS LIKE A MAINAC

William Gray, a stocky built negro employed by Thomas McGann, of the borough, got drunk early Saturday night and became mussy on Lincoln place. He was told by Marshal Keller to go home but responded with curses and when the officer placed him under arrest he began fighting like a maniac. The two men surged about the street in a locked embrace until Keller finally put the other down. Even then he continued to struggle and the assistance of Marshal Pope was needed to get him to jail.

After being placed in a cell, Gray raved like a wild man for hours. The entire neighborhood about police headquarters was aroused by his yells and sleep was out of the question. Dr. Adams was called to administer an opiate but the prisoner was so violent it was impossible to get near him. He finally became worn out at 2 o'clock Sunday morning and went to sleep.

Gray was arraigned before Mayor Smalley Monday morning on a charge of drunkenness and resisting an officer. He was fined $10 and an additional sentence of ninety days was suspended over him to be imposed the first time he gets drunk.

SPORTS
News and Notes

GOLF.

During the last few days additional facts have been received concerning the expansion movement on the part of the Cranford Golf Club. It has been learned from an authoritative source that the present lease of the Westfield Golf Club will expire in the near future and that it cannot be renewed. Though no formal action has been taken toward this end, it is quite probable that the Westfield organization will combine with Cranford in the undertaking which may result in one of the best eighteen-hole courses in the metropolitan district. In speaking of the project William Gellatly, president of the Cranford Golf Club, says:

The Cranford Golf Club was organized about nine years ago with a membership of about forty. Mr. Lyons was the moving spirit and was responsible more than any one man for the inauguration of this sport, which had made no exception of Cranford in its demand upon the outdoor public.

The present Cranford course cannot care for its active membership of 150 players. It is occupying building lots that are ever increasing in rental and valuation. It is only a question of time when the present owners cannot afford to permit their use as golf links. Leases on the course occupied at present expire in 1915. The club has an option on a portion of the property only until 1920. The question of extending the leases on such of the property as is now being used and acquiring additional property immediately adjacent continues. Even the nine-hole course has been abandoned as impracticable.

Last October the newly elected officers of the club were instructed to spare no effort in securing an eighteen hole course. With this result in view, an option has been secured on as attractive a quarter section of land as can be found in the State for a country club or golf links. This section lies on the shore of Echo Lake, in Westfield township, which is about as equidistant from Cranford and Westfield railroad stations. There are 160 acres in all, about one hundred acres being cleared and about sixty acres wooded. The wooded section is on the bluff of the south side of Echo Lake, which is an exceedingly attractive lake about three-quarters of a mile long, and furnishes an attractive background for the contemplated clubhouse.

The bluff on which the clubhouse will probably be built commands a beautiful view of the surrounding country and is not so close to the foothills of the Orange Mountains on the west as to be cut off from the westerly winds that prevail during the summer months.

Of the 160 acres of property about ninety will be necessary for links and clubhouse, giving a surplus of seventy acres as an asset to the club that can doubtless be disposed of most advantageously, for in the near future the property will command a figure so much in advance of the purchase price as to materially aid in financing the enterprise.

THE MAYOR'S MESSAGE.

"It is with considerable satisfaction that we read Mayor Moy's first annual message for it has the true ring to it. Here and there in the document may be some conclusion to which some will take exception just as we do, but the straightforwardness, the frankness and the terseness is commendable. The reader is not wearied by long drawn out discussions of the municipality's problems, neither is he bored and confused by a mass of statistices such as permeate the average deliverance of this sort.

The mayor at the outset sums up his convictions as to the best policy to be pursued. And he does so without any waste of words and without any equivocation. "I believe," he says, "in giving to the public service the best there is in us." And he continues: "We should discourage favcritism, be ever watchful against extravagance and always economical with the people's money." Had he finished his message right there the taxpayers would have perfectly well understood what the policy of the new administration, or at least of its executive head, is to be. The need for economy has long been felt and it was one of the causes of Mr. Moy's election That there may be no misunderstanding as to what is meant, however, he asserts that "economy does not imply niggardliness; however, we must keep abreast of the times to successfully carry on the city business, even as we would our own affairs." This explanation is germane when he dwells upon the water question. In that connection the view is taken by him that "a large majority of the people desire and expect that a municipal water supply will be installed" and that to achieve that end a bond issue is necessary. Whether a bond issue of approximately a million dollars would be economy, of course, is a matter debatable It is dependent upon the degree of success of public ownership.

What basis the mayor has for his assertion that "a very large majority of the people" favor municipal control of the water supply, we confess we do not know. For its corroboration we must await developments. If bonds are to be issued, probably the taxpayers will be first asked to sanction such an obligation and in that event we will learn definitely what proportion of the people do favor the scheme.

Mayor Moy takes the same position that Mr. Fisk did in his farewell address as mayor when he declared that the water problem and the sewage disposal question are of chief importance at this time. As to the latter subject the new mayor, after stating that something must be done, dismissed the topic with the assertion that it is the duty of the Common Conucil to determine the course to be pursued in finding a remedy." This method of treating the public affairs is one of the many pleasing characteristics of the whole message. The mayor does not indulge in lengthy statements as to why and how things shall be accomplished. He confines himself to referring to a given need and then puts it squarely before the city fathers to work out the problem as they see fit.

There are other matters in the message worthy of consideration, particularly that of the collection and disposal of garbage and ashes. To these we shall refer at another time.

MARTINE MASS MEETING

servant of the people."

Mr. Atterbury's speech which was made as a preliminary to those of Mr. Saunders and the others, was a scathing denunciation of James Smith, Jr. He rehearsed Mr. Smith's record from the time he was a ward politician until he gained his seat in the Senate and then related his acts and methods pursued in defeating Leon Abbott in 1894; his treachery to Grover Cleveland in the Wilson bill and other acts of a nature calculated to destroy any confidence his fellow men might have had in him.

The meeting virtually resolved itself into an eulogy of Mr. Martine. All the speakers in refrerring to the popular Plainfielder declared him to be eminently qualified to fill the high duty imposed upon United States Senators, much more so than many who have preceded him. Mr. Atterbury said that the meeting was not one of two antagonistic parties, but to do honor to a man all have respected all their lives. It was also to express the belief that Mr. Martine is to be the next United States Senator from New Jersey. "There are two Jims in this campaign," Mr. Atterbury said, "one whom we honor because of his absolute integrity and squareness, and the other, a smooth, slick politician who has never done anything to prove that he was a capable statesman or anything else besides a ward politician. He graduated from that place into the Senate through corruption and bribery. If he had won fairly the Democratic party would stand by him, but he established his eminence through political jobbery and thus bulit his private fortune.

"He defeated Leon Abbott in 1894 through bribery and corruption and was false to President Grover Cleveland and will be false to Woodrow Wilson. His clique, McPherson, Hill and Murphy, of New York; Brice, of Ohio and others put up such a fight that they held up and re-arranged the Wilson bill to suit themselves and Mr. Cleveland refused to sign it and it thus became a law. His motives were at that time and are now purely selfish-money for Smith and nothing else. He was a thoroughly discredited man when his term of office expired. He has reaped the financial reward of his own rascality and it is too late now for him to add hypocrisy to his other well known attributes. I hope we have heard the last of Mr. Smith."

Mr. Atterbury referred to Mr. Martine in terms of praise for his fidelity to his party, his thoroughly capable attributes and declared that it would mean political suicide for the Democratic party if Mr. Martine was not sent to the Senate,

Joseph P. Tumulty, former Assemblyman from Hudson county, in opening his speech said that perhaps the people were of the opinion that the promises relating to the observance of the primary law which the Democrats had fathered was only a catch word to get the votes before election, but declared with emphasis that this was not so. He had been and would continue to advocate the election of United States Senator by popular vote and that there ought to be no question as to the attitude of the Democratic party now. Some people want it to appear that the party intends to deliberately seduce the people on this question of the senatorship. He declared that the thought of direct primaries was abhorrent to James Smith, Jr., because he had no faith in the people while the reverse was the case with Mr. Martine. The direct primaries means the death knell of the special interests and this is what the bosses fear. He laid stress upon the fact that the history of James Smith, Jr., in the Senate would not bear the light of pittiless publicity.

Referring to Mr. Martine, Mr. Tumulty said, "While others were growing rich 'Jim' had been growing poor and poverty with Jim Martine's honesty was the greatest test of all. He had rallied to the Democratic standard when there were no Jim Smith's to do it and in this fight to perpetuate representative government no one questions Mr. Martine's integrity and ability to serve the common people. The special interests do not want him in the Senate because they know there is not enough money in the world to buy him.

"We do not want to send phonographs and cash registers to the Senate," we want to send men like Jame E. Martine, absolutely fearless men who have nothing but the interests of the people and their protection at heart. It is a fight of the people against the special interests and Mr. Martine has recognized the claims of the poor and has always championed their rights."

Samuel S. Swackhamer and Assemblyman-elect Calvin E. Brodhead also spoke favoring Mr. Martine's candidacy and urging the people to use their influence in spreading the gospel of right and direct election of Senators.

From the audience, Mayor George W. V. Moy added a tribute to Mr. Martine as a man and neighbor saying although he is a Republican he believes that Mr. Martine possessed every attribute which a United States Senator should possess and would be glad to see him elected to the high position he aspired to. Rev. Gabreil Reid Maguire was called upon for a speech and responded in his usually happy vein warning the Republicans present that the presidency was in danger and if care were not taken a Democratic President would be elected in 1912.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The election for the fire department officers last night, was a walk-over for the B. E. Co., ticket. Excelsior H. & L. Co., failing to put a ticket in the field, the result was Chief Charles Meyers, was re-elected, William Jamison was elected 1st assistant chief and Richard Hart, 2nd assistant chief, the ticket receiving 49 votes out of a company membership of 50. The election of Chief Meyers met with the approval of the large majority of the residents, as his work during the past year has put the department in better condition than it has been in years. Both companies have up-to-date apparatuses, and the department will compare favorably with towns of much larger size than Scotch Plains.

A large number of friends attended the funeral services of Mrs. Sarah Hull, wife of William Hull, which were held from the home on Westfield avenue, yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Hollingshead, pastor of the Methodist church, officiated and spoke words of sympathy and consolation to the relatives and friends. The floral offerings were many and included several set pieces. Interment was made in Hillside Cemetery.

retail by means of wagon, ten sell only a few quarts and 36 from stores. There was a total of 1,310 inspections made. The total number of samples analyzed during 1910 was 449 and there were forty-eight samples of cream analyzed. There were twenty-eight showing less than 10,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter and there were none over 200,000. In studying the tables of analyses, it may be interesting to note that the highest fat content of any single sample was 5.6 per cent. while the lowest was 2.8 per cent. The highest average fact content of milk from any one dealer was 4.87 and the lowest 4.09 per cent. No sample was found to be watered or to contain any preservative. The lowest bacterial count of any one sample was 3,700 and the highest was 114,000 per cubic centimeter. The lowest average bacterial count of milk from any one dealer was 3,775 and the highest 69,000 per cubic centimeter. The latter was remarkable for market milk. There are twelve dealers who are rated first according to the average bacteria for the year.

The ice supply in the city for 1910 was obtained from three sources, Watchung Lake, Seeley's Pond and the Crystal Ice Company's plant. The ice was of very good quality.

A sample of the city water was taken once a month and sent to the State laboratory of Hygiene at Trenton for analysis. It was found to be of good quality. Considerble space is devoted in the report to the pure food act, under which the board worked last year, and gives the result. An inspection was made of stores, markets, fruit stands, etc., and also of wagons used by peddlers or producer and an abstract of the law furnished to all dealers. 243 of these were posted as follows:

Fourteen bakeries, 27 butcher shops, 27 confectioners, 55 groceries, 4 fish stores, 7 fruit stands, 16 ice cream manufacturers, 20 restaurants and hotels, 32 peddlers and hucksters, 41 producers of fruit and vegetables. Great improvement has been shown in general conditions, more care being exercised in providing dust-proof cases for the keeping of foodstuffs. Much credit is given the dealers for their willingness to cooperate with the board.

THE ACTOR AND THE CRITIC.

"Sir," said the deply-grieved leading man, "your criticism of my performance of the Rightful Duke was rude and thoughtless and harsh in the extreme. You say: 'Tattersley Kean, as the duke, had an entirely erroneously conception of the part, and his acting was worse than his conception.'"

"Yes, I remember," said the dramatic critic. "It was my honest opinion, you understand."

"Of course, of course," cried the actor; "but you might have expressed the same sentiment in a little different form."

"For instance?" queried the critic.

"Well, you might have said: 'Tattersley Kean, the well-known Shakespearean interpreter, was fitted with a role that was entirely uncongenial, and in which he had no opportunity to display his unmistakable talents.'"

The critic looked thoughtful.

"Well, yes," he said, "that would have been different."

Otherwise.

"Do you know that there is danger of catching deadly diseases from street car straps?"

"No, I didn't know that; I remember, though, that I used to suffer great inconvenience from hold-back straps."

"That is odd! Caused blisters on your hands did they?"

"No, not on my hands; 'twas a hold-back strap that dad used to wallop me with."

Picturesque.

"Mrs. Spicey won Mrs. Sporteigh's new French hat at bridge last week."

"Good gracious! Does she wear it?"

"Of course she does. She's awfully proud of it. And that's where Mrs. Sporteigh gets her revenge."

"How so?"

"When Mrs. Spicey wears the hat it looks like a Fiji war bonnet or a concrete hitching-post."

Presence of Mind.

He—Our love is opposed and we are destined to be unhappy all our lives. Let's commit suicide and die together.

She—All right, darling. I couldn't live without you.

He—How shall we do it?

She—Don't you think ice cream potmaines would be about the quickest way?

THE DIFFERENCE.

Mrs. Jiggson—They arrested her for shoplifting. She took a pair of gloves and a paper of pins.

Mrs. Jagson—If she had taken a gold watch and a diamond they'd have released her. She'd have been a kleptomaniac then.

The Juggler.

The juggler does a turn so neat,
But, after all is said,
We realize a juggler's feat
Depends upon his head.

The Last Resort.

"We must go to some quiet, inexpensive place next summer," said the man who worries.

"Great heavens!" exclaimed his wife. "Don't talk so grewsomely. You know that there are no longer any quiet or inexpensive places except cemeteries."

Sympathetic.

"A man was telling Puffer this morning how he lived on ten cents a day."

"What did Puffer do?"

"He was so affected he went out and spent twice as much as he usually does for lunch."

Greatly Embarrassed.

"Time hung heavy on his hands, you say?"

"Yes. When detectives caught him with another man's watch it hung so heavy on his hands he fain would have dropped it."

Diagnosing His Case.

"Are you going to operate on that patient of yours?"

"I have not decided yet."

"When are you going to decide?"

"As soon as I have looked him up in Bradstreets."

A Complete Change.

"You need a mental rest. Stop discussing pennant prospects."

"But, doctor——"

"No argument, now. Talk golf for awhile instead of baseball."

She Was Pleased.

A Missouri belle was serenaded. In telling about it later she said: "I don't think there is nothing nicer than to be woken up at night by vocal singing."

MOTHER.

We still mourn the loss of one
We did our best to save;
Beloved on earth, treasured still,
Remembered in her grave.

Mother is gone, but not forgotten;
Never shall her memory fade;
Sweetest thoughts forever linger
Around the grave where she is laid.

How we miss thee, dearest mother,
None but God can tell.
Faithful, patient, loving, true wert thou;
Thou hast gone to heaven to dwell.

One year has passed and gone, dear mother,
Since we were forced to part.
But time and space cannot efface
Thy memory from our hearts.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 8, 1911.

Topic.—Blessed—to bless.—Gen. xii, 1, 2; Ps. cvii, 1-3. (An evangelistic meeting.) Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

When God called Abraham to leave his own country in Ur of the Chaldees and go to a land to which he would show him He made this promise to Abraham: "I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee and make thy name great, and thou shalt be a blessing. • • • In thee all families of the earth shall be blessed." Abraham was not to be blessed simply for his own sake, but that through him others might also receive blessings. He was blessed—to bless.

In the One Hundred and Seventh Psalm the writer says in the second and third verses, "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so, whom He hath redeemed from the enemy and hath gathered them out of the lands—from the east and from the west, from the north and from the south." All the redeemed were to tell others of their redemption, with the purpose, of course, of leading them to redemption (redeemed—to redeem).

If we are the recipients of God's blessing we should be a blessing to others. If we have been redeemed we should redeem others by God's grace and power.

1. Blessed—to bless. This was one great purpose of God in blessing Abraham—namely, that he might bless others. The same is true of the blessing of God today. No blessing is bestowed upon us in a selfish or personal manner. It is to be passed on to others. If God has blessed us with wealth it is not to be miserly hoarded, but used for Him in such a way as to prove a blessing to others. If blessed with opportunities in life we should try to so use them as to be of assistance to others. If we have been given superior talents, use them also to the blessing of others. Above all things, if blessed with spiritual gifts of unusual quantity or quality find some way by which you may impart them to the less fortunately situated. Why God selects certain ones for special blessings we do not know, but one thing we do know, and that is that whosoever thus receives is intended to be a channel for imparting blessings to others.

2. Redeemed—to redeem. "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so." Redemption in the sense of the soul's salvation by the death of Christ can only be of the Lord. There is no human redemption or eternal salvation. It is all divine. And in gratitude to God for our redemption we should tell it to others; we should "say so." "I've been redeemed" should be the song of every heart and the testimony of every tongue. We are saved to serve in the vineyard of the Lord, and if we are not by testimony or by Christian living leading some to Christ we may well take time to examine ourselves and see if we are redeemed and saved. The first thought of most people who have found Christ is to lead some one else to Him. Andrew found Him and went to his brother Peter and "brought him to Jesus." Are we following such an example?

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. xviii, 16-18; xxviii, 1-4; Ps. lxvi, 16; lxxii, 17-19; cv, 1-15; Dan. xii, 1-3; Matt. x, 42; xxv, 31-46; John i, 35-42; Acts iii, 25.

A Pastor's Testimony.

Sometimes ministers ask me why it is that they cannot get results in their Christian Endeavor societies, and I wonder how they would take it if I tried honestly to analyze the situation for them, for when all is said and done the important factor is the minister himself.

I realize full well that the young people are not always what they ought to be. If they were there would be no use for the ministers. When I hear of the failure of a society I ask, "How much sympathy, how much time, how much thought, did the pastor give to it?" It is not strange when societies fail that are neglected. The church would fail under similar circumstances.

I believe that any minister who is prepared to put thought and time and energy into his Christian Endeavor society will make a success of it. If he cannot succeed with his young people it is doubtful if he can succeed with the church that he serves.

The simple secret is this: Sow sympathy and love for the young people and you will harvest a crop of good.

Listen to the testimony of a man that has done this. Rev. Will F. Shaw, pastor of the Sheffield Avenue Church of Christ, Chicago, writes of his Endeavorers as follows:

"Christian Endeavor has furnished my soul winner class, my mission study class, my flower distributers, my choir and funeral singers, my Sunday evening workers and audiences, my Bible study and teachers' training class, my temperance agitators and supporters, my assistant correspondents, canvassers and advertisers, my first organized Sunday school class, my library keepers and book gatherers, my most regular attendants in every church service, my sympathizers in almost every advanced movement in the church work in every pastorate of my life."

There is no magic in this. The pastors of today will find that the boys and girls respond in Christian Endeavor work where they feel a warm interest on his part and a willingness to serve and help them.—Christian Endeavor World.

THE HARVEST MOON

A Novelization of the Drama of AUGUSTUS THOMAS

By GEORGE HENRY PAYNE

Copyright, 1909, by Augustus Thomas

"I apologize for my tone. I am sorry that I lost my head, but I simply couldn't let the thing go on. You don't understand Ludlow. You don't understand the reputation he has. Come to the theater tonight, and when it is all over and we are both calmer I will talk this matter over with you more fully and explain to you what I mean."

"I have decided," said the girl suddenly, "that I don't want to appear in the play."

Holcomb dropped into a seat and watched her steadily.

"Is it," he said finally—"is it this man again, Graham Winthrop?"

"I have nothing more to say," replied the girl.

"Very well," said Holcomb, standing up and taking his hat; "if that theater is dark tonight or some stock actress goes on and plays the part you will have set me back a good three years in the fight I am making." And, looking at his watch, he bowed to her and hurried out.

As he got out of the elevator he was met by Vavin entering the apartment.

"How goes the play, my young confrere?" asked the Frenchman cheerily.

"It doesn't go," replied Holcomb bitterly. "It's bad enough to have to fight all the theatrical business to get a start in this town, but then to have to fight the girl that one loves, her family and her friends!"

"You at least take it with humor," said Vavin.

The young man briefly explained to him the situation.

Vavin had been away lecturing, but had come back with the intention of seeing the opening production and Dora's appearance as a star.

"I was going to call on her," he said, "and my call will be decidedly opportune."

"You are a veritable deus ex machina," said the young man gratefully after the Frenchman had promised to let him know at his hotel the result of his interview.

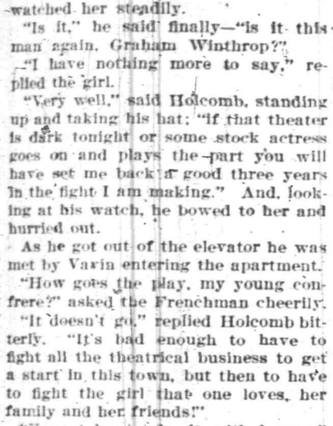
If his presence was welcome to Holcomb the appearance of Vavin was more than soothing to the troubled Dora. Judge Elliott had been invited to breakfast, and Vavin was shown into the dining room and asked to join them.

"Rather late breakfast for Americans," said the Frenchman, who had decided that for the time being he would conceal the fact that he had met Holcomb.

"We went to a fierce old dress rehearsal last night," exclaimed Graham, "and we're all a little bit on the bum," availing himself of a part of his vocabulary of slang.

"Mr. Holcomb's play?"

"Yes," answered Mrs. Winthrop. "And I am glad to say that Dora has closed her connection with it and with the author. She is finished with him forever!"



CHAPTER X.

VAVIN was greatly surprised at Mrs. Winthrop's declaration. Finally he said:

"Of course if that is her decision there is nothing more to do."

"I hope," said Mrs. Winthrop, "that you will not endeavor to disturb that decision."

"If the young lady should ask me for advice I could hardly refuse it."

"I do want your advice," said Dora.

The opposition party exchanged uneasy glances.

"If there is no objection, Mrs. Winthrop," said Vavin, "I should like to have Miss Fullerton tell me her version of the trouble alone."

"But I don't think it's fair for you to advise," began Judge Elliott.

"Pardon me, my dear judge. I said that I should like to have Miss Dora tell me her troubles alone. I promise you that I shall give her no word of advice except in the presence of you three."

"I don't think he really is a Frenchman," said Graham as Dora and her friend went into the library and closed the door behind them. "I think he is just a medieval German devil. What was that he said to you, judge, about your not looking well? I think he has the evil eye."

"Now, my child," said Vavin when the two were seated at the bay window overlooking the avenue, "tell me everything as if—as if I were—your father."

The girl took the hand that he offered and clasped it tightly.

"It all seems so hopeless," she said "but it's all just as Aunt Cornelia said it would be."

"Let us forget her," said the old man, "and let us be calm. This moment is but one moment in a long lifetime. Let us make this moment calm, and we shall make life calm."

"I'll try," said the girl, and then, relaxing under the benign influence and gentle smile, "you see, Mr. Ludlow, who is the leading man, is said to be the best leading man in America, and everybody says that he knows more about acting than Mr. Holcomb. At first I didn't like him, but I was so anxious to please Mr. Holcomb that when he suggested that we have some private rehearsals I consented."

The old man looked at her uneasily.

"Mr Ludlow said Mr. Holcomb wouldn't like our way of playing the big scene, and he advised keeping it secret for the first performance to-

Graham handed him a glass of whisky.

"You don't need that," said Vavin, changing his tones, with a smile. "There's nothing the matter with you."

"But I feel as weak as a cat," insisted the judge.

"Because I suggested it to you," said Vavin. "You look the same as you have looked for three weeks. But I say you are ill, and you feel it. And this young girl, not for five minutes, not for one afternoon, but fourteen, fifteen years, they suggest, suggest to her, and what suggestion? That she is like a mother who also ran away. Mon Dieu! When a strong man thinks he is sick after I tell him twice, what of a baby girl—impressionable, full of faith? Also you show her the mother's picture, and if she looks like the night, but somehow or other we went through it last night. I think Ludlow unconsciously influenced me, and—well, I just can't forgive Mr. Holcomb for the things he said."

The old man leaned over and studied her childish face.

"You have told me everything?"

The girl nodded.

"Isn't there something more, my dear?"

The girl hesitated, and then, "I just can't play in that company, that's all."

"Why not that company?"

"Oh, M. Vavin, you are my friend. I feel somehow that I can tell you everything. I don't believe my mother was vulgar, but if that scene was vulgar then there must be something in this hereditary burden that I am supposed to carry, for I liked the way"—

"But you said something about the company," hastily interrupted Vavin.

"Ah, that's the worst part of it," said the girl. "This man Ludlow—it is known by all stage people that a girl in the company usually likes him. He has an influence over women."

"And you?" said Vavin, leaning forward anxiously.

"Yes, I—I begin to feel it, though I hate him."

"But it is only the influence," said the old man, his voice trembling. "It is only the fact that he made you play this scene this way. That is all, my little Dora." He had taken both her hands eagerly and was watching every shade of color that came and went in her face.

"Yes," said the girl simply, not understanding what had passed in his mind.

"Ah!" said the old man with great relief. "And the sentiment that three or four weeks ago you had for Mr. Holcomb—you still love him?"

"Too much to let him throw himself away on a girl of my shallowness. Tell me—what shall I do?"

"I promised to give my opinion in the presence of your friends. I am ready to do so."

He went to the door and called Mrs. Winthrop and Elliott.

"I am sorry, judge," he said as the latter entered, "that you are not feeling quite well."

"You said something like that in the dining room," responded Elliott. "I don't know what you mean. I feel all right."

"I am very glad that it is so," said Vavin, "but your face is pale, and your eyes—have you seen a doctor recently?"

"I don't see any necessity for my seeing a doctor. It is true that I was up a little late last night"—

"Perhaps it was that," said Vavin, "but I would be very careful about regular hours and plenty of sleep."

"But I got eight hours' sleep after all," said the judge excitedly.

"Don't excite yourself, judge."

"Sit down, judge," said Graham. "Won't you let me get you something to drink?"

Elliott sat down nervously.

"Well, you might get me a little whisky straight. I do feel a little weak. Perhaps it is the late hours. And now I do remember that I thought the elevator started and stopped a little suddenly."

mother she is then to behave like the mother. Oh, the crimes that good, ignorant people make with their suggestions!"

"And all of this," said Mrs. Winthrop, "leads to what?"

"The judge had hoped," replied Vavin, "that I should persuade the girl to go back to that atmosphere—not if she turns a hand organ in the street! Listen. I visited once, to write a story, a prison correctionelle, department of the Seine. There is a fine young man, eye wide open, blue like a china doll. I asked this young man, 'What is your crime?' 'Forgery from the bank.' 'Your family?' 'Very good.' 'In pris on any of them?' 'One, an uncle.' 'What of him?' 'I never saw him.' 'Ah?' 'Ah, monsieur, if I had only obeyed my mother—she warned me always: "You are just like your Uncle Emile. Be careful, be careful, my son. He went to prison."' 'Yes? For what crime?' 'Forgery from a bank.'" Vavin paused significantly. Then he went on: "All over this wide world good mothers say: 'Be careful of alcohol, my boy. Drink ruined your father.' And not alcohol, but that idea, gnaws and gnaws and corrodes. At first he can keep it from him by one little finger. But it is always there in the edge of his mind—always because it is his fear, his thought. After awhile not the finger, but the left hand, must resist it, then the right hand, then both hands to keep it at its distance. Then one day the boy is weary in body or mind or spirit, and that shadow takes him. The struggle no longer is hereditary. Not an appetite, but a negative suggestion, makes him, too, a drunkard.

"This you have seen—that a strong man is ill in a minute, and only one man, myself, so tells him one afternoon. What doubt must come into a girl's mind when a whole company tell her every day that she will feel so and so, that she will do so and so. That is not a bad heart, my dear; not something from the mother—just a great law."

"Then you think I should play?" said Dora eagerly.

BAPTIST S. S. BANQUET

Annual Meeting Which Followed Feast, Shows Flourishing Condiction.

GEORGE E. HALL RE-ELECTED.

Finances in Good Condition—Membership Increased—Officers are Elected—Committees Appointed.

The annual meeting and banquet of the Park Aveune Baptist Sunday-school was held on Tuesday evening in the Sunday-school room and the reports of the various departments showed the school to be in flourishing condition, both numerically and financially. The room was handsomely decorated. Tables were arranged in a hollow square, the color scheme was red and green. The banquet preceded the meeting and election, superintendent George E. Hall presiding.

Reports were read by Miss Elmira C. Runyon, superintendent of the elementary department; Martin B. Stutsman, secretary of the school; Joseph M. Harkins, treasurer of the general fund and Willard M. Maxim, treasurer of the benevolent fund.

Miss Runyon said that the year 1910 had been one of the best in the history of the elementary grades, starting the new year with a gain of sixteen new members over last year, the total being 82. The collections from this department for the general fund have amounted to $40.47 and missionary offerings were $13.65. The "birthday" bank received during the year $12.28 while the beginners' "given away" bank showed a total of $10.26. The two latter sums were given to the King's Daughters' Day nursery.

Mr. Stutsman's report showed that the school membership had passed the original limit of 200 set as a goal for 1910. The membership is now 221. Thirty-five members were lost owing to removal from the city. Mr. Hawkins' report showed that $1,013.87 had been received during the year and that there was a balance on hand of $37.23. Mr. Maxim's report of the benevolent fund showed receipts of $320.05 out of which he had disbursed $284.44 which included $15 to Muhlenberg hospital $55.33 to the King's Daughters baby camp and $35 to the day nursery.

Mr. Hall made a speech in which he congratulated the officers and teachers upon their work and the good reports and upon the increasing membership of the classes of Mrs. Gabriel R. Maguire and Judge William N. Runyon. Mayor George W. V. Moy, who teaches the orchestra, was complimented and responded with a short address on "Our School." A rising vote of thanks was given to Charles Van Winkle, the blackboard artist whose work is the admiration of the entire school.

The following officers were elected: Superintendent, George E. Hall; associate superintendent, Miss Florence C. Hawkins; superintendent elementary department, Miss Elmira C. Runyon; superintendent intermediate department, Mrs. W. S. Lowry; secretary, Martin B. Stutsman; assistant secretary, Henry F. Cuming; temperance secretary, Mrs. L. A. Udell; treasurer general fund, J. M. Hawkins; treasurer benevolent fund, Willard M. Maxim; librarian, E. F. Vail; pianist, Miss Mary E. Clark; blackboard artist, Charles Van Winkle; orchestra leader, Arthur S. Mosher; superintendent home department, Mrs. D. M. Runyon.

The superintendent has appointed the following Committees for the New Year: Music—Arthur S. Mosher, Miss Mary E. Clark, Miss Arline Brown; missionary—Mrs. Charles Van Winkle, Mrs. G. R. Maguire, Miss Elmira C. Runyon; house—Charles Van Winkle, Willard M. Maxim, J. M. Hawkins; entertainment—Miss F. G. Hawkins, Mrs. Ada M. Cumings, Mrs. W. S. Lowry.

The public is invited to attend. The chamber will hold its annual election of officers and a number of important matters will come before it of interest to the community.

ATTITUDE OF P. C. C. AS TO GOLF RULES

The form of proxy to be given the Plainfield Country Club delegate Leighton Calkins, at the annual meeting of the United States Golf Association, scheduled for Chicago on January 14, has made its appearance and explains more fully than ever the attitude of the New Jersey organization with regard to future rules legislation.

It will be remembered that a short time ago the Plainfield Country Club at a special meeting passed resolutions antagonistic to the St. Andrews ruling against the mallet-headed putter, an American creation. The form of proxy reads in part as follows:

"The Plainfield Country Club believes, as heretofore, that the welfare of the game of golf as a world-wide game requires either a single code of rules for the entire world or rules substantially the same in different countries; but this club does not believe the entire burden of maintaining this principle should be Association. It believes the principle can be maintained only by being fully recognized in all countries where the game is played.

"Inasmuch as interpretations by the United States Golf Association are in essence change in the rules, this club believes it is not necessary any longer to adopt rules and then amend them by interpretations, but that we should entitle our rules in the name of the United States Golf Association and show in the foot notes the variations from the St. Andrews rules and amend the existing by-laws accordingly.

"This club further believes that having taken said action we should not hereafter make any changes in the rules without submitting the proposed changes to St. Andrews and inviting a conference on the subject. This will prove conclusively our desire to maintain a single code so far as possible. St. Andrews, if it wishes can follow our example in that respect.

"It follows that we do not believe rules for Bogey play should be adopted by the United States Golf Association until after being submitted to St. Andrews and their views invited."

PLAINFIELD KENNEL CLUB ELECTS NEW OFFICERS.

At the annual meeting of the Plainfield Kennel Club, last night, it was decided to join the American Kennel Club Association and a delegate was elected to attend its convention. It was also decided to hold another show this year.

The local club will have an exhibit next month at the Westminster Kennel Club show in Madison Square Garden.

Edmund L. Mackenzie was elected president, with R. W. K. Anderson, vice president. The others officers are: Secretary, E. H. Hobbie, and treasurer, E. F. Feickert.

City Market to Continue.

Charles A. Clark, of this city, purchased the City Market property for $27,005 at the sale held in the sheriff's office, Elizabeth, yesterday, as he is friendly to the parties who controlled the property, the market will be continued in the future as before. By the sale, the claims on the part of those holding mortgages, have been satisfied.

Coming Theatre Attractions.

Among the attractions booked for The Plainfield theatre by Proctor & Sanderson, are Al G. Fields minstrels on Wednesday, January 18; Robert Hilliard in "A Fool There Was," Monday evening, February 6, and Lillian Russell on Tuesday evening, March 28. Other contracts are pending for first-class attractions in the near future.

MRS. JOSIAH SCHENCK IS BORNE TO GRAVE

Private funeral services for Mrs. Catherine E. Schenck were held at the residence of her son, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, 904 West Front street, at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Only the immediate relatives were present. Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, conducted the services, reading several Scripture selections, offering prayer and making a short address.

Mr. Broek's remarks were based on the words found in Rev. 14-13: "Blessed are the dead who died in the Lord, for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them." He spoke impressively of the godly life of Mrs. Schenck, adding that while she was resting from her earthly activities the influence of her life would never cease. Being dead she yet speaks. No one can estimate the influence of her Christian service, her godly training given to her immediate family, her grandchildren and a wide circle of friends. Eternity will only reveal it."

There were a number of beautiful floral tributes from relatives and friends, including a wreath of galax leaves from the Consistory of Trinity Reformed church. The remains were taken to Millstone, this morning, where a short service was held in charge of Rev. Floris Ferwerda. The burial was in the cemetery at Millstone.

UNION SERVICES HELD AT TRINITY REFORMED

The Sunday school rooms of Trinity Reformed church were filled last evening at the second of the series of meetings of the union of churches in the week of prayer. Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity, led the service and spoke briefly on foreign missions which was the designated topic.

Following a prayer by Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, Rev. Mr. Broek told of the duties of the church in spreading the gospel abroad. He said that it is the supreme business of the hcurch to devote itself to the preaching of the gospel among the peoples of the world. It is a supreme command given by Jesus Himself and should no more be neglected than the dying request of our most intimate friend or loved one whose wishes we generally hold as a sacred obligation.

"We are not doing what we might," he said, "and in neglecting the command of the Saviour we are disobeying an injunction that ought to be our foremost consideration. A one-cent stamp a week from each church member would produce $10,000,000 a year and yet but $7,000,000 was contributed last year for missions." Mr. Broek urged everyone to give the matter more serious thought.

JOINS FEDERATION OF DAY NURSERIES.

The executive board of the City Union of The King's Daughters, at its monthly meeting at The Day Nursery this morning, voted to join the Federation of Day Nurseries. Mrs. Anna M. Most and Mrs. Frank W. Jones will be delegates to the annual meeting to be held in New York city on Monday.

The annual birthday party of The Day Nursery will be held at the nursery on Wednesday afternoon, January 25. Silver Cross Circle will have charge.

Nine circles responded to the roll call this morning. Mrs. Most, the treasurer, reported a balance of $532.88, which represents some of the money given at Christmas time. There were 210 children cared for at the nursery during December. Miss DeLany, the city nurse, made 129 visits in December and assisted at two operations.

Early Morning Chimney Fire.

Box 45 was pulled at 5:35 this morning for a chimney fire at 902 West Third street, occupied by Herman Semer. Hose company No. 3 responded quickly and put the blaze out with extinguishers. There was no loss. The recall sounded at 6:18.

Learn How Gas Is Made.

The chemistry class of the North Plainfield High School visited the gas plant of the P. S. C. on East Fourth street, yesterday, for the purpose of learning something about the making of gas.

Why?

A change in the personnel of the councilmanic police committee has been made.

Mrs. Herman Ditzel, daughter of Robert Murray, of 226 East Front street, who underwent a successful operation at the hospital, has returned to her home in Elizabeth.

CODINGTON VICE PRES'T OF COUNTY BAR ASS'N

The Union County Bar Association Tuesday appointed a committee to arrange for a dinner to be given this winter. The committee comprises Judge William Newcorn, and W. A. Codington, of this city; Robert H. McAdams, Joseph T. Hague and John K. English, Elizabeth.

The officers were elected as follows: President, City Attorney James C. Connolly, Elizabeth; vice-president, William A. Codington, of this city; treasurer, County Collector Nathan R. Leavitt; secretary, Paul Q. Oliver, Westfield; trustees, Judge Edward S. Atwater, former Judge Patrick Hamilton Gilhooly, Surrogate George T. Parrot, John K. English.

FREE LECTURE TONIGHT ON ENGLAND'S CASTLES

The second lecture in the Board of Education course of public lectures will be delivered in the Washington School auditorium tonight at 8 o'clock. The lecturer, George N. Cross, of Massachusetts, will recount some of the striking events in history that cluster about the historic castles of England. Mr. Cross is well known to many Plainfield people from the course of lectures he gave in the High School some years ago. He is an interesting speaker and his talk is illustrated by many beautiful stereopticon views. He is one of the lecturers of the Board of Education in New York, Newark, and other cities.

The Board of Education has now completed arrangements for a lecture by Edward Avis, of Connecticut, a noted lecturer on birds, on March 28. Mr. Avis' mimicry of the bird songs and his brilliant pictures of the birds in their habitats will be of intense interest to all who wish to recognize the wild song birds. The lectures are free to anyone in the city above fifteen years of age.

P. H. S. ALUMNI ASS'N ELECTION FEBRUARY 21

The Plainfield High School Alumni Association will hold its annual meeting at the high school, Tuesday night February 21, at 8 o'clock, at which time the annual reports will be presented and officers for the ensuing year will be elected. Another prize-speaking contest will be held. The association has offered two prizes of $10 in gold, one to go to the young man and the other to the young woman delivering the best oration or declamation that evening. This contest is open to any young man or young woman in the high school. The alumni association believes that practise in public speaking is an essential part of the general education and desires to encourage the same.

The president, William C. Hubbard, has appointed William D. Murray, Henry Brower and Miss Helen C. Moodey a committee on nominations and Messrs. Charles B. Morse, Theodore J. Gavett and J. O. Osgood, Jr., a committee of arrangements. The judges for the speaking contest will be announced later. After the meeting dancing will be a feature.

All graduates of the high school and all those who finished two years work in the school are eligiable to membership in this association, and, as it has for one of its principal objects the raising of funds to enable boys and girls to obtain a college education, who could not do otherwise, it should appeal to all those who would lend a hand.

ALFRED FAWCETT DIES OF NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Alfred Fawcett aged 41 years, a resident of North Plainfield for many years, died at Arlington Heights, Mass., this morning, following an illness of nervous prostration which began last spring. He was engaged in business in New York as a linen importer.

The remains will be brought here and the funeral will be held Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, at the residence of his brother, B. T. Fawcett, 34 Washington avenue, the borough. The burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

C. W. FISK MARRIES IN NEW YORK TODAY.

The marriage of Charles Wilbur Fisk, son of former Mayor and Mrs Charles Joel Fisk, of this city, and Mrs. Catherine G. Felton, formerly of Boston, will place this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York city, instead of this city, as originally planned. The change was necessary on account of the fact that Mr. Fisk's sister, Miss Annie Grey Fisk is ill with scarlet fever and the Fisk home is under quarantine.

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, will perform the ceremony, and only a limited number of relatives and friends will be present. The couple plan to take an extended trip, but no announcement has been made as to the future home of Mr. and Mrs. Fisk.

MISS ELLA MAY WALSH WEDS IRA R. VAIL

Miss Ella May Walsh, daughter of Mrs. Sarah L. Walsh, of East Fifth street, and Ira Randolph Vail, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Vail of Elmwood place, were maried in Holy Cross church at 7 o'clock last night. The ceremony was performed by the rector, Rev. George A. Warner, and was witnessed by a large gathering of relatives and friends.

Miss Walsh was attended by two bridesmaids, Miss Ethel Vail, sister of the groom, and Miss Emily Walsh, sister of the bride. Russell Vail, brother of the groom, acted as best man. There were four ushers, Charles Kregar, Edward Mosher, Herbert Stine and Albert Terry. Miss Theodosia Vail and Miss Margaret Martin acted as flower girls.

Miss Walsh was attired in white crepe de chine and carried bride roses. Her attendants were gowned in pink and carried pink carnations. The flower girls wore pink and white.

As the members of the bridal party entered the church, they were met by the full vested choir which preceded them up the aisle, singing as a processional the wedding march from Lohengrin. Chairmaster W. S. O'Brien presided at the organ and gave the following numbers during the ceremony: "Cantilene," Theodore; Gavotte, "Salome," from Mignon, Thomas; andante and allegro, Bache; chansonette; recessional Mendelssohn wedding march.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents and later Mr. and Mrs. Vail left for Syracuse, N. Y., where they will spend a week. On returning they will temporarily make their home with the bride's mother.

Mr. Vail has been a member of the Holy Cross choir for five years and at the present time has been serving as crucifer. He is employed in the New York offices of the Jersey Central and is held in high esteem by many friends in the city and borough. His bride is also well known and popular. Both young people received numerous presents and there was an exchange of gifts in the wedding party.

CONFERENCE ON WATER

The Mayor and Council Hear the Views of Some Prominent Citizens.

GILBERT FAVORS CONTRACT.

J. O. Osgood and Others Also Express Doubts as to Desirability of the M. O. Scheme—Expert Fuertes Coincides.

No stone is being left unturned by the Councilmanic water committee in ascertaining public sentiment on the report made by James F. Fuertes on the water supply problem as is shown by the fact that another conference of prominent citizens was held lastt night. On the invitation of Frederic E. Mygatt, chairman of the committee, several who have made a study of the subject expressed their opinion at the two hours' meeting held in the Common Council's chambers.

Mayor Moy was present as were also R. I. Tolles, D. W. Taylor, W. L. Gloak, Herbert Buxton, G. S. Clay, F. L. Holt and F. W. Montgomery representing the Common Council. The expert, Mr. Feurtes, was also on hand. Those who gave the committee the benefit of their views were R. Henry Depew, L. V. F. Randolph, Alexander Gilbert, Joseph O. Osgood, William S. Tyler and George H. Frost.

It was Mr. Gilbert's idea that the city authorities should exhaust every means to make a satisfactory and binding contract with the Plainfield-Union Water Company before going any further with the municipal ownership scheme. He gave many sound reasons why such a course would be proferable. To a certain extent, Geo. H. Frost coincided with Mr. Gilbert's belief. Mr. Frost, it is understood, however, has not definitely committed himself in favor of either plan.

Mr. Osgood was another who took the position assumed by Mr. Gilbert. He did not consider that there would be any advantage in the city bearing the burden of a water plant and was of the opinion that in the long run the experiment would not prove as satisfactory as painted. A most desirable contract, of binding force, sidered would be the better solution of the problem. The legal phases of situation were explained at some length by Mr. Tyler.

The municipal ownership plan, however, found warm supporters in the persons of Messrs. Randolph and Depew as well as Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield. The former two expressed themselves as heartily in favor of the city taking steps immediately to acquire a supply from the Lamington river and to obtain such option as would be necessary for that purpose as speedily as possible. A resolution was introduced to that effect but nothing came of it.

During the conference, Mr. Fuertes answered many questions and it developed that in his expert opinion Mr. Gilbert had the right idea when he advanced that an endeavor first be made to obtain a satisfactory agreement with the private corporation. He said that it would take at least two years to establish a municipal plant and if such decision was arrived at work would have to be begun at once.

Raised Up Chiefs.

Deputy L. C. Davis and staff, of Somerville, visited Miantonomo tribe of Red Men, last night, and raised up the recently elected chiefs. Montross; guard of the wigwam, Adam Martin. The ceremonies were followed by a social session during which speeches were made by the new chiefs.

THE CITY'S MONEY.

Frequently the question is asked "How does the city spend the money it gets as taxes?" For such as these and for all others generally, the municipality's treasurer, William F. Arnold gives an account of this stewardship today. His report, beyond question, the most detailed and satisfactory one that we have seen, will be found on page 8. When compared with similar statements of accounts coming to our notice from other towns, it is proof positive that William F. Arnold performs his duties in the most exacting and efficient manner and that the city is very fortunate in being able to command his services. If you are a taxpayer, or have any interest at all in the community's welfare, we suggest that you take a few moments time to peruse this excellent report.

There was an informal meeting of the Netherwood Reformed church consistory Tuesday night at the parsonage preparatory to the regular annual church meeting to be held tomorrow night when the officers for the ensuing year will be elected, and reports of the church officers read. This meeting will follow the regular prayer meeting.

The annual dinner for the poor was held in the Calvary Baptist church, Monday. Addresses were made by Mrs. Wadell, a missionary from Orange; Rev. M. A. Alexander and the pastor, Rev. G. W. Bailey. Mrs. Mary Stith, Mrs. Elizabeth Brown and Mrs. Devine was the committee on dinner. Week of prayer services are being held at the church this week.

The Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church met on Tuesday afternoon, but owing to the storm the attendance was small, consequently nothing was done, aside from reporting progress regarding the arrangements for the turkey supper to be held on January 26 and 27. The society will hold a special meeting in the church parlors Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, when a larger attendance is expected.

AS USUAL.

Ten little resolutions, proud and pert and fine,
One smoked a strong perfecto, and then there were nine.

Nine little resolutions. Mr. Never-will-be-late
Slept plum through the alarm clock, and then there were but eight.

Eight little resolutions. The rain poured down from heaven,
And one decliend to go to church and so there were seven.

Seven little resolutions. One, blind error's tricks,
Drank two tall whiskey rickeys, and then there were six.

Six little resolutions. One took a tempting dive,
And lost his margin on the curb, and then there were five.

Five little resolutions.—till one got mad and swore,
(The trolley crowd walked on his feet) and so there were but four.

Four little resolutions. One really couldn't see,
The harm of betting on a horse. And then there were three.

Three little resolutions. Ono gossiped all he knew (Or thought he did) about his friends and then there were but two.

Two little resolutions. One told a lie "for fun,"
And then another to save that. And so there was but one.

One little resolution, neglected and forgotten
Just died of inanition. All ten had gone to pot.
Warwick James Price in N. Y. Sun.

PROFIT OF KINDNESS.

Kindness, gentleness and humane treatment are essential to get the greatest revenue out of horses, argues the Horse World. In Chicago the West Side Transfer Company has a horse that was purchased in the open market in 1892 for $65 that weights 1,300 pounds and that has been in continuous service for eighteen years. Although twenty-three years old, his preservation is so unusual that he was awarded a prize at the Chicago 1910 work-horse parade. He promises several years of future usefulness in delivering merchandise for the large local wholesale houses, and his efficiency is due to the kind treatment he has received. Many of the big carting and business concerns are totally ignorant of the great amount of money that might be saved to them by a radical change in the treatment of their horses, a change that would make kindness and considerate treatment the first principle to be considered by their barn men and drivers.

In the home of the sinless animals the "Sinless One" was born, and in the manger-bed, between the ass and the ox, He found His rest. Christian art represents the sheep and the lamb surrounding the shepherds as they knelt in adoration before the infant King, and Christ loved and blessed them all.

THE HARVEST MOON

"I cannot tell you," said Vavin. "These friends cannot tell you. This must tell you," and he picked up a mirror and held it before her. "This is the truest judge of all. Your face, ma cherie—like the mother's; that clear eye without mud in it—without the jaundice of my cigarettes or the rye whisky of the judge. You know the pictures of Napoleon—the courage of that nose and firm jaw. For a woman you have as good as that great emperor, and that mouth, my friends—when God puts two lips so restfully together without sneer or pride or malice or wrinkled fear the soul he makes serene. Now, we none of us advise her. Tonight a young man is to have a first presentation of his play. It is part of his life. The director of a theater? His venture many thousand dollars—a company that lives by that art—twelve, fifteen men and women, after years of study and four weeks' repetition, for tonight."

"And what is all of this as opposed to a young girl's entire future?" asked Mrs. Winthrop angrily.

"Nothing," replied Vavin calmly, "but here is a beautiful moment for you—for me. Self interest, resentment, the bribes of our weak human nature, on one side; on the other side a principle; the something that builds character—also the chance to meet temptations and grow strong to step above them, and we—we are to see a decision from a girl who now finds herself."

"I'm going to play tonight," said Dora, standing up with tears in her eyes as she started for the door.

"This is all rank sophistry," exclaimed Elliott. "You say let her decide, and then you preach at her, while we stand here whipsawed and gagged."

"One moment," said Vavin, with a smile, walking over to Dora. "She is now informed—awake. Say your own arguments without me." And, raising her hand, he kissed it and passed out of the room.

"Dora!" began Mrs. Winthrop.

"If you don't mind," said the girl, "there's a rehearsal at the theater now. I'm afraid I'll be late."

CHAPTER XI.

THE dozen or more men who write what is accepted as the critical opinion of New York city are generally snugly asleep in their little cots when the momentous decisions of which they have been delivered are being read by the anxious and nervous authors, who sit up even until dawn to learn their fate. Kind newspaper publishers—more kind probably than they intended to be to these nervous folk of the stage—have in recent years adopted a policy of issuing a special edition of their various newspapers for what is known as the midnight sale—a sale that has grown with the all night cafe and the development of the restaurant section, that has kept a large number of citizens out of bed if not out of mischief. The philanthropic results of these so called early editions have been at least the shortening of the torture of the actor who has had what is so blithely called his "Broadway opportunity."

Despite the many friends who congratulated him and the applause of the askers, Holcomb knew that his piece had not succeeded. One or two former associates in the companies that he had been in called loudly for a speech at the end of the second act; but, despite all this and even Ludlow's effusive praise, he knew that his play had not "got over"—that is, over the footlights.

He had been surprised at Dora's prompt appearance at the rehearsal. He had taken an opportunity to thank her formally, and she had replied to him with equal reserve.

Before the curtain went up on the night performance he went back to her dressing room and spoke more frankly:

"Dora, you have been more than kind. I showed myself very weak last night, and you showed yourself a woman with great courage. Whatever the outcome of this, I shall never forget it."

They were talking through the half opened door of her dressing room, with but a few minutes left for her final preparations, so that her "Thank you, Mr. Holcomb," left him still in doubt as to whether she had understood any change in feeling.

He had gone back at the end of the play mainly to thank her for going through the "big scene" as he had rehearsed it and hoping against hope to get some expression from her that would quiet his turbulent spirit, but he found her dressing room besieged by the Winthrops, Elliott, Professor Fullerton and the haunting Aunt Cornelia. The little conversation that they had was therefore brief and formal, and, while there was some talk of a supper party after the theater, he was quick to observe that there was no calculation about having him in it and little enthusiasm about his part of the evening's venture. Vavin had left the theater after a friendly handshake to catch a train for Boston, where he was to deliver one of his "irrepressible lectures."

"I will return tomorrow night on the 11 o'clock train. Do me the honor to have supper with me. I will talk with you of your play and other things," he had said to Holcomb.

In a way Holcomb had expected that the play would not be a great success, but he had hoped that it would sufficiently establish him in Dora's eyes by its reception to bring them closer together. He was genuinely disappointed that the Winthrops and the Fullertons had not invited him to their supper party, and, strange as it doubtless would have seemed to the many friends in the theater who would have liked to have him for guest or host, he wandered out through the stage door, solitary, saddened and wondering where the deuce he would go to get the bite of food and drink that he needed and yet not run into some gathering connected with his own production. He was bitterly commenting to himself on how lonely a man of pride can be when he met two or three of the minor actors of the company and joined their party gladly, and with them he sat up until those fateful early editions were spread before them and he knew that his play was a disastrous failure.

He would have given a great deal to be able to talk to Dora that afternoon, for the evening papers only re-enforced the judgment of the morning papers, and the "sale" at the box office indicated that the public had no intention of quarreling with the critics. He was in and around the theater most of the day, hoping that Dora might come to the playhouse or that she might at least telephone to him and condole, there being absolutely no reason for congratulations.

Night at last came, and he had an excuse for seeing her, but she merely nodded to him as she passed him in the wings, and he turned bitterly away from the stage and went out to the front of the house to watch his play and see if he could see it as the critics had. He was not entirely successful in getting their point of view. He saw many faults, but he still felt that the play had merit and that it simply had missed fire, but just where the fault lay he was unable to discover.

He was glad, however, that he had the engagement with M. Vavin, for the idle chatter of his associates meant nothing to him. He reached the hotel shortly after Vavin himself had arrived and found that the old gentlemen had already made preparations for a supper for three.

"I hope," said Vavin, "that my request was not too much like a command."

"Any request of yours, monsieur," replied Holcomb, "will have that force." For the younger dramatist not only knew how deeply he was obligated to the Frenchman, but he had a genuine reverence for his ability and affection for his kindly ironic personality.

"You are despondent," said the old man. "Let me offer you a glass of wine." And under his kindly treatment Holcomb poured forth what he called the wretched climax of a wretched endeavor.

"You are wrong there," said Vavin. "You have written a good play—not a remarkable play, but it is damnably prepared, that play of yours. You and I will see that it is still made a success."

"You and I?" repeated Holcomb.

"Yes, you and I. You have never been in Paris? Then you do not know why French plays succeed. There are many reasons, but those plays, monsieur, are wonderfully well rehearsed. Pardon me if for a moment I change the subject. You love Miss Fullerton?"

"I do."

"You have told her?"

"I have."

"Tell her again and again. The spirit is wounded. You have been weak, my boy. A sensitive girl who has had fighting conditions all her life cannot be handled at first as the woman who is grown up and who is strong, who has had sympathy and who has tasted of success. Now, again, this profession of yours. You are anxious to write plays. Why—the money?"

"Not entirely," replied Holcomb. "I have made a living ever since I was ten years old, but I see things that way. Some fellows see pictures—they paint. Some see buildings—they plan. I see men and women, and my men and women collide and persuade—and fight."

"You see them here," said Vavin, indicating his forehead. "You have been"—

"Certainly," replied Holcomb.

"But the public," said Vavin—"what of it? Do you think of the influence that you have on the public? Are you thinking of your public when you write?"

Holcomb hesitated. He was not quite sure that he had thought of his public.

"It occurs to me sometimes," he said.

"It must occur always," said Vavin impressively. "There is no suggestion so subtle, so sure, so strong, as the suggestion the playwright makes from the stage to the people. I have white hairs. Yours is dark. Believe me, I would give the rest of my life to go back and take from my plays every word that has made any man less honest, less hopeful, less kind."

"It is my play that leads you to say this to me, monsieur?"

"Oh, no; pardon me," replied Vavin, "it is you. I have been asking questions about you, and I learned that—I shall be brief, monsieur—you have a rival in your affection for my—little friend Dora."

"Yes," said Holcomb wearily; "I guess Graham Winthrop is very much of a rival just now."

"Have you talked with her since yesterday?"

"No; she has avoided me."

"Because she doubts," said Vavin—"doubts herself, and because of that I bring you here together tonight. I am for you, my boy," and he held out his hand with a smile that had in it more sunshine than Holcomb had seen in many a day.

The telephone bell rang, and Vavin's answer was to say that the people should come up. "You got my note at the theater last night," he said, "telling you to bring your manuscript with you? Good!" And, as a knock sounded at the door he said to Holcomb quickly, "Remind me tonight that there is moonlight," and with this enigmatic instruction he ushered Dora, Winthrop and Aunt Cornelia into the room.

"MON DIEU! I WILL NOT PERMIT YOU TO COMPLIMENT ME IN THAT WAY."

"I am more than honored," Vavin said, bowing to Aunt Cornelia and shaking hands with Dora, "by this visit. I had wished to have a little talk with Miss Fullerton about her acting and about herself."

"I don't see, M. Vavin," said the spinster, "why you cannot come with us and Dora to Mrs. Winthrop's and have your talk there."

"I should be most delighted," he said; then, turning to Dora: "I have my reasons for asking you to have supper here with me and Mr. Holcomb. Will you not?"

Dora, still under the influence of Aunt Cornelia, looked from one to the other.

"This is a little too much for me," said Aunt Cornelia. "Before I'd think of having supper in a man's room in a hotel"—

"But, my dear lady," protested Vavin with great suavity, "my man Henri—Henri was—was with me before this young lady was even born, and here also are Mr. Holcomb and my white hairs. Mon Dieu! I will not permit you to compliment me in that way."

"Compliment you!" almost screamed the New England lady.

"Surely," said Vavin, with a smile, "you did not mean it unkindly?"

"I think I'll stay," said Dora.

"I wash my hands of the whole affair. Come on, Graham."

"I believe I'm not invited to stay," said Winthrop, with a grin.

"When you and I have supper together," said Vavin politely, "I should like to feel that the conversation was restricted to us two. I will see that Miss Fullerton is home within an hour," said Vavin to Graham as he let them out.

"Very well," said the good natured young man. "Mother and I'll sit up for you, Dora."

"Won't you speak to Mr. Holcomb?" said Vavin as he came back into the dining room.

"I have already said good evening," replied the girl.

"And that is all you think is necessary for the present? Very well. I have asked you both to come here because I wish to see if we cannot do something with Mr. Holcomb's play. I think we can make it a success." Dora's hopes rose high.

CHAPTER XII.

"FIRST we will have a bit of salad that I have ordered and a glass of wine," went on Vavin. "And then you, Dora, and I and this author of yours will talk of the drama."

"Papa has never given me wine," said Dora as he offered her a glass.

"Then never let us begin," replied Vavin impressively.

"And now to the play, my children," he said. "Let me have the manuscript. This scene here," he said, turning to the first act—"you play it in a white light."

"Naturally," said Holcomb. "It is daytime."

"Yet all the sentiment is night," explained Vavin. "You have not studied the effect of color on the emotions. You have doubtless heard of Charcot—Dr. Charcot. He was my friend. We made many experiments together of the effect of color upon many persons under hypnotic influence. Invariably under yellow the subject laughs, under green he is content, under red he is content also, but slightly stimulated. If it is brown he is in fear; if violet he weeps; under blue there is a—what you call it manner—distrait, perplexed. Now, my boy, don't you see that the color for this scene should be red?"

"Do you really think, sir," said Holcomb, "that this is so important—that the individual is so sensitive?"

"Sensitive to color?" repeated Vavin. "From your awful elevated road I look into the apartment windows. It is marvelous how generous you American people are. For 5 sous one gets an intimate view of the entire American life. Inside the walls, brown or a dark blue, depressing. I wonder the poor people live. For myself, when I work or have something to construct in a strange hotel I have the room fitted so that I can get the color I need. Let me show you."

He called to his servant, who was in the outer room.

"Henri, le rouge!" And as the man pulled the red curtain across the bay windows: "Don't you see that the color for the scene should be red? These curtains—see what they do. Now, suppose that in addition to them I give you this red light," and he turned on a red lamp on the mantelpiece, "and if you want it warmer I turn out these white lights," and the energetic dramatist walked briskly around the room, turning out the electric lights. "We are at once domestic, yes—cozy corner, the armchair, the old man with a pipe. In your play there is no old man with a pipe, so we will place this lady so," and he led Dora to the fireplace and seated her in a chair in front of it. "Isn't this the happy home? Isn't she the young wife? And can't you almost believe that I am the father? Don't you feel that way, my dear?"

"It really is wonderful," said the girl, "for I do."

"But I have a red light in my play," said Holcomb.

"Ah, yes," replied Vavin, "but in the wrong place. A scene of gayety; it should have been yellow. Let me see it in your manuscript and I will show you. Now, see!" Again he walked briskly around the room, turning out the red light and turning up the light on the table, which had a large yellow shade on it.

"Henri, the yellow curtains!" he called, and the well trained servant came silently in and pulled over the red curtains a pair of heavy brocaded yellow ones.

"Now, my dear, the lining of your coat—it is yellow. We will reverse it. And now we will take this scene—where the man follows the woman into her own apartment before he is such good friends with her husband. I will hold the book and you will play it. You know the lines?" he said to Holcomb.

"Rather," replied the young author.

"Very well, then; you begin, please, where the lady has ordered him from the house and he is at the door, hesitating to go. He tries to explain. Yes, here it is. Begin. 'We folks from the Pacific'"—

Before either of them realized exactly what the old man was doing with them they were playing the preliminary love scene in Holcomb's play with a great deal more ardor than either of them would have been able to infuse into it on the stage. When they reached the climax they both turned and looked at him a little sheepishly.

"It was very well done, my dears, but this suggestion I would make: When you come to the end first you laugh a little, my dear, then he laughs a little; then you laugh more; you laugh together. It is a panic. You show your teeth. The audience must laugh with you then. Don't you see?"

"Don't you think that this attention to light is a bit theatrical?" asked Holcomb—"at least not exactly true to life?"

"True to life?" replied Vavin. "Do you know that 60 per cent of the cases of falling in love are in the moonlight? You know the harvest moon, the full moon that comes at harvest time and comes three nights almost at the same time. Did you ever think why?"

Holcomb shook his head dubiously.

"It is, my children, that harvesters, men and women, shall fall in love with each other. Oh, it is a droll God, monsieur, that plays that trick for one hour on his children, and what time? The best season of the year. And, also again, what time? When the grapes are ripe, when there is a wine-press. Pardon me, but I am far from a perfect host." And he paused for a moment to fill his own glass and that of Holcomb.

"A harvest moon for one hour and the wonderful madness that goes with this," he said, raising his glass to the light. "Is that of the theater? No; it is a droll God. It is too bad I cannot show you. I have no arrangement here to get the blue light, which is mystery, and the green light, which is content, and which together make a moonlight.

"If I am not mistaken," said Holcomb, glancing at Vavin, "it was moonlight when we came in, and, by the bye, this is the harvest moon."

FEED FOR WINTER EGGS.

Grain, Animal and Vegetable Matter and, Above All, Water Are Necessary For Large Production.

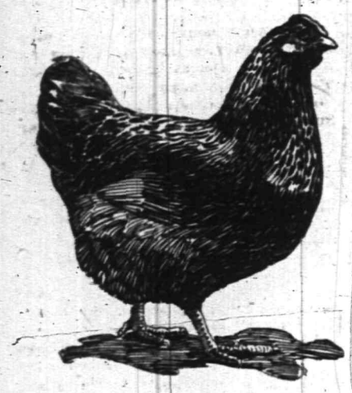
To make hens lay in winter they must be fed a balanced ration of different kinds of grain, animal and vegetable food every day and plenty of pure water. One of the most important items and the most neglected is the drinking water for winter layers.

A large per cent of the egg is water. The last thing a hen does before going to roost and the first thing in the morning is to drink water. Hens should be kept in the house when there is snow on the ground and in real cold weather. Wheat, oats and buckwheat should be scattered in the straw every morning, at noon a dry mash and cut clover and at night whole corn fed in feed troughs. Keep beef scraps always before them, with plenty of oyster shells and grit. Hens fed and managed according to the system as described in this article will be contented and happy and lay plenty of eggs during the winter months. To make a success of winter egg production it is of the utmost importance that you breed a good winter laying strain of fowls. It is no trouble to get most any kind of hens to lay in the spring and early summer, but to get them to lay in the late fall and winter months is quite another proposition. It would, therefore, be advisable for every farmer to follow these rules closely and thereby increase his production of winter eggs.



Well Fed and Prepared For Winter.

EXERCISE FOR HENS.

A Means For It Should Be Provided During Their Confinement In Cold Weather.

If possible, secure some unthrashed oats, wheat and rye, tie them in narrow bundles and put them away for the hens. During a rainy spell place one of these bundles in the scratching shed, tied so that it will hang quite near the floor, and let the hens jump a little in their efforts to secure the grain.

They will go for it with a good spirit, and not only will the seeds secured by them be valuable to them as food, but the exercise and work will keep them from getting lazy, especially if the winter be long and they tire of their scratching shed. It is better to keep the laying hens interested, and nothing does so any more than a change of food and exercise during the dreary winters.

It is the time when they are wanted to lay, and they must be given the opportunity to assist themselves and be kept going the same as if they were out in the orchard during the summer. A lazy, inactive flock will not produce eggs.

THE HEN'S APPETITE.

Quality and Quantity of Food Are of Great Importance For the Production of Eggs.

As soon as the hens show signs of leaving their food there is something wrong with them, the food or the owner. Either they have been given too much, not enough variety or it is not the kind that their own natures tell them is needed for their especial purpose.

When the fowls are hungry they will eat and not leave anything, and when food is left in the yards or troughs it is an indication that something is wrong. The matter should be investigated at once. Give only the food necessary for their maintenance and the production of eggs, but see that they hustle to secure it and it is clean, leaving not a particle remaining in the feeding yard for the next meal.

Food and Condition of Health.

No matter how healthy a fowl may be, it cannot retain its health if it does not have plenty of the right kind of food. An insufficiency of any of the different food elements will weaken the bird so that it will become an easy victim to one or more of the many diseases. Give the bird plenty of wholesome feed and it will usually be healthy.

Grit For Little Chickens.

With young chickens sharp grit should be easy of access when they need it, and, very little water is required for a few weeks if milk be added to their food and if milk be given when it is preferable to water, for it contains the elements of nourishment and growth.

CITY AND BOROUGH SHOULD BE ONE MUNICIPALITY

Randolph Tells Chamber of Commerce Why He Favors Consolidation.

Following is the speech on "Consolidation" delivered last night by former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce:

"A certain distinguished statesman of New Jersey has somewhat derisively accused our governor-elect of vainly supposing that he has received a commision to 'go and teach all nations.' The world can well exist and even progress with a limited supply of house-top oratory. The greatest of gospels was delivered in a single sentence, and the golden character of silence is as real now as ever it was. Some of us even who are gifted with oratorical accomplishments might do well to emulate the example of that devoted monk of the very early Christian ages, who, being especially famous as a linquist, made it his penance to remain perfectly silent for thirty years. Of another saint of that same age, it is said that he, Pambos, being himself unable to read, approached a teacher desiring to be taught a Psalm. Having learned a single passage, 'I will take heed to my ways that I offend not with my tongue,' he went away, remarking that for the time he had learned quite enough. When asked months afterwards, and again many years afterwards, why he did not come to learn another verse, Pambos replied that as yet he had neven been able truly to digest and master the wisdom of that single inspired passage.

"The subject upon which you have desired me to address you this evening, namely: The consolidation of the two municipalities which form our community, is one upon which argument and eloquence seem alike unnecessary. And whatever requirements existed for argument have been quite fully met. Many citizens of North Plainfield, under such excellent leadership as that of Mayor Smalley and ex-Mayor Saunders, and a host of good citizens of the city of Plainfield have repeatedly urged the union. It was a significant remark recently made by Mayor Saunders to the effect that no one as yet on either side of Green Brook had presented a single reason for preventing this union. And this I believe to be a fact. It is strange that, in a matter of such utility and importance, mere lethargy should keep back the consummation so devoutly to be wished.

"But, perhaps, super-added to this dead weight has been some sort of political apprehension, or mis-apprehension. Some political party or some political aspirant has feared that certain party-plans or personally ambitious hopes might 'gang a gley' if this union were accomplished. For one, I have never been able to understand the ground of this sort of fear. Moreover, if ground there was for it, I have earnestly believed that it should not be permitted to prevent a thing that is at once desirable and necessary. Individual aspiration to office and partisan schemes are both paltry and contemptible obstacles to interpose.

"It is worse than absurd, it is well nigh criminal for a man to stand in the legislature, or elsewhere, obstructing the interests of an entire community in order that he may have a better chance of election or of re-election. It is hardly less absurd and wicked for a party machine to seek to prevent the required altering of municipal lines because such party machine might find one of its screws thereby loosened. Alas! the machine, like Tennyson's brook, 'goes on forever' and is ever watchful alike for danger on one hand and for advantage on the other, whilst the average citizen, having manfully cast the vote generously proffered by the party boss, considers his duty fully performed and proceeds to take a rest in regard to public obligation or to turn with new relish to more profitable employment. In a notable composition by Andrew D. White, entitled 'The Message of the Nineteenth Century to the Twentieth,' he has quoted the remark of a leading man of business in New York who said: 'We have thought this thing over, and we find it pays better to neglect our city affairs than to attend to them,—that we can make more money in the time required for the full discharge of our political duties than the politicians can steal from us on account of our not discharging them.' If, indeed, this is an expression of our highest and most reliable type of American patriotism, then we are truly in a pitiable state. Such citizenship might gain the whole world, but it would lose its own soul.

"In view of the dangers arising from thoughtlessness, neglect, party-bias and schemes of selfishness, there is a large sphere of usefulness opening up to institutions like your own. The great Chamber of Commerce in New York has rendered on many occasions inestimable services to the metropolis and to the nation. And at the very moment when you are holding this, your first annual meeting, you find ready at hand important duties in the discharge of which you can be eminently helpful and efficient. Plainfield is pressed with problems of over-shadowing importance. Two of these are the question of consolidation with North Plainfield and the question of securing an enduring and abundant supply of pure water. Both should be acted upon without delay. Action in both require the fullest exercise of intelligence, public spirit, energy and ripe business judgment. Your Chamber can be of great service in arousing interest in such questions and in wisely guilding public opinion and action in relation thereto.

"Regarding the subject of consolidation, there can, I think, be no serious question as to the desirableness of this union of Plainfield and North Plainfield. A few might wish to postpone, but surely not many citizens would desire defintely to prevent it.

"North Plainfield is fair and lovable; and naturally, Plainfield is in love with her, and would desire to marry her, and is encouraged to believe that her affection is reciprocated. Victor Hugo has charmingly told us in his best novel that one influence, more potently than all others, promotes love. More powerful than wealth or intellect,—more seductive than beauty,—more enticing than tender declaration,—more absorbingly effective than any or all of these is propinquity. In this blessed propinquity to each other live these two delightful municipalities. Plainfield is the older and greater. But surely not less lovely is the beautiful and attactive neighbor. They have grown together from childhood, have gossiped together in shop and postoffice and railway car, have rejoiced together on festal occasions and have wept together in hours of sorrow. They have attended the same schools and lectures and have worshipped at the same churches. They belong to each other. They should be married.

"After marriage, not before, comes housekeeping. Once or twice it has been by some one said: 'O, let the city and borough remain separate, but go into partnership on some agreed terms in relation to certain needed public improvements, such for example as sewer-works.' Is it not plain that such a plain is as unnatural as it must be unprofitable, and that it is the one way designed with cruel skill by the very Spirit of Evil to lead on to disagreements and quarrels. If they marry they have all things in common. They are then one harmonius unity; one happy and complete community. Thus joined, they are equal to all needful enterprises, whilst apart, they are each measurably insufficient and crippled—with a result of retarded progress. Every pound of power North Plainfield would bring us would count for fully two in any enterprise. And, merged with Plainfield, North Plainfield would speedily find her most difficult problems solved.

"In regard to this problem of sewerage just mentioned, North Plainfield is now experiencing difficulties of dealing with it lone-handed. The retiring Mayor of Plainfield considers the subject of sewerage to be one needing further early attention by the city. The problem should manifestly be solved as an entirety by the whole community on both sides of Green brook acting as one municipality. So, again, is it with our requirements for water. Our able water expert, Mr. Fuertes, shows, in his valuable new report, that the Stony brook water-shed cannot be relied upon. Any water supply from that quarter would be inadequate and impure and of insufficient pressure. Possibly, at some point of which I have no knowledge, North Plainfield might develop, from beneath her shale, a satisfactory supply. But such experiment must prove costly and be of doubtful result, and might also be found subject to legal complication. Just now she appears to be buying water which is purveyed to her unlawfully—supposing the doctrine laid down in the case of Meeker vs. East Orange is to be applied to this case, as would seem to be inevitable. If a company, or other party, may not deport water in pipes from a certain territory and sell it elsewhere, then the inhabitants of North Plainfield have, of right, at the present time no water-supply except what each householder can obtain by boring or drilling wells on his own property. Apparently in violation of private right such as are indicated in the precedent referred to, the water company operating in this section is conveying away and selling water pumped in Plainfield to North Plainfield, to Elizabeth and to other places. This cannot always go on. Both law and public necessity

SHE DISCUSSES POLITICS

Miss Richards Talks on Federal Questions to Monday Afternoon Club.

IS FOR THE PARCELS POST.

Talented Woman Also Upholds Direct Primaries and Tells How Beef Trust Has Hurt the People.

Miss Janet E. Richards, of Washington, D. C., gave her third talk on "Current History" yesterday afternoon in the Hartridge auditorium. In accordance with the wishes of her audience as expressed by a majority vote she devoted her talk to the discussion of home politics.

The vital question of the present day is the restoration of the true spirit and practice of democracy, therefore all progressive action must be in line with the placing of more power in the hands of the people, as opposed to control by the few great monied interests, she declared. President Taft's appointment of Justice White to the chief justiceship of the Supreme Court is well in line with this policy, Justice White having proved himself repeatedly on the people's side. The importance of this appointment as a blow against the illegal methods of the trusts can be gathered from the fact that in this body of nine men the vote of the ninth member on some question where the Supreme Court is divided in opinion carries the day.

Miss Richards dwelt on the kind of litigation coming before the Supreme Court and laid special emphasis on the fact that where the trusts were involved it was not litigation against the trusts and corporations as such but against their infringements of the Sherman anti-trust law, which declared it illegal to create a monopoly by crushing out or restraining the liberty of trade in others.

The lecturer cited the beef trust as an instance where a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law has not yet been adequately punished. The fine imposed by the civil courts merely resulting in an increased price for meat to the ultimate consumer. Six great beef packing houses in Chicago, by their entry into a monopolistic agreement were last year able to net a profit over all expenses of $25,000,000, whilst the amount of Armour's reserve fund is declared at $73,000,000. The advance in living prices owing to the illegal practices of the trusts has advanced sixty per cent. in the last ten years and statistics for the year 1910 show an increase in that year of fifteen per cent. in the cost of living.

Finding that all punishment in the form of fines was either taken out of the ultimate consumer in increased prices or from the employe in reduced wages, President Taft has determined these illegal methods of doing business must cease by calling off all civil suits against the various trusts and by instituting criminal proceedings against the individual heads of the trusts.

Miss Richards spoke on the demand now being urgently made for a parcel post and stated that though in almost all European countries eleven pounds are carried through the mail to the U. S. and from the U. S. to European countries the amount allowed within our own borders for mail carrying is but four pounds and that at higher proportional rates. John Wanamaker used to give four reasons for there being no American parcels post, namely, "Adams Express, United States Express, Wells-Fargo Express, American Express," and when we find the express companies net three hundred per cent. on their outlay it seems as if Mr. Wanamaker's reasons were not merely humorous.

Miss Richards touched on the question at present filling the minds of New Jersey politicians in the contest for Senator and said that though the direct primary law in New Jersey was defective still it was better than none and she hoped that people might educate themselves to its benefits and since there is such a law see that their voices as so expressed be executed in the appointments resultant.

The question of the railway waste and abuses of privileges by the high officials of the roads as one cause for that waste was also mentioned. The immense benefits conferred by the postal savings bank on people of small means and the necessity of making a postal savings bank in every city were dwelt upon as was the further activity and place in popular esteem of ex-President Roosevelt.

Miss Richards was listened to with the closest attention and warmly applauded at the close of her talk.

STOPPED RUNAWAY TEAM

Marion S. Ackerman Jr. Halts Onrushing Fire Horses in New York City.

DRIVER HAD BEEN THROWN.

Plainfield Boy Drives Four Blocks and With One Hand Stops Frightened Animals—One Man Injured.

Because he was too modest to give his name Marion S. Ackerman, Jr., son of Marion S. Ackerman, of Park avenue, escaped being interviewed by the ubiquitous New York newspaper reporters yesterday afternoon after performing a deed which while it may not deserve a Carnegie medal nevertheless ought not to be left out of the accounts of heroic performances. In stopping a runaway team of horses hauling a big New York fire engine young Mr. Ackerman has to his credit a daring deed well executed.

It happened yesterday afternoon just after 4 o'clock. Mr. Ackerman who is only about 18 years old, while in the company of some friends who had been with him to St. Nicholas rink, saw the fire team rushing up Columbus avenue at breakneck speed, but driverless. He saw several men make ineffective attempts to grab the reins Making up his mind suddenly to make a try for the team himself Mr. Ackerman made a prodigious jump and succeeded in grasping the reins at the instant that he landed on the apparatus. Quickly perceiving that the driver's strap was broken and that his seat would be untenable he clung with one hand to an upright and with the other, after riding for four blocks, succeeded in turning the horses heads and bringing them to a stop.

Mr. Ackerman was soon surrounded by an admiring crowd, but he quickly ducked the inquisitive and made his way back to his friends, none the worse for his experience excepting a blister or two on his hands. Reginald Roland and Miss Timpson, of this city, were witnesses of the incident. The apparatus was on the way to a fire further up the avenue and the driver had been thrown from his seat through the breaking of the retaining strap. One of the men who made an attempt to stop the horses had his leg broken. Young Mr. Ackerman is a student at St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H.

ELECTION OF CIVIC BODY

Chamber of Commerce Also Decides to Hold Dinner Monday, Feb 13.

CONSOLIDATION MASS MEETING

Communications From Manufacturers Seeking Sites Here—Fifteen Membership Applications.

Meeting for the first time in its new quarters, the Plainfield Chamber of Commerce listened to a discourse on the advisability of consolidation of the municipalities of this city and North Plainfield by former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, who urged the merger of the two places, giving reasons which were approved by the majority of the members present. Mr. Randolph was followed by William Johnson, member of the Board of Trade of Perth Amboy. The latter not only wanted to see the two Plainfields formed into one but hoped the larger city would see its way clear to embrace his bailiwick in the change.

After the formal business of the meeting the first annual election was held and resulted as follows: President, George L. Babcock; vice presidents, Alexander Gilbert and William L. Saunders; treasurer, Eugene M. Laing; secretary, John Ulrich. The Board of Directors is composed of the following men: Joseph C. Allen, Paul H. Burns, David J. Carney, George M. Christian, F. A. Duttenhofer, Eugene M. Laing, P. J. McDonough, H. Schuldenfrei, T. J. Shirley, J. V. E. Vanderhoef and Lemuel B. Woolston.

The rules were suspended during the election and Hugh Sweeney, George M. Clark and H. Schuldenfrei appointed tellers. The election of the ticket was unanimous.

Among the communications read was one from Julius Tullar, president of a large typewriter manufactory, of Chicago. Mr. Tullar said that his company was looking for a desirable location for a factory which will employ a thousand hands and whose yearly payroll would amount to at least $350,000. Further correspondence will take care of this proposition and it is possible that the factory may locate here. Another concern which was anxious to enter the field here was the Easton Window Cleaning Company. They will be notified that there are already two enterprises of that nature in the city. The Chicago Record-Herald wrote that a special industrial edition of their paper would be furnished free for readers in the Chamber and asked how many were wanted. Five copies of the edition were ordered.

Other communications were read including one from the National Civic Federation, which invited the chamber to send delegates to the annual convention which will be held at the Hotel Astor, New York, on January 12. President Babcock will appoint delegates later. Theodore Roosevelt and Elihu Root will be the speakers on that occasion.

Monday, February 13 was the date decided upon for the annual banquet. It is proposed to make this a feature for Lincoln's Birthday of every year. Five committees remain to be appointed for the banquet; Speakers and reception; invitations; hall and music; finance, printing and tickets, all of which will be announced later.

The following are the members elected last night:

Henry A. McGee, vice-president Plainfield Trust Co., L. K. Strause, president of the Baker and Voorhees Pub. Co., former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, postmaster Elias H. Bird, G. G. Andrews, manager of the Public Service Electric Co., W. R. Causebrook, manager Public Service Gas Co., M. & A. Tepper, A. T. Goodenough, Alexander Milne, Henry Windham, George M. Clark, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, Thomas L. Mellick, Milton Mandel and C. W. Krousse.

A resolution introduced by George M. Christian and which was carried without a dissenting voice was as follows:

"Resolved, that the Board of Directors take under consideration the advisability of holding a public meeting upon the question of consolidation of the Borough of North Plainfield with the City of Plainfield some time during this month or the month of February, and in the event the board concludes favorably upon such meeting that it be authorized and empowered to make all necessary arrangements with respect to same."

A letter from the Dunellen Board of Trade in reference to acting in concert with the chamber on the question of telephone rates was read as was one from Fred R. Stevens, in which a copy of a letter to W. G. Besler, vice-president and general manager of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, was enclosed. Mr. Stevens called attention to the train service between Plainfield and

WILSON BOLDLY DECLARES WAR AGAINST "SYSTEM"

State Would be Held up to Contempt if Martine is Turned Down.

Declaring that it is the duty of the Legislature of New Jersey to elect to the United States Senate James E. Martine, the choice of the Democratic primaries and to defeat James Smith, Jr., whom has has charged with too much friendliness to the "special interests," Dr. Woodrow Wilson, Governor-elect of New Jersey, was the principle speaker last night at the largest political meeting ever held in Jersey City.

St. Patrick's Hall was filled and hundreds of persons stood in the street. Dr. Wilson was received with enthusiasm. He aroused the large audience to several minutes' cheering when pointing to Mr. Martine, who sat on the platform, he said:

"I appeal to Mr. Martine never to withdraw under any circumstances."

Dr. Wilson preceded this appeal by declaring that the present political situation in New Jersey "represents an opportunity of the people of this State to say whether they believe in the popular choice of United States Senator or do not believe in it."

Dr. Wilson's attack on what he called the "special interests" was received with applause. He said:

"There is a partnership between these special interests and certain political influences. We are going to put the partner of the special interests out of business, and if the special interests know anything of law of safety and justice they will not involve themselves in this downfall. These are our terms:—War if you are allied with the enemy; peace if you are on the side of justice.

"God defend us against compromise. All weak men want compromise. Every man who is afraid to stand by his guns wants compromise. Every man who finds a duty difficult to perform wants the form of that duty changed, but change it for him and you simply confirm his weakness."

Many members of the Legislature who are to elect the successor of United States Senator Kean were at the meeting last night. Joseph P. Tumulty was chairman and Judge Mark A. Sullivan, of the Court of Errors and Appeals, and State Senators George S. Silver and Harry V. Osborn made speeches supporting the position of Dr. Wilson.

The latter spoke in part as follows:

"And for this reason some of the most public spirited, some of the wisest and most progressive men in the Republican party discovered by slow degrees what it made their hearts very heavy to discover, that the party was being dominated by certain special interests. They therefore said 'We will no longer consent to serve some of the people when we ought to be serving all of the people.' These gentlemen, whom in this State we call the New Idea Republicans, are in some quarters called progressives and in others insurgents, and have this idea, which we ought to be ashamed to call a new idea, that their obligations are to the people, to the whole country.

"Now these gentlemen by thousands in the last election (if we are to confine our views to our own Commonwealth, which we understand) flocked, temporarily it may be, permanently it may be if we have the wisdom to satisfy them, to our standard because they thought that we were free from that domination. Now, what is to be the choice of the Democratic party? Is it to continue to grow up and be made strong and solid by these free elements of conscientious America, or is it to do the other thing?

"Do you know what is true of the special interests at this moment, ladies and gentlemen? They have got all their baggage packed, and they are ready to strike camp overnight provided they think it is profitable to them to come over to the Democratic party. They are waiting to move over bag and baggage and take possession of the Democratic party. Will they be welcome? Do you want them? Very well, then, see that you do not want those that represent them.

"Business interests are involved in this matter, not political principles. These business interests intend if they can to own any organization that is the governing organization in the affairs of America. They cannot own it if the business is done in the open. They can own it if it is done under cover. They won't strike their tents and move over in the daytime; they will move over in the night time. I pray God we may never wake up some fine morning and find them in camp on our side.

"And I want to point out to you that Mr. James Smith, Jr., represents

SHE LEAVES FOR CHINA MONDAY TO BE WED

Miss Florence Wildey, daughter of Charles F. Wildey, of Martine avenue, who is to marry Vaughn McGee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. McGee, of the borough, upon her arrival in China, will leave here on Monday, accompanied by Mrs. Walter M. McGee and her daughter, Miss Elizabeth McGee, for the long journey. They will go by the way of San Francisco, and they plan to sail from the latter place on Wednesday, January 18, and are due to arrive at Shanghai on Thursday, February 9.

Mr. McGee is located in Manchuria, where he has charge of the offices for the Standard Oil Company, and the party will go at once to that place, where the wedding ceremony will be performed. Mrs. McGee and her daughter will remain in Manchuria for a time, returning home probably sometime during the latter part of March or first of April. Mr. McGee and his bride will make their home in Manchuria. The former's father, owing to business reasons, will be unable to go to China at this time.

NEEDLESS ALARM ABOUT ALLEGED MAD DOGS

That unnecessary alarm is spread every time a dog appears to act queer is the opinion of Mrs. Stephen G. Van Hoesen as well as mony others who have made the canine a life study. The mad dog scare is becoming so common that people are frightening themselves into convulsions which many physicians wrongly diagnose as hydrophobia, which is another word for "water madness." In speaking of the latest scare which occurred in North Plainfield yesterday, Mrs. Van Hoesen quoted two of the most eminent authorities in this country to prove that the dog was not mad.

Mrs. Van Hoesen quoting from an authority, said: "Many physicians laugh at the idea of hydrophobia. Dr. Charles W. Dulles, the eminent lecturer on the history of medicine, has corresponded on this subject with distinguished medical men in all parts of the world and it seems to be the universal opinion that a true case of rabies has yet to be developed. Dr. Wood, another eminent man, declared that he has accomplished the almost impossible task of personally investigating every reported case of rabies occurring in the United States during the past sixteen years and has utterly failed to secure one single instance of real rabies, resulting from the bite of a dog.

Both these men are of the opinion that the convulsions which ultimately cause death and which resemble the tortures caused by the real disease are nothing more nor less than nervous affections arising from fear. The bitten person giving way to misgivings as soon as the animal's teeth have closed on them. Dr. Parvin, of Jefferson College, another authority, declares that in forty-four years of study of the subject no real case of rabies has been revealed. One special instance of pure imagination was quoted by Mrs. Van Hoesen and that in the family of a relative a child was worried into convulsions three months after being bitten.

A good guide for those who think they see a dog afflicted with rabies is to remember that he always runs in a straight line or finds a secluded spot in which to hide. He never runs in circles or from place to place. The North Plainfield dog was probably sick.

BASEBALL.

Thousands of dollars will be saved to the National League by the adoption of the schedule for 1911, framed by the committee made up of Barney Dreyfus, owner of the Pittsburg club; President Lynch and John A. Heydler, secretary of the National League.

When this schedule is submitted to the club owners of the National League for approval next month, they will be surprised to learn how effectively the new schedule committee performed its task of reducing the season's mileage of every club in the organization. Members of the schedule committee refused today to make public the total mileage saved, but from hints dropped by Barney Dreyfus it is apparent that the committee has worked wonders.

In the case of the Pittsburg club the amount of mileage saved is amazing. Last year the Pirates travelled 19,000 miles. Next season the team will travel only 13,000 miles, a saving of 6,000 miles for one club. Figuring on a basis of two cents a mile the Pittsburg club, which travels with about twenty players, will save $2,400, or the salary of one pretty good player.

The Cincinnati club, which travelled 13,000 miles last season, will travel only 11,900 this year, a saving of 2,000 miles, or approximately $800.

No figures could be secured on the saving in mileage for other teams, but it is said that the travelling expenses of every club in the league will be cut materially.

GOLF.

A story is being told at the expense of Harry O. Christi, one of the foremost of the Forest Hill Field Club golfers. While playing the twelfth hole on New Year's Day in company with his brother, Victor, and William Allsopp, Christi pulled his drive so badly as to give the impression that the ball had gone out of bounds and he drove another one to be on the safe side. His caddie, however, located the first drive in bounds by a narrow margin; likewise "in bad," for, lo and behold! there lay the rubber core snugly reposing in an empty salmon can.

"I'll take a chance," said Christi to himself, whereupon he called for his niblick.

The trusty club did its work well, forcing the can several rods out on the fairway and incidentally closing the sides of the tin box as tightly as any miser's purse.

"Where's the ball?" asked Harry. "Must of gone further along," replied brother Victor. "Sure," chimed in the caddie.

"Quess you better look in the can," suggested the practical Allsopp.

"Impossible!" snorted Harry. So they all trudged on hoping to find the ball well along in the direction of the green. No such luck. Then, as Allsopp, with characteristic English perseverance, dared to suggest for the second time that it might be well to have a look at the tin, Harry condescended to retrace his steps to the erstwhile lodging house of the canned salmon.

"There she is," spoke Christi, who, upon stooping down and peering through a crack in the can, observed the ball, a helpless prisoner. Out came the niblick again, and after three more lusty wallops at the can, which was always kept moving toward the hole, the ball was finally liberated. Another shot then landed the ball on the green and two gentle puts sent it down for a total of eight strokes.

Despite this unhappy incident, Christi came home in 40. It is rumored that Christi, who is on the green committee, has issued strict orders to have all extraneous receptacles removed from the course at once.

COLD TIME AT SMITH MASS MEETING

An attempt Wednesday night to back up Assemblyman-elect Henry F. Backus in a stand for James Smith, Jr., as a Senatorial candidate and to repudiate the actions of Democrats of his district indorsing the party primary choice, James E. Martine, for the toga resulted in a political farce. A sufficient number of Democrats of the Assemblyman's home town, West Caldwell, and surrounding municipalities had not responded to the massmeeting call at 8 o'clock to make it worth while to remove the padlock from the front doors of the "brick store," West Caldwell, or build a fire in the big "pot" stove. Just six appeared before 9 o'clock. They retired to the home of Mr. Backus.

But yesterday morning, nevertheless, resolutions indorsing Mr. Smith and expressing confidence in Mr. Backus passed last night "at a meeting of the Democratic voters of Caldwell held at West Caldwell Borough Hall" were handed out. The meeting was planned to show that the gathering of Democrats recently in Caldwell in support of Governor-elect Wilson and subsequent visits of sixty of them to Mr. Backus demanding that he act likewise did not represent the true sentiment of the imaginary Assembly district.

The Democratic county committeemen from the Caldwells, Verona, Roseland were invited to attend and bring along the "boys." The idea was to make a "showing." The showing was made, but it was in the nature of an expose of machine-made public opinion. But let Horace B. Welshman, who "presided" at the "meeting" which passed the resolutions," tell it.

MATHEWSON OPPOSED TO CHANGE IN BOX.

The agitation in baseball circles against the raised pitcher's box has become widespread and critics here in general admit that the abolition would improve the batting. Pitcher Christy Mathewson's opinion of the proposed elimination of the mound is as follows:

"While it would be as fair for one pitcher as another, there is no question that the lowering of the box would take some of the kinks out of my drop curve. If I was compelled to start the delivery two feet lower naturally I would not get as much break on the ball. I don't think the proposed new rule would affect the spit-ball pitchers in the least. It would help underhand pitchers like Warhop and McGinnity. But in my opinion there would be more free hitting."

The Epworth League of the First M. E. church will meet in Vincent chapel, this evening.

The Young People's Association of the Crescent Avenue church will have charge of the week of prayer service at the church this evening. The subject will be "China," and a part of the time will be devoted to an account of Gilbert Lovell's work in China. A social hour will follow.

GETS $200 FOR AUTO MISHAP.

Somerville, Jan. 6.—It cost Bruce Kitchell, a Newark architect, $200 to attempt to pass George R. Layton's "rubber neck" auto on the Pluckemin road last June, while driving a touring car, according to a verdict rendered by a jury in the Somerset Court in Somerville Wednesday.

Layton runs an auto stage line between Somerville and Peapack. The vehicle is large and the road is narrow and for this reason Layton has experienced difficulty in keeping out of the way of high speed cars, which use the Pluckemin road.

Kitchell's car collided with Layton's machine. Both cars were damaged, but as Kitchell had encroached on Layton's side of the road the jury decided that he would have to pay for the damages to the Layton auto and also compensate him for the time the machine was out of commission as a common carrier.

Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Patterson and family, of Park avenue, have returned from Pinehurst, N. C., where they spent the holiday season.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Herbert G. Welch, who have been visiting relatives in the borough, have returned to their home in Ohio. Dr. Welch is president of the Ohio Wesleyan University.

UNION PRAYER SERVICE AT THE FIRST BAPTIST.

The union week of prayer service at the First Baptist church last night was well attended. A talk on "Home Missions" was given by Rev. Ernest Brown, of the Presbyterian church, Dunellen. The singing was a feature, Howard M. Case presiding at the piano. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, opened the service, after which there were prayers by Philip Swain, A. L. Cadmus and Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson. Following Mr. Brown's talk, the meeting was thrown open for prayer and testimony. Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring also offered prayer. Dr. Chambliss quoted many statistics to show the necessity of building more churches in the South and West to provide for the rapidly growing population in those centres, especially by foreigners. The service closed with the benediction by Dr. Chambliss.

The service this evening will be held at the First Presbyterian church and Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, will make the address, and will be assisted by the other pastors.

forbid it. It is really a matter requiring immediate attention from North Plainfield. The water problem can be solved by a Greater Plainfield acting as one city and only thus, if it is to be solved lawfully, economically and satisfactorily. It is a notorious fact that during the past year our water-pressure has been insufficient and our supply inadequate. And this lack and the serious peril incident thereto continue to the present moment. The shortage is a menace to our city, and, upon the application of the law as declared, becomes even a greater menace to North Plainfield. A pure water-supply, adequate beyond peradventure, is to us a vital necessity. Our community cannot thrive, or even live, without it. Certain means and plans are now open to us by which we may be protected and abundantly provided with this great essential to growth and prosperity. These means and plans imperatively demand that our community should instantly act as a homogeneous and effective unit—that is, as one single city or municipality.

"The time has fully come for dealing with these problems. Events will not wait. Our joint and several necessities refuse to accommodate themselves to our negligence and inertia. These two municipalities must come together. This denouement is as inevitable as the sunrise. When shall the union be consummated? Shall it be accomplished at once? If not, why not? Shall the way be immediately opened for the better enforcement of our laws and ordinances for a wholesome increase of population and prosperity and for the economical and advantageous settlement of our pressing problems; or shall we, as citizens, play the unworthy part of indifference and procrastination, and then go on to pay the penalty of such criminal negligence?

"As to specific methods or forms for accomplishing consolidation, I have none to urge. As to the result to be obtained, my own preference has been frankly expressed for a new county, with a Greater Plainfield as its county seat, but I am not obstinate about this, and I would not imperil the success of the movement by undertaking something that could not be accomplished. A political person has recently advised that our progress toward consolidation be along the line of least resistance. I am willing and desirous that our constituted authorities shall agree, and decide, upon the practical shape to be taken by the required legislation. With a more evenly balanced and relatively independent type of Legislature, such as will assemble this winter at Trenton, it should not be difficult to obtain the enactment of a law suitable to the occasion. This must be a matter of well-considered detail; and I feel sure that the common councils and law advisers and mayors of the two municipalities can agree on such matters and can place them before the law-making body in acceptable and effective form. It is for you, gentlemen of this chamber, and for others interested, to show plainly and earnestly to our authorities that the step contemplated is both wise and necessary. It was the activity of civic bodies like this, and of certain good citizens, that brought about the water-investigation and led the way to the action on that subject now known to be essential to our future well-being. Let this same civic energy and intelligence direct the movement for consolidation. Give of yourselves, gentlemen! Give of your ability and power for the benefit and enlargement of your town! Who would refuse thus to give, and to be given, in so good a cause?

"Long ago I heard of a sermon delivered by an excellent Methodist bishop on the freeness of the gospel—his text being: 'Come, buy, without money and without price!' Into his discourse an enthusiastic church-officer suddenly broke, with the exclamation: 'Yes, thank heaven, the Gospel is free! I have been a member here for twenty-five years, and it hasn't cost me twenty-five cents.' The half discomfited bishop had barely the patience and presence of mind to ejaculate: 'My dear brother, may the Lord have mercy on your poor stingy soul!' A like invocation might well be made over a citizen who enjoys the blessings and freedom of American democracy, but is too lazy or too stingy to give of himself, of his careful thought, and of his honest effort and influence for the maintenance and furtherance of whatever shall promote the true growth, and advance the highest interest of his town and state. Life, indeed, is not all altruism. We are not commanded to love our neighbors more than ourselves. But he man destitute of patriotism, public spirit and self-denial is a clog and a drag upon the community. As citizens, our interests and our public spirit may well sometimes commingle. We are even justified in taking a pride in doing that which must prove a benefit to ourselves, to our neighbors and to posterity. And it is in this spirit that we may act in bringing about the consolidation of these two municipalities."

WAR AGAINST "SYSTEM"

not a party, but a system, a system of political control which does not belong to either party, and which, so far as it can be successfully managed, must belong to both parties. Under this system it is just as necessary to maintain and subsidize, if possible, a faithful and subservient minority as a faithful and subservient majority. It is just as important to see that nobody in the minority jumps the track as it is to see that nobody in the majority jumps the track.

"It is a matter of indifference to the people of New Jersey, as I have already said in public, which representative of this system is sent to the United States Senate, for it is the system that we are fighting and not the represenative."

Martine, who was introduced by Mr. Tumulty as the choice of the people for the United States Senate, spoke as follows after Dr. Wilson had finished:

"Mr. Chairman, ladies, gentlemen and my friends of Hudson County: My heart is full tonight. I have been deeply impressed, as you must have been, with the magnificent argument that has been presented for the cause of the people. This contest is a contest of momentus importance. It makes but little difference to you whether I shall be elected United States Senator or not, but it is a momentus question and one of importance to this commonwealth. Deeply as I appreciate this magnificent compliment and the exalted position to which I aspire, I say to you that my personality and individuality counts for but little. This contest is greater, bigger and greater, than any citizen of this commonwealth.

"The fight is eminently important. Nearly 50,000 voters of this State have placed this up to the legislators of this State, and I must abide by their patriotism. Their fairness and their intelligence to settle this controversy is therefore shown. The result shall make no difference to me in my fidelity to the people which for forty-five years of my life I have served. Now, in reference to the question that our Governor has raised as to withdrawal. Rest your souls; if God shall spare my life I shall be a candidate until defeated. Thank God, thank God, among the qualifications which the God of nature has given men, I am not a coward, and I am glad that the people are well informed as to my position in this matter. I thank the people here tonight for their kindness in being here to hear the real question discussed. I thank you."

GOVERNOR PLAISTED TAKES OFFICE

Frederick W. Plaisted, of Augusta, Maine, took the oath of office in the hall of representatives yesterday and is now the Governor of the State of Maine, the first Democrat to hold the office in thirty years, or since the completion of the term of his father, the late General Harris M. Plaisted. The oath was administered by Nathan Clifford, President of the Senate.

In his inaugural address, Governor Plaisted urged the adoption of business methods in the administration of the affairs of the State, the abolition of unnecessary offices and the consolidation of departments wherever good judgment warrants it.

Discussing the general subject of "progressive legislation," Governor Plaisted said:

"We are bound to enact a direct primary law. Nominations for Governor and representatives to Congress may well be made by direct primary. In my opinion it would be unwise to go farther than that until the new system had been fairly tested.

"We shall, without doubt, join other States in asking for an amendment to the national Constitution permitting the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people. Pending the adoption of such an amendment, I suggest the enactment of a law, relating to the choice of Senators, similar to the one now in use in Oregon. A corrupt practise act should be enacted."

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Most Men Make Money

At least some money, over and above their actual expenses. The margin is larger in some cases than it is in others, of course, but it is possible for almost everybody to save something.

The vast sums lost in illegitimate and fraudulent enterprises prove that the American people are a Nation of money savers—they can do it if they want to.

But the average man does not understand the art of making sound, sure and profitable investments. Do you?

If you are not expet in that line, why not leave that to those who are?

Lake Winnipeg.

Of the lakes of Manitoba Lake Winnipeg is the largest, being 275 miles long and from 40 to 60 miles wide, its area being about 9,000 square miles and its total coast line longer than that of any of the great lakes except Lake Superior. No other province or state has entirely within its boundaries a body of water at all approaching it in magnitude. Great Salt lake, in Utah, is only one-fifth of the extent of Lake Winnipeg. The largest of its tributaries is the Saskatchewan river, one of the four great rivers of the continent east of the continental divide. Its total length is 1,090 miles. The Red river, 700 miles in length, and the Winnipeg river, 300 miles in length, and many minor rivers also pour into Lake Winnipeg. The Nelson river is its principal outlet and connects it with Hudson bay.

The First Derby.

The first Derby was run in the Isle of Man and not on the Epsom downs, as is generally supposed. The narrow strip of crisp and springy turf which separates the bays of Derbyhaven and Castletown was the scene of the initial Derby, and it is still known as the "race course," though no races have been held there for at least 100 years. For a long time the patch of ground has been used as a golf links. It was in the year 1621, when the Earls of Derby were still lords of Man, that the order was issued establishing these races. It was also directed that the Derby plate, to which the earl contributed handsomely, should be competed for every year at Easter on the race course at Castletown. Here the Derby took place with regularity every year until the year 1780, when the present event was founded by Edward Stanley, the twelfth Earl of Derby.

Life on the Old East Indiaman.

There was never a finer ship afloat than the East Indiaman from, say, 1800 down to the last of them, such as the Earl of Balcarres. Those old East Indiamen were exceedingly comfortable ships—liberally found and handsomely furnished. It is a question whether passengers grew more weary of the ocean after four months' salt water to Bombay and Calcutta than do travelers in these times after six days of the Atlantic or a little more than a month to New Zealand. People of old, when they went to sea in an Indiaman, knew what they had to expect. They danced, flirted, sang, talked scandal, quarreled and made it up, and often the young people got engaged to be married. All the after part of the ship was a village full of people more or less good humored.—Clark Russell.

Two Badly Puzzled Ladies.

Vernet, the French painter, was once traveling from Versailles to Paris in the same compartment with two ladies whom he had never seen before, but who were evidently acquainted with him. They examined him very minutely and commented upon him quite freely. The painter was annoyed and determined to put an end to the persecution. As the train passed through the tunnel of St. Cloud the three travelers were wrapped in complete darkness. Vernet raised the back of his hand to his mouth and kissed it twice violently. On emerging from the obscurity he found that the ladies had withdrawn their attention from him and were glaring contemptuously at each other. Presently they arrived at Paris, and Vernet, on leaving them, said, "Ladies, I shall be puzzled all my life by the inquiry, Which of these two ladies was it that kissed me?"

Cats of Long Ago.

The piercing and cutting teeth of some of the cats of long ago are the most perfectly adapted instruments for cutting purposes that ever were seen, being unequaled by any manufactured tools for such uses. For example, there was the "gomphodus," which was as big as the largest panther and had two teeth in its upper jaw resembling daggers each five inches in length. As weapons for penetrating flesh they are unrivaled among carnivorous animals, recent or extinct. They are rather like the teeth of some huge flesh eating dinosaurs, the "terrible reptiles" of the mesozoic epoch, which had cutting teeth that nothing could resist. Doubtless this creature was inconceivably bloodthirsty. Quite as fierce, however, and even more formidable by reason of its greater size, was the contemporary "pogonodon," which was as large as the biggest jaguar.

The Joy of Having a Cold.

I have often asked to be told why it is that a man with a cold in the head feels himself to be a superior sort of being to the man with no cold. You must have observed for yourself that this is the case. Take, indeed, your own cold. You refer to it, thirty or forty times a day, as "my cold." You feel quite sure that everybody you meet will know that you have a cold and that everybody will be interested in its progress. You will find yourself, when in the full enjoyment of a cold, airing opinions that you would certainly keep to yourself under normal conditions and casually contradicting the statements of those for whom, as a matter of fact, you cherish a very sincere respect. There must be some simple physiological explanation for this, and I should be greatly obliged if some medical reader would put me in the way of understanding it. Is it that the cold acts in some soothing way upon the nerves, thus freeing the self conscious man temporarily from his timidity, or is it that the fever accompanying a cold has a stimulating effect upon an otherwise slightly torpid brain?—London Sketch.

Intelligence of Rats.

The fierceness of the rat and its great capacity for increase are enough to make it a formidable enemy, but with these qualities it combines intelligence. It is truly marvelous how one small head can carry all it knows. Every housekeeper realizes how hard it is to catch rats, because they are often too wise to enter traps, however tempting the bait.

Quite Clear.

The following notice is posted up in the signal box of a certain railway:

"Hereafter when trains moving in an opposite direction are approaching each other on separate lines conductors and engineers will be required to bring their respective trains to a dead halt before the point of meeting and be very careful not to proceed till each train has passed the other!"—London Express.

An Ancient City.

Rhodes still survives, a mediaeval city in all its defensive war gear of tower and curtain and keep. It is the city which the Knights of St. John erected in the midst of the Byzantines after they had been driven out of Jerusalem in the early fourteenth century. Probably few travelers realise how well preserved the tremendous fortifications and dwellings are.

Very Bad Habit.

A young mother asks us our opinion of "the alleged injurious effects of rocking on babies."

We must frankly say that we consider it a brutal practice. As the father of a great many babies, we never rocked on any of them intentionally, and we would probably be arrested if we expressed our full opinion of any woman who would presume to do so.—Lippincott's.

Her Case In Point.

One day a discussion arose in the nursery. Will said a thing was so. Mabel said it wasn't.

"But if I say it's so, it is so," said Will.

"Saying a thing is so doesn't make it so," answered Mabel stoutly. "Now, suppose you say you're a good boy. That doesn't make you one, does it?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Had Heard of Him.

"Officer," said the whimsical tourist to the big, strapping policeman who had saved him from being run over by an automobile, "you remind me of a character in one of Kipling's stories. You've heard of Kipling?"

"Kip Linn?" said Officer Hooligan. "Sure! He runs a Chinese laundry about four blocks from where I live. Trot right along, sonny." — Chicago Tribune.

California's Big Trees.

The great trees of California, it has been said, began life before the earliest dawn of Chinese history and at the time of the deluge were older than the art of printing from type is today. Professor Charles E. Bessey, however, contends that even 2,000 years is a great overestimate, actual ring count of a tree twenty-five feet in diameter having indicated only 1,147 years.

Breaking It Gently.

"Dear sirs," begins a Babu business letter from Calcutta forwarded by a reader, "we conform our last respect of the 10th inst. and have none of favors to acknowledge. We beg to announce that a deep misty cloud hovered over us for eight days and did not clear itself away until it washed off our hands our most steady, energetic and pious Tunwi manager."—London Globe.

The Bravest Soldier.

Frederick the Great after a terrible engagement asked his officers who behaved most intrepidly during the engagement. The preference was unanimously given to himself.

"You are mistaken," said the monarch. "The bravest fellow was a fifer whom I passed twenty times during the engagement and who did not cease or vary a note the whole time."

Making It Pleasant For Him.

"Gentlemen," said the toastmaster at the banquet, "we have listened to some excellent orators this evening, and I am sure we have enjoyed their efforts very much. I have purposely kept one of our best speakers for the last, and after you have heard him I know you will be glad to go home. Gentlemen, I have the honor to present Mr. Ketchum A. Cummin, who will now address you."—Chicago Tribune.

Cain as a Baptismal Name.

"Cain is doubtless rare as a baptismal name," writes a correspondent, "but I know a man, a blacksmith at Leiston, who was named Cain Hammond." A reader in Portsmouth says: "I am reminded of the peculiar case of an old shipmate of mine, Mr. Cain Mahoney, who was a W. O. in the navy. His version of the misfortune was that his parents, who were Irish, desired that he should bear the name of Kean Mahoney, but the brogue produced the name which he afterward carried through life."—London News.

The Home of the Clove.

The principal source of the world's clove supply is Zanzibar and the neighboring island of Pemba, East Africa. A ten-year-old plantation should produce twenty pounds of cloves to the tree. Trees of twenty years frequently produce upward of 100 pounds each. Besides the buds, the stems are gathered and form an article of commerce, commanding one-fifth the price of cloves and having about the same percentage of strength. To this is due the fact that ground cloves can be bought at a lower price than the whole cloves.

Although what was regarded by some as a test vote resulted in the refusal of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of New York to affirm the principle of subway competition, Messrs. Prendergast and Mitchel determined to continue the fight, regarding yesterday's vote as far from final; it was learned also that William G. McAdoo was contemplating a renewed offer for new subways if competition was favored by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

A SKYSCRAPER LIGHTHOUSE.

New York Harbor's newest lighthouse, which stands guard over the Ambrose Channel, has just been completed at Hampton Court, Staten Island. The lights are raised 225 feet above sea level and will be visible at sea as well as through the length of New York Harbor, and even from the skyscrapers of Manhattan. A "second ordered kerosene vapor light" will be installed to throw rear range rays on the newly dredged Ambrose Channel, which forms an important short cut across the harbor.

The lighthouse will be very conscicuous both by day and night. It contains five balcony landings reached by a flight of 115 spiral stairs. It is a model lighthouse in every respect. The living-rooms are arranged to accommodate two families, and as a special luxury the government has provided a library to relieve the tedium of the watch. The lighthouse regulations call for inspection of the light at half-hour intervals throughout the night, and to make assurance doubly sure, a time clock has been installed, which must be attended like that of an ordinary factory.

"FIRST AID LECTURES" BEGIN AT THE Y. W. C. A.

The initial lecture in the "First Aid" series to be held at the Y. W. C. A. was given last night by Dr. W. H. Murray. It had been announced that the attendance would be limited to twenty-five but more than forty young women were present.

Dr. Murray's lecture was an introductory to the others that are to follow and he discussed the human body in general, but dwelling particularly on the treatment of shock and acute indigestion. He used a miniature manikin to illustrate portions of the talk, thus enabling his hearers to follow clearly. They also had reference to a "first aid" text book supplied by the American Red Cross Society, and which gives a list of questions for examinations at the conclusion of the series.

Dr. Murray's instructions for treatment of shock were put in concise terms. He compared shocks to the nervous system with fainting and told how aromatic spirits of ammonia should be used, also how to note stages of condition by the color of the patients face. In speaking of indigestion he defined symptoms, forms and treatment.

Last night's lecture will be repeated next Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 for the day classes and the next in the series takes place next Thursday night. Dr. Norman H. Probasco will be the lecturer and he will talk on "Bandaging." In relation to this he will take up all injuries in which the skin is broken and how to treat bruises and abrasions.

THE HARVEST MOON

A Novelization of the Drama of AUGUSTUS THOMAS

By GEORGE HENRY PAYNE

It would have taken a cleverer girl than Dora to fathom the depth of the plot that the imaginative old man had conceived.

"It is true," replied Vavin vivaciously, "and now I can show you. I will not be able to read the lines, monsieur, but you can do so for me. In that pretty little scene of yours at the end you, and if you don't lose faith in me I will write something some day that you will be proud of. Do say that you love me," he pleaded as he drew her toward him closer.

"I have been so sorry, Willard, for you. The way the papers treated you was simply awful."

"They can do that again and again," he replied, "if it will only make you"—

Vavin's step was heard returning.

"Say that you love me. It's in the part, you know, Dora."

"I do," answered the girl.

"A little louder, mes enfants," said Vavin as he entered the room. "You are playing the scene too 'sotto voce.' You must excuse me," he said, when they both laughed guiltily. "I was called to the other room by the telephone. But you see, don't you, that the moonlight is better?"

"Oh, it is wonderfully so," said Dora.

"Now, all these changes," said Vavin as he turned up the lights in the room, 'can be made in one day. You will let me help you, will you not?' turning to Holcomb.

"You have helped me now, sir, more than I can tell you."

"Perhaps," replied the old man, "it is of the play— Here you are," he said, opening the manuscript to the place.

"I can," replied Holcomb, awaiting Vavin's next directions and already half sensing the purpose of them.

The elder dramatist turned out all the lights in the room and then, throwing back the curtains at the bay window, ran up the blinds. A stream of moonlight shot into the room, and it was verily, as Vavin had described it, "green, which is content, and blue, which is mystery."

"Now," he said, "stand in that light —you, my dear little Dora, facing it— and read your lines. I shall sit here and be your audience with my glass of wine."

They stood in the moonlight as he directed and took the position which the stage directions demanded, but as they did so neither of them felt that he or she was exactly acting. A little tremor went through Dora's body as Holcomb put his arm around her, and the young man himself forgot for the time being that they were only supposed to be rehearsing.

It was a simple little scene that Holcomb had written, but it had a lot of sincerity in it and much directness and was unqualifiedly sincere:

HE.

"You are not happy?"

SHE.

"I am honest."

HE.

"I should be patient, Clara, if the situation brought contentment to any one. I have been away a year."

SHE.

"It should have been forever."

HE.

"Can't you see, Clara, that a stronger hand than ours directs it?"

SHE.

"To what end, to what good?"

HE.

"Let us obey and see. It is fate!"

The old man had been watching them grimly as he smoked his cigarette. When their backs were turned to him he arose and quietly left the room.

HE.

"I know you love me and have given me faith again and ambition and ideas and endurance."

Holcomb turned and looked and saw Vavin moving into the other room.

"Dora," he whispered earnestly, "don't let us make a great mistake. Don't think that it is the failure of this play that has made me despondent."

"That wasn't in Ludlow's lines," the girl answered.

"No, they are mine, and they are more than real," he replied. "'It's up to not necessary, my friend. Tomorrow we will call a rehearsal for the afternoon. One more favor I would like to ask of you, Mr. Holcomb. I had intended to go home with mademoiselle as her escort. I find, however, that there is a gentleman waiting downstairs for me on financial business? May I impose?"

Holcomb shook him warmly by the hand, and as he helped Dora on with her coat she whispered to her benefactor:

"You like him, don't you? Isn't he simply wonderful?"

"He is a very wonderful man without doubt," was the dry response, and as he closed the door after them he shook his head and repeated ironically, "he is indeed a very wonderful man."

It was a happy moment for Jules Vavin. With all his intellect and his irony he was still a sentimentalist. There was still much in him of the poet lad who had come up to Paris years before with his bundle of verses under his arm.

But there was more than sentiment in the little comedy that he had enacted tonight. There was a climax, as he thought, to a life tragedy—a tragedy that even his intimates knew little about, for after his first grand passion Jules Vavin had become a man extremely taciturn about his own personal affairs. He had been ready tonight to do more than play with these two lovers, and Dora Fullerton's happiness necessitated vigorous action But happily neither had really suspected the depth of the old man's sympathy and had lent themselves to his cunning in a way that made him most happy.

"A wonderful man indeed!" he repeated as he stood in the moonlight and contemplated the glass of wine in his hand.

The servant, who had been with him for twenty years, discreetly moved about the room putting out the lights

"She is very like her mother, Henri," said the old man.

"Very like her mother, monsieur," was the faithful servitor's reply.

The dramatist was silent for a moment; then, raising his glass as one who drank to the heavens:

"It is a droll God, Henri—a droll God, with his vintage and autumn, his children and his harvest moon."

"A droll God, monsieur." And Henri closed the door softly, leaving his master alone with his thoughts and his memories—and his droll God.

CHAPTER XIII.

IT was a happy Dora that entered Mrs. Winthrop's after leaving Holcomb, a more contented girl than she had been in years.

"You look radiant, my dear," said Mrs. Winthrop. "Did M. Vavin see you home?"

"No," replied the girl. "Mr. Holcomb came home with me. M. Vavin has some business to attend to."

"It was a put up job!" snapped her Aunt Cornelia.

"If that was the case," answered Dora, "it was very well put up, for M. Vavin has shown Mr. Holcomb the most wonderful things about playwrighting and is going to help him rehearse the play tomorrow."

"I am not interested in Mr. Holcomb or his old play."

"Then, Aunt Cornelia," said Dora, "you may be interested in the knowledge that Mr. Holcomb and I are to be married on the 29th."

Graham Winthrop was lighting a cigarette as the girl made this announcement. He blinked once or twice and then walked up to her, and, although, as he said afterward, it wasn't the pleasantest moment in his life, he held out his hand.

"I congratulate you, Dora, or, rather, I congratulate him. He's a lucky chap. But what an idiot I was to have introduced him to you!"

"You're not serious about this, are you, Dora?" asked the elder Miss Fullerton, who hadn't moved from the moment the announcement was made.

"I am," was the reply, "and if you will pardon me now I am going to get some sleep, as tomorrow is really a new day, and I want to be in good shape for the rehearsal." And as no one seemed to have anything more to say she bid them good night and went to her room.

The elder Miss Fullerton, who had followed her, began angrily and hurriedly:

"I have been very patient with you, Dora Fullerton. I have tried reprimand and persuasion when you have undertaken these foolish and disgraceful projects. But I have let this affair go far enough. You are not going to marry that low down actor."

"Mr. Holcomb," said Dora calmly, "is not a low down actor, and I am going to marry him."

"You are going to drag the name of Fullerton into the gutter."

"You ought to be the last one in the world to say that, Aunt Cornelia," said the girl cheerfully, "inasmuch as I am going to change it. I am as proud of the name of Fullerton as you are, as proud of my father as you are. And I shall be equally proud of the name of Holcomb and equally proud of my husband."

Aunt Cornelia stood up and glared at her. Had she been a man her emotions would have found relief in profanity. As it was, she simply stammered with rage and then said slowly, vindictively:

"It serves us right. I opposed my brother's marriage to your mother. I opposed his taking you in—you who were not his child, you who came to us without a name and have been nothing but a worry up to now—when you are a disgrace."

The girl looked at her blankly.

She had never had any love for this relative, but had been brought up to respect her and her motives, and, though there were times when the reign was bitter and cruel, Aunt Cornelia's right to dominate her had always been a serious matter with her. She had never seen her so passionately angry before. Although she knew vaguely that something horrible was being told her, she could only feel that it was the result of an ungovernable temper.

"You mustn't say things like that," she exclaimed when she had recovered from her amazement. "My father will never forgive you."

"Your father!" sneered Aunt Cornelia. "No one knows who your father was. Your mother was my brother's wife, but she ran away from him and got a divorce, and two years after she got her divorce you were born in Paris."

"You know you are lying, Aunt Cornelia."

"Why should I lie to you, you fool? Wouldn't I be found out in the morning? Wouldn't my brother tell the truth to you?"

"He would," sobbed the girl, now utterly helpless, "and he will."

"Oh, perhaps he'll try to gloss it over," pursued the charitable spinster. "Perhaps he'll try to make it easy for you, as he has done all these years—supporting you, worrying about you, educating you, you ingrate!"

The girl sat up on the bed upon which she had thrown herself.

"I think," she said, pulling herself together, "that there is no need of our continuing this conversation. If what you say is true—and, God help me, I believe it is, for even you couldn't invent a lie like that—there is no need of our remaining in the same room longer than is necessary. I want to be alone. Please go to your own room."

"And now you can marry your actor if you like," was the parting shot as Dora held the door open for her.

For three hours the girl sat with her hands clasped over her knees, staring about the room. The first flood of tears that had come when she felt that what Cornelia Fullerton had told her was true she now regretted.

There was nothing to weep over, she argued to herself. Her emotions were not of the kind that could find comfort in so usual, so childish a way. Had Vavin seen her then he would have said indeed that she had a Napoleonic courage, the strong jaw and the clear eye. On this of all nights, when she had been most happy, when the world was opening up to her new realms of content and freedom—on this night she had to learn that the mother whom she had grown to love through the oft decried faults had borne her in disgrace—that she was an outcast without even a name. That was surely too remarkable a thing to be let down with tears.

She must first see her father—her father! She threw back her head and laughed. Her father! Who was this man who had disgraced her mother? She would like to see him.

But first she must see Professor Fullerton. She must have him tell her if this was true. And then—what then? The idea of suicide came to her, and the girl gritted her teeth and dismissed it almost as the suggestion arose. But Holcomb— No; she wouldn't marry him. He was too fine—too good. It wouldn't make any difference to him—that, of course she knew—but it would make a difference to her. It would make a difference to her children, if she had children, and there came a little gulp in her throat, and she almost gave way to tears that might have been a better outlet than this fierce cogitation.

If Fullerton told her it was true she would go away from New York. She would go somewhere out west—join some stock company.

No; that wouldn't do. It was the theater that had ruined her mother. Oh, the merciless truth of it all! Aunt Cornelia had been right all the time. She would take up some other business and earn her living. She would make money enough to pay back Professor Fullerton for her education. She started planning immediately. What business could she get in? Two or three of her companions at college were writing for magazines and newspapers. She would do that. She would do anything. She would show them that if her mother had make a mistake her mother's daughter would vindicate them both.

It was dawn before she knew it.

It was Graham who first remarked that Dora was sleeping unusually late, as she had always been punctual at breakfast.

"Miss Fullerton," answered the waiting maid, "has not been in her room since I got up."

"Not in her room," repeated Mrs. Winthrop, and she rose hurriedly from the breakfast table and entered Dora's room. The bed was undisturbed and most of her small belongings had evidently been removed in a traveling case. On the dresser was a note addressed to her hostess:

Dear Mrs. Winthrop—A million thanks for all your kindness. Forgive me. Good-by. DORA.

"What can it mean!" she exclaimed as she laid the note before Cornelia and her son.

"Just another one of her pranks," was the kindly suggestion of her supposed relative.

"It can't be that she has"— began young Winthrop, who still loved the girl and who would rather have faced the prospect of never seeing her again than to know that she had done anything to hurt herself or her reputation.

"I am going to wire my brother," said Miss Fullerton.

"Before you do that," suggested Graham, his mind working slowly, but surely, "I think it would be a good thing to telephone Judge Elliott and to him go after Vavin and Holcomb, as I believe the latter will probably know something."

Elliott listened to what by this time had become a more extended narrative of Dora's disappearance. The night elevator man had been found, and he had said that he had taken Miss Fullerton down in the elevator at 6 o'clock and had called a cab for her. She had told the cabman to take her to the Forty-second street station and had tipped him, the elevator man, a dollar. He was perfectly ready to testify that she seemed thoroughly sane.

"I think," said Elliott, "that we had better talk to Vavin first, as it was at his hotel that she had supper last night." The legal mind is really remarkably sharp.

"I don't know whether Vavin is fooling us or not," said Elliott when he came back from the telephone, "but he seemed as much put out about this as we are. I don't understand that old jigger anyway. He has all the manners of a Frenchman, and, although he has written some d——d bad plays, he seems to have the sound morals of an American."

"That isn't as great a compliment as you think it is," snapped Aunt Cornelia, who had not been having a very pleasant morning.

"The thing that I don't really care so much about," said Elliott, "is the fact that he asked me to let him call up Holcomb. He said that both of them would be up here as soon as possible."

"I suppose," interjected Winthrop, "that I can blame myself a whole lot for introducing Dora to that fellow."

They were still discussing the mystery and the possible calamity when Vavin and Holcomb arrived.

BLOUSES MATCH.

Paris Decrees They May Be Equal to Suits In Color.

May Also Be Trimmed With the Same Fabric, Especially if Material of the Suit Is Velvet.

If you are economical you should shower praises upon the latest Paris fashion.

For it is nothing more nor less than the wearing with a tailored suit of a blouse exactly matching that suit in color and often trimmed with the same fabric, especially if the suit material be velvet. This gives the effect of a one piece dress, and yet the suit is ready for all occasions.

These blouses are all being made with the long shoulder line, with three-quarter sleeves, with high collars (the collarless day has gone, alas!) and with tiny chimisettes and undersleeves of lace. The latter may be of the color of the blouse or it may be white, whichever is more becoming. A frequent trimming is rows of small buttons, sometimes not so large as shoe buttons.

Let us describe some models.

A good suggestion is a chiffon and velvet blouse of the new gray brown "patou" to go with a velvet suit. The chiffon is to be gathered over a velvet bib, which is fastened by imitation tortoise shell buttons with soutache loops. These buttons should match the shell ones of the coat.

Then there is a blouse which is also designed for wear with a velvet suit, but a black one this time. It is of black chiffon over nattier blue, the whole blouse being mounted over a white batiste foundation. On the yoke and cuffs is a band of black velvet, to complete the one piece effect. The chemisette and sleeves are of lace or figured net, the small round buttons of silver.

Next comes a blouse made for a dark blue serge suit. This serge should form half of the blouse, the rest being of dark blue chiffon, with buttons, as usual, holding the two parts together. On the sleeves and under the yoke the chiffon is hemstitched, and there is a double oversleeve. A new touch in a blouse of this kind is to have cuffs and collar of plain chiffon piped with satin.

What do you think of a blouse of not only the same color, but the same fabric as a suit—a corbeau blue satin finished cloth so supple that it can easily be draped on the bodice? A deep bodice top and the sleeves are of silk voile in the same shade. The same idea can be carried out in silk or satin for a heavy cloth or ratine suit.

Our model is for wear with a black suit. It is a chiffon blouse over bright china blue or blue nattier. The lace on the front plaits is applied to the blue underblouse and the chiffon veiled over it. The buttons are flat pearl ones about the size of a dime.

Voile de soie and net share with chiffon the favored places in fabrics for these blouses, and the combination of black and nattier blue is another favorite.

In remodeling an old cloth gown it is well to consider this separate blouse, taking the fullness from the skirt and using it as trimming on the blouse. Thus with two yards of chiffon of the same color and a few odd buttons the new blouse would be complete.

To Keep Needles.

A soda mint bottle with a little screw top makes an excellent holder for needles to keep in the workbag. It is especially good for damp climates, as the needles will not rust. It can be made a thing of beauty by covering it with a bit of the material of which the bag is made (preferably silk, as this will work up better), and a workbag given for a present is doubly acceptable if some such little thing as this is added to give a distinctive touch.

The French Fold.

To make a milliner's or French fold, cut the material three times the width that the fold is to be when it is finished. Then fold a third of this width back on the wrong side and fold down over this raw edge the remaining part. Turn in the raw edge before doing this. Finally slipstitch this edge to the thickness underneath, being careful not to let the stitches go all the way through.

COMBINATION UNDERWEAR.

A Very Large Variety of Soft Materials Is Available For Making These Highly Popular Garments.

Combinations in underwear were once the privilege of the rich alone, but now such pretty things can be purchased in quite moderately priced grades, which, especially in this "tubular" season, most of us are willing and anxious to avail ourselves of.

The corset cover and drawers combination is by far the most popular. The drawers have deep yokes, to which are attached large circular flounces, thus providing enough skirt fluff and lace to admit of the omission of the short underskirt. Often the drawers are slashed at the sides and finished with narrow wash ribbon.

Corset covers of this sort are made rather full, gathered in at the waist line or in the tight fitting style favored by stout women. This combination is often made in all over English eyelet embroidery, which allows the corset cover to be made in one piece and the embroidery pattern to extend the entire length of the drawers flounce.

The corset cover and drawers combination is made also with a deep yoke and a flounce, the latter on the skirt this time. This model is popular with women of slight build. Under the same head comes the princess slip, which is by no means confined in use to the lingerie princess gown. On the other hand, its employment of darts and gores in the skirt makes it suitable for wear with any tight fitting skirt.

For the princess slip the favorite materials are lawn, batiste and china silk. The waist and shirt are often elaborately trimmed with lace, embroidery and ribbon.

Three piece models are infrequent because of the tightness of the styles, but are sometimes adopted by slender women. Chemises are still in favor, especially in soft finished materials, in a plainly embroidered French cut model. Some, of course, are made elaborate by means of lace edging and insertion.

For all these combination garments soft, sheer goods are chiefly in favor this season. Batiste, nainsook, china silk, cotton crape, soft finished cambric, handkerchief linen and Persian lawn are all seen. Lace and hand and piece embroidery are all popular as trimmings.

The Bath Robe.

It is getting cold enough now to think of the new bath robe that serves many women in place of a kimono in winter.

Blanket material is, of course, a favorite. It is cut perfectly plain without trimming and is fastened with a heavy cord and tassel at the waist. Gray, blue and garnet with white or black are popular shades.

Ripple eiderdown is another staple material, sometimes trimmed with soutache braid or with applique designs in broadcloth.

Turkish toweling in extra thicknesses is seen in the brighter colors, and fleecedown and flannelette are not unknown. Many of these are faced or piped with bands of satin in contrasting colors, which give them a smartness they would otherwise lack.

For Blunted Scissors.

When your scissors become blunted and require sharpening, take an ordinary knife, upon which place the scissors as if in the act of cutting. By drawing the steel along the blades in this manner several times you will bring your scissors again into good condition.

THE SHORT COAT.

The short coat, so many of which are in the box style, is one of the most popular of this season's models, and the length thirty inches is the one most used. The model shown is gored to the shoulders. The long lines thus obtained add much to the general effect. Two sections in each front, a plain back and two side backs, with the underarm gore, make up the garment. The sailor collar is on everything this year, and a very handsome addition it makes to this coat. The sleeves are the two seam coat model, slightly gathered in the armhole and finished with a plain cuff. Any of the heavy mannish materials, serge, cheviot or broadcloth, would be suitable for the coat, and the collar may be made of the same and trimmed with braid or made of satin or velvet.

GET BETTER PRICES.

Many Farmers Negligent In Dressing and Otherwise Caring For Poultry, With Lowe Prices as Result.

Every autumn the markets are oversupplied with low grade poultry. Sales must often be made at unprofitable prices, and commission men often have difficulty to avoid loss. Shippers frequently lose more or less on scrawny, poorly dressed poultry. Very rarely do they make much profit. Where, then, does the farmer come in? He generally doesn't "come in" on the profits at all. He too often figures that as the fowls have picked up most of their living since spring they have cost next to nothing and that if he were to feed grain he would be out just so much. Rather than lose the grain, as he thinks, he gets rid of all the fowls he can so as to keep as small a flock as possible over winter. The best are usually sold first so as to get the best prices. These mistakes produce a triple loss. The farmer loses an opportunity to sell the fowls at the heavier weights and advanced prices, he loses a chance to sell his grain at much higher than market rates, and he makes his flock poorer each year.

Now is the time both to improve the flock and to make extra profits. Keep the choicest of the old fowls and only those young ones that have made the best development. Use these as breeders next year. Put them in their permanent quarters now. Let the others continue as they have been, either in yards or at range, but feed and water them well three times a day, and be especially liberal at night. Corn is best. Feeding need continue only ten or fifteen days. In that time fowls of the general purpose breeds should gain one to three pounds and be plump and firm, but tender, not skinny, hard and tough. Properly dressed plump fowls always command several cents a pound more than poorly dressed ones offered for sale at the same time. Therefore feed well and dress well. To determine whether all this will pay keep a record of the grain fed, the gross live weight of the fowls when feeding begins and when it ends and the difference in price at these two times. A few minutes' figuring will do the rest. The increase in number of people who practice these methods is the best evidence that they pay.

A GOOD POULTRY HOUSE.

It Is Roomy and Light, and Its Cheapness Makes It Particularly Desirable.

Instead of the simple A shaped house often seen—a house that gives but little head room for the attendant—the cut shows a similar house with a hip roof. But little framing is needed, and shorter pieces of board may be used. The window should be a hothouse sash. If the soil is dry and gravelly no floor will be needed. The window should face the south, and a small window may be placed in the eastern end.

Where there is a lot of waste land on the farm a half dozen such houses can be placed upon it, ten or twelve rods apart, and twenty-five hens placed in each colony house. The fowls will get much of their own living and will not need any yard fencing about them, a great saving of time and money. The houses should be placed in a circle, that each one may be visited conveniently in a single round of feeding or egg gathering.

If a spring or brook can be had in the center of such a group of houses the matter of water for the hens will take care of itself.

Clover For Fowls.

The clovers are all high in food value and are relished by fowls. Crimson is one of the favorites and may be sown now if the land is prepared. It is an annual and grows through the winter. Plant crimson clover for your fowls.

POULTRY NOTES

All poultry that are not pure bred are not scrubs.

The houses and pens the fowls are placed in should be scrupulously clean.

When growing fowls expressly for market many poultrymen prefer crossbreds.

Clean up the weeds and rubbish outside the houses and there will be fewer insects inside.

Too much onion, fish scrap and stale meat often cause eggs to have a bad odor. It is unsafe to feed stale food to hens.

A few hens carefully watched and liberally fed are more profitable than a large number forced to forage for their living.

Tuberculosis in chickens has been found in five cases this year by the state hygienic laboratory at the University of Wisconsin.

Remember to supply plenty of grit to the young poultry. They need as much as mature birds. Grit forms part of their digestive system.

IRRIGATION IN IDAHO

Former Local Young Man Says it Offers Opportunity to Everyone.

NEW LAND IS DEVELOPING.

Tracy Howard and His Brother Langdon Successful Business Men in the New Town of Milner.

A decidedly interesting narrative of land irrigation and reclaimation in southern Idaho, was given a Daily Press reporter today by Tracy H. Howard, a fomer well known North Plainfielder, who has been active in the field for the past three years. He came east two weeks ago to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Howard, now living in New York and dropped into Plainfield yesterday afternoon, to renew old acquaintances before going back. He is the guest at present of John Valiant, of Myrtle avenue.

Young Mr. Howard and his elder brother, Langdon W. Howard, both left for the west at about the same time and are now numbered among the leading business men of Milner, Idaho, a small town which developed as a result of a million acres of land being opened up by irrigation for fruit growing. It is in the centre of a district that is daily getting to be one of the best for agricultural purposes there is in the State. Land that sold for $25 an acre with water six years ago is now bringing an average of $150 and sometimes as high as $400. The land formerly grew nothing but sage bush but the building of a million dollar dam on the Snake River gave the necessary water and now people and business have taken the places of jack rabbits and waste.

The Plainfielders not only took up fruit farms but engaged in other lines as well and have been very successful. "Lang" Howard, as he was always known here, is a decorous justice of the peace in Milner and also has charge of the patent grants to settlers when final proof is made of the government requirements. Tracy Howard is engaged in the real estate and insurance business and is also editor and proprietor of the Milner Success, a hustling little weekly newspaper that promises to be a daily within the near future. He was elected constable two years ago and served faithfully until other business compelled him to resign.

Milner has two railrodas; Oregon Short line and the Idaho Southern, both of which give the people direct and easy communication with Twin Falls, the nearest large city, twenty-four miles away. Six years ago, it did not exist and now it boasts of 7,500 population.

Speaking of the possibilities of the country, Mr. Howard said they were almost unlimited. The fact is appreciated by men in every walk of life as the new residents in and about Milner comprise doctors, lawyers, bank clerks, mechanics and laborers. "Lang" Howard has a fruit farm which is operated for him by a former Shakespearian actor, who studied agriculture from books while awaiting his cue.

The cost of living is higher than here in the east but the wages and earnings are proportionately better. The ordinary unskilled laborer is paid $3 a day and a man is not rated as doing very well if he only receives $50 a month and his board. The climatic conditions are even and temperate making it attractive from another point of view. The narrator said snow is seldom seen while in summer blankets are always needed in the sleeping rooms.

Both Mr. Howard and his brother attended Leal's school and were prominent in local athletics a few years ago. The family lived on Myrtle avenue previous to moving to New York. The two sons became interested in the Idaho field through the location there of John Hoey, another of Leal' students, who has since taken up civil engineering in Massachussetts.

Elect Elder and Deacons.

At the annual meeting of the Netherwood Reformed church, last night, J. C. Hansen was re-elected an elder for two years and Gustave Frumerie and B. P. Hansen were re-elected deacons for two years, making the membership of the Consistory six. Their names will be announced for three Sundays and then they will be installed. On Monday evening the Consistory will meet, when the yearly reports will be presented.

UNION SERVICES HELD AT FIRST PRESBYTERIAN

A large congregation attended the last of the Union services in the First Presbyterian church last night. In the absence of Rev. Dr. Herring C. M. Hummer was in charge of the meeting. Rev. Dr. John A. Chambliss read the Scripture; prayer was offered by Rev A. S. Bond and after the address by Dr. C. M. Anderson Rev. John Y. Broek offered the closing prayer.

The topic last evening was "The Home and the School." Dr. Anderson spoke with eloquence of the relationship between the home, the church and the school laying stress upon the fact that all three are bound together in a bond which tends to exert an uplifting influence upon the whole country if absolute fidelity is observed in all the relations between the members of the family. It is necessary, he said, for the parents to be united in their conduct of the home in order that the children might be given good precepts. The family altar is one of the means to be employed.

Industry in the home belongs to both father and mother. The one cannot successfully cope with the problems of life alone. "Bossism" should not exist and the Christian religion should bring the love which should bind the family together in mutual respect and absolute fidelity. Love and common sense would adjust all things, he said.

MISSIONARY DISCUSSES ELLIS ISLAND WORK

Miss Matthews, who, for the past twenty-three years has been doing missionary work at Ellis Island among the immigrants, addressed the members of the Young Women's Mission Band, of Trinity Reformed church yesterday afternoon, telling of her work. Miss Matthews did not speak from an educational standpoint, but from that of a missionary. She speaks but one language, English, but she said that she had little trouble in working among people of all nationalities.

Miss Mathiews said that last year 800,000 immigrants came to this country and landed at Ellis Island and the number during December was 48,348, a decrease of 3,181 as compared with December, 1909. In view of this what is to be the attitude of the missionary and the church she represents?

"God is sending these foreigners to our shores," said Miss Matthews, "and it is the duty of Christians to teach them the way of life. The measure of our obligation is the measure of opportunity. The command is go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to all, but so many are apt to forget that the United States is a part of the world. These foreigners must be taught that they are coming to a Christian country. The Bible printed in thirty-six different languages is distributed at Ellis Island, and these foreigners are glad to get them, for 75 per cent, of them come from a country where the Bible is a sealed book. One Irish girl in asking me for a Bible said, 'we can do here what we cannot do in Ireland.'

"These immigrants are seeking the truth here and we as Christians should help them all we can and help them to live the right kind of lives after they come to this country."

The speaker described somewhat in detail the work at Ellis Island, including the examination of immigrants, telling of the hundreds of sad cases, where they are deported, which oftentimes means the separation of families. She also paid a high tribute to the work the Y. M. C. A. is doing at Ellis Island. Miss Mathews said that she was always able to give a kind look, a smile and a warm handshake. Miss Matthews said that no two missionaries work alike yet they are all successful.

At the close of the talk the members of the band and their friends remained to have a cup of tea and some cake and enjoy a social time. Mrs. Corra Ryno had charge of the refreshments and she was assisted by other members of the band.

Mrs. Leonard S. Smith, president, presided at the meeting and after the devotional exercises, introduced Miss Matthews.

SOCIALS FOR PATIENTS

Plan of Anti-Tuberculosis Society to Interest the Infirm.

IN NEED OF A NEW SCALE.

Competition in Weight Gaining a Feature—Prizes to Stimulate Interest— Some Statistics.

Under the supervision of Dr. Edward Krans, a series of socials for tuberculosis patients in this city is being arranged by the Anti-Tuberculosis Society with the object in view of stimulating the patient to greater efforts in their own behalf. It is expected that a competition among them will be begun and prizes of some kind offered those showing the greatest improvement, especially in weight gaining.

In order to have the records of weights made as near perfect as possible the society want to secure a scale which will cost somewhere in the neighborhood of fifteen dollars. It is hoped that contributions for the purchase of the scales will be sent in to the society so that the instrument may be purchased at once. Anyone who desires to contribute toward the purchase of it may send their offering to Miss Mabelle Phillips at the rooms of the Charity Organization Society in the Babcock building.

It is proposed to make the social end of the enterprise so attractive to the patients that they will be glad to avail themselves of the opportunity of meeting each other and comparing notes. The success of the movement depends greatly upon the interest that can be excited in the patients themselves and to stimulate this interest the public is invited to co-operate with the society by contributing the money for the scales.

During the past year the money contributed and spent in aid of the fight against tuberculosis nearly doubled that of the previous twelve months. It amounted to nearly $15,000,000 in the United States alone. The largest item in the year's expenditures was in the hospitals and sanitoria—$11,376,500. New York State leads all the rest of the country having spent $4,245,000 in the work. These amounts are from both private and public contributions. And best of all the disease is yielding to the prescribed treatment in a wonderful degree.

MOTHERS' ASSOCIATION HEARS MR. MATHIEWS.

An informal meeting of the Plainfield Mothers' Association was held at the home of Mrs. Horace G. Phillips, 976 Kensington avenue, yesterday afternoon at which about twenty members were present. Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, gave a synopsis of the series of lectures which which he gave during last fall at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium and which he gave during last fall proved. The talk proved decidely interesting to those present.

The local association has received notice that their invitation to the New Jersey State Congress of Mothers to hold their next convention in this city has been accepted and it will take place next November in an auditorium still to be selected.

SEVEN PRISONERS ARE HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

Seven persons taken by the police in a raid on a house on Cottage place Wednesday night were sent to the county jail at Elizabeth, last evening in charge of Sergeant Overbaugh and Patrolman Saffron. Six of the prisoners were held in heavy bail to await the action of the grand jury while one, a young colored girl, was held in $500 as a material witness.

Four of the men are Italians, Donato Caporano, 22; Rogio Delassi, 21; Andrew Baressi, 19; Patsey Fuska, 27. All four were held in $500. William H. Vanderveer and Belle Peterson, colored, were also held for the action of the grand jury, the former in $100 and the latter in $600 on two charges. All the charges in the complaints are of a serious nature.

LECTURE BY DR. ROBERTS AT Y. M. C. A. TONIGHT

Dr. Peter Roberts, secretary of the Immigration Department of the International Committee of Young Men's Christian Association, will deliver a free lecture in Y. M. C. A. Hall this evening on the topic "The Stranger Within Our Gates." The lecture will be illustrated by many views made from photographs taken by Dr. Roberts which show conditions under which the immigrant lives and what is being done to improve them.

Dr. Roberts is an educator doing a unique work. Convinced that what the desirable immigrant needs more than anything else is a little knowledge of English, he has undertaken the difficult task of meeting this need. According to figures in his possession there are three and three quarters millions non-English speaking men and women now employed in American industries. The tragedy of this appeals strongly to him. Considerations of economic and political advantage and of the immigrant's personal safety have prompted him to devise a system of instruction in English which is now in use in over two hundred cities and towns under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association. These classes are practically free.

Interest in the immigrant is not a new thing with Dr. Roberts. A Welsh immigrant himself, he worked among immigrants as a miner for some years, earning money necessary to pay his way through Yale from which university he received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Along with his university work, he acted as a pastor of a church in the anthracite mining region. Here he studied the problem at first hand and, by his books and magazine articles, made himself an acknowledged authority on the immigration question.

Everyone is invited to this lecture which will begin at eight o'clock.

Missionary Meeting at Y. W. C. A.

PUTS BAN ON CIGARETTE

Mayor Moy to Start Vigorous Campaign Against the Weed.

DEALERS MUST BE CAREFUL.

It is Uulawful to Give the Little Things Away As Well As to Sell Them to Minors.

"Cigarettes are a bad thing for boys," said Mayor George W. V. Moy yesterday morning, "and I am going to put a stop to the sale of them to youths under eighteen years of age if such a thing is possible. I realize that while the secret giving of the abominable things is kept very close and is hard to get at, that something must be done to curb the habit among schoolboys.

"I am going to wage a vigorous crusade against those who sell cigarettes to boys under age and will be as severe against them as the law allows. The laws specifies that it is a misdemeanor to even give the cigarettes away and, if I am not mistaken, this part of the law applies as much to grown up persons, friends and others as it does to dealers.

"School teachers continually report the odor of cigarette smoke on the boys' clothing and breath and find when they question the lads that they have been given the stuff they smoke. But I have learned that there are certain places, whose locations I do not know now, where any boy may purchase cigarettes without question as to his age. I will locate these stores and will put a stop to the practice summarily."

It is a well known fact that one of the officers connected with the schools sent a fifteen-year-old boy to a store in the neighborhood of a certain school providing him with a nickle with which to purchase a package of cigarettes. The boy returned with them and said he had been served without a question as to his age.

LYMAN BEACHER STOWE TALK ON SCHOOL CITIES.

The next lecture in the Equal Suffrage League course will be held in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium Tuesday night at 8 o'clock. The subject, 'School Cities," will be presented by Lyman Beecher Stowe, a member of the school citizens committee of New York. This committee counts among its members such men as George and Leonard McAnney, George Haven Putnam, Thomas R. Slicer, Stephen S. Wise, and others.

The hope of the committee is to introduce "some form of pupil self government to aid in training the boys and girls in their impressionable years to acquire the necessary knowledge and the spirit of mutual helpfulness without which good citizenship is impossible."

School cities have proved a great success in some of the schools of our large cities where a foreign population of little people are waiting to be made into American citizens. It is to be noted that Equal Suffrage is in practice in school cities and sex is not regarded as a barrier to intelligent voting.

LOST ALL THEY POSSESSED IN NEWARK'S BIG FIRE.

The sufferers in the recent $300,000 fire in Newark, in which the so-called fire-proof Knickerbocker storage warehouse was totally destroyed, were not all confined to Newark and New York. C. H. Lippincott and family, of Jackson avenue, North Plainfield, lost everything they had in the way of furniture, bedding, clothing, bric-a-brac, etc.

Mr. Lippincott took it for granted on the representations of the storage company that the building was fireproof and for that reason carried no insurance, and the loss was total.

XMAS ENTERTAINMENT OF GRACE P. E. S. S.

Grace P. E. Sunday-school celebrated Christmas yesterday in the usual fashion with a Christmas tree, gifts for the children and others and refreshments. The Kindergarten and Primary departments enjoyed their entertainment in the afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock while the main school gathered in the parish house at 7:30.

Much delight was given the children at the evening gathering by E. W. Bobart, a presidigitator who made things appear where they were not and caused shrieks of laughter from the youngsters. Paul Nolting was an able Santa Claus and found it necessary to call on "his brother" Santa in the person of Seymour Perkins who had some difficulty in finding anyone in need of cold potatoes.

Following the entertainment refreshments were served and the older pupils of the Sunday-school held an informal dance. Rev. E. Vicar Stevenson, the rector of Grace, was presented with a valuable book by members of the Sunday-school and S. Frederick Smith, the organist, was remembered by some of the choir boys with a gift.

The whole entertainment was a pleasant affair and reflected credit on those who had it in charge among whom were Mrs. Beard, Miss Angel, Miss Egan and Mrs. Hanson.

MRS. JAMES STRAPPE PECULIARLY POISONED

Mrs. James Strappe, of John street, has been seriously ill at Muhlenberg Hospital, suffering from an attack of blood poisoning, contracted in a somewhat peculiar way. During the recent fatal illness of Mrs. Patrick Lawler, also of John street, Mrs. Strappe assisted in nursing her, giving baths and other cure. At that time Mrs. Strappe had a slight abrasion on the palm of her right hand. After the death of Mrs. Lawler, Mrs. Strappe assisted in preparing the body for burial and her hand became infected. The hand began to swell and the infection quickly spread to the arm until it was twice its natural size. Upon the advice of the family physician, Dr. F. J. Hughes, Mrs. Strappe was removed to the hospital for treatment.

This prompt action will undoubtedly be the means of saving the arm and hand, if not her life. Today Mrs. Strappe was reported as doing well.

DEPUE IS RE-APPOINTED

Newark Lawyer Continued as Counsel to Boro Sewerage Commission.

ROGERS MADE A MEMBER

Mayor Newton B. Smalley's Appointments are Confirmed by the North Plainfield Council.

The North Plainfield Council held the first regular session of the year, last night, but owing to the fact that a session had been held Monday for reorganization, practically nothing but routine business was transacted. All the members were in attendance.

Mayor Smalley made a number of additional appointments, among them that of George T. Rogers as a member of the sewage commission. He has been acting in this capacity as a representative of the council and is familiar with the doings of the organization. In the future the commission will invite a number of the council to attend the conferences.

The Mayor acted upon the request of the sewage commission and re-appointed Sherrard Depue, of the legal firm of Lindabury, Depue and Faulks as its counsel. He is consulted whenever it becomes necessary and the compensation is fixed accordingly. The appointment was confirmed.

The report of Tax Collector Brown showed that during the month of December the borough's receipts had been $60,764.43, the disbursements $58,919.21, leaving a balance of $1,845.22. Recorder Dolliver's report showed that there had been ten arrests during the past month and $20 in fines collected.

The following bonds were submitted as renewals and referred to the finance committee for approval: G. F. Brown, tax collector, $10,000; Fred Becker, overseer of the poor, $500; Frederick A. Martin, borough clerk, $500. Applications were granted for these building permits: C. D. Manning, alterations to lower part of house at Sycamore and Myrtle avenues; W. E. Benjamin, Park place, chicken house, 15x20 feet, one story in height.

The council discussed at some length the purchase of a large safe which has been offered by the State Trust Company. The borough now has two small ones and it was the expressed opinion that a large receptacle would be the best, thus keeping all books and papers in one place. Mayor Smalley was appointed a committee of one to make inquiry and report.

The council confirmed the following committees and appointments made by Mayor Smalley:

Marshals for special duty; William Kiernan, John Johnson, Peter Bowers, D. C. Adams, William McCullough, John Y. Barrett, Theodore Martin, George Giddes, James L. Olliff, George B. Stewart, G. W. CURE YOUR KIDNEYS.

Do Not Endanger Life When a Plainfield Citizen Shows You the Cure.

Why will people continue to suffer the agonies of kidney complaint, backache, lameness, headaches, languor, why allow themselves to become chonic invalids, when a certain cure is offered them?

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use, because it gives to the kidneys the help they need to perform their work.

If you have any, even one, of the symptoms of kidney diseases, cure yourself now before diabetes, dropsy or Bright's disease sets in. Read this Plainfield testimony:

Mrs. M. Newman, 532 West Fifth street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "A constant pain in my limbs was the principal symptom of my kidney trouble. When I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I procured a box at Randolph's Pharmacy and soon after I began taking them, the pains in my limbs disappeared. I heartily recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn co., Buffalo, New York sole agents for the United States.

Lecture on Athens.

The illustrated lecture advertised elsewhere on "Ancient and Modern Athens," by Miss Florence A. Stone, on Tuesday evening in the Congregational church, will be of great interest. Miss Stone, who is an American, has lived in Athens many years and is not only thoroughly familiar with the Greek language, but also with the result of modern research and discovery. Her wide travels in that country and her knowledge of Ancient and Modern Greece insure an entertaining and instructive evening. The lecture will be fully illustrated with stereopticon slides.

Proctor's Comedy Show.

Harry Crandall & Co., will present the laughable sketch, "Fun in a Grocery" at Proctor's theatre, today. This is the case of "Peck's Bad Boy" and it will amuse young and old. The City Comedy Four, comedians and singers; Castle & Laird in "The Little Puritan," and the Weston Sisters, "Those Comedy Girls," complete a fine bill. The pictures are better than ever.

Played at Lakewood.

The McIntyre Trio, comprising Joseph McIntyre, pianist; Horace Britt, 'cellist, and William Grafing King, violinist, and Miss Edith Chapman Goold, soprano, gave a concert at Lakewood last evening, under the auspices of one of the women's clubs of that place.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hagaman, of Millstone, are visiting relatives here.

Miss Minnie Brokaw, of this city, has been visiting her parents at Harlingen.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Twenty houses containing diphtheria patients have been placed under quarantine at Millville.

Congratulations are being extended Mrs. Margarette Hall Righter, of Salem, who reached the age of ninety-six years Thursday.

The members of Paterson's Board of Public Works met Thursday and organized for the year by the election as president of Joseph McCrystal.

The syndicate of Wilmington men who purchased Fenton's Beach, in Salem County, say it will be converted into a summer resort before the season opens.

When Mayor W. Fred Ware, who was sworn into office on New Year's day, presented his first message to Millville City Council last night, he urged the necessity of a new city charter.

The salaries of the Bridgeton police have been raised from $60 to $70 per month, beginning with the first of the year. Every man has been on the force at least ten years and three of them for twenty years.

Boy students, male instructors and even the members of the Board of Education were barred from the Atlantic City High School gymnasium Thursday when more than one hundred dashing co-eds attired in short bifurcated skirts, enjoyed their first instructions in basketball.

Relatives, whose identity is withheld, have interred the body of John McAleese, one of the victims of the Ventnor boathouse fire Sunday morning. The body was buried at Pleasantville. Unless some one claims the body of Kate Diamond, who burned to death with McAleese, it will be buried in potter's field.

No adjustment has been made as yet on the insurance on Woodbury's burned High School. The companies claim that the remaining walls are salvage, but experts say that they are a total loss. Even should the $60,000, the full amount of insurance, be paid by the companies, Woodbury will be a heavy loser, as it will cost considerably more to reconstruct.

An appeal has been made to the Camden Excise Board by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to warn saloon-keepers to cease selling intoxicants to minors. Next Tuesday the board will consider the applications of the 250 or so of liquor dealers who want licenses for the ensuing year. The W. C. T. U. wants them especially warned against selling to children, who are sent to the places with kettles. It is reported that a considerable number of persons violate this law.

Acting in the interest of several of the large property owners of Atlantic City, Attorney Eli H. Chandler appeared before Supreme Court Justice Trenchard in Bridgeton Thursday and obtained a writ of certiorari against the recent action of City Council in passing an ordinance providing for the purchase of the Vogler tract as a public park and playground at a cost of $242,000. The writ was granted by Justice Trenchard on the ground that the appropriation of $242,000 provided by an ordinance passed in June of last year was not included in the appropriations made for current expenses during the year but as a separate item. It also was alleged by Attorney Chandler that the purchase price of the Vogler tract was exorbitant.

BAPTIST MINISTER TO TALK TO EPISCOPALIANS

Permission being granted by provision of the now famous Canon, No. 19, a local Baptist minister will make an address at a special service of the Episcopal church in New York City tomorrow afternoon. The clergyman in question is Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptsit church, who has been invited to give a talk at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Fifth avenue and Forty-fifth street. The occasion will be the annual service for the New York branch of St. Barnabas' Guild, a society in the Episcopal church for trained nurses.

According to the canon referred to a minister or laymen of another denomination may make an address from the foot of the chancel at a special service with the consent of the bishop. He cannot, however, speak from the pulpit. Within the Episcopal fold, this invitation to Rev. Mr. Maguire is considered a high honor. There have been very few instances of the exercise of the privilege of this canon, which has caused great dissension within the Episcopal church, which was enacted at the general convention of the church four years ago and which it was attempted to repeal at the recent triennial convention.

Bishop David H. Greer, of the diocese of New York, will preside at the service tomorrow afternoon. In addition to Rev. Mr. Maguire, there will be otheer speakers including Bishop Arthur S. Lloyd, president of the Episcopal church board of missions. Rev. Herbert Shipman, rector of Heavenly Rest church, is chaplain of the guild.

THE FORUM.

Editor, The Daily Press,

In your issue of the 5th instant under the heading of "Conference on Water" on the first page, you represent me as taking a position in the conference of the 4th instant very different from my actual position on the subject.

While I am of the opinion that most public utilities can be handled better by private corporations than by municipalities, there are some which it is necessary for the people through their representatives to directly control; among these are streets and sewers.

In the older parts of this country the water works have generally been owned by the municipalities for a long time. In the west and southwest a large proportion of the water works have been constructed in the first instance by private corporations, but all over the country there has been of late years an increasing disposition to consider the control of the water supplies as necessary to the welfare of communities dependent on them.

For a number of years past, I have been on record as favoring municipal control of the water supply on which Plainfield and North Plainfield are dependent. I do not believe that it is possible to make a contract with the Water Company which will for any length of time properly safeguard the interests of the community and nothing was said by me at the conference above referred to which in any wise conflicted with this view.

Yours truly,
JOSEPH O. OSGOOD.

Gave a "500" Party.

Mrs. Katherine Clark, of Whitehouse, gave a five hundred party to twenty friends at her home, Thursday afternoon. The guests included Mrs. J. A. Haynes, Mrs. W. W. Warnock and Mrs. V. W. # LABOR UNION SCORES FORMER SENATOR SMITH

Former United States Senator James Smith, Jr., candidate for the United States Senatorship, is in the bad graces of the Central Labor Union. This fact was evident at a meeting of the central body Thursday night when, after it became known that the Leather Workers' Union, of Newark, had requested the organization to advise the different locals to support Mr. Smith in his fight for the toga, nearly every delegate present arose and denounced the Essex man in bitter terms.

The trouble arose after John Cosgrove informed the delegates that he received a letter from the secretary of the Newark Union asking that the central body use its influence to have the locals support Mr. Smith. "I move," said Mr. Cosgrove, "that a letter be directed to the secretary informing him that the question was before the people early last fall, and that it is too late in the season to call our notice to it." The motion was immediately seconded and received the unanimous assent of all the delegates.

HERE AND THERE.

A Plainfield man saved all the five cent pieces he could spare during the year in a box and when he opened it there was $152.25. This amount he exchanged for bank bills and presented them to his wife as a Christmas gift. Singularly enough her Xmas gift to him was $100 in gold. She having saved that amount in ten cent pieces during the year.

Famous Expert Tells

How Fat May be Removed Rapidly by a Simple Home Remedy Without Causing Wrinkles, Disturbing the Diet or Necessity of Exercise.

"Fat is nothing but unused energy," says a prominent physician, and the man or woman who is burdened with it can easily get rid of it if they wish. All they need is 1-2 ounce of Marmola, 1-2 ounce of Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 3 1-2 ounces of Peppermint Water; all of which they can get at any good drug store for a few cents. Then let them take one teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime until they are down to the weight they want to be.

This simple home receipt is far and away better than any or all the patent or secret medicines, for it reduces the fat safely and harmlessly. The ingredients are in fact beneficial to the system, having both tonic and purifying qualities, and so help rather than distress the stomach. The remedy does not cause wrinkles, for it reduces one gradually and naturally, preserving a good outline, and best of all, needs neither physical exercise to help it do the work, nor does it require any change in diet—one can get results and still take things easy—eating meanwhile just what, when and how he or she pleases. Be sure and get the Marmola in a sealed package, so that you get Marmola and not a substitute.

Talked on Home Missions.

There was a good attendance of members. Miss Minish talked entirely on home missions, telling of the work in Alaska, among the Indians and in Mexico, where she has visited the mission schools. She said that the work was encouraging and made a strong appeal for greater support.

Thought Building on Fire.

Occupants of the second floor of the Scheuer building on West Front street believed they smelled smoke at 6:30 last night and believed a fire to be smoldering. A still alarm was sent to Fire headquarters and Chief Doane responded with No. 1 truck, but a thorough search failed to reveal any blaze. The chief continued the investigation today and reached the conclusion that a steam pipe near the baseboard was responsible, giving a smell akin to burning wood.

Young Friends Meet.

Was it Brown?

By Nellie Cravey Gilmore

(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

As long as she lived Sylvia would never forget that dizzy walk home from the hospital in the stinging, pouring rain; the savage pleasure she experienced in the cruel way it whipped her hot cheeks and half froze the angry blood curdling fiercely through her rebellious little body.

She had been a fool to go there, of course. And she faced the verdict of her own common sense with the keenest sense of humiliation she had ever known. To be refused admittance to the room where her lover presumably lay dying because she could not give an affirmative answer to the attendant's inquiry as to whether she were "anything to the patient," was bitter enough of itself, but to come face to face with Chalmers's mother and Alline Bester, about to enter where she had been denied, and to be met by a haughty stare of surprise from each, made her young blood boil.

As a matter of fact they were everything to each other. Both she and Chalmers knew that far better than any spoken word or circlet of gold could signify, but no formal engagement existed between them, and she could not be the first to proclaim their love.

They told her at the hospital that if he lived through the night the chances were he would recover. The following day a paragraph in the paper stated that young Chalmers was pronounced comparatively out of danger. A succeeding item hinted at his approaching betrothal to Alline Bester. And within a week the young fullback was on the rapid road to recovery.

The day before Chalmers was discharged from the hospital Sylvia, her mother and father sailed for Japan.

"Listen Dear," he Began Excitedly.

Nine weeks later Sylvia sat reading with overbright, indignant eyes the following letter from her lover.

"Boston, Mass., December 3.

"Dear Little Girl—Why did you run away without one word of farewell? Is it possible that, after everything, you can still be in the dark about how I feel toward you? Have I been mistaken in assuming that you felt the same?

"My last conscious thought before that frightful accident was of you; my first on reawakening to the rational world was of—you. My very first act on being released from the crucible of nurses and doctors was to hasten to Wildmere, only to find you thousands of miles away—and not one word or line of explanation!

"The governor and my mater were so cut up about the accident that I have concluded to retire from the gridiron for the present. Thus you see, everything considered, I return to college a very dejected and gloomy soph. Will you not drop me a line from the far off orient that life may seem something less than a blank, dear, and the world a habitable place instead of one vast, aching wilderness?

"As always,

"Billy."

Sylvia read the letter several times with a variety of emotions. Then she crumpled it and tossed it into the trash basket. Afterward, she went over to her writing desk and penned a cloudy polite little note in reply that effectually shut off any possible excuse for further correspondence. When the letter was sealed, the little resolute line of her lips relaxed into quivering and she broke into a storm of tears.

Early in the following autumn the Marburys returned to America.

It was on a glorious November morning that Sylvia came in, flushed, from a downtown expedition, and hurried straight to the little white sitting room in their new apartments at a fashionable New York hotel.

Without stopping to remove her hat, she turned her bag upside down, emptying the contents on a small, onyx table. There were several new postcards, half a dozen newspaper clippings, a few half-tones—of Brown.

She opened her scrapbook and pasted them all in with painstaking fingers. Never had there been a man like Brown on the Yale gridiron. Every day added fresh laurels to his already brilliant record. He was worshiped by his classmates, idolized by his team and adored by the girls.

From the wreck of her shattered hopes, Sylvia had risen to join in the universal hero worship. On her mantel was a panel of the invincible Brown; in her bureau drawers were innumerable likenesses and unlikenesses. She carried his picture in a tiny locket about her neck, and on her desk was a porcelain painting of him.

She glanced smilingly at the dozen different caricatures each newspaper had proudly named as the "only true likeness" of the mighty one. Then, with a queer little pang at her heart, she opened the secret compartment of her desk and drew forth an old photograph of Billy Chalmers. She looked into the handsome, serious eyes long and earnestly; a little sob caught in her throat. How she had loved him! Could it be really true, she asked herself, that he had changed so much—and cared for that other (?), cared enough to marry her, as report said?

A sharp rap on her door interrupted the painful train of thought, and Sylvia rose and turned the knob, schooling her face into unconcern. It was a special, in Billy's own handwriting, and she tore open the envelope with crimsoning cheeks:

"Dear Sylvia," it ran. "May I call at four on a matter of importance? Am sailing at daybreak for Germany to take up the study of medicine in Berlin. Please do not refuse me.—Billy."

For an instant Sylvia stood holding the sheet between trembling, icy fingers. Should she see him? All the fierce resentment and wounded pride of the past year surged up in her defense; with a swift impulse she seized a pen and dashed down a single word and signed it "Sylvia."

The succeeding hours were the longest Sylvia had ever spent in her life, but Chalmers arrived promptly. She greeted him with her most formal little manner, effectually screening wild inward turbulence from his eager penetrating glance.

Every attempt he made to lead the conversation into personal channels was balked by her, and finally Chalmers broke out abruptly:

"Look here, Sylvia, the last time I saw you it was an understood thing between us that as soon as we both graduated we'd be—"

"Have you forgotten—Alline?" she interposed, coldly.

"That affair was all my mother's doing. Only recently I learned of the report in the paper which you must have seen. I went at once to Miss Bester and told her the true situation. She is to be married in April to another man. We shook hands and parted friends. On my word of honor, that is the sum and substance of the whole thing. By George, Sylvia! who is that fellow?" Chalmers had caught sight of the panel on the mantelshelf, and the color flooded his face.

Sylvia blushed, too, and said, foolishly: "Isn't he a wonder?"

"To judge by the gushiness of the press—he is," was the half-disgusted reply.

"You know him well, of course?" she queried, fencing for time.

"Oh, after a fashion! Do you?" He gave her a quick, keen look.

"Only in this legendary sort of way," and she indicated the pile of clippings on her desk, her eyes traveling comprehensively from one wall to another where were displayed the more or less ludicrous prints. "I suppose he's a perfect idol of the girls, isn't he?" she asked, demurely.

Chalmers grunted. "I happen to know that he doesn't care a fig for but one in the world—and she won't look at him."

"Oh," exclaimed Sylvia, "what a stupid she must be!"

Chalmers rose and paced the length of the room, then back again. He stopped in front of Sylvia's chair; his voice had changed when he spoke.

"Is it possible, Sylvia, that this fellow has supplanted me in your estimation—has taken the old, dear—place—?"

Sylvia laughed constrainedly. "I—you see," she said, "I had to have something to keep up my interest—somebody. It—it's a sort of fad, you know—"

"But if he should come here today, and ask you to be his wife, would you listen to him?"

"I—suppose—I—should," was the very subdued response.

Chalmers bit his lip. Suddenly he sat down on the arm of her chair and deliberately drew her head against him. "Listen, dear," he began excitedly. "I want to tell you a few things about—Brown. He had a serious accident last year during one of the big games, and his people didn't want him to play football any more. He didn't make any rash promises, but rather than have them worry, he took an assumed name—"

Sylvia looked up tentatively, her eyes now wistful, now dancing—red lips parted.

"Do you think he did wrong in this?"

Sylvia shook her head, her black lashes shadowing the pink rim of her cheek.

"Sweetheart, I—I am Brown."

"Oh!"

He caught her close to his heart. "morrow, dear, or will it require a "Will you cross the ocean with me to-longer time to get accustomed to Brown's identity?"

"I knew it all along," she whispered. "I haven't missed a game. And—and—Billy, please let me talk, I—I think it would be something of a distinction, really, to be pointed out as Mrs. Brown."

Owns His Home.

"Have you ever seen the Canadian Rockies?"

"No."

"Then there is a glorious treat in store for you."

"Don't you believe it. If I ever get money enough to go to the Canadian Rockies my house will need painting. It always does whenever I begin to think I can see daylight ahead."

AN UN-COOKED REVERIE.

Mother she has gone to visit,
Will be gone a day or two;
No, she didn't cook up nothing—
What is father going to do?
Sure she left a raw ba[illegible]
And some nuts beside his pa[illegible]
When he sees what she has left him
He'll go on an awful rate.

Ma believes in uncooked fodder,
Says it's healthy as can be;
Then she says she will not worry
Over stuff for pa and me.
Says she'll have a chance to visit,
And a life of greater ease,
Mother's eating pie at auntie's—
Father, pass the pickles, please!

—Boston Herald.

TOO HARD.

"My dear," said the lady who had been married three years, "tell me what first attracted you to me. What pleasant characteristic did I possess which placed me above other women in your sight?" And her lord and master simply said, "I give it up."

Its Hardness.

Hard cash they call it, and I guess
That is the best term yet;
Hard cash it is, undoubtedly,
Because it's hard to get.

Not for Papa.

"He wants to marry Mary."

"Well?"

"What do you think of him?"

"Oh, he's all right, I guess."

"But doesn't it strike you that he is a little bit foolish?"

"Of course, dearest, I cannot argue that with you because the fact that he wants to get married would give you the strangle-hold."

A Catch.

"Young man, there are germs lying in wait for you everywhere."

"That don't worry me."

"No?"

"No; you see I am worth a million and single."

"And what has that to do with it?"

"The germs will get squeezed to death by the girls that are lying in wait for me."

Doubtful Compliment.

"And you say that your father said he would like to see me write the best poems of the day?" asked the bard in surprise. "Why, he didn't use to say that."

"No," laughed the pretty girl, "but the other day he read that some of the best poems of the age were written in jail."

An Independent Attitude.

"Are you running your railroads for the benefit of the public or the stockholders?"

"I'm no umpire," answered Mr. Dustin Stax. "If we pay big dividends the public complains, and if we don't the stockholders kick. I'm inclined to maintain neutrality as a high-salaried official and let 'em fight it out."

Unprofessional.

"That doctor seems to know nothing of the ethics of the profession."

"How does he show it?"

"Why, he'd rather cure a patient by another school than kill him by his own."

SUPREME TEST.

Mr. Knock—Our neighbor, Mrs. Smith Jones, has suffered a great deal for her belief.

Mrs. Knock—Yes; she has a notion that she can wear a No. 3 shoe on a No. 6 foot.

The Eski-Bath.

The Eskimo, so we are told,
In a lifetime bathes but once or twice;
If you would try an Eski-bath
Rub yourself with a cake of ice.

Effect of Trade.

"What a bouncing baby! Whose is it?"

"The rubber dealer's, ma'am."

Gratitude.

"Why did she not marry him?"

"He once saved her life."

THE KINGS' COLUMN.

In a Danish Cathedral, Against Which Many Monarchs Have Measured Their Height.

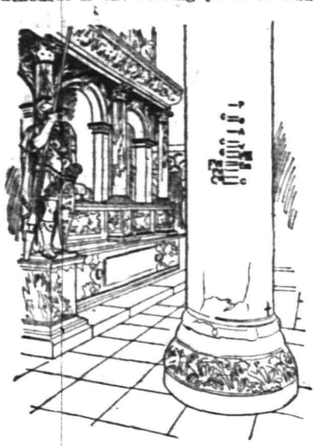
London.—That even kings indulge in little pleasantries that ordinary mortals do is attested to by the accompanying picture. Of course we are not all measured in a cathedral and, furthermore, do not measure our height gainst a sacred column.

This has been the case with a number of monarchs, although the fact has not been generally known.

The column against which these crowned heads were measured is called the "kings' column," and it is one of many which are to be found in the famous Roskilde cathedral near Copenhagen.

The great red granite column dates back to the time of Canute. Roskilde cathedral is the resting place of Danish kings, and in the course of time it became customary for the reigning monarchs and their most notable guests to have their measurements and monograms cut in the granite.



The Kings' Column.

In 1716 Czar Peter the Great of Russia was measured in the chapel, and up to the present no other royalty has been able to beat his immense height of six feet eight inches. King Christian I. of Denmark comes next in size with six feet five and one-half inches. Among other names and measures engraved on the column are those of the late King Edward VII. and the late King Chulalongkorn of Siam.

LITTLE PRINCE OLAF.

He Is Quite a Man, if You Please, and Also Quite a Rider.

London.—Prince Olaf has returned to London to find that his popularity has not decreased in the least. From the moment he stepped off the train at Victoria station tightly holding the hand of his adoring grandmamma, Queen Alexandra, he came into his own again and was greeted with sympathetic cheers and hand wavings. Not even the children of King George are welcomed with more enthusiasm when they appear in public than is this little Scandinavian prince, who accepts it all as his due and smiles beamingly on each and every person he meets in England.

This time Prince Olaf has come to his mother's country determined to show his English royal cousins what an excellent equestrian he is. Last time he visited Windsor Princess Mary and the young princes made him very envious because they could ride so well and he was so inexpert. More than that, each child had his or her own particular pony to pet and talk about. When he returned to Christiania he begged his father, King Haakon, and his mother, Queen Maud, to give him a pony, and the pony was soon forthcoming. The "wonder pony," as King Haakon laughingly calls his boy's steed, is a little animal, swift and sure footed. Chris, as he is named for some reason known only to his master, follows the prince everywhere like a dog. Unfortunately Chris could not be transported to England, and so Prince Olaf came to London almost reluctantly for the first time.

Won Mother's Husband.

Milwaukee, Wis.—A remarkable story is on record in the circuit court. It was told in the suit of Mrs. Johanna Husselmann against her daughter Hattie, now the wife of Dr. Wilhelm Becker. Dr. Becker formerly was the husband of the mother, but four years ago they were divorced. The present suit was based on the mother's allegation that her daughter had stolen the affection of Dr. Becker. Mrs. Husselmann asked for $25,000. She got an award of $9,800 damages.

Mrs. Husselmann testified that a friendly visit made in her home by her daughter had the effect of breaking up two homes. The outcome was that the daughter was wedded to her stepfather after winning him from the mother.

THE HARVEST MOON

A Novelization of the Drama of AUGUSTUS THOMAS By GEORGE HENRY PAYNE

CHAPTER XIV.

"THIS is the second time in one day," said Elliott as he stood up to shake hands with the newcomers, "that my breakfast has been interrupted. As a man gets along in life he becomes more boastful of his ability to eliminate the midday meal and more genuinely dependent on the initial feeding."

"Mr. Holcomb," said Vavin without waiting for any preliminaries, "tells me that when he left Miss Fullerton at the door last night she was in a very happy mood and that they had agreed to be married in a very short time. That is hardly the period in a young girl's life that would lead her to something so extraordinary as this."

"That's exactly what I was saying," said Judge Elliott. "My opinion"—

"Unless," continued Vavin when he had allowed as much of the interruption as he cared for—"unless something unusual has happened to the young girl. Can anybody here suggest anything unusual that might have happened to her?" And he fixed his eye on Aunt Cornelia.

There was a chorus from everybody but that amiable lady to the effect that nothing could possibly have occurred that would have led her to leave the house.

"And you," said Vavin, turning sharply to the elder Miss Fullerton, "do you know anything that could have occurred from the time she left my hotel, from the time she left Mr. Holcomb here, that would lead her to sit up in her room all night without sleep, lead her to pack her things and say farewell to her hostess in this almost impolite way?"

It was a hard moment for Aunt Cornelia.

"I am sure," she answered aggressively, "that I know of nothing."

"It is very remarkable," he said, still watching her intently.

Like almost all other young men of his class, the first suggestion that came to Graham's mind was the police. Vavin held both hands up in horror.

"That is so thoroughly Anglo-Saxon," he said. "We of the more individualistic nation, we occasionally endeavor to do something for ourselves. This is not a matter for the police."

"But suppose"—began Mrs. Winthrop excitedly—"suppose something dreadful"—

"We will not suggest anything dreadful," said Vavin. "I, who know this young girl, tell you that whatever she has done, whatever her reasons for doing as she has done, will be done with dignity."

Holcomb, who had stood by, saying very little, reached out his left hand and grasped the old man's arm thankfully.

"You do not know how much courage you have given me," he said.

"I am no fountain of courage," said Vavin, with a smile, "but I have lived sixty-five years."

The first question was whether Professor Fullerton had been communicated with.

"We are waiting for you," said Elliott. "But now that you suggest it we shall telegraph him at once."

"Let us be Americans," said Vavin, "let us use your very remarkable telephone, but first let us find out by the same system if Miss Fullerton could be in Lenox."

"You know, Vavin," said Elliott admiringly, "you would have made a pretty good lawyer."

"Considering the fact, judge, that M. Vavin is the first dramatist of France, that is not the great compliment that you intend."

The bureau of information of the railroad informed them that the first train for Lenox had left at 5:59 and arrived there shortly after 11. It was now a quarter of 12.

"You see," said Vavin, "how much this may save us. All of the girl's childhood was spent in this town, and if she is in trouble what more natural than that she should go there, probably to see"—and again he fixed his eagle eye on Cornelia—"to see her father."

It was Holcomb who undertook with avidity the task of finding the girl by telephone, and his newspaper training stood him in good stead. She was not at the house, and, disguising his anxiety, he learned from the caretakers that they had heard nothing from her.

"I'll get the station master," he said, with his hand over the telephone, and he asked the Lenox operator to change the call, and it was only a few minutes before he learned that Dora had arrived in Lenox on the 11:10 and had driven away in a public hack—as the station people thought—to her father's house.

"She has gone to Mrs. Murphy's," snapped Cornelia when this information was communicated to the gathering. For once in her life Cornelia's information was of value, and from the nearest telephone to Mrs. Murphy, who, it seemed, had been a housekeeper in the family, word was sent to Dora that M. Vavin desired to talk to her.

"She will come to the telephone when I ask her," said Vavin when the others protested that it was hardly likely that a girl who had acted so strangely would suddenly become docile.

"I should like," he said, "to have you do me the favor of allowing me the privilege of speaking perfectly freely to Miss Fullerton when she comes to the telephone and therefore letting me have the room alone."

The telephone bell rang, and the operator said that Miss Fullerton was ready to speak to M. Vavin.

He bowed to them as they stepped out, holding Holcomb by the arm. "If you please, stay."

"You are in trouble, my dear," he said, speaking in French, "and you thoughtlessly did not come to me. Shall I come to Lenox or will you come back to New York?"

It was a short conversation, and the Frenchman hung up the receiver and turned to Holcomb.

"Miss Fullerton tells me that she went to Lenox this morning," he said harshly, "to get some information from Professor Fullerton. She has not heard from him, but I have told her we will have him here tonight. She says that she will not be able to play. Is that a great blow to you?"

"I don't think it will make much difference," said Holcomb. "We are not playing to any business anyway, though it may make the management sore on her."

"You are dealing with things more serious than your management," said Vavin, "and, if I be mistaken later, it may not be a bad idea to close it on account of her indisposition for one or perhaps two nights. It would be what you call good business. She will leave on the 2 o'clock train for New York, and you and I can meet her somewhere between here and Lenox, and in the meantime we will have Judge Elliott see that her father arrives here from Albany, where he has been speaking."

He walked briskly to the door and threw it open. "You may come in," he said.

"Miss Fullerton," he said to Judge Elliott, "informs me that she went to Lenox to consult her father about a matter that to her was very important. Her father, she learned there, was in Albany, and she has been unable to get in touch with him. Will you see that he is at my hotel at 8 o'clock tonight?"

"At your hotel!" was the general exclamation.

"At my hotel," he replied. "Miss Fullerton declines to come back here. She has done me the honor to say that she will start for New York in time to be at my hotel at 8 o'clock, and, inasmuch as it was from here that she went, will you, Mrs. Winthrop, and you, Mr. Winthrop, and especially you,

HOLCOMB FOR THE FIRST TIME HEARD VAVIN UTTER AN IMPRECATION.

Miss Fullerton, also honor me with your presence?"

"But didn't she give you some reason for"— began Mrs. Winthrop.

"I asked for no reason. We will all understand this more fully at 8 o'clock this evening, and now, brother dramatist," he said, linking his arm in Holcomb's, "we have a busy afternoon before us."

As they closed the door behind them Holcomb for the first time heard Vavin utter an imprecation.

CHAPTER XV.

TO find Fullerton was Dora's first thought when dawn began to come through her window in the Winthrop apartment. Stepping softly to the telephone, she had learned when the first train left and had got to the station in time to wire Professor Fullerton that she must see him at once at Lenox. She felt that only there could she have the talk that she must have with him, and this, in addition to her fear of going to Cambridge, had caused her to pick the old home for what she felt would be her last visit.

It was disheartening news that she received by telegram at Lenox—that Professor Fullerton had gone away for several days, leaving no other address than Albany.

When, therefore, Vavin called her on the telephone there was no thought of resisting, for she needed this genuine friend very much. His kind suggestion to come to Lenox gave her a new courage, and she realized that if, after all, she was going to take up a career unprotected it would be better for his advice. And so she had answered readily that she would come.

It was not exactly an exclamation of displeasure with which she met Holcomb, but she would rather not have seen him until she had had her trouble out with Fullerton.

"You don't seem pleased to see me," said the young man when he and Vavin had joined her at South Norwalk.

"It is not that, Willard," she said, "but I must learn something for a certainty before you and I resume our old relations."

"We will not talk of that," said Vavin. "The railway table d'hote is awaiting us, your wonderful American table d'hote, where they give you three meals all at once. Let us go in."

He had talked with Holcomb on the way up, talked to him with an authority that mystified the young man, who could only gather that the old man believed Aunt Cornelia had told the girl something which had driven her to despair.

"We will all know more tonight," he said. "We must not ask her too many questions. We will talk about everything but her trouble, whatever it is. She needs a rest. We will not tell her that the theater is to be closed because of her, but we will say that it is on account of rehearsals, and next Monday night we will open—we will open with a success."

It was a simple plan and a humane one. Vavin asked her no questions. He talked lightly and gayly, and, as he called it when they were rehearsing, their laughter was soon a "panic."

Only when Holcomb left them for a moment as they were nearing the station did she have an opportunity to speak of her trouble.

"I suppose," she said to Vavin, "you think me a very queer girl."

"I think you are a very brave girl," he replied, "and you are going to be still braver."

"I am," she replied. "I am going to a little hotel where some members of the company are living."

"Very good, my dear," he answered. "But first you are going to my hotel, where Professor Fullerton will be."

"You know that?" she said.

"I talked with him over the telephone before we left," replied Vavin, "and besides him there will be Mr. Winthrop, Mrs. Winthrop and Aunt Cornelia."

GENERAL VON STEUBEN.

A Statue Soon to Be Unveiled In Memory of This Great Soldier.

Washington.—On Dec. 7, more than 100 years after his death, the United States honors the memory of Major General Baron von Steuben, the blunt, strict drillmaster of Washington's ragged army, by the unveiling of a granite statue in Lafayette park, just across Pennsylvania avenue from the White House.

The statue will fill the fourth corner of the park, the other three being occupied by Generals Lafayette, Rochambeau and Kusciusko, while in the center is an equestrian statue of "Old Hickory" Jackson. It has long been known as "Statue park." More than 6,000 Germans will participate in the parade which will be held in connection with the unveiling ceremonies. There will also be 4,000 regular soldiers and members of the District of Columbia national guard in the line of march.

Statue of General von Steuben.

President Taft will deliver the principal address. Other speakers will be Count von Bernstorff, German ambassador, and Dr. Richard Bartholdt, member of congress from Missouri and president of the German American National alliance. Secretary of War Jacob Dickinson will preside.

The statue of Von Steuben was designed and executed by Albert Jaegers of New York. It is so highly regarded as a work of art that congress has provided for the presentation of a bronze replica to the emperor of Germany in partial recagnition of his gift to the United States of a statue of Frederick the Great, which latter statue now stands in front of the Army War college in Washington.

Baron von Steuben was a Prussian American general. In 1777 he came to the United States and in the following year was appointed by Washington as inspector general of the United States army with the rank of major general. He reorganized the army and added greatly to its efficiency. He died Nov. 28, 1794.

BEAT PEARY TO POLE.

Navy Department Has Unearthed a Document Saying That an English Friar Reached It In 1360.

Washington.—That Peary was beaten to the north pole as long ago as 1360 is the claim set forth in an old geographical work unearthed by the navy department.

Department officials have unearthed an old history, in which the claim is made that the north pole was discovered in 1360 by a friar of Oxford. It is called "A New Naval History; or, Compleat View of the British Marine," and was published by John Entick in London, 1757. On one of its musty pages the following paragraph appears:

"In the year 1360 it is recorded that a friar of Oxford called Nicholas de Linna, or of Lynn, being a good astronomer, went in company with others to the most northern island of the world, and there, leaving his company together, he traveled alone and made drafts of all those northern parts with the indrawing seas, which at his return he presented to the king of England. It is added that he went to the north pole by means of his skill in magic, or the black art. But this magic, or black art, may probably have been nothing more than a knowledge of the magnetical needle, or compass, found out about sixty years before, though not in common use till many years after."

To Study Indian Art.

New York.—Miss Mary Lois Kissell of the department of anthropology at the American Museum of Natural History is on her way to Arizona, where she plans to spend three months or more among the Pima Indians studying their basketry and textile work. She is the first woman to be sent out by the museum for scientific study.

At Tucson she will be joined by an Indian interpreter, who will accompany her to the country of the Pimas. Besides basket making, she will observe the processes of spinning and ropemaking, and she plans to bring back specimens of the raw material and finished work.

FOREIGNERS AT LECTURE

"The Stranger Within Our Gates" Subject of Dr. Peter Roberts at Y. M. C. A.

IMMIGRATION A BIG PROBLEM.

Address Summed up in Italian by Rev. Mr. Boretty—Plea for good Citizenship Through Study of Language and Laws.

Italians and other foreigners composed ninety-five per cent. of the audience which gathered to hear Dr. Peter Roberts lecture at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday evening on the topic, "The Stranger Within Our Gates," which was an able treatise on the immigration problem and its relation to national integrity.

Dr. Roberts, a self-made man, who was himself an immigrant, and who by indomitable courage, has surmounted the obstacles which face every poor and uneducated foreigner, was able through personal experiences, to bring home to his hearers the awful conditions existing among the masses of these people, especially in the mining regions of Pennsylvania and other congested districts.

The lecturer declared that the question of immigration is one of the greatest which confronts the country today and its solution is no harder than it was thirty years ago. Education in the language, customs and laws of the country is the method he would employ and which he declares to be the only safeguard from segregation and colonization. Foreigners of any one tongue herd together because they lack the courage to mingle with English-speaking people, because they do not understand the language. However, it is becoming more and more apparent every day that education in the language is overcoming the difficulty.

Of the forty different nationalities arriving in the country from week to week, less than one in five hundred persons can speak English. They are coming at the rate of a million a year; they leave their farms to become miners, or some other class of laborer, anything to get away from the oppression in their own country and in many cases to simply become the slave of the saloon. Photographs taken by the speaker showed such conditions in the coal mining regions that he declared ought to be the subject of a serious and thorough investigation by the government. The housing of the immigrant in these places is little short of criminal and it is not to be wondered at that outbreaks of discontent occur.

Mr. Roberts declared that the Roman Catholic church is doing a splendid work among these people, but it is impossible for any one denomination to care for them all. "A concentration of effort along educational lines," he said, "is the only practical way to meet the situation."

Many of the Italians present were pupils of the class in English being conducted by Miss Zoe Bateman at the Lincoln School, and to make sure that these young men might understand the main points of the lecture, Dr. Roberts asked Rev. Mr. Boretty, of the Italian Mission, to sum up the address in that language. Mr. Boretty did so, ending with an appeal to the students to work hard for their own and their friends' success, to become staunch and true American citizens and to remember with gratitude the splendid opportunities that are afforded them in Plainfield to learn not only the language, but the customs, laws and habits of their adopted country. Mr. Boretty was heartily applauded, as was also Dr. Roberts for his splendid address.

New Church Calendar.

The weekly church calendar of Trinity Reformed church appeared in an attractive folder shape yesterday, the front page containing a fine picture of the church as recently remodelled. There appears the names of the pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek, that of the pastor-emeritus, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck; Rev. J. Tucker Lansdale, pastor of Marconnier chapel, and that of Dr. Paul Wilberforce Harrison, the church missionary to Arabia. The inside pages are devoted to a chronicle of the weekly events, while on the last page is a complete list of the church organizations, including the consistory and officers of the Sunday-school and various societies. The calendar is in a more convenient form and is greatly appreciated by the congregation.

REV. MR. MAGUIRE TALKS TO EPISCOPAL GUILD

The Church of the Heavenly Rest, Fifth avenue, New York, was filled yesterday afternoon, when Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, addressed the members of St. Barnabas' Guild on missions. The guild is composed of nurses, women who have devoted their lives to the help of the sick.

Mr. Maguire in his discourse said that it is the highest ambition of woman to bring into the world a son, but that the second desire was to look with pity on the sons of others and make their way in the world easier to tread. He declared that the greatest power within human kin was given to the woman nurse who, as a missionary, can also alleviate the sufferings of those among whom she works, thereby accomplishing two objects—faith in divine doctrine and submission to God as a Saviour of mankind.

The other speakers were Bishops Greer and Lloyd.

Tonight Mr. Maguire will lecture on "Rome, Ancient and Modern," in the Clinton Avenue Reformed church, Newark.

S. S. CLASS SOCIAL.

Pleasant Evening Spent at Ernest Higgins'.

George W. Dufford's Sunday-school class No. 33, of Trinity Reformed church, held its second social at the home of Ernest Higgins, 116 Liberty street, Saturday evening. On account of illness, Mr. Dufford and some of the members of the class were unable to be present. After a business session, the evening was spent with books and games, which were followed with instrumental music by Miss Harriet Higgins, piano, and A. M. Higgins, violin.

The occasion was all the more enjoyable to the family as Mr. Higgins has just returned from a two months' sojourn at Fishkill, N. Y., where he had been erecting a private electric light plant. The class decided to hold its next social in two weeks at the home of Benjamin Cooley on Watchung avenue.

Those present Saturday evening were Alfred Shyerbeck, Millard McAfee, Raymond Roth, Charles Bateman, George Hummel, Wilbur Hoffman, Edward Weaver, Roscoe VanCamp, Ernest Higgins and Leonard Higgins.

CALLS X-SCIENCE A LIE

"The Whole Fabric Anti-Christian" Says Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire.

DENOUNCES THE BELIEF.

"Self Aggrandizement Was Her (Mrs. Eddy's) Chief Ambition and She Accomplished it at Expense of her Dupes."

In a sermon replete with reasons why people should cling only to the Gospel of Jesus Christ, Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, held an immense audience spell-bound yesterday morning. Besides arraigning spiritualism and some higher criticism as false lights he made his strongest attack against Christian Science, aiming to tear to shreds the teachings of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, showing in his opinion how falsely they represent the true religion and to what lengths the leader of the cult had gone to build up a private fortune of over a million dollars and obtaining for herself a pinnacle of influence based upon the credulity of the easily beguiled.

Three strong indictments were brought by Mr. Maguire against the teachings of Christian Science. First, it is contrary to common sense; second, that it is a minister to sin, and, third, that it is contrary to the Scriptures.

As being contrary to common sense, Mr. Maguire said that God has given man the power of thought and has endowed him with reason that he may arrive at logical conclusions. Christian Science says, "If delusion tells you that you have lost your memory you must contradict it. No faculty is lost." "A blind man only thinks he is blind." "A deaf man only thinks he is deaf." Mrs. Eddy herself is not dead, she is only in error. "O! what a foolish people."

As a minister to sin: "In one of Mrs. Eddy's books," said the speaker, "there is this question, 'Is marriage more right than celibacy?' Human knowledge says it is while Christian Science says not. Comment on this question is unnecessary.

Of the third indictment, Mr. Maguire said, "Scripture teaches (James 1:27) pure religion and undefiled, before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction and to keep oneself unspotted from the world." Did you ever hear of Mrs. Eddy doing anything like that? Did she ever give a home for the helpless or contribute anything to the support of anyone beside herself? No. None of these purely Christian things can be credited to her. Self aggrandizement was her chief ambition and she accomplished it at the expense of her dupes. In a word the whole fabric of Christian Science is anti-Christian and a lie. It takes the name Christian as a label to further its deception and Science as a blind to cover its superstition.

On page 328 of "Health and Science" it says "One sacrifice, however great, is insufficient to pay the debt of sin." How does this compare with Hebrews, 10-10, "By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all."

Mr. Maguire referred constantly to the books of the leader of the cult and advanced reasons confuting the doctrine contained in its pages by references to the Scriptures as found in the New Testament.

A Great Attraction.

The attractive announcement made by the "White Store" in today's paper is an indication of what may be expected of them the balance of this month. The remarkable values offered is a sure forerunner of a crowded store. This is a yearly clearance, and one that attracts attention from far and near. This firm will not carry over this season's goods to the next—hence the bargains. See adv. on second page.

PETTY THIEF CAUGHT EMERGING FROM STORE

Continued depredations at his store and from his delivery wagons caused W. W. Warnock, the West Front street baker, to set a watch that proved successful last night. four young boys were caught in the act of climbing out of a rear window of his place loaded with pies and cakes taken from the cases. Three of them managed to slip away in the darkness, but the fourth was nabbed by Joseph Pawson, a night baker. He begged hard for his freedom and it was given him temporarily after he had told his own name and those of his companions. The police will round up the culprits today.

Front street storekeepers have been annoyed by petty thefts of late and the same gang is believed to be responsible in all the instances. Mr. Warnock has been a regular victim, losing parcels from his wagons as well as from his place of business. The boys effected entrance last night by raising a rear window. They made an attempt to open the safe, according to the captured culprit, but without success.

COLLAPSE PROVES FATAL

Louis P. Starkweather Succumbs Following Nervous Breakdown.

WAS CAUSED BY OVERWORK.

On Duty Night and Day During Express Company Strike—Pneumonia Direct Cause of Death.

Louis P. Starkweather, aged forty-eight years, died yesterday at his home, 829 Second place, following an illness of one week with pleuro-pneumonia. He was connected with the United States Express Company for many years, and during the recent strike in New York suffered a nervous breakdown as a result of being on duty day and night for several weeks. His condition became such that he finally went to Florida, where it was hoped he would regain his health and strength. When he returned he was not greatly benefitted.

Soon afterward he suffered an attack of the grip and he was planning a trip to Bermuda, when he was taken ill with pleuro-penumonia. He failed rapidly, despite the best of medical aid and passed away yesterday.

Mr. Starkweather was born in New York city. As a boy he entered the service of the United States Express Company at Rochester, N. Y., as a messenger. Later he was transferred to New York city, and when the company entered the New England field, he was made general agent at Boston, and when the company retired from that field he was made general agent for the company in New York city, which position he held up to the time of his death.

Mr. Starkweather was a man of admirable qualities and enjoyed the friendship of a large number of people throughout the country. He was an attendant at the Unitarian church, this city. He is survived by a wife, two sons, Courtney N. and Louis Starkweather; also one brother, Harry Starkweather, of New York city, and a sister, Mrs. Mary Bethoff. The funeral will be held at the late residence, Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

SPARK IN OAKUM FIRE STARTS A BASEMENT FIRE.

An apprentice employed by P. F. Kaine, the North avenue plumber, took a lighted candle to the basement of the shop at 8:30 this morning to get some supplies. A spark dropped into a barrel of oakum and a brisk fire started before he could extinguish it. The flames spread to some shelving and in a moment volumes of smoke were pouring out of the sidewalk grating.

An alarm from box 13, sent in by Albert I. Littell, brought the firemen to the scene and the chemical engine soon had a stream on the blaze. A hydrant connection was also used for a few minutes.

The damage will amount to about $25 and is covered by insurance. The building is owned by Mrs. H. C. Drake.

Newark Salvationists Coming.

Captain Lily Patrick and Captain Goodwin, assisted by some of the members of the Newark Corps of the Salvation Army, will visit the local corps tomorrow night, and will conduct the service. The vested choir of the First Baptist church, under the direction of J. E. Skiff, organist and choirmaster, repeated the Christmas cantata at the church, last night, the special music being enjoyed by a large congregation. ## BOYS WON SILVER CUP AT CONGREGATIONAL S.S.

Yesterday was Honor Day at the Congregational Sunday-school and awards of prizes for punctual and perfect attendance and other things were made by superintendent John M. Whiton to the successful pupils of the school. A contest between the Reds and Blues who struggled for additions to the Sunday-school was won by the Reds, twenty-three new pupils being added to the rolls during the past three months. On Friday afternoon a party will be given to the winners, a class of girls.

In the individual contests for perfect attendance, Nettie Steiner, who won the pin last year was again a winner and to the pin given her last year was added a laurel wreath. Harold Mundy who was given honorable mention last year, won a pin for the past year's attendance. Three children, Leslie Warren, Florence Neilson and Carter Goodrich, received books for fulfilling their pledges of contributions for the year. The flag which is awarded each year for the best percentage of attendance was given to the class of young women taught by Miss Barre.

Greatest interest centered in the awarding of the silver cup, a gift of superintendent Whiton. The contest for this trophy was narrowed down to three classes and was finally awarded to James McClymont's class of thirteen boys who won by a very narrow margin. Miss Morgan's class was second, only three points behind.

Fred Andrews addressed the school after the presentation of the awards. He encouraged those who had not won anything but mention for their good work. The pastor, Rev. C. L. Goodrich preached a five minute sermon to the children of the school immediately after the regular morning service taking as a subject, "The Pearl of Great Price," from which an interesting legend was presented to the children. The story held the closest attention of the adults as well as the little ones.

HELD FOR ABANDONING THEIR TWO CHILDREN.

Isaac and Emma White, colored, were arraigned before Judge William G. DeMeza this morning on a charge of abandoning their two children, aged respectively five and three years. The complaint was made by Miss Mabelle Phillips in the case of the woman and by Alexander Ayers against the man.

Both prisoners pleaded guilty to the charge, but the case was put over until tomorrow morning at the request of Mr. Ayers in order that further inquiry may be made into it.

LEGISLATURE TOMORROW

135th Session of State Lawmakers' Body to Convene at Trenton.

MORE LAWYERS THAN USUAL.

A Week From Tuesday Wilson Will Be Inaugurated and a Week Later Vote On Senator Will Be Taken.

The one hundred and thirty-fifth session of the legislature will be organized in Trenton tomorrow; a week from that day Dr. Woodrow Wilson will be inaugurated as governor, and still a week further on, vote will be taken in each house for a successor to John Kean in the United States Senate for a term of six years from March 4 next. These events, no doubt will be productive of much interest and excitement and a large assemblage of politicians and other people will be attracted to the scene of action.

The new governor will be the first Democrat to occupy the executive chair in New Jersey in fifteen years—since George T. Werts vacated that office in 1896. Beginning with Governor Griggs, there has been an unbroken line of Republican executives since that year.

Ever since 1894, and until this year, the Republicans have had a majority on joint ballot in each legislature. The last time the Democrats had the legislature was in 1893, when they had a majority of 29 on joint ballot, and when James J. Smith, Jr., was chosen United States Senator in succession to Rufus Blodgett. It is a coincidence that the late Leon Abbott, who was twice governor, was a candidate for the senatorship against both Blodgett and Smith. From 1889 to 1893—five years—the Democrats held the legislature by a good working majority on joint ballot. In 1894 their atmosphere was darkened and continued so for seventeen long and weary years, until daylight appeared in 1911. Only once in that time—in 1907—had they control on one house—the assembly—and that by a bare majority of two.

The legislature this year will have a Democratic majority of twenty-one on joint ballot, provided, however, Mr. Low is recognized as the senator from Ocean. His right to the seat is contested by Thomas A Mathis, his predecessor in office. The senate will will contain twelve Republicans and nine Democrats, and the house forty-two Democrats and eighteen Republicans. The slate for the organization of the senate names Ernest R. Ackerman, of Union county, for president, and William C. Mundy, of Camden, for secretary. Edward Kenney, of Hudson, will be speaker of the house, and an Essex man will be given the clerkship.

Senator Cornish, of Warren, is the dean of the senate, being in his twelfth year of service. Senator Hand, of Cape May, is next in seniority, being in his eleventh year, and then comes Senators Brown, of Monmouth, and Bradley, of Camden, in their ninth year. Senator Nichols, of Cumberland, is unique in his legislative experience. He has served as an assemblyman in 1877-78, as senator for two terms, 1881-86, was again returned to the assembly in 1909-10, and to the senate in 1911 for a term of three years. He is 63 years old, the eldest in the senate, and for many years was a newspaper editor and proprietor. Senators Gebhardt, of Hunterdon, and Price, of Sussex, are eighth-year men, and the sixth-year senators are Plummer, of Salem; Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, and Ackerman, of Union. Senator Silzer, of Middlesex, is beginning his fifth year; Senators Fielder, of Hudson, and Leavitt, of Mercer, their fourth year, and Osborne, of Essex, and Gaunt, of Gloucester, their third year. The second-year senators are Lewis, of Burlington and Prince, of Passaic. The new senators are Edge, of Atlantic; Johnson, of Bergen and Low, of Ocean.

The second oldest senator in years is Price, of Sussex, who is 60; the next oldest are Bradley, who is 59; and Brown, 58. The youngest senator is Colonel Edge, who is only 37, and Leavitt and Osborne are each 39. Sixteen senators are natives of New Jersey, two of New York, and one each of Pennsylvania, Maryland and Georgia. There are seven lawyers, three manufacturers, two merchants and one each of the following: Publishers, civil engineer, author, farmer, banker, contractor, college professor, insurance broker and physician. Mr. Bradley has served as president of the senate and also as speaker of the house, and Mr. Frelinghuysen was president last. Nine senators have served as assemblymen. Dr. Prince was speaker in 1909. Mr. Edge was the majority leader of the house last year, and he served as secretary of the senate four years—from 1901 to 1904. The senator who was returned with the largest plura-

SAGE FOUNDATION WAR AGAINST LOAN SHARKS.

The Russell Sage Foundation Saturday instituted the first of a series of suits in a country-side campaign to put out of business every usurious money-lender in the United States and to establish a series of honest loan societies, in which there will be no extortion.

Five suits were filed Saturday and twelve more are to be filed today. In addition the co-operation of the district attorney's office in criminal prosecutions will be asked. The filing of the suits follows raids made by agents of the foundation on a number of the usurious money-lenders.

There are 400 chattel and salary loan companies in New York city alone. Only one of them is said by the officials of the foundation to comply with the law. Cities in this State are filled with the so-called usurious money-lenders and according to Sage Foundation officials all will be wiped out.

To aid in eliminating the loan sharks, the foundation is encouraging the establishment of loan societies run on model lines. These institutions will not be financed by the foundation, but by private parties.

N. P. H. S. SWAMP NEW BRUNSWICK H. S.

The basketball team from the North Plainfield High School had an easy time of it Saturday afternoon with the New Brunswick High School five, the locals winning the contest by a score of 37 to 4. The borough boys did most of their scoring in the first half and then loafed in the second half. Stine and Bailey threw the field goals for North Plainfield, and Manley and Voorhees did the work for their team. The halves were fifteen and twenty minutes. The lineup:

N. P. H. S.—Forwards, Walker and Stine; centre, Bailey; guards, Townley, Wyckoff, C. Taylor and Abrams.

N. B. H. S.—Forwards, Wagner and Schultheis; centre, Manley; guards, Voorhees and Howell.

PREVENTION OF RABIES IS TREATED IN REPORT.

That rabies in a human being is a disease which cannot be cured after it has progressed far enough to produce symptoms which are recognizable, but can always be prevented if the patient is treated by the Pasteur method soon after being bitten, is the statement contained in the annual report of the State Board of Health, just issued.

Continuing, the report says:

"Unfortunately, this treatment (Pasteur) is costly and not unattended by danger, and the importance of prompt examination of animals which have bitten human beings is, therefore, evident. The examination of these specimens exposes the person making them to considerable danger, and the bacteriologists attached to the laboratory deserve commendation for their willingness to risk their lives in the interest of the citizens of the State.

"During 1909 and 1910 seventy-one specimens were examined in the bacteriological laboratory for the purpose of ascertaining whether animals from which they were obtained were suffering from rabies. This disease is prevalent in some sections of the State, and the number of cases is rapidly increasing. The board regards the examination of animals suspected of having had the disease as of much importance, inasmuch as such animals rarely reach the laboratory unless they have bitten human beings.

FRIGHTENED TO DEATH; WAS BITTEN BY DOG.

Richard A. Walsh, eight years old, died in convulsions on Thursday night at his home, Fulton street, Brooklyn, through terror, as believed, of hydrophobia following the bite of a dog on the right leg while he was playing in front of his home on December 18.

The bite was a slight one. The wound was cauterized at St. John's Hospital and the boy returned to his home. His parents felt no alarm and sent him to school as usual.

The boy, however, worried considerably over the dog bite and if he happened to see a dog on his return from school would become frightened and reach home in an excited condition. His nervousness steadily increased and a few days ago became so pronounced that Dr. F. C. Gay, of 7 Hancock street, was called in. He could do nothing to relieve the young patient. Dr. Gay says that the case was one of the most peculiar that ever came under his observation and that as there were no symptoms sufficiently developed to diagnose as hydrophobia he was compelled to certify that death was due to nervous shock and acute mania due to a dog bite.—New York Sun.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY BILL TO BE EXAMINED.

The Employers' Liability Commission, appointed under an act of last winter, met at the State Housue today to consider the draft of a bill which has been prepared by Assistant Attorney-General Nelson B. Gaskill. Should the measure, as drawn, meet with the approval of the commission, it will be submitted to the Legislature together with a report advocating its enactment and outlining the views of the commission upon the subject generally.

It is understood to be the purpose of the commission to embody in a comprehensive bill a number of the modifications and changes in the present law which have been demanded from time to time. How far the commission will be willing to go in meeting the popular demand will probably be determined at today's conference. The commission is composed of William D. Dickson, of Monclair; Samuel Cosgrove, of Elizabeth; Colonel Walter E. Edge, of Atlantic City, and Edward K. Mills, of Morristown.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Zimmer, of Brooklyn, have returned home after a visit with relatives in the borough.

ASSEMBLYMAN ALYEA TO VOTE FAR MARTINE.

Under pressure brought to bear by the Rutherford Democratic Club, Assemblyman-elect Garrabrant R. Alyea has made public the fact that he would stand by James E. Martine for United States Senator. Mr. Alyea states "that in my opinion owing to the large vote given Mr. Martine at the primary he is the logical candidate for United States Senatorn and unless extraordinary reasons be forthcoming why another should be elected in his stead every Democratic Senator and Assemblyman is in duty bound to vote for him."

Assemblyman-elect William H. Hinners did not commit himself. He writes, "I am going to do just what I said before election and that is, represent the people who sent me to Trenton. I do not believe in saying a whole lot before I take my seat, but I will say that you have no need to worry as far as I am concerned."

The club has indorsed Martine for Senator and its members are working hard for him.

Salvation Army Meeting.

At the Salvation Army headquarters on Saturday night a novel scheme was adopted to get the wayfarer and drunk into close touch with better things and the attempt was not without success. During the evening Captain Hewitt read from an interesting book stories from the lives of those who had been saved from drunken degradation. These stories were interspersed with specially prepared songs and at intervals hot coffee and cake was distributed among the audience. At least one was brought to the penitential altar.

Italian Mission Meetings.

The meetings of the Italian missions will hereafter be conducted in the auditorium of the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday. Yesterday morning about seventy Italians attended the service and heard an interesting sermon by Rev. Mr. Boretty, the minister in charge of the mission. The little congregation expects within the next few months to acquire a building of their own in which to continue the work under the auspices of the First Presbyterian church.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

David Bispham, who will appear at the McIntyre concert in the Plainfield High School, Thursday night, is an admirable raconteur and does not in the least mind telling stories upon himself. Years ago, when in business in Philadelphia, and long before he thought seriously of entering upon a musical career, an aged Quaker, a friend of his grandfather, was conversing on the street with a younger man, when the now famous singer passed by absorbed in deep thought and quietly whistling. The aged Friend, looking after him, shook his head and sadly remarked: "Does thee see that young fellow? Well, that's David Scull's grandson, and he ain't a-going to come to any good, for he's always fooling around after music." Bispham's local appearance has aroused widespread interest among musicians and music-lovers. Mr. McIntyre has made arrangements for automobiles and carriages to use the porte cochere at the high school that evening.

NON VULT PLEA IN OCEY SNEAD CASE

Mrs. Caroline B. Martin, one of the two surviving sisters indicted for the alleged murder of Mrs. Ocey W. M. Smead, who was found dead in a bathtub at East Orange, through her counsel today pleaded non vult to manslaughter before Judge Ten Eyck in Newark and was remanded until Saturday next for sentence. The case of Mrs. Mary W. Snead, the other surviving sister, did not come up in court today. It is generally believed that the indictment against her will not be pressed.

G. O. P. ASSEMBLYMEN DECIDE TO 'STAND PAT'

The Republican tradition of solidarity is to be respected by the Republican members of the State Assembly in the selection of a candidate for the United States Senatorship from New Jersey. Such was the outcome of the voting at the conference in the Hotel Dunlop at Atlantic City yesteray, when the fifteen members present out of the eighteen who compose the Republican minority decided as a unit to support the candidate selected by the caucus to be held at Trenton tomorrow morning. With this decisive vote vanishes any likelihood that former Senator James Smith, Jr., in his fight for return to the upper chamber at Washington will have Republican support.

The result of the conference leaves the Democrats to grapple with their perplexities as they may. Any Republican leaders who may have been of a mind to swing some valuable votes to Smith are revising their plans this morning.

It had been proposed to make yesterday's meeting a caucus. The majority of the legislators, however, favored a joint meeting with the Senate members at Trenton, and that arrangement was substituted.

Assemblyman Thomas F. McCran of Paterson, slated as floor leader of the minority, issued this statement at the close of the deliberations:

"Republican members of the Assembly for the coming term will stand together and support the man of their party selected at the party caucus to be held on Tuesday. Any talk of Republican support for a Democrati leader of any faction for the United States Senatorship is all bosh. The Republican party has succeeded through organization in former years, and I am empowered to say that this strength will not be thrown away when the party is forced into the minority. The Republican nominee for the United States Senate, whoever he may be, will receive the full vote of the Republican members of the Assembly, and I believe will also get the votes of the Republican Senators.

"The meeting today also decided that the policy of Republican Assemblymen will be to support any measures proved good, no matter whether fathered by Democrats or Republicans, during the coming session."

About Governor-elect Wilson's was on the bosses the Assemblyman would say nothing direct.

"Governor Wilson and his backers must settle their own troubles without Republican help," he said. "The vote given to Governor Wilson by the people of New Jersey was flattering enough to warrant him in believing that he is entitled to a certain amount of dominance in his party. We members of the minority in the State Assembly can therefore retire for the present and leave the dominant faction to solve the great problems now facing both the legislators and the people of the State."

Walter F. Melick.

Walter F. Melick, a well known resident of Alton, died in Muhlenberg hospital, this morning following an operation performed a week ago. He conducted a truck farm and also the Alton general store. He was fifty-eight years old. Surviving him are his wife and one son, Frederick Melick. Mrs. Dennis Dugan, of Grove street, is a sister-in-law.

Will Repeat Lecture.

Dr. W. H. Murray will repeat the "first aid" lecture given in the Y. W. C. A. last Thursday night, before the afternoon class tomorrow at 3:30.

Iron cloth is largely used today by tailors everywhere for the purpose of making the collars of coats sit properly. This cloth is manufactured from steel wool and has the appearance of having been woven from horsehair.

DECLARES BOROUGH DOG HAD HYDROPHOBIA

The small dog belonging to Mrs. Rose, of Rockview avenue, which was sent to Dr. Voorhees' animal hospital, at Somerville, last week, after running amuck in the borough, was found to be suffering from rabies, Saturday. The doctor immediately killed the dog and sent word to the North Plainfield authorities.

The afflicted dog bit Miss Bertha Bremmer, of Harrison avenue, on the lip as she attempted to pick it up. It was thought she had received prompt medical attendance but such was not the fact. The first a physician saw of the wound was when she called at Dr. Dundon's office, last night. The wound had then partially healed up. Dr. Dundon immediately made arrangements to have her admitted to the Pasteur institute for treatment and she went there this morning. The girl's mother was also bitten by the animal on the finger but the skin was not broken.

The borough police have learned that five dogs and maybe more were bitten by the canine before it was caught. All have been chained up for surveillance and owners are instructed to watch to be on guard.

SMITH SAYS WILSON JUGGLES THE TRUTH

James Smith, Jr., in a sarcastic reply Friday night to the speech of Woodrow Wilson in Jersey on Thursday, brands as falsehoods the statements of the Governor-elect that he, Smith, is allied with the special interests, and that he held a conference in Philadelphia recently with David Baird and Louis Kuehnie. He taunts Mr. Wilson with hisfa ilure to answer his charges that he had spoken of the primary law as "a farce," and had also said that the selection of Martine would be a "disgrace to the State," and he asks why he does not name the man who informed him that Smith would not be a candidate for United States Senator. He charges Mr. Wilson with trickery, and deceit in not doing so.

"What a spectacle for public contemplation," says Mr. Smith. "Here is a man chosen by the people as the chief executive of the State. His duties, if they are conscientiously performed, will keep him well engaged. But meanwhile he must have relaxation, so he rushes into the Senatorial fray. He talks of principle to some and of his power to others. Now his conscience is at work; later, he puts aside conscience and tries the arts of untruthfulness and deceit. In private he laughs at the primary law and scowls at its preference. In public he treats both as holy. In theory he is swayed by lofty impulses. In practice he is using the baser emotions to accomplish his purpose."

INAUGURATION SEATS SCARCE.

Only Twelve Allotted to Each Jersey Legislator to Hear Gov. Wilson.

It having been arranged that each Representative in the State Legislature shall reserve only twelve tickets for the inauguration of Governor Wilson in Taylor Opera House, Trenton, on Tuesday, January 17, Mercer county Democrats find themselves practically barred unless they are willing to participate in the scramble for gallery seats.

There are only 1,100 reserved seats for the entire State, and 972 of these are to be distributed to the Legislature. Inasmuch as Mercer county has one Democratic Assemblyman and no Senator the Mercer Democrats have only twelve passes to divide.

Gen. Bird W. Spencer, of Passaic, will be in charge of the seating of the audience, and he will be assisted by Col. Charles A. Reed, Col. William Libbey, Col. William A. Tewee, Col. David M. Flynn, Col. Arthur Rowland, Major Winfield S. Price, Major Charles H. Grant, Major Alvin H. Grant, Major Daniel T. Matthews, Capt. Adolph Pfiel and Lieut. Paul E. Loutram.

Adjt. Gen. Sadler has issued orders for Company L of Princeton to report for duty as the personal escort for the new Governor and a salute of seventeen guns will be fired at noon in the rear of the State House.

Silk Company Elects Officers.

The Watchung Silk Company, at its annual meeting held at the mill this afternoon, elected the following directors for the coming year: Wm. R. Codington, B. Frank Coriell, Allen B. Laing, Eugene M. Laing, J. Fred MacDonald, W. W. Vail and Henry Leifke. The officers will be elected at the next meeting.

"Bob" Davis Dying.

The physicians in attendance on Robert Davis, the Democratic leader of Hudson county, announced last night that his death was only a matter of hours, and that he was slowly but surely starving, just as did the late United States Senator Elkins, owing to septic poisoning resulting from cancer of the stomach.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Fisk, who were married in New York, last week, are stopping at Lakewood for the present. They will leave in a short time for the west.

QUEENSBORO BRIDGE.

Is the Greatest Structure of Its Kind In the World and Cost $20,000,000 to Build.

Measured by the combined length and capacity of its five main spans, the Queensboro bridge, across the East river from Fifty-ninth street, New York, to Ravenswood, Queens, is the greatest bridge in the world. Including approaches, its total length is 8,600 feet, width 86 feet and greatest height over 300 feet above the water. It crosses from shore to shore, 135 feet above the river, with three enormous spans of 1,182 feet, 630 feet and 984 feet, the middle one reaching across the full width of Blackwell's island. Besides these there are two more great "anchor" spans, one at each end, wholly over dry land, with a length of 3,724 feet for the five, which together contain over 105,000,000 pounds of steel. No other spans in this country, except suspension bridges, approach the longest of these, and the only trussed span in the world which exceeds it is the Forth bridge, which, although 1,710 feet long, has a capacity for only two railroad tracks, less than one-third of this. There are two decks, the lower carrying a wide driveway and four electric car tracks and the upper one two sidewalks and two elevated railroad tracks and having in all an estimated capacity of 200,000,000 car passengers and millions of vehicles and pedestrians annually. It cost over $20,000,000.—Exchange.

RULE OF THE SEA.

Old Whaling Law Applied to a Twice Caught Cod.

That etiquette is observed among the fishermen that journey to the fishing banks was discovered by an amateur angler on his first trip.

The amateur hooked a codfish, but his line parted just as the fish was above the water. Back fell the codfish, carrying with him two sinkers and the hook.

Twenty minutes later another angler cried out that he had captured a cod with two sinkers and a hook. The amateur went up to the angler, who appeared to be an old salt, and asked for his hook and sinkers, which had his name stamped on them. He was surprised when the old salt told him to take the fish also.

According to the rules generally followed on the fishing boats, the second angler was entitled to the fish, but the hooks and sinkers should be returned to their owner. The old angler explained why he wanted to give up the fish.

It seems that he had followed the sea a great part of his life. When a young man he was a whaler, and, according to whaling law, a dead whale belongs to the ship whose name appears on the harpoon that killed it. Therefore the old salt figured that the amateur owned the codfish he had taken.—New York Sun.

Euler's Wonderful Memory.

Leonhard Euler, who was born in 1707 and died in 1783 at St. Petersburg, where he spent his life as a teacher of great power and as a prolific writer, was an instance of the genuine mathematician endowed with almost superhuman powers. He left more than 200 manuscript treatises on his favorite subject, and the bulk of the works published by his academy between 1727 and 1783 were from his pen. In his old age he was totally blind. Then he carried in his memory a table of the first six powers of the "series of natural numbers up to 100."

It is related that on one occasion two of Euler's students attempted to calculate a converging series. As they advanced they found they disagreed in the result by a unit in the fifteenth figure. The question was referred to Euler, who decided to make the calculation. He did this mentally, and his result was found to be correct.—New York Tribune.

The Codmoppe.

Herrings are still eaten as much as in the days when Yarmouth had to send a hundred yearly to the king, baked in four and twenty pasties. But where is the codmoppe gone, and what was it like when kings dined off it in Lent? "Codmoppe sauce Hollandaise" would sound most intriguing on a Savoy menu. More original still would be the "rostid perpes" of a Henry V. banquet, which was the "sea swine" of the unrefined Saxon, the "porco marino" of the mediaeval ecclesiast. A maister coke gives an early receipt for "puddyng of purpasse," another teaches how to "salte porpyesse and seele," another how to "undertraunche that purpos." From which it may be seen that enterprise extended also to the spelling of the porpoise.—London Chronicle.

Candymakers' Tricks.

An Atchison man went into a candy factory. He was surprised to see one of the candymakers reach with his bare hand into a pot of boiling candy. He brought out a handful of the boiling fluid. He was testing its consistency. He first put his hand in a pail of water. After he had jerked out his hand he put it back in the water. The Atchison man tried the same thing and did it without getting burned.—Atchison Globe.

Another Boring Question.

"I say, pa, is a man from Poland called a Pole?"

"Yes, my son."

"Then, pa, why isn't a man from Holland called a Hole?"—Comic Cuts.

Insult Added.

Big Man (with a grouch)—Will you be so kind as to get off my feet? Little Man (with a bundle)—I'll try, sir. Is it much of a walk?—Cleveland Leader.

FLOATING PALACES.

Galleys of the Hindu Rajahs on the Ganges River Gorgeously Decorated With Gold, Silver and Jewels.

Notwithstanding the fact that India has for many years been under the rule of England, the conditions and manner of living have not greatly changed in many parts of it. On the Ganges river in the northwest provinces the tourist will see, if he approaches Benares at the right time, the same type of craft that carried pilgrims to this most sacred of Hindoo cities hundreds of years ago. These are floating palaces or magnificent galleys on which rajahs journey to Benares and which serve as a test of their pious zeal.

These galleys differ hardly an iota from the vessels used for the same purpose by rajahs who died centuries past. Incrusted with gold, silver and pearl and decorated with tapestries embroidered with precious metals and jewels, these wonderful modern-ancient vessels lend a festive touch to the river scene. But their sumptuousness does not prevent the richest rajah who possesses one from bathing in the same water, surrounded by 500,000 poorer pilgrims, even though the sacred river is thus piously filled with myriads of microbes. And he will fill great jars with the water in which the pilgrims have washed their bodies and drink it.

In contrast to these floating palaces are the barges of the poorer classes. The system of caste in India imposes upon the riverman the obligation of living on the water as his ancestors lived, so his shabby looking craft is also his home. Usually he has in his floating house a small chapel dedicated to a secondary divinity who personifies the river on which he exists.—Popular Mechanics.

ABSENTMINDED.

A Question the College Professor Could Not Decide Himself.

There is a highly esteemed professor in one of the big colleges who is even more absentminded than most geniuses. His son is a student in the same college. At the beginning of a lecture to his class one morning a look of perplexity overspread the professor's face, and his hearers noted that his thoughts seemed to be wandering from the subject he was discussing. At length he paused for a moment and quietly requested that his son be summoned without delay. The young student, startled by such an unusual message from his father, hastened to him, expecting to find him dead or dying. The professor had not finished his lecture by the time his son arrived and was explaining things in his usual clear and convincing manner. At last the son succeeded in attracting his father's attention, and this extraordinary dialogue took place:

"John, I am surprised," growled the distinguished educator. "What do you mean by interrupting me in this way?"

"Why, father, don't you remember? You sent for me to come at once."

"Oh, yes, to be sure. Now I recollect. It was my fear of annoying your mother. You know how it distresses her, dear soul, if I fail to appear at my meals. I got thinking about this when I started lecturing this morning, and I sent for you to set my doubts at rest. John, please tell me have I had my breakfast yet this morning?"—New York Press.

Not Even the First Step.

Mr. Morse, having bought a new bicycle of the most improved pattern, presented his old one to Dennis Halloran, who did errands and odd jobs for the neighborhood. "You'll find the wheel useful when you're in a hurry, Dennis," he said.

The young Irishman was loud in his thanks, but regarded the wheel doubtfully.

"I mistrust 'twill be a long while befoor I can ride it," he said.

"Why, have you ever tried?" asked Mr. Morse.

"I have," said Dennis gloomily. "A fri'nd lint me the loan o' his whiles he was having the moomps. 'Twas t'ree weeks I had it, an' what wid practicing night an' morning I niver got so I could balance mesilf standing still, let alone riding on it."—Youth's Companion.

How He Lost Out.

"It served me right," sighed the bachelor. "I ought to have remembered that women have no sense of humor."

"What's gnawing you now?" queried that inquisitive friend.

"Why, during leap year a pretty girl with an obese fortune proposed to me, and I said 'No,'" explained the bachelor, "thinking, of course, she would take it for granted that my 'No' meant 'Yes,' but she simply let it go at that."—Chicago News.

THE HARVEST MOON

A Novelization of the Drama of AUGUSTUS THOMAS By GEORGE HENRY PAYNE

Copyright, 1909, by Augustus Thomas

"Oh, no, I can't!" the girl exclaimed. "You do not know."

"You left Mrs. Winthrop's house this morning. I have asked them to be there."

"But it is a family matter," said the girl, "and it's about my mother, and I don't want to see all those people."

The old man took her hand and told her that, as he had been her friend in the past, he asked her to trust him this time and to say whatever she had to say to Professor Fullerton not only before Aunt Cornelia, but before Mrs. Winthrop and the rest of Cornelia's friends.

"It is awfully hard," said the girl. "I don't mind myself, but it doesn't seem fair to my mother."

"It is fair to your mother," said Vavin. "I knew her. Hush!" he added as she turned to him in surprise and Holcomb came up.

Vavin had left word at the hotel that Fullerton and the rest of the party should be shown to his room the moment they arrived. They were waiting when the three travelers entered.

"Dora, my daughter!" exclaimed Fullerton, rushing up to her. "What in heaven's name has happened?"

"I think," said Mrs. Winthrop, "that it is possibly some family matter to be talked over that doesn't need the presence of outsiders."

"If you do not mind," said Vavin, "it is a family matter which has had the assistance of outsiders and now needs them as witnesses. Will you not tell them now, little Dora, why you left Mrs. Winthrop's this morning the way you did?"

"I cannot," said the girl, choking.

"Then," said Vavin, "I will."

"You!" exclaimed Cornelia.

"Yes, I," said Vavin. "I will save you the trouble, Miss Fullerton. You went home last night and you announced your marriage to Mr. Holcomb. Yes? You were congratulated by all"—he indicated the Winthrops—"but this lady. After you had gone to your room she called on you. She was with you twenty minutes. There were loud words. She told you things. She told you things about your mother—as she knew them. You did not sleep all night. You took the first train in the morning to see this man, your father."

"She told me that he was not my father," said the girl bravely.

Professor Fullerton arose. "You said that, Cornelia?" he exclaimed excitedly.

"What if I did. It's true, isn't it?"

Professor Fullerton swore. "I have stood a great deal from you because I thought you intended to do what was right"—

"She was going to disgrace our household as her mother had already done."

"That is what she said last night—'as my mother had done.' She said that my mother"—

"I said that your mother was not a married woman when you were born."

"Say it isn't true," pleaded Dora to Fullerton.

"What difference does it make?" said Fullerton, putting his arm around Dora. "It is just the same as if you were my own daughter."

Vavin took Fullerton's arm from around Dora.

"I think it is at this time that I shall tell what I know," he said. "I have with me a man who has been my servant for many years. 'Henri!'" he called. "He will bear me out." Vavin continued as the man entered, "in what I say.

"Mademoiselle is very like her mother, is she not?" he said.

"She is, monsieur."

"Henri noticed the resemblance when we first came here. He was garcon for the man who—mademoiselle, he was the servant of your father."

"My father?" repeated Dora.

"You mean this?" said Fullerton.

"Wait a minute," continued Vavin. "This man and Mme. Fullerton met in Paris. The French law says that a divorced woman must wait nearly a year before she may marry, and so she and this man, the master of Henri there, went to England, and they were married there after Mme. Fullerton obtained her divorce from you, professor. They lived there for awhile and then came back to Paris. There was a quarrel, a domestic quarrel, such as frequently occurs between people who are very much in love. The man was French, remember. He was foolish; he was young. He tells his wife that in France a marriage in a foreign country by a French citizen would be legal only if it were registered in France within three months after the return. He tells her this for what he thinks is a joke and thinks he will frighten her, and he says he will not register the marriage, and he goes out one night, saying he is not coming back. He is a scoundrel, but he did not mean any harm. But when he comes back she is gone. She hides herself in that little stone house by the river at Montigny-sur-Loing. He is not able to find her. He does not know that there is a little baby. He does not know even that she is dead.

"One day among the girls and young ladies at the Lycee Fenelon he came suddenly en visage with the same face. He asked the instructress, 'Who is this little Americaine?' and was told that her name was Miss Fullerton."

"At the Lycee Fenelon!" exclaimed Dora.

"Yes, my child; at the Lycee Fenelon. I asked who you were and was told you were Mlle. Fullerton. You may not have noticed, but I was no longer able to talk. I am that scoundrel of whom I have been talking, but God has been very good to me."

"Then you are my father?" she said.

"One moment," said Professor Fullerton. "I couldn't doubt for a moment, Vavin, but this is really so extraordinary. Why is it that you have never spoken of this to me before?"

The old man shrugged his shoulders. "She thought you were her father," he said, "and you loved her. A man can only be really greatly selfish once. I had learned something, Fullerton which I fear you have only just learned. As far as I knew, this girl was perfectly happy. It was not for me to intrude. There was no demand for fatherhood, and you seemed to be doing your duty in that direction. You seemed to be atoning for your crime, and I thought it but right that I should atone for mine."

"My crime?" exclaimed Fullerton.

"Yes, your crime. You drove the mother of this girl away from you with your suggestion that she was frivolous and foolish. I drove her away from me with my suggestion that she was not a wife when she was yet a mother"—

Dora threw her arms about him and kissed him.

"This is worth a great deal of suffering to me, Fullerton, and believe me, my friends, I have had some suffering in my years. But this makes me very forgiving. I am almost on the point of forgiving even you, Miss Cornelia Fullerton."

Cornelia came forward with her hand outstretched.

"It is all right, Miss Fullerton," said Vavin. "The overworked conscience is never quite prepared for a surprise. Intimate association with the great Almighty God has given them the instinct of prevision."

They were alone, these four—Vavin, Dora, Fullerton and Holcomb.

"It is a queer world," said Fullerton after Vavin had telephoned down that his daughter, Miss Dora Vavin, would have a room that night at the hotel.

"It is a queer world, my friend. You presume to teach in a college. I presume to write for the people of France, but both of us are aching all the time for some one to be simple with us, to teach us. Let this be a lesson to you," he said, turning to Holcomb. "In your plays, my son, let us help them to look up."

* * * * * * *

On the border of the forest of Fontainebleau, about three kilometers down from the historic town of Grez, is Montigny-sur-Loing.

Years before M. Vavin had built a little house on the very bank of the river, where in the afternoons he had his tea, and now he walked up and down between this summer house and the garden path, his notebook and pencil in hand.

Suddenly the door of the chatean opened and Holcomb came running down the steps. He threw his arms around Vavin and the two men were locked in an embrace that was as affectionate as only men can be.

"It's a daughter," said Holcomb, and the two men looked frankly into one another's eyes and laughed while happy tears filled their eyes.

"It is not a droll God, my boy," said the elder man. "It is a great God, who is here in this valley that he made for peace and love, for hope and beauty. He is a great God—that here, where I was most punished by the death of the woman that I loved, here on the bank of this most peaceful of streams, the daughter of that woman—my daughter—should make me so happy."

THE END

A Helpful Suggestion.

The young man had married the rich man's daughter and wasn't killing himself with work to support her. One day the father called him up to talk to him.

"Look here," he said emphatically, "why don't you go to work?"

"I don't have to," the son-in-law replied, with brazen effrontery.

"Well, you will have to."

"Why will I?"

"Because, sir, I can't live always to support you."

"But you will leave us something?"

"Not much, I won't. There won't be anything to leave."

The son-in-law was alarmed.

"Great Jupiter!" he exclaimed. "You don't mean to tell me that you have nothing?"

"That's about it."

The son-in-law devoted himself to profound thought for several seconds.

"I have a suggestion to offer," he said in a businesslike manner.

"What is it?" asked the old gent.

"Well, I suggest that you take out, say, a £20,000 life insurance on yourself to save wear and tear on my mind."—London Answers.

lity was Mr. Fielder, who had 23,743, and the one with the lowest (if he holds the seat) is Mr. Low, who had only eighty-one votes to spare.

With a clear majority of twenty-four in the house, the Democrats should have things pretty much their own way unless the prospect should be marred by factional strife. An experienced legislator—John J. Matthews, of Hunterdon—will be the majority leader. In 1887 and 1888 he was a member from Union county and in 1889 and 1890 was clerk of the house. He is now serving his third term as a representative from Hunterdon and at the recent election he had no Republican opposition. He is considered to be a good parliamentarian and a strategist. Still, with all his skill, he is likely to meet with trouble when he crosses swords with that aggressive young man from Passaic, Thomas F. McCran, who will be the minority leader and who made quite a record last year as a debater.

There are nineteen lawyers in the house and seven in the Senate. In view of this remarkable fact, there should be assurance that all laws enacted will be devoid of constitutional defects. Essex, remarkable to relate, has only two lawyers in its delegation—Mylod and Boettner; while Hudson has seven, Monmouth three and Passaic two. The youngest member—Hendrickson, of Monmouth—is a lawyer and is a son of the former supreme justice of that name. Among the solons will be found a physician, a druggist and a cemetery superintendent; but there is no undertaker. And the cemetery man is the oldest member. There are six farmers, a better showing in that industry than in former years; six are merchants, and there are four real estate dealers, manufacturers and merchants; three electricians and two civil engineers, salesmen and printers. There is one each as follows: Secretary, editor, railroad conductor, clerk and milk dealer.

Those members in their fourth term of services are, besides Mr. Kenny, the Messrs. Radcliffe and Layden, of Passaic. The third-year men are James and Davidson, of Hudson; Matthews, of Hunterdon; Mather, of Mercer; Ramsay, of Middlesex, and Meyer, of Sussex. There are fourteen second-year members and thirty-three entirely new to legislation. Mr. Backus is the only Essex man with legislative experience, he having served in 1907. Mr. Alyea, of Bergen, is the oldest member, he being 69, and the next in years are Mr. Coles, of Camden; Mr. Bunn, of Morris, and Mr. Cole, of Warren. Nine are over 50 and two under 30, the latter being Hendrickson and Taylor, both of Monmouth. The average age of the sixty assemblymen is 42 years and that of the twenty-one senators, 49 years.

The natives of New Jersey are 36; New York, 11; Pennsylvania, 4; Connecticut, 2, and Massachusetts and Virginia, 1 each. Only four are foreign-born—England, 2; Ireland, 1, and Prince Edwards Island, 1. Only four Essex and four Hudson men are natives of the counties they represent. Speaker Kenny is an Essex man.

DEATH OF ROBERT DAVIS

Funeral of New Jersey Democratic Leader Takes Place Thursday.

BRIEF SKETCH OF HIS CAREER.

An Irish Emigrant Who Arose to Power and Wealth—Long the "Boss" of Hudson County Democracy.

Robert Davis, Democratic leader of Hudson county, died at his home, 239 Grove street, Jersey City, shortly after noon yesterday. He had been ill for several months of cancer of the stomach, and his death had been momentarily expected since last Saturday. His bride of only a few days and the other members of his family, including his four sons and two daughters-in-law, besides a number of political friends, were with him. The Rev. Fathers Keaney and Wallace of St. Peter's church and Father Tor Woort, of St. Mary's church, gave the last rites of the church and said prayers at his bedside.

Mr. Davis had been under treatment at the German Hospital in New York city about six weeks ago. On Dec. 23 he paid his last visit to the City Hall. On Jan. 3, against the wishes of his friends, he married Miss Annie Toppin, she being his third wife. As soon as his death was announced the flags on the City Hall, Jersey City, and on the Davis Club House, a political organization, named after the elader, were half-masted. The funeral will be held from St. Peter's Roman Catholic church, at Grand and Van Vorst streets, Jersey City, on Thursday morning. Interment will be in the Hudson county Catholic cemetery.

It was said last night that Mr. Davis had not made a will since 1895. He had married twice since then. His estate is said to be valued at $1,000,000. He owned seventy-five pieces of real estate in Jersey City and a large number of valuable securities in Jersey City institutions. Mr. Davis' term as City Collector was concurrent with that of Mayor Witpenn, which will end on Jan. 1, 1912. The Mayor will appoint Mr. Davis' successor.

Last night New Jersey politicians were discussing the probable successor of Mr. Davis as Democratic leader of Hudson county. Among those considered most eligible are County Chairman Hennessey and Sheriff Kelly.

Ex-Senator James Smith, Jr., had this to say last night of the death of the Democratic leader:

"Of him it may be truly said that he held sacred his given word. He has been maligned by some; he was respected and loved by many. His rugged honesty, his unselfish purpose, and a life's record of fairness to foe and unshaken fidelity to friend will long be held in sacred memory by many in this State who are now bowed in grief that the death has come to this charitable man and stanchest of friends."

Robert Davis was born in Carlou, Ireland, on March 4, 1848, and was one of eleven children. His father was William Davis and his mother Eliza Kinling.

In 1876 he married Margaret O'Rourke, the sister of a Tammany politician, and they had six children—William J., Robert, Jr., George E., Joseph, Charles, and Elizabeth, the two latter dying in infancy. Mrs. Davis died in 1895, and in 1903 Davis married Mary E. Dugan. One son, Hugh, was born. His third wife, whom he married on January 3, 1911, was Miss Toppin, a sister of Police Capt. Nicholas Toppin, of Jersey City.

Mr. Davis became a member of a district election board when he was twenty years old and was serving as such when he cast his first vote. He served on various district boards until 1875, and in those years gathered an inside knowledge that made him familiar with politics. Four years after his first appearance in politics he became a member of the Hudson county Democratic Committee and stayed a member either as a worker or its director for the rest of his life.

He first became active in politics in 1883 when he ran for Fire Commissioner of Jersey City and was defeated by John Brennan. In 1885 he was elected Alderman and was re-elected in the following year. In 1887 he was elected Sheriff after a bitter fight over David W. Lawrence, the Republican, and Cornelius J. L. Cronan, the Independent Democratic candidate. He served a three-year term, and in 1891 was appointed Police Judge by the late Gov. Leon Abbett.

In 1893 he was appointed Warden of the Hudson county jail by the Hudson county Board of Freeholders, and served under Sheriff John McPhillips. His official title than was Jailer. It was a big job, one of the political plums of Jersey City.

DUNELLEN NOW BOASTS OF A REGULAR POLICEMAN

For the first time in its municipal career, Dunellen can now boast of a repular policeman. The appropriation was made last night when the Borough Council met and named William J. Davenport as the man who is to uphold the law while the citizens are wrapped in slumber. He will begin his duties at once at a salary of $60 a month. The amount will be increased at the expiration of three months.

Dunellen has had all kinds of marshals since it became a borough but none of them ever did patrol duty. They were simply on call and if they chose to go out of town just before a scrap occurred nobody had a kick coming. The local Board of Trade is composed of progressive men who did not like this way of doing business and began an agitation that has continued a year. The question of where to obtain the money was the biggest obstacle to be overcome and it was finally done, last night's appointment being the result.

There were several applications for the place but Davenport was the only one to qualify. He was at one time superintendent of the local trolley division, preceding George Luhr. Councilman John H. Schnidle, who is a retired New York policeman, has been delegated to draw up a set of rules to govern the position and the new marshal will be directly answerable to him.

NEW MARKET FIREMEN FIGHT DANGEROUS BLAZE

The coal sheds and railroad trestle attached to Clark Roger's general supply establishment at New Market, caught fire in some way at 1 o'clock this morning. The flames were noticed by an engineer on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, who gave a whistle alarm and stopped his train to let the crew fight the blaze with water from the locomotive tender. They made poor headway as the high wind fanned the blaze furiousuly.

The first villagers to reach the scene rang the Baptist church bell and the New Market volunteer fire department responded in a short time. Two lines of hose were laid, giving a plentiful supply of water with good pressure. The wind died down while the men were at work. The prompt discovery and response of the department probably prevented a serious blaze as the C. E. Kelly lumber yard was directly in line. Mr. Rogers places the damage at about $100.

After the firemen had finished their work, they were invited to the New Market hotel, where Proprietor Joseph Ahearn gratuitously served coffee and sandwiches. Last night's blaze was the first the department has fought since it was organized some time ago and the able way in which the members worked demonstrated its value to the village.

TWO MORE ASSEMBLYMEN DECIDE AGAINST SMITH

The only new developement in the Senatorial struggle is the defection from the ranks of the adherents of James Smith, Jr., of Assemblyman-elect Frank D. Boettner and the alleged sidestep of Assemblyman-elect Edward T. Ballentine, of Newark. The action of these two important members portends greater events in the immediate future if all signs do not fail. They were dissatisfied with Mr. Smith's alleged default in the appointment of one of their friends to the Board of Works in Newark and believe that their promise to Mr. Smith is no more binding than was his to them.

The death yesterday of Robert Davis, the Hudson county leader, will have little or no effect upon the senatorial situation, according to the wiseacres, although it is admitted that the sudden removal of Davis' personal influence may turn the four Smith men in Hudson over to the Martine contingent. It is believed now in Trenton that Mr. Smith will not be able to make any further inroads into Mr. Martine's supporters. The only one to come out publicly for Smith so far is Assemblyman-elect Thomas F. Martin, of Weehawken.

To Speak on School Cities.

"School Cities" will be the subject of an address this evening in the auditorium of the Young Men's Christian Association at 8 o'clock. Lyman Beecher Stowe will be the speaker under the auspices of the Equal Suffrage League, of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

Rev. Dr. Harding, of Owego, N. Y., secretary of the second missionary department of the Episcopal church, lectured before the communicants of the Church of the Heavenly Rest in the parish house last night on "Missions, Foreign and Domesitc." Mr. Harding gave an interesting survey of the work now being done in the Episcopal church, especially in the foreign field. He said that a million and a quarter of dollars was subscribed last year for the purpose, but that a more systematic arrangement of giving would bring far greater results.

Mr. Harding declared his belief that if the envelope system were universally adopted the results would increase two fold and a more satisfactory work could be accomplished. The congregation was much interested in the address and it is believed the impression created among them will result in greatly increased contributions to the cause.

DR. ARD S. P. C. A. HEAD

Officers Chosen at Annual Meeting of Local Humane Society.

REPORTS ARE SUBMITTED.

Approximately 500 Animals Put to Merciful Death—Mrs. Van Hoesen Makes Her Report.

At the annual meeting of the Plainfield branch of the S. P. C. A., held yesterday afternoon in the parlors of the Y. M. C. A., the following officers were elected: President, Dr. Farnk C. Ard, first vice-presidents Rev. E. V. Stevenson, former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Rev. Dr. William K. Neilson; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. E. S. Hyatt; members of the executive board, J. C. Arnold, John D. Loizeaux, John O'Brien, Jr., Mrs. R. J. Letcher and Mrs. Clifton Wharton, Jr.

John O'Brien, Jr., and Mrs. G. A. Boman, of Hillside avenue were elected to membership, the latter being a life member. Reports of the past year's work were submitted by the various officers which showed that the society is in a flourishing condition and is continuing to grow in usefulness. Nearly five hundred animals were put to a merciful death during the year.

A report from a committee from the American Humane Society appointed last year to investigate the methods of slaughtering animals for food was read by the special agent, Mrs. S. G. Van Hoesen and caused much interest among the members. It was shown in the report that the methods employed now in this country are away behind the times and are cruel and inhuman. Germany especially, of the foreign countries, is in the lead of the world in this respect.

The American Humane Society will during the year ask for special legislation on the subject of slaughtering with special reference to the kosher butchering. The local society will lend its moral aid to secure this legislation.

MAY RECEIVE CALL TO MERIDEN CONN. CHURCH

According to a depatch from Meriden, Conn., it is expected that Rev. J. W. Musson, pastor of the Temple Baptist church of this city, will receive an unanimous call to become pastor of the Main Street Baptist church of that city. Rev. Mr. Musson preached at both services in the Connecticut church on last Sunday and created a most favorable impression.

Rev. Mr. Musson is well and favorably known in this city, where through his efforts the Temple Baptist church has been brought to a splendid financial condition. The church has purchased a large plot of ground on East Front street, opposite Sandford avenue, where it is proposed to erect a $50,000 church edifice.

With a small beginning as a mission under the auspices of the First Baptist church, the Temple Baptist has grown to large proportions and has a membership of upward of 200 souls. Mr. Musson was called to the church about six years ago and under his guidance it has grown and prospered so that it was necessary to seek larger quarters not only for the church but for the Sunday school.

It will cause considerable sorrow to the members of the flock to lose their pastor at this time, but it is considered that the move will be for the best for all concerned. In Meriden Mr. Musson has many friends and last Sunday the majority of them attended the two services conducted by him in that city. He was graduated from Crozier Seminary, Chester, Pa., and is an eloquent preacher.

Mr. Musson said this morning that he had not received a call from the Meriden church, but in event of its coming he would consider it, although he would be loath to leave the church to which he has become so much attached. The Meriden church is a large one.

POLICE FOR N. P. TWP.

Favorable Action Expected at Township Committee Meeting Tonight.

MEETING OF IMP. SOCIETY.

Comment of Governor-elect Wilson, Senator Frelinghuysen and Assemblyman La Mont on Society's Attitude.

If the suggestions of President W. DeLaR. Anderson of the North Plainfield Township Improvement Society are favorably received by the Township Committee which meets tonight it will not be long before the township will have a police force. It developed at the meeting of the improvement society last night that the question of protection is one of the most important matters now engrossing the attention of residents and favorable action will please the entire community.

In his report to the society last night, Mr. Anderson said that he had brought the matter before the Township Committee and suggested that policemen be engaged for Watchung and Scotch Plains and if they want it, at Greenbrook. Another matter of considerable interest to the township is the fire department which now has an up-to-date equipment and to which it is proposed to pay a stipulated sum each month for its maintenance.

This department is composed of forty men who are ready at all times to meet any call for their services and it is believed only right that the equipment and fire house should always be equallly ready. Two new chemical tanks have been added to the original apparatus installed and the department is capable of handling any fire short of a conflagration.

At the suggestion of Mr. Anderson the society passed resolutions of condolence with Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Wheeler in the death of Mrs. Wheeler's father and out of respect to his memory no entertainment was held after last night's meeting.

Letters from Senator Joseph Frelinghuysen, Governor-elect Woodrow Wilson and Assemblyman-elect LaMont were read in which the two former agreed with the society's views regarding the abolition of the county tax board, but Senator Frelinghuysen demurred on the proposition saying that he believed the tax board should remain as at present constituted. He did not believe it right that local assessors should have a free hand as they had before the county board was appointed.

Both Doctor Wilson and Assemblyman La Mont agreed upon the question of direct election of Senators, but Mr. La Mont took the opportunity to criticise the people of the township for their attempt to establish a sewage disposal plant under the nose of Bound Brook.

Abel Moldenke, Douglas Demler and Dennis Gavin were elected to membership in the society last night and it was the unanimous opinion of the members that the police force was necessary.

In the letter read by Mr. Moldenke from Dr. Wilson, the Governor-elect was quoted as saying that if other societies would proceed along the same lines as the North Plainfield Improvement Society the people would obtain more satisfactory government. There was a large attendance at the meeting which was held in the new town hall, formerly Texier's Mills.

ANNUAL MEETING OF EAST END CHURCH.

Reports for the past year were presented at the annual meeting of the Consistory of the Netherwood Reformed church, last night, showing that druing the eighteen months the church has been in existence, the members have accomplished considerable. It was reported that the total receipts for the year were $713.23 and the expenditures, $689.-23, leaving a balance of $24. In addition to that the church purchased a lot and erected a parsonage, the total value of which is placed at $5,000. A heating apparatus has been installed and is practically paid for.

The resignation of Gustave Frumerie as sexton was received, and John Pitts was elected as his successor. The pastor, Rev. Royal A. Stout, announced that plans are being considered for an entertainment to be given the last of the month, probably at the Hartridge School auditorium. Mr. Stout is trying to secure the Rutgers College glee club for the entertainment.

Plainfield Clericus Meet.

At a meeting of the Plainfield Clericus held in St. Luke's church, Roselle, yesterday afternoon, a paper on Evangelism was read by Rev. Hugh Birkhead, pector of St. George's, New York. An informal discussion followed the address which was followed by a luncheon.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT OF ST. MARY'S CHURCH

The yearly financial statement of St. Mary's church, which has been distributed among the parishioners, presents a gratifying conditions. In commenting upon the statement today, Father Bogan said that since he had been pastor of the church, the old system of receiving seat money at the door of the church, had been abolished and thus no one no matter how poor was made to feel any embarrassment.

Thus far more than $17,000 has been paid on the new convent building, and Father Bogan believes that when it is ready for occupancy sometime in March there will only be a nominal debt thereon which can easily be liquidated. The new building will cost approximately $25,000 and the fact that the parish will have been able to pay this amount within a period of about ten months is quite remarkable.

The total receipts for the past year were $35,006.44, with the balance on hand at last report of $8,-297.34. The Sunday collections amounted to $3,190.76, and the sittings, $7,209.54. Father Bogan's jubilee offering was $600. The expenditures included $2,175 for the salaries of three priests and Sisters' salaries and school supplies, $3,-043.95. After all expenditures were made and the interest on the $10,000 note was paid, there is a balance of $2,295.46.

TOWNSEND HONORED BY BANK DIRECTORS

The directors of the Peoples National Bank, of Westfield, gave a banquet at The Homestead on Washington avenue, last night, as a tribute to Samuel Townsend, president of the institution, and they also honored the vice-president, J. E. Gallagher and did not forget H. H. Griswold, the cashier. The affair was arranged with a view to showing the appreciation of the directors for the earnest and faithful services of Mr. Townsend, who has been the head of the institution since it was organized.

During the evening solid gold cuff buttons, set with diamonds, were presented to Mr. Townsend and Mr. Gallagher. The recipients thanked the directors for their token of esteem.

Congressman-elect William E. Tuttle, Jr., of Westfield, was the toastmaster, and he made the presentations on behalf of his fellow directors. An excellent dinner was prepared and served by Mrs. Henry Johnson.

These were present: J. Herbert Case, J. F. Cowperthwaite, J. E. Gallagher, Rollin P. Grant, Charles W. McCutchen, E. A. Merrill, E. T. Perrine, Arthur N. Pierson, M. H. Phillips, William L. Saunders, Samuel Townsend, Congressman-elect W. E. Tuttle, Jr., and H. H. Griswold and H. H. Pond.

WARING A DIRECTOR OF STANDARD OIL CO.

LEGISLATURE CONVENES

Ernest R. Ackerman is Elected President of the State Senate.

DR. PRINCE PRAISES HIM.

Plainfielder Addresses His Colleagues—Gov. Fort's last Message Read—Kenny Speaker of House.

Trenton, Jan. 10.—The New Jersey Legislature convened sometime after noon today. The House is in control of the Democrats and the Senate in control of the Republicans. The inauguration of Woodrow Wilson as Governor will take place next Tuesday. The crisis of the session will be reached on Tuesday, January 24, when the balloting will be begun to elect a Democratic successor to United States Senator John Kean.

The House of Assembly, which is in control of the Democrats, was organied by the election of Edward Kenny, of Hudson, as the Speaker. Daniel Dugan, of Orange, was selected as clerk of the House. John J. Matthews, of Hunterdon, will be the leader of the Democratic majority on the floor of the House, and Thomas F. McCran, of Passaic, will be the leader of the minority.

In the Senate, Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of Union, was elected President and William C. Murphy, of Camden, will be the secretary. Senator Ackerman was nominated by Senator John D. Prince, of Passaic, the leader of the majority on the floor. After the organization the message of Governor Fort was read and adjournment was taken until next Monday night, when the introduction of the bills will begin. The Governor's Message will be found on pages 6 and 7.

Senator John D. Prince, of Passaic, who will be the majority leader on the floor of the Senate, nominated Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of Union county, for the Presidency. Senator Johnston Cornish, of Warren, the dean of the Senators in point of service, was the choice of the Democrats for presiding officer. He was nominated by Senator Harry V. Osborne, of Essex.

In placing Senator Ackerman's name before the Senate, Dr. Prince said: "It is a peculiar pleasure to me to nominate at this time for the high office of President of the Senate a man whose entire legislative career has been one of absolute independence and integrity; a man whose ear no special interests have ever successfully approached; a man, all whose tendencies have been in keeping with the spirit of the times as is evidenced by the many important measures which he has fathered. I need mention only his valuable services in giving to our State a satisfactory Civil Service law. He has upheld that high character which the tradition of his county has insisted upon having in her Senatorial representative; a man of many abilities and great activity and yet one who is willing to give up this large part of his time, to serve his State for the love of his State; I repeat, Mr. President, that I feel it a special privilege today to nominate for President of the Senate, the Hon. Ernest R. Ackerman, the Senator from Union."

Senator George S. Silzer, of Middlesex, was the President pro tem of the Senate and he appointed a committee to escort Senator Ackerman to the chair. In accepting the Presidency Mr. Ackerman thanked his fellow members and said he was not unmindful of the great responsibilities of the office. He said:

"I sincerely thank you for your confidence in electing me to this distinguished post of duty. Your action is highly appreciated. I am not unmindful, however, of the responsibilities of the office nor of the long line of distinguished statesmen who have preceded me, filling the position with credit to themselves and honor to the State of New Jersey. It is my hope and it will be my endeavor to prove worthy of the trust confided to me.

"The responsibility for the enactment of bills into law this season is divided between the two great parties, both having the highest regard for the welfare of the people and both sincerely vieing with each other in a desire to acceptably serve those millions who, while invisible to us here, are watching intently our every action. Let us remember, however, that any proposed legislation will be searchingly investigated by an awakened, alert and watchful people and they will be satisfied with nothing short of the highest standards and accomplishments, and any political party or individual failing to measure up to this mark need not expect their further confidence.

"It is recorded 'that of the making of books there is no end,' and it is likewise seemingly so concern-

WESTFIELD.

Reports submitted to the local Board of Health, makes it apparent that the town facilities for sewage disposal will have to be increased, possibly this year. Westfield sewage is run over filtration beds on the sewer farm belonging to the town, located just outside the boundry in Fanwood Township. After the filtering the residium is piped from the beds several miles and finally emptied into Robinson's Branch below the dam of the Middlesex Water Company's reservior. The growth of the town has been considerable faster than was anticipated when the system was installed sixteen years ago and the flow over the filtration beds is now so heavy that it does not have time to purify as is should, it is said.

Word has been received from State Superintendent of Public Instruction, C. J. Baxter, that the last special school election was legal and that nothing is now in the way so far as the State department is concerned. It is believed by the local Board of Education, that as soon as the work is started, some of the residents in the neighborhood will take some action to stop it.

Beaver Ranges Excel in the Economy of Fuel

It takes only a moment to change the fire-box and reverse the grates of a "Beaver" Range to burn wood instead of hard or soft coal. Burn whichever fuel is the handiest at the time and you'll burn 25 per cent. less of it than with old-fashioned ranges, because of the heavy, tight castings and scientific design. It will pay you to sell your old stove for junk and begin to save money with a "Beaver."

Beaver Ranges Are Fine Bakers

A good stove is as essential to the housewife as a watch to the business man—both must be dependable. The woman who prides herself on baking the best bread in town can't do justice to her skill if she uses a range that won't hold its heat and that doesn't warm all sides of the oven uniformly. "Beaver" Ranges are fine bakers because the right amount of heat reaches every part of the oven at the right time. ### LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

When David Bispham, the baritone, who will appear at the McIntyre concert at the Plainfield High School, Thursday night, completed his studies in Italy, he went to England. Santley was at that time the great man among baritones, but with his passing out of musical affairs, Bispham was elected to fill his place. He was first engaged to sing at the Leeds Festival, and from that time on—precisely as he has retained his hold in opera, where his career had begun a year or so before—he has kept his hold in the oratorio field. He has been heard in the festival cities, Norwich and Gloucester, at the Bach festivals in London, with a great chorus at the Crystal Palace, and in preformances of the choral societies in the provincial cities of England, Ireland and Scotland. "Elijah" is Mr. Bispham's favorite oratorio. He has sung it in English in Birmingham Festival in Leeds where it was first produced in 1846, and in Germany, in Hamburg, where it had its first performance. In addition to Mr. Bispham, the McIntyre Trio will also render a number of favorite works.

The body of an unidentified negro was found Sunday morning at the bottom of the Raritan Canal at the Junction at Coalport. The remains had been in the water for some time and were badly decomposed.

and it did much to build up Davis' power as a politician.

It was about 1890 that Davis became the out-and-out leader of the Democratic party in Hudson county. At that time Dennis McLaughlin was in control of Democratic affairs there, but when his candidate for Mayor, the late Congressman Allan L. McDermott, was defeated and Col. Toffey was elected Sheriff over Edward Stanton, McLaughlin's power dwindled and Davis took up the reins. Since then he had been in undisputed power. Both were lieutenants of William McAvoy, the old-time leader of Hudson county.

In 1882, when Magistrate William McAdoo, of New York, the former Police Commissioner, was elected to Congress from Hudson county, Davis was one of those who helped along his election from his district. Without the support of Davis McAdoo could not have been nominated. Mr. McAdoo served three terms as a Representative from New Jersey and was then made Assistant Secretary of War.

Davis had been credited with being the man who actually picked President Woodrow Wilson of Princeton, for the Gubernatorial candidate of New Jersey last fall.

DR. CANNON'S FUNERAL TAKES PLACE TOMORROW

The funeral of Henry Rutgers Cannon, aged 90 years, the pioneer druggist of this city, who died at his home in Elizabeth, Sunday, from the infirmities of old age, will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 at St. John's church, Elizabeth. He was well-known in this city where he had lived for a great many years. Mr. Cannon was also one of the best known Masons in the State, having been one of the first members of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A.M., of this city. He was made a Mason February 17, 1854, and always retained his membership and interest in Jerusalem Lodge.

When a druggist here Mr. Cannon's store was located in the building now occupied by A. M. Griffen. He began business in 1852. When Union county was set apart by taking a portion off Essex county, Mr. Cannon was appointed county clerk by Governor Joel Parker. He remained in office for twenty years, being re-elected each succeeding year. At the end of twenty years he retired from active affairs and afterward settled in Elizabeth with his family. The late James Vosseller succeeded Mr. Cannon as clerk. For five years Mr. Cannon held the office of grand master of the Masonic order in the State.

Mr. Cannon was born at Pleasant Plains, near New Brunswick, in 1821. His father was the late Rev. Dr. James Spencer Cannon, professor of natural history at Rutgers College, and his mother was formerly Miss Catherine Brevoort, of Hackensack. Mr. Cannon was graduated from Rutgers College in 1840.

Mr. Cannon was one of the incorporators of the Newark Horse Car Railway which has since been merged with the P. S. C. He had also served for many years as chairman of the board of assessors and recision of taxes in Union county. He was a staunch Democrat and had been identified with the party all his life.

ing the statutes which are now on the law books of the State, for they number over fifteen thousand and consequently, to avoid perplexity, additions thereto should only come after the most mature consideration.

"While deliberation is valuable, let us strive on behalf of the Senate for a businesslike session, and while we are not unaware of the wide political unrest that seems to pervade the atmosphere of the entire world, I am confident we will do nothing without careful thought, for we will ever keep in remembrance what is the present law and the mischief to be corrected before suggesting a remedy. Sound, just and carefully considered enactments, and not laws resulting from temporary hysteria, must be our aim and achievement.

"It is never inopportune to strongly assert our belief in the strength and justice of constitutional government as proclaimed by our forefathers in founding our great and matchless form of government, and the sagacity and patriotism of American statesmen in preserving it for the use and enjoyment of future generations.

"We are here not only representing our individual counties with their particular local needs, but our vision and mentalities must extend to the boundaries of our rapidly growing and uniquely located State. Situated as it is between the populous Empire and Keystone communities, its attractive location commands the attention of the people of two of the mightiest cities of the Western Hemisphere. Considering the State's welfare as a whole our desire will be to do nothing, in any manner, that will dim the brilliancy, hamper the growth or lessen the world-wide renown of our splendid State, whose motto is fittingly expressed in the words 'Liberty and Prosperity.' To continue to have it shine as one of the brightest advancing stars in the galaxy of States which comprises this glorious nation is an ideal for which we can all heartily strive.

"Further steps in the upward course of progress will undoubtedly come before us for consideration, and while each one reserves to himself the privilege of suggesting counter propositions or amendments, each Senator, I am sure, will help in a sane advance of progress, for 'he serves his party best who serves his country best,' and with an eye single for the State's good, will welcome the opportunity of extending aid in the passage of such laws, no matter from what quarter the suggestion arises. Should differences appear concerning the details of proposed enactments, as history shows they always will, I doubt not but that it will be the purpose of every one to show by the clearest of reasoning that his controversial attitude is inspired only by the highest motives, and that his suggestions are advanced solely for the purpose of obtaining what he deems is best for the whole community.

"As history shows that as much good comes from constructive legislation as has been accomplished following even the glories of unavoidable wars, may we not derive inspiration from the words of Lincoln as spoken at Gettysburg, and which seem to me to be as applicable to legislative battles as he implied they were to that great critical struggle when he said: 'That the world will little note nor long remember what we say here,' but added, when referring to the gallant soldiers, 'the world can never forget what they did here.' May we hope that what is accomplished here in legislative halls will prove to be of as much permanent good to our constituents as was achieved for posterity by those who so valiantly fought on that historic field, for we all know that there is no satisfaction to be compared to that of having been helpful to others.

"As your presiding officer I shall always be at the service of each Senator, irrespective of party, will try to be fair and impartial and will not intentionally commit any act that will cause the Senate to regret having honored me.

"I now await your further pleasure."

Speaker Kenny, in making up his committees in the House assigned Calvin E. Brodhead, of this city, to New Jersey Reformatory; chairman of boroughs; appropriations; public health and State Hospitals. McLoughlin, of Elizabeth, was made a member of claims and Revolutionary pensions; chairman Glen Gardner Sanitorium; chairman banks and insurance; towns and townships and New Jersey Reformatory. Lloyd Thompson, of Westfield, was made a member of revision; stationery and State Home for Girls.

The principal chairmanships are apportioned as follows: Appropriations, McGowen, Essex; banks and insurance, James, Hudson; corporations, Walsh, Mercer; education, Christie, Hudson; judiciary, Matthews, Hunterdon; labor and industry, Ford, Hudson; militia, Taylor, Monmouth; municipal corporations, Agnew, Hudson; public health, Ramsey, Middlesex; railroads and canals, Meyer, Sussex. At the caucus today the Democratic members of the House of Assembly, decided to defer until a later date any action on the United States Senatorship and also the State comptrollership. Senator Osborne, of Essex, was chairman of the caucus and he was empowered to call another meeting to take action of these two imported questions. Senator Osborne was also empowered to appoint a committee of three members of the Legislature to attend the funeral of Robert Davis.

Upon the organization of the Senate a petition was presented by Senator Prince from former Senator Thomas A. Mathis, protesting against the seating of Senator George C. Low, of Ocean. This petition was referred to the committee on elections to be answered by the president. Low was seated.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

At the regular meeting of the Court Dunellen, I. O. F., last night, District Deputy L. T. Titsworth, and staff, installed the following officers: Chief Ranger, Charles Starker, vice-chief, Charles Vail; recording secretary, C. H. Dodwell, Jr.; financial secretary, Arthur Vail; treasurer, John H. L. Peters; warden, T. W. Day; senior woodward, Fred Vail; junior woodward, L. T. The funeral of Anna Koyak, the two-year-old daughter, of Mr. and Mrs. Steven Koyak, of North avenue, was held yesterday. Burial was made in St. Mary's cemetery, Plainfield. The child died as the result of frightful burns received by falling into a pail of boiling water placed on the floor by the mother previous to scrubbing the kitchen. Dr. Platt was called and gave all the relief possible but the child was practically beyond aid from the start.

Rev. Father Dumphy submitted the annual financial statement of St. John's church, Sunday. It showed the parish to be in excellent condition. The Holy Name Society held its annual meeting in the evening and besides electing officers, received reports for the past year.

A dress rehearsal of Madame Jarley's Wax Works, will be held tonight. It will be the final one before the presentation in the Presbyterian church, Friday night.

W. G. Holton Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., will meet tonight and install officers who were not present at the regular installation last week.

Michael Moynihan was a visitor at the automobile show in Madison Square Garden, last night.

Edward Krinc is able to be about again after a severe illness with the grip.

Funeral of Benjamin Giddes.

The funeral of Benjamin M. Giddes, who died last Thursday at his home near Mount Bethel, was held in the Mount Horeb church yesterday afternoon. The service was conducted by Rev. Mr. McRorie and was largely attended by relatives and friends. The church choir rendered three selections. There were many floral tributes. Burial was in the Mount Horeb cemetery, the following acting as pall bearers: Dr. E. A. Giddes, Fred Conroy, and Albert Giddes, of North Plainfield; Chauncey F. Stout, of Plainfield; John Toms, of Martinsville, and Rufus Giddes, of Mount Bethel.

Clock Case Settled.

The suit over a now famous clock which was not put up in front of Leo Slonim's jewelry store on West Front street, was decided yesterday in the district court at Elizabeth before Judge Whittemore and a jury in favor of he Seth Thomas Clock Co. A judgment for $420 with interest and costs was rendered. Francis J. Blatz represented Mr. Slonim and William F. Groves, of Elizabeth, represented the clock concern.

Miss Agnes Snow Ward, superintendent of the Metropolitan Hospital, of New York, is the guest of Rev. and Mrs. Gabriel Reid Maguire, at their home on East Ninth street.

THE FORUM.

Electric Light.

Editor, The Daily Press:—

I note by your paper that our would-be benefactors, Randolph Depew & Co., are agitating the water question. Now, as we are certainly getting plenty of water, and a good quality, why don't they get after the electric light people? We are paying a big price for light, and are receiving a very poor quality. My meter is now working over time. Around election time, we were led to believe that if we turned the rascals out, Boss Moy would right all our wrongs, and our hens would lay eggs when they were 60 cents a dozen.

Very truly yours,
H. M. STOCKTON.

HIGH CLASS PICTURES AT PLAINFIELD THEATRE.

Nelson M. Haas, by arrangement with Proctor & Sanderson, will inaugurate an entertainment of high-class moving pictures, songs and instrumental music, on Saturday, at The Plainfield theatre. This form of entertainment will be provided at the theatre only on days when regular plays are not booked. There will be two performances a day, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and 8:30 o'clock in the evening.

The pictures Mr. Haas says, will be the best obtainable and the music will be of a high order. It is recognized he declares, that there are many people who are attracted by moving pictures, without vaudeville features, and the fact that the seats will be reserved will appeal to many as desirable.

HOTCHKISS APPOINTED AS FACTORY INSPECTOR.

On the eve of the last day during which an appointment by him would be valid, Governor Fort yesterday appointed Edward M. Hotchkiss, of Newark, to succeed Andrew McCardell, of this city, as factory inspector for the Plainfield-Newark district.

John Traynor, of this city, was supported by the Republican organization in this county for the berth, while Councilman William L. Gloak had some friends who wanted the plum to go to him.

Fine Sketch at Proctor's.

"The Devil, the Servant and the Man," a remarkable dramatic play in one act, is making a hit at Proctor's theatre. The act was here last Spring, and at the request of patrons a return engagement was booked. "Crushed Strawberry," is a delightful farce comedy sketch. Brent Hayes, expert banjoist, is one of the best appearing in this city. He really gets music out of a banjo. "Hans Nix's Baby," is one of the best acts offered and is a laugh from beginning to end.

Debris Gets on Fire.

The debris left from the storehouse fire at the Rushmore Dynamo Works several weeks ago, became ignited in some way, last night supposedly by a locomotive spark. The refuse began to blaze fiercely and an alarm was truned in from box 63 at 7:30. Chief Doane had two streams of water laid in and the flames were quickly put out. There was practically no damage.

Lecture on Athens Tonight.

Under the combined auspices of the Women's Association and the Men's Club of the Congregational church, there will be a lecture given by Miss Florence A. Stone, of Athens, Greece, on "Athens, Ancient and Modern," this evening in the church. The lecture will be illustrated with stereoptican views and will be for the benefit of the church enlargement fund.

Planning Turkey Supper.

The Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church, met in the church parlors, yesterday afternoon, to further arrangements for the annual turkey supper to be held on January 26 and 27 in the lecture room of the church. The various committees are now at work and the affair promises to be one of the best in recent years.

Dr. Harrison' Mother Dead.

Word has been received by Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, of the death of Mrs. Harrison, wife of Rev. M. V. Harrison, of Schribner, Nebraska, and mother of Dr. Paul Wilberforce Harrison, the missionary of Trinity Reformed church in Arabia. No particulars have been learned concerning her death.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vail, of Park avenue, will leave for San Antonio, Texas, on Thursday, where they will spend the balance of the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Thompson, of Putnam avenue, will leave on Thursday for Havana, Cuba, for a lengthened stay. They will be accompanied by Miss Adelia Runyon, also of Putnam avenue.

UNITY OF CONTROL IS URGED BY FORT

Too Many Commissions, Says Governor In Message.

HE OUTLINES STATE NEEDS.

In Third Annual Message the Executive Asks Legislature to Protect Potable Water Rights, Establish Separate Hospitals For Criminal Insane and Assist Counties In War on Tuberculosis.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 10.—In his third annual message submitted to the legislature today Governor John Franklin Fort reviews the work of his administration, tells frankly what is needed in the way of new legislation and how the state can profit by changes in its governing boards and commissions. He urges the establishment of separate hospitals for the care of the criminal insane and county institutions for the treatment of tuberculosis patients. He favors a reduction in state expenditures that an available balance of $1,000,000 may be maintained in the state treasury. That efficiency may rule in the department of the state the governor recommends the enactment of a law making every state officer subject to removal for cause by the governor.

The message in part follows:

State of New Jersey.

Executive Department, Jan. 10, 1911.

To the Legislature:

Speaking generally, the affairs of the state are in a very satisfactory condition, and the management of its several penal, charitable and correctional institutions, in so far as the executive is able to determine, is good.

Finances of the State.

At the end of the fiscal year of 1908—the first fiscal year of the present administration—the net free cash balance in the treasury, after allowing for contracts uncompleted, was only $78,083.72. At the end of the fiscal year of 1909 it was $964,373.52, and at the close of business Oct. 31, 1910, it was $1,609,043.80.

The surplus does not warrant extravagance. The estimated revenues of the state will justify ample provision for all reasonable state needs. A free balance of at least $1,000,000 should always be in the treasury. We never know when an emergency may arise. Our constitution prevents the incurring of any state debt or liability (except in case of war, invasion or insurrection) which shall at any time exceed $100,000, and this would seem to make it imperative, if our financial policy is to be a wise one, to always keep a reasonable treasury balance. The total expenditure for state purposes in the past year, including $2,376,939.88 disbursed to public schools, was $7,670,663.69.

New Institutions Are Needed.

The legislature at its last session provided by a very comprehensive act for the erection of a reformatory for women. This institution should be built, as it is greatly needed. There can be no justification for the confining of women prisoners in the same institution with men and under male keepers. Besides that, the erection of such a reformatory for women has long been demanded by the enlightened public sentiment of the state. A suitable appropriation for this public work should be made.

Another building that is urgently required is one for the detention of the convict insane. No one can visit the state hospitals for the insane and fail to realize both the peril and the wrong to other inmates and the attendants of the confinement of the convict insane in such an insecure way.

All that was said on this subject in my second annual message is most earnestly commended to you again. The managers and the medical directors of both state hospitals earnestly urge an insane convict building. It can be constructed on the grounds of the Trenton State hospital and put under its management with practically no extra cost of maintenance required. It also will give greatly needed room for almost 200 additional patients in the two state hospitals. It is unjust to keep the innocent, in their affliction, in confinement with the criminal, vicious and convict insane. One hundred thousand dollars would construct a suitable building. There is no present need equal to this in its demand upon the state.

Purchase of Institution Supplies.

In each of my previous annual messages it has been earnestly urged that provision be made for a state board for the purchase of supplies. The present method of each institution purchasing for itself of local tradespeople or otherwise and at local retail rates is objectionable in the extreme.

If there be any graft in the state it is in these purchases. The state of New York has saved several hundred thousand dollars under a joint purchase system, and an estimate of a saving in this state of $150,000 per annum under the system here suggested is not deemed excessive. Opposition to the establishment of such a purchasing board comes from only one source, the present purchasers and sellers, and they can have but one reason, and that had better not be named.

New Departments.

In each previous message I have urged the creation of three new departments in the state government—(1) a department of corporations, (2) a department of motor vehicles, (3) a department of collateral inheritance taxes.

The Power of Removal.

Every state official holding office by virtue of a statute should in all cases be made subject to removal by the governor upon written charges and after hearing. For three years I have earnestly urged this. It is right and necessary to good administration that it should be so. The governor is elected by the people and expected to insist upon the proper performance of public duty by all officials in the state government. It is humiliating to demand that wrongs be righted and that extravagance, illegality or incompetence cease and have a subordinate (it may be an underling in some department or institution) treat your suggestion with contempt or possibly criticise you for making it and be powerless to deal effectively with the contumacious, corrupt or incompetent official. No governor would exercise this authority other than discreetly. It would have been safe in the hands of governors in the past, and it will be in the future. Such a power exists by statute in many states and in some by constitutional provision, notably New York and Wisconsin. A summary of the constitutional and statutory legislation in the several states on this question will be found in my first annual message. No honest, faithful and competent public official can object to being subject to removal for cause. It is only the inefficient, careless or grafting who need fear such a law.

The Inland Waterway.

The inland waterway department was established by the laws of 1908. Under it, through appropriations made for that purpose, the sum of about $200,000 has been expended or contracted for to dredge the proposed waterway from Bay Head to Cape May City. The greater part of the work has been done, and when the existing contracts are fulfilled the work will be very near completion. It will require only one additional appropriation of probably about $100,000 to finish the dredging to give a waterway 100 feet in width and six feet in depth over the whole course.

Already it is doing wonders for our Atlantic coast. The future maintenance of the way requires that a license fee be laid of $1 per year for every power boat using it, which, it is estimated, will produce a revenue of $10,000 per year, which amount will more than pay the cost of the annual staking of the waterway and also cover the actual expense of the salary of the commissioner of the department and his office force and incidental expenses. Such a license tax is recommended. This enterprise is enthusiastically supported by all our seashore counties and, I am convinced, has the approval of the people of the state. The total expense may not equal, certainly will not exceed, the original appropriation of $300,000.

The Ocean Highway.

Pursuant to the provisions of the laws of 1909 and chapter 220, laws of 1910, the state highway commission have defined the route of the proposed ocean highway and provided for the expenditure of the $50,000 appropriated in 1910 for the commencement of the work of the straightening and opening of said highway. New strips of road have been opened and old strips improved under the action of the highway commission during the last year, and parts of the work are still under construction and improvement. Of the fund so appropriated in 1910 $7,000 was voted for work in Burlington county, $7,000 for work in Cape May county, $20,000 for work in Monmouth county, $11,000 for work in Ocean county and $5,000 for work in Atlantic county.

This state highway is one of the great enterprises undertaken by the state and should be carried on by appropriations year by year until the highway is put into perfect order and fully established from the Highlands in Monmouth, to Cape May City. The Atlantic coast is one of the greates assets of the state, and its beauty and attractiveness should be fostered in every way. The maintenance of the way should be done at the expense of the state. Massechusetts finds it can be done for less than $300 per mile which means that the ocean highway could be kept in repair and made the most attractive 100 miles in this country for not over $30,000 per annum. Of the annual sum appropriated by the state for highway maintenance this is not an unreasonable proportion to devote to this great public enterprise. The proposed ocean highway has met with universal public approval. It should be widened, straightened and improved until it shall become the most attractive highway in the world. The value of such a highway to the state cannot be overestimated. Public policy should encourage it in every way. It would aid in bringing great wealth to our state.

Would Abolish Voting Machines.

There still exists an almost universal demand for the repeal of the act permitting the use of voting machines at elections. It is not prejudice, but a deep seated conviction that causes the objection to the machines. In the 335 districts in which a vote as to their retention has been taken under the act of 1909, 321 have voted to discontinue their use. It would seem that a decent regard for the wish of the voters would cause the immediate repeal of the voting machine act. Few if any not pecuniarily interested seek to retain the machines. Why is it, in the face of such universally expressed opposition, these machines are forced upon the people?

Insurance of State Property.

The treasurer of the state has secured and tabulated a complete list of the fire insurance upon state buildings. The total carried on all buildings is $5,147,600 at a premium of about $70,000.

I renew the recommendations made last year that the insurance of all state property be placed by the state house commission and a lump sum appropriation made each year to that commission for that purpose. A blanket insurance system of, say, $1,000,000 or even less of insurance to cover all state buildings would be abundant and would reduce the present cost at least three-fourths.

Management of County Hospitals.

The state has an interest in the management of the several county hospitals for the insane. During the last fiscal year the state paid from its treasury toward the support of these institutions the sum of $276,928.23. We have no voice in their management or the expenditure of this money. The grand jury of Essex county, after a thorough investigation of its county hospital for the insane, presented it to the court as being incompetently managed and have recommended that the management of the institution be taken from the chosen freeholders. The conditions prevailing in this county are probably no exception to the rule in other counties. Under the management of the chosen freeholders these institutions are controlled by political influences and policies. Each of them should be put under a board of managers of seven or nine persons, a part of whom should be appointed by the justice of the supreme court presiding in the circuit court of the county and another part by the governor, that the state may have representation on each county board to see that the funds contributed by it are rightly expended. The appointment of all the officials should be vested in the board of managers, and civil service principles should be required to be applied as to all persons employed.

County Tuberculosis Hospitals.

There is a strong sentiment in favor of a tuberculosis hospital in each county in the state.

Glen Gardner, the only state institution, is filled, and many applicants are awaiting opportunity to enter. It would be much cheaper for the state to do as it does in the case of county hospitals for the insane—namely, pay a certain sum per week for the maintenance of tubercular cases in county hospitals.

The white plague is taking off about 4,000 of our citizens each year. Every interest of the state requires that we aid in the prevention and, if possible, the cure of this terrible scourge.

I recommend a system of state aid to county hospitals for the treatment of tubercular patients similar to that now existing for insane in county hospitals. It would be better and much cheaper than increasing state hospital facilities for this purpose.

Employers' Liability Act.

Under an act passed at the last session of the legislature a commission was appointed by the governor to inquire into the subject of employers' liability laws and to report by bill at this session of the legislature.

The commission has given the subject great care, and their report will be before you. Whatever else is done or reported, the legislature should at this session enact a law abolishing the rule which makes the negligence of a fellow servant a defense in personal injury cases and also take away the defense in cases of injuries resulting from obvious risks.

A risk that is obvious is just as much so to the master as to the servant, and if the master puts a servant to work at a machine which it is obvious may injure him the risk assumed should be the risk of the business. [illegible] rule that should be abolished is one which allows the master to compel a servant at work at a machine reported defective and which [illegible] that the servant may only work at such a defective machine for a reasonable time after being continued at it without himself assuming the risk.

The State's Potable Waters.

The potable waters of the state should all be owned or controlled by the state. No private company should be given a charter or franchise to take to itself and sell any of these waters. Already we have several such companies claiming such right in the surplus potable water at the headwaters of the rivers and the lakes of the state.

In my second annual message I brought this matter to the attention of the legislature. What was then said is again earnestly urged upon you. None of the waters of the state should be permitted to be taken by private water companies, and any right in such companies to condemn such waters in their own right (if any such power exists) as well as any power to condemn such waters in the name of a municipality for their contract uses should be repealed.

Supervision of Weights and Measures.

The United States supplies at a small cost standard weights which are to be kept in the office of the secretary of state and of the several county clerks, that all weights may be tested thereby. So far as I am able to learn, there is no authentic set of standard weights in any of those offices, nor is there any supervision by the state over the weights and measures used by dealers in this state. The evasion of the law in this regard is a fraud upon a vast body of our people, and it is quite extensive.

In my view, the supervision of all weighing and measuring devices should be placed under the department of labor. This department has a sufficient force to do this work and could do it most satisfactorily without ad

State Fish and Game Commission.

The state fish and game commission is not, in my judgment, doing its work as efficiently as it could be done. The commission should be abolished and a single commissioner appointed at a reasonable salary, who should be required to devote all his time to the duties of the office.

The revenue which this commission now receives under its several license laws and from fines amounted the last fiscal year to about $68,500. Besides this, several thousand dollars were also appropriated from the state treasury.

The department now has four commissioners, a secretary, a protector and twenty-two wardens. The salary of the wardens should be increased and they be required to devote all their time to the work.

The work could be done to much greater advantage by a single head, and the state, I am sure, would get much better results. The revenue now received is abundant to cover all expense, and the cost would not be exceeded by a reorganization as here suggested. All expense should be paid from the license fees and fines. They are abundant for the purpose.

The Oyster Industry.

The value of the oyster industry of the state last year was about $5,000,000. Most of the oyster lands are state lands leased to the planter. The total revenue derived from these leases last year was about $28,000. The highest lease price charged per acre per year is $3, while many are leased as low as 50 cents per acre.

In my judgment this price is entirely inadequate. The oyster growers in other states pay as high as $10 per acre for good oyster planting lands, in no sense superior to ours. The truth is that our oyster regulation policy is a mere policy of favor without any general system of any kind.

We have a commissioner of shell fisheries. We have a so called state oyster commission and a separate commission for Atlantic county and another for Ocean county and a single commissioner for Shark river in Monmouth county. All these are paid officials, and in my judgment after full inspection and inquiry all are unnecessary.

There should be but one oyster commissioner with power to engage the necessary deputies to patrol and protect the industry.

The present system has not been self supporting until recently. The revenue barely covers the expense now. Properly and economically managed, with just and fair rentals, it would pay sufficient to cover all the expense of administration, leasing, patrolling, and return, as it should, some revenue to the state. The system here suggested also would abolish the favoritism now so evidently prevalent. The present system is not for the benefit of the state.

The economical way would be to abolish the present fish and game commission and the commissioner of shell fisheries and all existing oyster commissions and put them all under a new title of "oyster, fish and game department" with a well salaried commissioner at its head with full power, with the approval of the governor, to appoint all assistants necessary to conduct the department and enforce the law.

The revenue from gunners' licenses, oyster leases, fines and the like would amount, even at the present rate of charges, to not less than $100,000 per year, and this would amply provide for all the cost of the department.

The Riparian Lands.

The work of the riparian commission for the past year is worthy of high praise. It has increased the price of riparian lands and leases. During the past three years over $900,000 has been turned into the permanent school fund of the state. This is equal to one-fifth of all revenue derived from this source since 1844. It is a splendid showing. The present governor notified the commissioners to increase the price of all state lands, and this has been done. In some cases the raise has equaled several hundred per cent of the old sale price. Even at this price the demands have been great. There is but a limited supply of these lands in the harbor of New York and its vicinity, and their value is very great. The prices fixed have in no case retarded great industries from coming to us, nor will they hereafter. The present riparian commission and the governor have worked in perfect harmony, with splendid results to the state. By proper management and by securing fair prices for the remaining riparian lands the permanent school fund of the state can easily be increased in a few years to at least $10,000,000, thus assuring a very large increase in the interest account for free public school purposes.

Revaluation of Railroad Property.

By joint resolution No. 3, laws of 1909, the legislature authorized the beginning of a systematic revaluation of railroad property for the purposes of state taxation. By chapter 307 of the laws of 1910 that work was directed to be continued and to be completed by April 12, 1911. The work has been done and will be fully completed and reported upon. So far as surface indications can determine, it appears to have been well done. It has had the most competent appraisers that the governor was able to secure.

Detective Licenses.

The governor is constantly asked for commissions for state detectives. By chapter 288 of the laws of 1906 the comptroller is authorized to issue such a commission on the payment of $100. There are also some private detective associations which still have the power to appoint at their own fee, and the governor must commission. All these private detective agencies with power to appoint detectives should be abolished. The present fee required to be paid to the comptroller is excessive. I recommend that the governor, upon such conditions as he may prescribe to protect against imposition, be authorized to appoint state detectives, in his discretion, with the full power of constables, for a term of five years in the same manner as he does notaries public for a fee of $25, with power in the governor at any time to revoke any such commission for any cause which he may deem to be justifiable.

The National Guard.

No state has a national guard of which it can be more justly proud than can we of ours. Everything should be done to bring it into strict conformity with the act of congress. The same age of retirement as that provided by the Dick act should prevail in this state.

The legislature of 1909 passed an act to bring the guard under the same conditions as to age limit as the Dick act. The court of errors decided that act unconstitutional as to officers elected by their fellow officers under the method provided by the state constitution and who were in office at the time of the passage of that act. But that retirement act is in full operation as to all officers so elected after the act became a law. Time, therefore, will cure the present unfortunate condition.

The younger officers of the guard should be encouraged by the assured hope of just promotion owing to retirement in due time of the older officers in the service. The admirable report of the adjutant general is commended to the consideration of the legislature.

The Express Strike.

On or about Oct. 20, 1910, the employees of three express companies doing business at the Jersey City and Hoboken terminals in this state went on a strike for causes deemed by them to be just. The strike was handled by the Jersey City authorities with good judgment. Appeals were made to the executive to order out the national guard, or a part of it, but after a thorough investigation through the adjutant general's office and otherwise, and after personal inquiry and conference with strikers and employers I declined to order out any part of the national guard. In this action I was sustained by the opinion of the attorney general.

The Emergency Fund.

The fund provided for use by the governor in cases of emergency should be made larger than $10,000. During my term it has sufficed and no doubt will in all ordinary cases. But if the national guard is ordered out in any given emergency the fund is insufficient. The governor can be trusted with this fund, and he will not use it where absolute need is not shown. That which is not used will lapse into the treasury.

Our state is large and becoming more and more cosmopolitan. It is never known what will occur requiring quick action, and, since the appropriation bill prevents any money going out of the treasury except as it provides, ample provision should be made for the governor to protect and preserve the peace or to meet other conditions should necessity arise. Reasonable precaution would not make it less than $25,000.

Agriculture In the State.

The agricultural interests of the state are a subject matter of congratulation. The value of farm lands and the increased value of the output are remarkable. A table showing the steady increase for the past eleven years makes a wonderful exhibit.

The record of the past six years in New Jersey in the value of the output of the farm is as follows:

| | Field crops and milk. |
|---|---|
| 1905 | $49,964,286 |
| 1906 | 52,460,262 |
| 1907 | 56,468,734 |
| 1908 | 57,743,153 |

The foregoing table does not include the value of the live stock sold, which last year amounted to $26,000,000.

During the three years of my term it has been my purpose to accomplish legislation which I firmly believe the people desired. If there was failure in this, as I think there was, I am unwilling to assume any of the responsibility. I am quite convinced that they know the reason for the failure and the means and interests which caused it.

JOHN FRANKLIN FORT,
Governor.

NUGENT IS LAUDED AT STAE BANQUET.

Democratic State Chairman James R. Nugent was the guest of honor at a testimonial dinner given last night by the members of the Democratic State Committee at Achtel-Stetter's, Newark.

The death of Robert Davis, the Hudson leader, cast a cloud over the gathering, and there was many expression of eulogy of his life and sorrow at his demise.

Previous to the dinner there was a meeting of the Democratic State Committee, at which a sub-committee, composed of Frank S. Katzenbach, of Mercer; David Carter, of Monmouth; Edward Furman, of Middlesex; Benajah P. Wills, of Burlington, and General D. F. Collins, of Union, was appointed to draw up resolutions on Mr. Davis' death.

There will be a joint installation of the officers of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., and the Women's Relief Corps, at Reform Hall, this evening.

FOR SELF-GOVERNMENT

Formation of State and City Administrative Bodies in Public Schools.

LECTURE BY LYMAN B. STOWE.

System for Teaching Children, Civics and Good Citizenship Outlined Before Equal Suffrage League.

What is believed by the sympathizers of the Equal Suffrage movement to be one of the best methods of educating the young in citizenship so that the minds of young girls may become the mature minds of women properly trained in civics, is the institution of School Cities or State governments in the different public schools of the city. The plans for such an innovation were explained last evening in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium by Lyman Beecher Stowe, grandson of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The lecture was given under the auspices of the Equal Suffrage League, of Plainfield and North Plainfield and proved highly interesting to those present.

Mr. Stowe declared that the teaching of pupil self-government in the public schools of the land had passed beyond the experimental stage and was now in successful operation in over a thousand schools in the Eastern States. The system, of which there are many, is that invented by Wilson L. Gill, of Philadelphia, and it has been an unqualified success from its very inception. Concrete examples of the working out of the system were given by the speaker. He showed that even color and sex have no bearing on the fitness of the young magistrates who look after the deportment of the pupils and while the principals of the schools will not admit that much improvement along that line is noticeable it is shown by itself in various ways that are all too obvious to the observer.

The plan is simple. By first interesting the pupils of a school in real government by having them write compositions on municipal and State administration, they are soon placed in a receptive condition for the installation of the system. They will elect their own Governor, or Mayor as the case may be, and from these dignitaries down to patrolmen and other petty officials the complete system of government is embarked. As to its bearing on the equal suffrage question, it is obvious. The great argument against giving the vote to women held out by the antis is "the unpreparedness for the ballot," but with the institution of self government in the public schools there begins a training of the female mind which will eventually remove this great objection and nothing remains to object to.

Mr. Stowe is a member of the School Citizen Committee, of New York, whose aims and objects are to co-operate with the school authorities in vitalizing the training for citizenship by some mode of pupil self-government. It is the principle of self-government as a training for the duties of citizenship rather than any of its various forms that the promoters are interested.

The committee assumes that educators realize that the too often deplorable municipal conditions in this country spring from the apathy of citizens and that political inertia comes from an ignorance of civics and a realization of the duties and opportunities of citizenship.

These school cities and States have been established in Orange, Newark, Elizabeth, Kearney and Montclair, and are operating with great success. Mr. Stowe said that he had interviewed several Congressmen at Washington on the subject and that without an exception they were heartily in favor of the scheme and were much interested in its workings. One of these men declared that it was the best method of educating the woman up to the point of knowing when, where and how to vote on any question affecting the country.

Instances were cited by the speaker where young girls had been elected mayors and judges, and where they had proved to have had splendid executive ability and while they were not found to devote themselves to the technicalities of debate they were "right on the job" with the subject matter. Some of the school states have been organized on the order of the George Jr., Republic, which has become famous all over the country and the following out of the principles laid down by the different governments have proved themselves highly educative and comprehensive in their determining of citizen character among both sexes.

Instances of where the children demanded the joining of the girls and the reasons for it were given. Boys declared that the girls would

EDWIN HAVILAND DEAD

Prominent Friend Passed Away Today in Seventy-Ninth Year.

HAVILAND. CHINA IMPORTER.

Born in Elias Hicks Homestead—His Father A Well Known Druggist—Three Children Survive Him.

Edwin Haviland, aged 78 years, a well-known Friend, and a resident of this city for a great many years, died this morning at his home on East Second street from the infirmities of old age. He had been practically an invalid for the past year.

Mr. Haviland was the son of James Cromwell Haviland, who, years ago, was one of the best known wholesale druggists in New York city. The latter purchased the homestead of Elias Hicks, founder of the Hicksite Friends, at Jerico, L. I., and it was in that house that Mr. Haviland was born. Later he removed to Columbia Heights, Brooklyn, and then to Plainfield in 1874.

Mr. Haviland was a member of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Museum of Natural History and the Hardware Club, of New York. For many years he was the agent in this country for the celebrated Haviland china. He retired seven years ago. He was a member of the Religious Society of Friends in Brooklyn, and the burial will be in the Friends cemetery, Brooklyn. The notice of funeral will be given later.

Mr. Haviland is survived by one daughter, Miss Caroline Haviland, of this city, and two sons, Edward Haviland, Jr., of Seattle, Wash., and Dr C. M. Haviland, of Fort Collins, Col.

A., who leaves on Tuesday for Portland, Oregon, where the latter is stationed.

Mrs. R. H. Hood, of Stelle avenne, gave the first of two "at homes" yesterday afternoon, the second one to be on January 24. About one hundred guests were in attendance. The home was attractively decorated with flowers. Mrs. R. H. Hood received, and she was assisted by Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Jr., Mrs. Leon Moran, Miss Virginia Hegeman, Miss Dorothy Fleming, Miss Graham and Miss Hannah Starks, of Philadelphia, sister of Mrs. Hood. There were numerous features to make the affair a delightful one for all present.

Another "at home" yesterday was that given by Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, of West Seventh street, this also being largely attended by society folk. The home was tastefully decorated with pink carnations, and there were many delightful features.

Mrs. Stewart was assisted in receiving and in the dining room by Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna, Mrs. Elliot T. Barrows, Mrs. Augustus V. Heely, Mrs. William F. Taliaferro and Mrs. Henry A. McGee. Another similar affair will be given on January 24.

MAYOR'S APPOINTEES ARE NOT CONFIRMED

City Fathers Table His Selections for Board of Health, Assessment Commissioners and Overseer-of-the-Poor.

As freely predicted in political circles, appointments made by Mayor George W. V. Moy and transmitted to the Common Council at its adjourned session last night, were, in effect, 'turned down.' It was the first move made by the new executive to carry out his administration policies, and the fact that his list of appointments, with one exception, was tabled, is taken by the wise ones as indicating that there may be frequent disagreements between the executive and legislative departments of the city government.

These were the appointments sent in by the Mayor for confirmation:

Overseer-of-the-poor — Rev. St. John Fitch.

Board of Health—Dr. William H. Murray, A. E. Force and LeRoy Ellis.

Commissioners of Assessments—Howard C. Tracy, Edward A. Laing and Harry B. McDonald.

Playground Commissioner—Geo. P. Mellick.

Messrs. Tracy and Laing were slated to succeed Freeholder Samuel P. T. Wilbur and State Road Supervisor Robert A. Meeker, both of whom are strong "organization" Republicans. Mr. Tracy is a close political friend of Mr. Moy and was formerly chairman of the New Idea Central Committee. However, there was no political significance in this or the other appointments.

The appointment of Rev. Mr. Fitch was made to fill the position which has been occupied for many years by Alexander D. Ayres. He is a retire Baptist minister who has resided here for several years.

Dr. Murray and Messrs. Ellis and Force were selected by the new Mayor to take the places of Dr. D. vanD. Hedges, William C. Kinney and Charles H. Dunham, all of whom have been serving in that capacity for a number of years. Dr. Murray is a member of the State Board of Health. Mr. Ellis is president of the Plainfield Democratic Club. A. E. Force was president of the Merchants' Association. He is also a Democrat. Dr. Hedges, who was booked to go, holds three political positions in the city government, being a director of the Plainfield Library and a member of the Board of Education.

George P. Mellick, whose appointment was the only one confirmed, has been president of the Playground Commission since it was brought in to existance by former Mayor Fisk.

The Common Council took a recess todiscuss the appointments privately. Adjourning to a side room, they conferred for about half an hour. The upshot of it was that a motion to table all the appointments except that of Mr. Mellick prevailed. The majority of the city fathers, it was learned strongly opposed the suggested changes. The argument was advanced by some of them that the present incumbents are all experienced and are rendering satisfactory service in their several capacities. All the office-holders who were slated to be retired are 'organization' men.

Some of the Councilmen argue that Mr. Moy should first have consulted with them as to appointments and it is reliably reported that a committee of their number will seek an interview with him for the purpose of persuading him to withdraw his nominations.

To many it was somewhat of a surprise that the Mayor sent in no names for confirmation for the positions on the tax board or for corporation counsel. It appears that the city executive is empowered by statute to select four men to compose a tax board. There is also a law giving the Common Council power to form a board of three members without any sanction on the part of the mayor. As yet, Mr. Moy has given no hint as to what action he will take in this matter. The present board consists of Harry C. Van Emburgh, Asa F. Randolph, William T. Kirk and Harry C. Runyon. Local politicians are all in the dark as to what Mr. Moy will do about the corporation counselship, although there have been various rumors that this or that man would be named. As there is no pressing need at this time for the services of a lawyer, it is believed that he will be in no hurry to fill the office.

None of the Common Councilmen would say for publication today but

DRAW CLOSE LINE IN INAUGURAL INVITATIONS.

Plans were completed yesterday for the inauguration of Governor Wilson next week, Tuesday. The Governor of every State in the Union has been invited to attend the ceremonies in Taylor Opera House, Trenton. Following these the inaugural luncheon will take place at the Hotel Sterling. The Inaugural Committee has decided that it will be necessary to draw the line closely in sending out the invitations for this luncheon. The legislature, the State officials and the State's representatives in Congress will be the only ones invited, with the one exception of James R. Nugent, chairman of the Democratic State Committee. United States Senator Frank O. Briggs will be present at the luncheon, both in his capacity as a Senator and as the chairman of the Republican State Committee.

There will also be a dearth of invitations for the ceremonies at the Opera House. No invitations will be sent by the committee to prominent persons in any walk of life, and even such politicians as James Smith, Jr., and James E. Martine will have to depend upon the members of their county delegations to see that they are provided with tickets of admission. It is understood that there will be no exception to this rule.

The invocation for the inaugural exercises will be delivered by the Rev. Dr. Henry Collin Minton, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of Trenton. Benediction will be given by Mgr. John H. Fox, rector of St. Mary's Cathedral, Trenton, in the absence of Bishop McFaul.

DYING FROM HURTS CAUSED BY GANG.

Flemington, Jan. 11.—George Oatsquay, the iron worker employed by the Foran Foundry and Manufacturing Company, who was murderously assaulted by four Hungarians in Main street Friday night, is in a critical condition. He was terribly slashed in the face and neck and nearly succumbed from the loss of blood.

A rusty knife was used and blood poisoning is now feared. The three Hungarians in custody were taken to Oatsquay's room yesterday afternoon. He identified them all and charged two with cutting him, and the third with striking him with a black jack.

Oatsquay also charges another Hungarian with cutting him. He fled after the assault and is still at large.

William Williams, of West Front street, has entirely recovered from a recent illness.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

On this, the occasion of the celebration of his twenty-fifth and Silver Jubilee Anniversary Year, Al. G. Field has been successful in placing on tour for this quarter-century-marking year the biggest and best minstrel organization in the history of American minstrelsy. Of a higher order from every standpoint of producing does the Al. G. Field's Greater Minstrels excel this season. Not alone are the scenic appointments more elaborate and beautiful, the organization bigger than before, but the series of stupendous, beautiful, and gorgeous productions in this season's scenic revelation in minstrelsy easily places this show in a class by itself and conclusively proves the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels an attraction of the highest order of excellence. What was, "David the Minstrel at the Court of Saul," has this season been elaborated by the mammoth and beautiful transformation scene from the Court of Saul to a floral conservatory or Palace of Flowers entitled the "Floral Festival" which is, in itself, a surpassing marvel of ingenuity and stagecraft. The Armbruster Scenic Studio employed for this special piece of work a European artist whose effort in behalf of the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels was its just reward at the recent Columbus Industrial Exposition where the scenery was viewed critically by thousands of visitors and the unanimous verdict was that this most marvelous scenic equipment was "truly most artistic and wonderful." The minstrels will appear at the Plainfield theatre, Wednesday afternoon and evening, January 18.

Al. G. Field and a Group of Minstrels to Appear at the Plainfield Theatre January 18.

Westfield, Jan. 11.—Dr. M. H. Cryer, of the University of Pennsylvania, will deliver a lecture on medical work in public schools before the Union County Dental Society, medical inspectors and principals, in the Washington School, this place, tonight.

Westfield, Jan. 11.—At its organization meeting Monday the Board of Health re-elected Dr. Harrison, president; C. W. Harden, secretary; Dr. J. L. Lord, inspector. It was voted to ask the council for an appropriation of $1,500.

The Misses Maizie and Katheryn Gray, of East Second street, have returned from a visit with friends in Newark.

NEWSPAPER "AD" OFFERS TO SELL ROYAL BONES.

Dr. H. D. Siegfried, of Denver, Ill., says he owns the skeleton of the Archduke Johann, brother of Emperor Joseph of Austria. He says the bones have been in his possession for twelve years, but refuses to tell how they became his property or when or where the archduke died or the circumstances which brought him to this part of America.

When Dr. Siegfried learned the royal family of Austria was interested in the fate of the archduke he opened negotiations with them. He refused yesterday to explain the terms which he demanded for the bones.

When Dr. Siegfried's attention was called to the fact than an advertisement appeared Monday in a New York newspaper offering the bones for sale, he refused to give further information. The advertisement reads:

GOLF.

The promised golf letter of explanation concerning knotty problems in the rules has been received from Charles B. Macdonald. As the golfer in question has been identified with the game in this country for many years, to say little of the fact that he is also on the St. Andrew's Rules of Golf Committee, this latest statement on his part cannot fail to create a stir.

In the opinion of Mr. Macdonald, the false impression not only concerning the mallet-headed putter, but other points as well, is hard to understand. Incidentally, he handles Walter J. Travis without gloves, as may be seen by the following:

"It is extraordinary that one so expert at the game as Mr. Travis, and who is also the editor of a strictly golfing paper, should make such erroneous statements. An important point which he refuses to recognize is that only the clause on the form and make of golf clubs has been authorized by the Royal and Ancient Golf Club in general meeting. Nothing that the Rules of Golf Committee can do makes a rule of golf unless it is approved by the Royal and Ancient Golf Club. The note has not been approved in general meeting, consequently, as Capt. Burns states in his letter, we are at liberty to interpret the clause to our own satisfaction."

BASEBALL.

The new grounds for the New York Nationals at Marlin Springs, Tex., are ready for play. Groundmaster John Murphy, who keeps the Polo grounds in fine condition during the playing season and adds attractive features in the way of landscape gardening, was heard from Monday by Secretary William Gray, of the Giants. Murphy has been at Marlin Springs for the last month. He has been engaged in laying out a diamond on the plot of ground presented to the Giants for their permanent training grounds by the citizens of Marlin. Murphy writes that the field is now in good condition for a baseball game.

Preliminary arrangements were made Monday to banquet Connie Mack and his 1910 champions in Mahanoy City, Pa., upon Mack's return from abroad. The date has not been decided upon. Part of the entertainment to be provided for the guests will be a thorough inspection of the mines. Several National League stars have expressed their intention to be present at the event, which is to be in the nature of a testimonial from Skulkill County admirers of Manager Mack and his team.

Almeida, the Cuban third baseman, who hit .262 in his games against the Tigers and .300 against the Athletics' pitchers, besides playing a sensational game on the field and on the base line, may be a member of the Reds next season, according to Frank Bancroft.

Claiming that he has interested a number of local sportsmen, Fletcher, the third-league promoter, is spending a few days in Pittsburg, and at the same time boosting his project. He said yesterday that his new league will start in 1912 and will be strictly an all-star organization.

Chairman August Herrman, of the National Commission, announces that the new position of assistant to himself has been offered to Joseph Flanner, of President Ban Johnson's staff, in Chicago. This position will pay $2,000 a year and traveling expenses.

President Taylor of the Red Socks, has heard from pitcher Joe Woods, and the flinger says he will accept a cut in salary, such as Taylor had agreed upon. Woods writes that he is ready to sign his contract at the cut figure.

what could be gathered it appears extremely improbable that any of the appointments will be confirmed. If this is the case, the present incumbents will hold over until the mayor sends in such names as the city fathers will approve.

MAY LOSE THEIR LICENSES FOR FIGHTING OVER FARES.

Joseph Parsons and Lemuel Donaldson, colored cabmen, were fined $3 each in the city court this morning by Judge William G. DeMeza for fighting near the North avenue Railroad station on Saturday. Both men pleaded guilty.

Judge DeMeza said in imposing the fines that he intends to break up the disorderly conduct of hackmen who in their over anxiety to secure fares are careless of the ordinance which prohibits quarreling and fighting over them. It is likely that the two men implicated in this last scrape will lose their licenses as Mayor Moy promised them that punishment if they were found guilty. They were arrested by Patrolman John Kelley.

The hustle and worry of business men,

The hard work and stooping of wokmen,

The woman's household cares,

Are too great a strain on the kidneys.

Backache, headache, sideache,

Kidney troubles follow.

A Plainfield citizen tells you how to cure them all.

A. C. Lazzi, 44 Elm place, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for five years and from my experience with them, I feel that I cannot give them too much rpaise. I have to do a great deal of stooping at my work and I think my kidneys became weakened in this way. I suffered from a dull, grinding pain in my back and also had attacks of rheumatism. Another scource of annoyance was irregular passages of the kidney secretions. I finally began using Doan's Kidney Pills procured at Randolph's drug store and I was soon in good health. Since then hard work has brought on one or two slight attacks of backache but a few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills have never failed to give me instant relief."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 15, 1911.

Topic.—Lessons from great lives—I. Abraham.—Gen. xxii, 1-18. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

Abraham was the first great character in God's development of a special people through whom the Messiah or Saviour of the world was to come. He is therefore well called "the father of the faithful." He was the head of those who were to believe in one God, first of all the Israelites and later on spiritually the father of all the disciples of Christ. Such a position placed him high in the history of the church of God and has given him an important place in the history of the world. Such a life should be fully read in the Bible in connection with the great lessons taught us from his wonderful career.

Abraham teaches us a lesson on faith—faith in the one living and true God. In the times of Abraham idolatry held absolute sway, with very few exceptions, and Abraham was one of them. His people were idolaters. His own family, except himself, believed in and worshiped idols. His father's business was that of selling idols, many of which Abraham is said to have destroyed. In such an age it took great courage to believe in one and a spiritual supreme being, yet Abraham stood the test. Never did he doubt, never falter in his faith. Such faith is greatly needed today. In our age much doubt and skepticism are abroad in the land. Many are confused and fearful. But no one should be. We should be strong, bold, courageous in our faith and not "tossed about by every wave and wind of doctrine." If we be we shall be kept on the jump most of the time. Rather let us "be steadfast and immovable," and, like Abraham, we shall receive our reward.

Abraham teaches us a lesson of obedience. Faith and obedience must go hand in hand. If we believe in God we acknowledge His right to command us, and, being commanded, we must obey. Believing in God when Abraham was called by Him to leave his own country and go to a strange one, which He would show him, Abraham obeyed without question and without hesitation. "Abraham departed, as the Lord had said." How the Lord called him we do not know, nor is it necessary to know. He did call him, and Abraham obeyed.

His not to reason why;
His not to make reply;
His but to do or die,

as God desired of him. Would that more such implicit obedience to God existed among His people today! Too many modern Christians are like Jonah rather than Abraham. They are ordered to one place and go to another, they are told to do one thing, but neglect or refuse to do it.

Abraham teaches us a lesson on faithfulness under test. God desired for His own all wise purpose to put Abraham to a severe test. Therefore He called upon Him to sacrifice Isaac, his only and long promised son. But Abraham stood the test. He carried out the command of God literally until God Himself, accepting the will for the deed, invoked it and blessed Abraham for his stedafastness under such a severe trial. We are being constantly tested and tried. Let us follow the example of Abraham and stand the test, showing an entire consecration to God that cannot but influence all about us.

A Christian Endeavor Hero.

When the city of Peking, China, was stormed by the international armies in 1900, after the Boxer massacres, the first to reach the top of the wall was a boyish private soldier of the Fourteenth Infantry. His name was Calvin P. Titus. He was an earnest Endeavorer, and the honor and promotion that came to him on account of his bravery—he received a medal from congress and President McKinley appointed him to West Point—did not quench his religious zeal.

As he desired to enter the ministry, the military authorities have prevailed upon him to be ordained for this work and accept a chaplaincy in the army. He has been ordained in the United Brethren church, and after he has the specified ministerial experience he will be appointed chaplain and will work among the soldiers.

A Missionary Stock Company.

A unique method for collecting missionary contributions has been adopted by the missionary committee of the Granby society, Montreal. A neat card has been printed as follows:

Application for shares in the Granby Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor Missionary and Educational company. I hereby subscribe for ——shares of stock in the above named company. Shares in this company are $1.20 a year, payable monthly (10 cents), the year to end Dec. 31. Name ——. Address ——. Do not subscribe anything if it will reduce your other missionary giving.

With the card goes a pretty certificate of membership in the company.

PEN POINTS.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Some of the more progressive Republicans of Gloucester are contemplating the organization of a citizens' party.

Pay-as-you-enter cars have been put on duty on the White Line of the Paterson trolley service, and are the first to be employed on long runs of that system.

Slipping as she was about to go down the cellar, Mrs. William Huff, of Paulsboro, plunged headlong down the steps and sustained a fractured hip, besides serious bruises.

The Paterson police have been unable to find any further trace of the owner of the coat found on the railing of the raceway at Spruce street, last Friday night, which is the property of Miss Josephine Haverman, an escaped inmate of St. Mary's Hospital, Hoboken, and who is said to be slightly demented.

Gertrude Lynch, seven years old, of 748 North Twenty-sixth street, Camden, died Sunday in the Cooper Hospital from injuries received the night before when a wagon containing her and her father was struck by a train at State street crossing. The condition of John Lynch, the father, remains unchanged, and his recovery is looked for.

While burning some rubbish in an iron furnace out-of-doors Sunday J. F. Stradling, of Centre street, Woodbury, lost a gold watch and fob. After a long search he decided to look in the furnace, the fire in which had well burned out. He found the timepiece among the ashes. The fob was burned, but he says the watch was unharmed and was still running after several hours in the hot ashes.

Joseph Hillmyer, Jr., and Arthur Clinton, chauffeurs, narrowly escaped death in an automobile collision at Harney's corner, just outside of Trenton, Sunday. It was a head-on collision and both cars turned over in the ditch by the side of the road. Both men were thrown out with great. They were found unconscious and taken to Trenton by a touring party. The colliding machines were completely wrecked.

CURIOUS SPECIES OF FLOWER IS EXHIBITED.

There is on exhibtion at the Montclair Club, a curiosity in the shape of a flower more than seven feet high. It was grown in the home of Councilman William H. Schoonmaker, of 86 Clinton avenue, that city.

The exhibit consists of a mottled black and white sttaik about one and one-half inches in diameter and of a decidedly snaky appearance. At its top is the flower, consisting of one huge purple colored petal shaped like a lily. There's a purple stamen more than three feet above the flower proper.

Several years ago, a friend presented to Mr. Schoonmaker a curious bulb which had been procured in the tropics. Every spring, the Montclair councilman sets this bulb out in his yard. About a month later there grows from it a green palm like the plant with hundreds of delicate fronds so closely interwoven as to present the appearance of several great leaves. During the summer season the plant is a much admired ornament of the lawn.

When the early frosts of October come, the green top dies and Mr. Schoonmaker has the bulb packed in dry sand and removed to the cellar; and from this dry bulb with no moisture springs the curious stalk and flower now on exhibition. Mr. Schoonmaker says it takes about six to eight weeks for the flower to develop; it then lasts about a week when it begins to decay.

Many flower lovers and amateur botanists have viewed the curious flower since it was taken to the club parlors Saturday night but none of them have been able to classify it properly. Town Clerk Harry Trippett, who is much interested in botany and natural history and who is able to classify almost every plant brought to him, says he never saw anything before to resemble it. He says, however, that the curious specimen belongs to the same order as the swamp plant common to New Jersey.

Former A. O. H. Head Dead.

John J. Gavigan, one of the best known potters in the United States, died Sunday after an illness of more than a year. He lived at 200 Reservoir street, Trenton. He was taken ill with insomnia, and nervous troubles followed. Then he contracted rheumatism, and one ailment aggravated the other until he became very bad. Mr. Gavigan resigned as superintendent of the Bellmark pottery about a year ago. Since that time he had been confined to his room. Mr. Gavigan was a prominent member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. Besides holding several local offices, he was state president of the organization for some time.

Westfield, Jan. 11.—Before the Woman's Club at Westfield Monday afternoon, Mrs. F. L. Loomis read a paper on the "Developement of the Drama." Violin selections were rendered by Mrs. Scharf, accompanied by Mrs. Harry M. Taylor.

LICENSE INSPECTOR NAMED BY THE EXCISE BOARD

The Republican Board of Excise of Elizabeth last night selected a Democrat, Patrick Whelan, of the Third Ward, as license inspector to succeed Jacob Hagin, who served for one year. His election was made possible by the vote of Peter M. Kling, who, it is said, supported the two Democratic members, Michael P. Devine and Owen McLaughlin, in return for their aid in electing him president to succeed Henry Fromm.

Besides Whelan and Hagin Michael F. Dillon, David Cunningham, Richard Williamson, John J. Woodruff and Frank Fagan were named. Williamson and Cunningham are Republicans. On the first ballot Woodruff, Whelan and Dillon got one vote each and Hagin got two. On the second ballot Hagin got two votes, Cunningham one, Williamson one and Whelan one. On the third and deciding ballot Whelan got three votes and Hagin two.

Nathaniel H. Astfalk, Jr., whose father applied for a license unsuccessfully for several months and finally won, only to have it taken from him again through a writ of certiorari on behalf of citizens who claimed the license was granted illegally, was granted a license last night. His place is at 1191 East Grand street. The elder Astfalk lost his license after he had, according to the statements of former Mayor Victor Mravlag, frequently violated the Sunday closing law. Peter M. Kling voted against granting the license.

The board adopted on first and second reading an amendment to the tranfer rule. The amendment, introduced by Commissioner Devine, gives a saloonkeeper the right to transfer his place, if the board permits, to any part of the city. Under the present rule he cannot transfer from the ward in which his place is located.

According to the annual report submitted to the Board by City Clerk Kenah, a total of $133,985 was received from liquor licenses during the year, being $44,630 more than last year. Seven inn and tavern license applications were refused and nine saloon license applications were rejected. Three bottlers' licenses were denied.

OF PIANO BUILDING

A great deal of stress is laid on priority of manufacture by many piano makers.

We lay stress on the facts that we were pioneers when we started in 1839, and that fifty years ago our pianos were awarded the highest gold medals of award, but we attach far more importance to the fact that our piano is today the supreme quality and the maximum value.

Over 139 medals of award mean nothing to the buyer today unless we are still worthy of the "award of highest honors." Today the Hallet & Davis is better than ever, and is as good as a piano can be made.

Prices are very moderate. Catalogs and full information about buying a piano mailed free.

COUNCIL IN ROW OVER FIRE CHIEFS' ELECTION

The Somerville Borough Council Monday night refused to confirm the election of Dr. Charles F. Halstead and John Gernert, Jr., as chief and assistant chief of the local fire department. Halstead and Gernert were elected by the firemen Saturday night without opposition, after they had been nominated by a committee of three firemen from each of the four companies of the department.

Only thirty-two of the 135 firemen in the department turned out to ratify the action of the committees in nominating Halstead and Gernert, after they had been charged with incompetency by the borough council. Halstead had resigned after the charges and Gernert promised to resign, it is said, if the charges were withdrawn, so that he might leave the department with a clean record.

The council at first declared its intention of appointing a paid chief to manage the fire department, but this met with so much opposition by the volunteer firemen that the council finally agreed to allow the firemen to select their own chief and assistant with the understanding that they would pick out men who were well qualified for the positions. The action of the fire committees in selecting the old officers, who were under the ban of the council is now looked upon by that governing body as a breach of faith and a direct slap in the face at its authority to discipline the members of the department for inefficiency.

"Things have now arrived at that stage where it remains to be seen whether the borough council is running the fire department or the fire department is now running the Borough Council," said a councilman.

The council introduced on ordinance which empowers it to appoint a paid chief and an assistant chief. This power will be used to depose the present chief and assistant elected by the firemen at the next regular meeting of the board next month.

R. F. Tallamy, of West Front street, who recently purchased the property adjoining his residence, which was occupied by the Charity Organization Society, will remodel the dwelling and turn it into apartments.

At the Park avenue Baptist church this evening the prayer meeting will be in charge of George A. Hall and led by the Sunday-school. Special music will be sung and a good time is promised all who attend.

Others selected were: Vice-president, Edwar A. Brennan; second vice-president, Walter C. Tenney; third vice-president, Major C. Callman; financial secretary, Anthony A. Sattler; treasurer, Monroe Callman; recording secretary, Patrick Keelan; librarian, Frank Schroeter; sergeant-at-arms, John Bach; trustees to serve five years, Adam Schmidt, Joseph T. Hague and John F. Kenah.

Two retiring officers, Treasurer Edward E. Miannay and Recording Secretary Frank Masterson, were presented with umbrellas. Former State Committeeman Peter Egenolf presented the club with a handsome banner and American flag which was carried by the Tariff Club and other organizations in the early eighties.

A report that tickets for the inauguration are being disposed of rapidly was submitted. The club and its friends will leave Elizabeth at 9 o'clock next Tuesday for Trenton. At least 500 are expected to go along.

Mr. Miannay, the retiring treasurer, reported a balance on hand of $248.29. More than $900 was received during the year.

REPEAT CANTATA.

"Being Santa" is Sung at Trinity Reformed.

The Sunday-school room of Trinity Reformed church was filled to its utmost capacity last evening when the cantata, "Seeing Santa" under the direction of Miss S. Etta Raybert was repeated. The success of this musical playlet on its first presentation was so great that a repetition was demanded and last night's performance was even superior to the first in the opinion of those who saw the original production.

The cantata was given for the benefit of the Sunday school library a silver collection being taken at its close. The children from the Children's Home were present on invitation of the Sunday-school and enjoyed the entertainment hugely. Miss Marjorie Lozier presided at the piano and was assisted by E. D. Young with the chorus. Miss Raybert was assisted by Mrs. Leonard Sorge and Mrs. J. M. Tice. A handsome sum was realized for the library.

LECTURE ON ATHENS DRAWS BIG AUDIENCE

One of the largest audiences ever gathered together in the edifice crowded the auditorium of the Congregational church last night to hear a lecture on "Athens, Ancient and Modern" given by Miss Florence A. Stone, under the auspices of the Women's Association of the church and the Men's club.

Miss Stone is a gifted speaker and with her sixty or more views of this interesting and historic city held the undivided attention of the audience from start to finish of her address. Greatest interest was manifested in the scenes from ancient ruins of Athens in which were included the Acropolis, Stadium and other features indicative of its highly cultured people. In contrast with this were shown pictures of the modern city which has had the study of Miss Stone for many years of residence.

The lecture was given for the benefit of the church enlargement fund which has grown to considerable proportions. When plans are completed for the improvement work will be begun and it is hoped that the day is not far away when the object will be accomplished.

EDITOR TALKS EDUCATION

Henry T. Bailey of Massachussetts Contrasts Systems of a Generation.

AT THE P. H. S. AUDITORIUM.

Old Timers Believed Child was Criminal—Now Looked Upon as Human Being and Taught Accordingly.

Before a large audience of teachers, students and others, Henry T. Bailey, of Massachusetts, editor of School Arts magazine, delivered a lecture in the Plainfield High School auditorium last evening the burden of which was the social idea in education. Mr. Bailey contrasted very cleverly the different attitudes of teachers to pupils during the past thirty years bringing out the fact that the present system of teaching bears always in mind that the child is a human being and that its best development comes through the widening of its horizon, the broadening of its intellect by humane treatment and the teaching of self sacrifice for the general good.

Mr. Bailey said in part:

"The present generation is passing through three eras of education. The idea prevalent thirty years ago was the patriarchical system, school was in charge of a despot. Then came the military era when the teacher was a general ordering his cohorts with military precision. Now we are getting more and more each year the social era which treats the child like human beings.

"The patriarchical system centered on the subject taught, the military on the method. The social centers on the child himself who is to be developed. The patriarchical school emphasised rules and taught books; the military empasised principles and used things brought from outside; the social emphasises practice and teaches from life, customs, habits and motives.

"Under the first system mentioned the child was a criminal to be restricted, confined and punished; under the second he was a raw recruit to be disciplined and beaten into shape. Under the social system he is simply an undeveloped creature to be brought out and formed by his own activity and recreations, each one according to the pattern which his own individuality gives. He is not being prepared for some future life; he is learning life by living it.

"The school management should be such as to teach him self-government, self-sacrifice, conformity to the social rules of life and helpfulness to his fellowmen.

"The whole training of the old school is competitive, each striving for his own highest good regardless of others. The social school should train the child in co-operation, in self-sacrifice for the common good; the child's best self should be brought to the top as the motive leading him to the best performance his personal ability will permit."

PRAYER SERVICE HELD AT PARK AVENUE BAPTIST.

The mid-week prayer meeting at the Park Avenue Baptist church was a highly interesting event last night. The meeting was in charge of Superintendent George E. Hall, of the Sunday-school who was assisted by members of the choir and Mrs. Robert Giddes, soprano, of the First Baptist church choir.

"Characters of the Bible" was discussed and stories told by the members. A feature of the services was the music. A double quartet rendered selections and the Sunday-school orchestra, under the leadership of Arthur S. Mosher aided materially to the evening's devotions. Among those who took part in the speaking were Mrs. W. S. Lowry, Miss Elmira C. Runyon, Miss F. G. Hawkins, D. M. Runyon, Mrs. Gabriel Reid Maguire, Mrs. Cornelius Compton and George E. Hall.

PARENTS WORRIED OVER BOY BITTEN BY A DOG

Martin Kubierschky, of Franklin place, father of Klaus Kebierschky, the young boy who was bitten on the leg by what is thought to have been an Irish terrier near the Plainfield High school last Friday, is considerably exercised over the occurance and as it has been impossible for the police to locate the dog or its owners he would like to make an appeal to the women to whom the dog evidently belonged that they present the dog for examination by the Health authorities.

The fact that the dog may have been ill or afflicted with rabies is what is bothering Mr. Kubierschky and he wants to make sure of one thing or the other. If there is danger that his son will contract the disease he wants to know it so that proper preventative measures may be taken. The parents of the boy are much perturbed over the occurance and woul appreciate it if the owners of the dog would come forward and allow their animal to be put under observation.

Mr. Kubierschky said this morning that he does not want the dog killed or harmed in any way he merely wants the satisfaction of knowing the truth so as to remove the worry now consuming both himself and his wife.

AMERICAN MINSTRELSY OF THE HIGHEST ORDER

What is the representative and distinctive type of stage entertainment in America? The thinking man will immediately answer "Minstrelsy." And he will be correct. Drama, Comic Opera, Musical Comedy, Pantomime

—all the various styles and forms of stage entertainment with which theatre-goers are familiar were brought across the seas. They have been modified in form to suit American conditions, it is true, but the fact remains that they are aliens. Minstrelsy, from the time of its very inception, has been a strictly American institution. Its fundamental principles have been modified but little. Progresive managers have seen that this type of entertainment has kept abreast of the march of progress, but it is still, on the whole, the same entertainment in form that it has been for years. No minstrel manager would dream of presenting a minstrel show without a first part—and it is altogether unlikely that the theatre-going public would accept his innovation if he did. In these days of giant changes in every branch of human activity the minstrel show, like the circus, brings to the public mind a realization that those of the olden time builded well, that the form of entertainment which they devised was strong enough to endure through the years— and for this reason it is perhaps the most welcome of all present-day forms of amusement. In form the Al. G. Field Greater Minsrels— the oldest, biggest and best of American organizations—still hews closely to the ideals of the past, but in the matter of presenting surprises, novelties and ultra-meritorious modern features it is "the last word" in American amusement. This mammoth organization with a company of sixty-five recognized artists will be the attraction at the Plainfield Theatre, Wednesday, January 18, matinee and night.

P. H. S. GRADUATES WIN HONORS AT RUTGERS

Three graduates of the Plainfield high school are among the honor men for last year in Rutgers College, the list of distinguished students having recently been published in the catalogue of that intitution. The local men are Cornelius F. Schenck, George Stanley Robins and Harold W. Schenck. They were graduated form the city high school in the class of 1909 and are now sophomores at Rutgers.

The honor list is composed of the men in the two under classes, who have maintained a scholarship standing among the first quarter of the class. The honor men in the junior and senior classes are not announced until the end of the senior year. Frederick M. Smith and Delancey Ferguson, also of this city and graduates of the local High School will undoubtedly be among the honor men in the class of 1911. Both of them have been on the high scholarship roll for the past two years.

Mr. Ferguson and Harold Schenck are taking the classical course, Mr. Smith and C. F. Schenck are studying to be civil engineers, while Mr. Robins is pursuing the study of chemistry. The fact that these men have been placed on the honor roll speaks well for the preparatory work of the Plainfield High school since the men in the college have been prepared at some of the best secondary schools in the country.

WATER CONTRACT OFFER

Frank Bergen Suggests Proposition for Agreement With City.

TO INSURE LOCAL SUPPLY.

Committee of Judges to Decide at Any Time Whether Company Should Act to Protect Plainfield's Supply.

Upon the invitation of the water committee from the Common Council, Frank Bergen, of the Plainfield-Union Water company, met the committee and a large number of prominent citizens from the city and borough in the council chambers, last night, and for nearly three hours discussed the various phases of the water problem. The purpose of Mr. Bergen's appearance before the committee and other citizens, was only another step in the plan to solve the water question so far as Plainfield is concerned in the most satisfactory manner possible. The chief aim of the special water committee, a councilman said today, is to devise ways and means to secure for Plainfield an adequate water supply for future time and of course, he added, it is anxious to conserve the local supply so far as possible.

Mr. Bergen in coming before the meeting was prepared to make a tentative offer of a contract. He stated that the company is willing to enter into a contract with the city for ten years, with the privilege of two renewals for an equal period, somewhat on the basis of the present contract, that is, the company to continue to furnish water to Plainfield and North Plainfield and the towns along the line of the railroad between this city and Elizabeth, not including the latter city. If at any time, however, there be any serious question as to the adequacy of the supply for Plainfield and North Plainfield the stipulation is that a commission of three engineers be appointed, one by the city, one by the company and a third by the American Institute of Mining Engineers and if in their opinion it is thought best to conserve the supply for Plainfield and North Plainfield and cut off the other towns, the company will abide by that decision. It was suggested by him that the provision for the appointment of three engineers be made a part of the contract with both the city and borough.

According to Mr. Bergen neither he personally nor the company is alarmed over the future water supply for the city and borough, believing that there is ample water her for many years to come. Local water conditions were discussed freely from every standpoint, those at the conference accepting the opportunity to ask Mr. Bergen a wide range of questions on the subject. Mr. Bergen showed a disposition to be generous in giving his qustioners all the information possible that would tend in any way to enlighten them on any aspect of the problem.

In addition to the members of the special water committee, of which Councilman Frederick E. Mygatt is the chairman, others present included Alexander Gilbert, John B. Dumont, Charles W. McCutchen, Joseph O. Osgood, William J. Buttfield, Charles J. Fisk, Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett, R. Henry Depew and William M. Stillman.

The special water committee has arranged for a meeting to be held at the council chambers tomorrow night, when the public will be invited to attend and express opinions.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD FIRE BLOCKS LEHIGH TRAFFIC

All traffic on the Lehigh Valley railroad at South Plainfield, was held up for half an hour at 6 o'clock, last night, by a slight fire in the drop forge plant of the Spicer Universal Joint Works. The Middlesex Volunteer department laid a line of hose across the tracks and both passenger and freight trains were stalled while is remained. The hold-up occurred just at the railroad's busy hour and a string of cars extended in either direction for two miles.

The fire was in the forge room of the plant and was caused by an employe neglecting to shut off the oil supply leading to one of the furnaces. After the men had left the place for the night the liquid continued to run until it had spread over the floor and reached a hot blast pipe. The oil blazed up but found little to feed upon beside itself as the floor is earthen and the building of steel and glass. The only thing to burn was several wooden window sashes.

The volunteer department responded to an alarm, the first it has had since it was equipped and 1,000 feet of hose was laid to the scene, the company's entire supply. Chief William J. Hamilton was in charge. The water was turned on the window sashes while sand was used to extinguish the oil flame. The damage is placed at about $50.

PEARY PROVES CLAIM TO POLE DISCOVERY

All doubt as to the success of Commander Robert E. Peary having found the North Pole were set aside yesterday when the explorer proved it conclusively and to the satisfaction of the Congresional Committee appointed to hear his proofs. Calculations made by Hugh C. Mitchell, an expert of the Geodetic Survey of the government have proved that Captain Peary actually reached to within 1.6 miles of the actual position of the mythical stick.

The calculations of Mr. Mitchell were confirmed by separate figures made by Charles R. Duvall, another member of the Geodetic Survey. These two experts took positions from different records as submitted by Commander Peary and their determinations of longitude and latitude were exactly alike. By this method it was proved that the claims made by the explorer are practically valid.

TAFT WANTS A REPORT FROM ALDRICH COMM'N.

President Taft is anxious that the country be informed of the progress made by the National Monetary Commission in studying financial systems. The President does not expect monetary legislation at this session of Congress, but has told callers part of the findings of the commission presented to the nation before the end of the session.

The President, according to those who have talked with him within the last few days, does not wish to assume the attitude or dictating to the monetary commission. He is of the opinion, though, that in two years that body must have reached some general conclusion that would prove interesting to bankers and business men throughout the country.

CONSPIRACY IN TAXES ALLEGED

The afternoon session of the Middlesex County Board of Equalization of Taxes Tuesday was lively as the result of charges made by former Prosecutor George Berdine against H. Raymond Groves, president of the board and former county collector. Berdine and Groves are members of different factions in the Republican party. The former prosecutor alleged that Groves had entered into a scheme to get revenge upon Berdine and Leslie P. Johnson by raising the valuation of their properties on Livingston avenue. The Tax Board affirmed the assessment, not making any reductions.

Assessor Morris Ross was sworn to show that the valuations on these properties were not those originally made, a raise having been made. He said the president of the board had had the increases made. President Groves assured Mr. Berdine that he was willing to take the responsibility of the increase. Mr. Berdine thought he was too willing to assume it, and insisted that the responsibility be fastened upon him by the evidence. The Berdine valuation was $10,000 and he wanted it reduced to $8,500, while Johnson wanted a reduction from $3,900 to $3,100. The Groves and Johnson houses were purchased at the same time at the same price, and the Groves valuation was $3,100. Berdine insisted the Johnson valuation should accordingly be the same.

Leonard Wehrfritz testified that he dined with former Sheriff William Carman, a member of the county board, and Leslie Johnson, at Trenton, the day of the Republican State convention. At that time Carman had told them that he had an agreement with Groves by which the county board would soak the people. Groves and Carman wanted to soak both standing together on the vote. Mr. Carman said he had not used the word soak. He said he told them Groves proposed having a better idea of property valuations in New Brunswick than the members of the former board had, and that he (Carman) had agreed to stand by him on his judgment of New Brunswisk property valuations and Groves would stand by him on what the values should be in his district.

Mr. Berdine testified to a conversation he had with Carman on the street one day, when Carman had said Groves wanted to get even with him (Berdine) because of Berdine's supposed connection with the Groves circular, which created such a big stir last fall.

GOLF.

One of the growing important movements of the time is the spread of municipal golf. All the larger towns in the United Kingdom have awoke to the need of providing increased golfing facilities for their populations, and in no case have the local authorities in using the money of the ratepayers to increase this form of recreation had cause to regret the expenditure.

Recently the authorities of Manchester agreed to lay out a municipal course in Heaton Park, and arrangements are being made through the use of expert advice to render the round as interesting and varied as the canons of modern golf architecture now exact. In comparison however, with municipal golf in Scotland and in some of the southern districts of England, the price of one shilling at Manchester for the first round is high; but as the cost of experiment will be revised at the end of a year's working it will probably be found that the charges at Manchester can be lowered to a more reasonable figure to suit the pockets of all classes in the community, and especially the boys and young men. In Scotland, too, it is announced that an additional municipal golf course is likely to be added to the existing number.

A body of the ratepayers at Prestwick has petitioned the Town Council asking for a municipal course to be established. The governing authorities of the little Ayrshire town express the opinion that such a course would be a great benefit to the district. Though there are plenty of good golf courses in the neighborhood—notably at Troon—the majority cost a good deal for the very moderate purse to play upon, and no doubt one of the principal aims in arranging for municipal golf at Prestwick it to add to the attractiveness of the neighborhood for the holiday visitors.

BASEBALL.

Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, was in his day, one of the trickiest catchers the game has ever known. For a long time Connie wore a big rubber band around his glove. When he would reach out his hand for the ball he would pull out and let go that rubber band, and about nine times out of ten the umpire would call the batter out on a foul tip, when the chances were he had missed the ball by a foot or more.

Later the umpire refused to stand for the "foxy" catcher's claim that he wore the rubber band around his glove to keep the mitten from bulging or something of that kind.

Then Connie developed the method of arching his gloved hand over the ball and snapping one of the fingers of his ungloved hand up against the glove. Game after game was won by Pittsburg in those days by one sheer snap of Mack's finger against this glove, leading the umpire to believe that the batter had hit a foul tip.

Another trick that Mack worked with great success was bat tipping. He would stand closer up to the bat than any catcher stands today; shove out his glove as the batter swung his stick, and let the bat, as it came swinging around glide over his glove, regardless of the ball. In one game between Pittsburg and Baltimore in 1893 or 1894, McGraw was struck out five times by "bat tipping."

For the first time on record the New York Americans will play games in Cincinnati, Columbus, Indianapolis and other Western cities, where there is so much curiosity to see the players who finished second to the Athletics last fall.

Manager Chase will have more than thirty men at Athens, Ga. On February 28 Chase will leave New York with twenty-two players, including the regulars and several youngsters who are expected to make strong bids for regular places.

This bunch will be made up of Catchers Sweeney, Blair and Walsh, Pitchers Ford, Quinn, Warhop, Vaughan, Fisher, Cadwell and Rivell; Infielders Chase, Gardner, Laporte, Knight, Roache Austin, Otis, Johnson and Elliott; Outfielders Daniels, Cree, Hemphill and Wolters. Chase will take these players to Hot Springs, Va., for two weeks.

They will take the baths and will indulge in road work, but ball playing will be deferred until the men reach Athens, on March 15.

If all the good things said about Outfielder Lajeune are true, the Dodgers have picked up another coming star in the Central League recruit. Playing with the Evansville team last year, Lajeune led the league in slugging and base-stealing. Lajeune also topped the league's home-run list and holds the long-distance throwing record.

Clarke Griffith is eager to dispose of Lew Moren, the pitcher secured in the recent deal with the Quaker City club. To date there has been no great rush to get the "Millionaire Kid." Griffith is once more being censured by Redland fans for having failed to make a very judicial deal when he swapped Miller Huggins in favor of Dick Egan. Huggins outplayed Egan in all departments last season and incidentally was the champion moocher in the big league, being the recipient of 116 passes.

Patsy Donovan thinks he has a find in Harold Janvrin, the eighteen-year-old Boston schoolboy, just signed by the Red Sox. The youngster showed considerable class as an infielder with a high school team last season, and Fred Tenney was eager to have him play with the Rustlers, but John I. Taylor beat him to the player with a contract.

Dode Paskert says Bob Bescher could steal twice as many bases if he would learn to use the fallaway slide. Paskert asserts the big Red outfielder, who for two seasons has led the league on the paths, relies chiefly on his speed and ability to outguess the pitcher in stealing. If he could master the hook slide there would be a new base-stealing record, is the belief of his former team-mate.

Big Ed Konetchy is slowly convalescing from his recent operation up on his chest. The Cardinal first sacker will be confined in the hospital for another ten days, but hopes to be able to join his team when the spring training begins.

The Albany (New York State League) team will tour the New England States on their spring training trip. Games have been scheduled in Worcester, Lowell, Lawrence, Haverhill, Brockton and Lynn.

TRENTON'S CHAMBER, PUBLIC SAFEGUARD.

A committee to act as safeguard against the disposal to Trentonians of fraudulent stocks and bonds, advertising schemes and the soliciting of contributions for unworthy charities, was recommended by a resolution passed at a meeting of the trustees of the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday evening.

It has come to the attention of members of the Chamber of Commerce that efforts have been made in Trenton to dispose of stocks and bonds of questionable value, and that persons have been soliciting funds for charities of a questionable nature and this prompted the action of the trustees.

To protect Trentonians against such methods, persons soliciting funds for charities will be referred to the committee provided for in the resolution passed Tuesday evening.

This plan has been in operation in Cleveland, O.; Rochester, N. Y., and other places, and has proved very effective in removing illegitimate charities.

Zouaves As An Escort.

Elizabeth, Jan. 12.—The Veteran Zouaves, of this city, have been invited to act as escort for the Union County Democratic delegation at the inauguration of Governor Wilson in Trenton on January 17. The Zouaves will be attired in their old war uniforms.

The Home Building & Loan Association

Offers Cheap Interest for a Home Builder or Buyer

It figures out about like this, as a series will run out in twelve years: If $2,000.00 is borrowed (other amounts in same proportion),

|---|---|
| He pays $10.00 a month dues for 144 months | $1,440 00 |
| He pays $10.00 a month interest for 144 months at 6 per cent. | 1,440 00 |
| Entrance fee, search, etc., about | 25 00 |
| Total amount paid | $2,905 00 |
| He has the use of | 2,000 00 |
| At a cost for 12 years of | $ 905 00 |

Which is actual net interest of only 3¾ per cent. per annum.

This is on a basis of 6 per cent. When no money is on hand, the Association will provide money for the borrower at a very slight premium.

The regular meetings of the association are held at its rooms, 109 Park Avenue, on the third Monday evening of each month. New series are opened at each regular meeting. Further information may be had at that time or by applying to the secretary, Arthur E. Crone, care of the City National Bank. 10 25 4m t&t

Plainfield, N. J., January 12, 1911.

Since the Colonel's libel suit was kicked out of court by the highest tribunal of justice in the land, The World might refer to the sage of Blue Point, L. I., as the extinguished Mr. Roosevelt.

Not until the annual statement of the treasurer was published a few days ago did the taxpayers learn that during the 1910 payment had been made by the Common Council of some disputed bills to which the Common Council of 1910 had objected. One of these was for services rendered by a Newark detective agency in gathering evidence of the sale of liquor by New York department stores. So far as we know this obligation was not contracted by the city fathers and neither was it by the county authorities, who preemptorily declined to meet the expense incurred. The reason, it seems, that the taxpayers never knew that the city had finally paid the bill is that the business is transacted in such a way that the public does not learn at the time that any particular bill is ordered paid. In justice to the taxpayers all bills should be read aloud at the Council meetings. "Let there be light."

PINCHOT WILL EDIT A CONSERVATION MAGAZINE.

Gifford Pinchot is to be an editor. He isn't just going to write for somebody else's magazine, like Colonel Roosevelt, but he's going to have a magazine of his own.

The new magazine is to be called "American Conservation," and the first number will appear on February 5. It is to be a monthly publication, and while Mr. Pinchot will have much to say in it, it is anounced that it will not be a personal organ at all.

The new publication is to be the organ of the National Conservation Association of which Mr. Pinchot is president, and it will be managed by an editorial board composed of the officers of the association.

Overton W. Price, who will be a member of the editorial board of the new magazine, was associate forester when Pinchot was at the head of the forest service. Mr. Price said of the new magazine yesterday, in Mr. Pinchot's absence, that there would be nothing controversial in it. There was no intent, he said, to keep alive the Pinchot-Ballinger controversy, or to engage in personal encounters with anybody. The magazine, like the association, he asserted, would deal with methods rather than with men, and would open its columns to writers on all sides of conservation subjects.

P. H. S. NOTES.

Two plays are to be given by the juniors on Saturday evening January 21. The members of the casts are Roy Titsworth, Elmer Hunting, James Lindsay, Helen Ryder, Helen Platt, Burnett Doane, Edward Hanrahan, Bruce Conlin, Theodore Champlain, Helen Woolley, Laura Bristol and Mildred Brownley. The plays are "Chums" and "My Lord in Livery."

Miss Hannah Starks, of Philadelphia, is visiting her sister, Mrs. R. H. Hood, of Stelle avenue.

TO SIFT BRIBERY CHARGE.

Elizabeth School Board Asked Grand Jury to Investigate.

The Elizabeth Board of Education last night requested the Grand Jury to investigate the charges made by School Commissioner Charles Wenke of that city, that an architect who submitted plans for the proposed new high school offered him a $5,000 bribe should he favor the architect's plans.

Several New York architects were among the competitors, the plans having been submitted under the rules of the American Institute of Architects. Commissioner Wenke has not disclosed the name of the man who he says tried to bribe him.

Mr. Davis' Funeral.

There were so many friends of the late Robert Davis who were anxious to view the body of the Democratic leader at Jersey City last night that at one time the line of mourners extended two blocks. It was intended to have the body lay in state for an hour in St. Peter's church, where the solemn high mass was celebrated this morning, but this has been abandoned.

Kansas "Apple King" Dead.

Frederick Wellhouse, known as the "Apple King" at one time said to be the greatest apple grower in the world, died yesterday at Leavenworth, Kansas, aged eighty-two years. In 1890 the yield from the Wellhouse orchards was 80,000 bushels, and it required 200 cars to ship the fruit.

—In the report made by the special agent, Mrs. Stephen G. Van Hoesen, at the meeting of the S. P. C. A., on Monday a mention was made that the legal work of the society has been voluntarily done by Robert Newton Crane, to whom a vote of thanks was given by the society.

AN AVIATION COURT, A NEW JERSEY IDEA

Aroused by the two tragedies of avation that marked the close of 1910, and taking the hint from Governor Baldwin, of Connecticut, and the movement in the Legislature of Californai, J. Hood MacFarland, of Trenton, has prepared a bill for introduction in the Legislature this week providing for State control of aviation.

Mr. MacFarland would have the State empowered not only to make whatever inspection of machines and aviators might be deemed advisable but to control all flights whether for mere exhibition or for prizes and trophies in a regularly sanctioned meet, and control the meets themselves, issue permits, settle disputes inflict penalties and grant damages.

In order to carry out this plan the bill provides for the appointment of six men to form a court or commission of aviation, where cases can be tried involving accidents and law suits concerning transactions in the air. It will have power similar to those of a marine commission and the bill provides that the commission be furnished by the State with an aeroplane so that investigation can be made of any question involved in proceedings before it.

BLIZZARD IN WEST.

Wind Blowing Fine Snow in a Minus Thirty Temperature.

Montana is enveloped in a blizzard. The thermometer at 10 o'clock last night marked 25 degrees below zero with a stiff wind blowing fine snow.

At Havre, Montana, it is 30 below and at Glendive, Billings and other points equally cold. The thermometer has been gradually dropping for two days.

Train service is badly demoralized, with all overland and local passengers varying from two to twenty hours behind schedule time.

As a rule the stockmen are well prepared for feeding their cattle, sheep and horses and no losses are anticipated.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

A great deal of interest has been taken in the country dance which will be given in Friendship Hall on Friday night, January 20. It will be largely attended by young people from other places as well as Dunellen and New Market. "Zeb" Piddington, "Zeke" McKennon are in charge of the arrangements.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Firstbrook, who have been residing with the latter's parents, Captain and Mrs. B. A. Cole, of Washington avenue, for the past wto months, will move to Westfield, Saturday. Mr. Firstbrook is employed as reporter by the Westfield Standard.

Dr. George W. Endicott, of Plainfield, has purchased the Lewis Randolph farm in Piscataway Township, near New Market. It will be occupied at various times during the year by his son.

The New Market fire department will hold its annual meeting and election of officers next Monday night. A full attendance is requested.

Dr. P. W. Brakeley has been among the local people to be confined to his home by illness. He has been at home for about a week.

Bernard McGovern, who has been detained at home by illness for the past four weeks, has recovered sufficiently to return to work.

'PLAINS, AND FANWOOD.

Fireside Council, R. A., of Westfield, will hold installation of officers at its semi-monthly meeting to be held tonight in Arcanum Hall. All local members are requested to be present.

Joe. Alberts, the well-known and popular local ball player, is considering an offer to cover an outfield position with the Richmond club, for the coming season.

Rev. Mr. Hollingshead, of the Methodist church, is arranging to hold a series of special meetings in his church, beginning Friday evening January 20.

Daniel Dean, who has been visiting relatives in town, has returned to his home in Atlantic City.

George Frentz, a former resident here but now of Plainfield, has been visiting friends in town.

George Penny, who has been visiting friends in town, has returned to his home in Plainfield.

Mrs. Robert Walpole, of Front street, has been entertaining friends from out of town.

STAGECOACH ROBBERS.

Express Companies Used Drastic Measures In Dealing With the Old Time Highwaymen.

It was the treasure box of the Wells-Fargo company which transported practically all the gold and silver from the mining camps that was the special object of the old time stagecoach highwayman. A shrewd band of robbers would not hold up a stage unless they had good reason to think it carried a large shipment of gold, and they used every means to find out when these shipments would be made. The company, on the other hand, tried to deceive and trap them, and there was a war of wits as well as weapons. A favorite method of the company when their stages had been repeatedly robbed by some band whose success showed they had inside information as to the time of shipment was to let a rumor leak out that on a certain day a large amount of gold dust would be secretly sent out by special stage. This, of course, would reach the ears of some of the band and a robbery be duly organized. A spy would see a number of heavy boxes placed aboard and report all well. When the highwaymen halted the stage the driver and guard would meekly give up and crawl to the ground. Then just when the bands had grown careless from easy success there poured from the loopholed coach a deadly fire that at such short range wiped out the entire gang at the first volley, for the coach was a decoy, filled not with gold, but with men expert with the rifle. In 1866 three bands were thus blown to perdition on the old stage line between Virginia City, Nev., and Sacramento.—Washington Post.

THE STORE BUYER.

His Task of Selecting "Good Sellers" Is a Hard One.

Whoever has had difficulty in deciding which of two or more articles on a counter he will purchase may be able to appreciate the task which confronts the buyer of a stock of merchandise, says a writer in Collier's. The numbers of varieties offered for selection are almost beyond belief. In the toy department of a large wholesale house the following figures were obtained in regard to the goods actually being shown at one time in the sample rooms:

Magic lanterns, 250 varieties; boats, 300 varieties; horns, 1,000 varieties; Christmas tree ornaments, 2,000 varieties; dolls, 12,000 varieties.

In gathering this assortment of Christmas tree ornaments it was necessary to deal with 750 manufacturers throughout Europe, and the selection of 2,000 samples represents only a fraction of the samples submitted by manufacturers.

When it is considered that almost every person uses dishes at three meals a day and that the prices of plates may range from a few cents each to $1,000 or more a set, it is not surprising to learn that the same wholesaler would display in his sample rooms over 250,000 varieties of articles in china.

The buyer has within such ranges of variety opportunity to "make or break" the patronage of a store by the wisdom he uses in making his selections.

Kettledrum a Perfect Instrument.

The kettledrum, Gabriel Cleather contended, was perfectly competent to produce atmosphere as well as rhythm. Even to tune the instrument three things were required—a perfect musical ear, a fine sense of touch and five years' experience. After playing over a kettledrum melody written eighty years ago from Meyerbeer's "Robert le Diable," Mr. Cleather continued, "I venture to say that outside of the musical profession not one person in a hundred of those who listen to an orchestra in England today knows that timpani have notes and can give out a melody." No instrument, he added, had a greater range of power than the kettledrum, for none could be played more softly and none had greater penetrating power.—London Standard.

A German Memorial to Napoleon.

It will come as news to most persons that there exists in Germany a monument to Napoleon I. This curiosity is to be found about eleven miles from Alzeny, in the grand duchy of Hesse. The monument is situated near the Vorholz hunting lodge, at the summit of a wooded hill, and the spot is known as Napoleon's garden. It is a dwarfed pyramid of three sides, rather more than three feet in length. Upon it stands the inscription, in Latin, French and German, showing that it commemorates the marriage of Napoleon I. to Marie Louise, grand duchess of Austria, on April 1, 1810.—London Globe.

Went Papa One Better.

"I love you very much, papa," said five-year-old Willie as he crawled up on his father's knee.

"And I love you, too, Willie, when you are good," replied the father.

"But, papa," continued the little fellow, not to be outdone, "I love you just the same, even when you ain't no good."

He Was Warned.

Mrs. Jones—Did you really expect me to accept you the night you proposed? Mr. Jones—Yes, love. Just before I got to your house I heard a dog howl three times, saw the moon over my left shoulder and walked under a ladder.—Manchester Guardian.

A Light Touch.

Wickwire—I like Timmins' stories. He has such a light touch. Simmins—Yes; that's one thing in Timmins' favor. He rarely strikes one for more than two or three dollars.—Indianapolis Journal.

A PRISON MARRIAGE

It is matrimony day in the prison. In the reception room stand a row of women to be chosen as brides. There are about a dozen of them, and as many men will be brought up to choose them.

They are members of a penal colony on the Andaman and Nicobar islands, in British India. These matrimonial candidates are chosen for good behavior. When married they are given a hut and a few acres of ground on one of the islands and left together to make a home.

As I was saying, it is matrimony day, Saturday—these receptions take place on Saturday—and the candidates for husbands are in line, only women being present. The record of a man was read, giving his name, religion, age and the crime he was there for. Then he was admitted to the room where the expectant brides were standing. He looked strangely at them, for he had not seen a woman for ten years. Slowly he approached the woman standing at the head of the line of those who were of his religion. He chatted with her a few minutes and passed on to the next. While conversing with the first two or three he covertly cast his eye down the line. Suddenly he started, put his hand to his brow and passed the palm over his forehead. Then he went on chatting with the women as he passed them till he came to one near the end of the line. She turned away her face.

"You are"—he said and paused.

"I am."

"And you know me?"

"I might not have known you had I not heard your name and record read. You have suffered much."

"Did you know your act brought me here?"

"No."

"And the child?"

"I am here for the child as you are here for me."

The man shuddered.

"Did you see it die?"

"No; I got another to do it."

"Why?"

"I did not wish it to suffer."

The man paused, then said: "They made a mistake in sending me here for you. Perhaps they have made another in sending you for the child."

"I hope not."

"Why?"

"Because if that is so she suffers."

They talked for some time, and at the end of their conversation the man announced to the prison authority that he chose this woman. They went up to a table, and her history was read to him. The man who read did not know that they were a married pair.

A dozen years before poverty had maddened them. They quarreled, the woman disappeared, and every one was sure her husband had murdered her. She had given her daughter to be drowned—given her to a woman whom she thought a friend, but who was a secret enemy. This woman told that she had been hired to do the deed, and the mother was convicted.

The couple talked over what they should do. If they had known their child was dead, they would not have hesitated. They would have said nothing, but taken the home they were to receive on the Nicobars. But they did not know this. Should the man claim his freedom and look for the child? If he did so, the woman must remain a prisoner. They had been parted by the torment of poverty. If they took the home given them by the government, they would need little, and that little they would have. What should they do?

The woman decided. She would remain in prison while the husband went to look for the child. The man made his claim for freedom, his wife's existence proving his innocence. After much delay he was pardoned. This is the only short way civilized nations have yet found for untying the knot of a wrong conviction.

The man went away; the woman resumed her work. She could have stood the next Saturday in the matrimonial line, but she did not. She waited long and anxiously. Never did a prison official approach her but she looked at him eagerly to see if he were coming to tell her if her husband had returned.

A year passed. One day she heard her name called and, looking up, saw a keeper at the door. He beckoned to her. With a wildly beating heart she dropped her work and followed him. He took her to the office of the superintendent. There she saw her husband holding by the hand a girl of twelve.

Strange meeting! Fate that had separated them ten years before through the maddening influence of poverty had brought them together. They were where they had been when they were driven apart, but how changed! Greater trials had made the earlier ones seem light. They clung together in an embrace, the husband and wife weeping, the child smiling as an Indian seldom smiles.

But the mother was still a prisoner. She had not been convicted of murder, but the intent to murder. There was nothing for which she could be pardoned. She must serve her life sentence.

The superintendent solved the problem. "Go back," he said to the man, "to your cell. Next Saturday you and your wife shall be married and go to live on Nicobar. There you shall have the best home I can make for you."

The next Saturday among the marriages performed in the Andaman prison was one that had been authorized a year before. They were taken to their new home, given some provisions and for the first time in years were happy.

THE SEPARATION.

He Left Them In the Darkness, and They Saw Light When It Was Too Late.

"Uh-whilst yo' was gone," said Brother Smathers, relating the news to Brother Buckaloo, who had been on a journey, "a gen'leman 'peared on de scene yuh wid de noration dat he was a clarryvoyant and de seventh son o' suppin—I dunnah what—and was gwine to hold a secession in de lodge hall and show signs and wonduhs for de modest sum o' two bits for folks and 10 cents for betwixt sized chil-d'en; po'tly pussonage, wid a striped vest and woolly side whiskers, and 'bout the shade, he was, of de opposite side of a fish."

"Wisht I'd a been dar," enviously remarked Brother Buckaloo.

"Wisht yo' had, sah, uh-kaze I likes sympathy. "Well-uh, de side whiskered gen'leman took de money at de do', and de house was plumb packed, and den he blowed out de lights and 'nounced in a grizzly voice for everybody to set right still, uh-kaze for de fust spearmint he was uh gwine to whirl in and separate deir souls fum deir bodies."

"Mum-mum-muh Lawd, sah! Did he do it?"

"Not so's yo' could notice it. We dess sot and sot and waited and waited, and bimeby a gamblin' man dat wasn't skeered begun to snawt, and den he lit a light, and, behold, the puh-fessah was gone! He'd done separated us smaht growed folks fum our two bits apiece and de innycent child'en fum deir dimes and was gone fum us. Dat's all dar was to it, 'ceppin' it clinches de sneakin' s'picion I's had for, lo, dese many days dat a nigger wid side whiskers dess natu'ally kain't be right."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

VISITING CARDS.

Names and Messages Used to Be Scribbled on Playing Cards.

It is somewhat curious that so useful an invention as the visiting card should have been unknown to society until comparatively recent times. Yet 150 years ago the carte de visite did not exist. The belles of the seventeenth century used nothing in the shape of a name card, or "ticket," as it was afterward called. Invitations to routs and drums as well as names and addresses were written across the backs of playing cards, which in those days were made with a white reverse and innocent of the intricate pattern familiar to us in modern times.

Mary Wortley Montagu, a lady of ton, says the Connoisseur, would be apt to use a red playing card—a queen of hearts—for ordinary social purposes, while an amorous beau inscribed his name and the most tender of inquiries on the back of a jack of spades. The great world of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries was a small world. It was rigidly exclusive. Living in the same quarter of the town, the quality sent each other scribbled messages by the hand of a favorite page. Society, in a word, was informal in the midst of stately formalities, and we have no difficulty in believing the Comtesse de Boigne when she tells us that in 1800 Lady Harington used to trot up and down Bond street picking up guests for a party for the same night.

Quite Simple.

It is told, no matter on what authority, that a telephone company in Chicago has no end of trouble with its wires. They were continually out of order. Nobody seemed to know why. An investigation was started.

Most of the subscribers in the territory where the trouble was were Poles, Hungarians, Russians, etc. An expert after due consideration of the matter decided that the wires were unable to withstand the onslaughts of languages like Polish, Hungarian, Russian, etc.

"Can you suggest a remedy?" asked the officials of the telephone company.

"Certainly," answered the expert. "Substitute barbed wire."

The suggestion was followed. There was no more trouble.—Philadelphia Ledger.

To Spade It Up or to Plow It?

I am not sure but that the spaded garden has some advantage over the plowed one. The soil can be turned up just where you want it and as you want it by the use of the spade, while the plow works alike throughout the garden, though the soil may vary in depth and nature to a considerable extent. A spaded garden always looks best at the beginning, and looks count in gardening as well as elsewhere. But the gardener who has a liking for neatness will make his garden look well after a little in spite of all obstacles.—"Home Garden," by Eben E. Rexford.

A Courteous Boy.

"Would you rather for your mother or me to whip you?"

"I dislike to show favoritism, father," said little Clarence. "You and mother had better settle the matter between you by flipping a coin."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Would He?

It hardly seems probable that a man should suffer from corns on a wooden leg, but if the leg is made of oak would it not be natural that there should be acorn on it?—London Punch.

A Dear Victory.

"In your little family arguments do you ever succeed in convincing your wife that she is wrong?"

"Yes, but afterward I always deeply regret having done so."

Whatever we conceive clearly we express with ease, and words flow with ease.—Bolleau.

Feet So Sore Couldn't Walk Down Stairs—

TIZ Cured Her Quick.

If you have sore feet, tired feet, sweaty feet, lame feet, tender feet, smelly feet, corns, callouses or bunions, read what happened to Mrs. Crockett, of Jeffersonville. TIZ DID IT. Mr. Crockett says: "After the second treatment she walked downstairs one foot at a time. She has not been able to walk downstairs before in past five years, except by stepping down on each step with one foot at a time. This is remarkable. Send five more boxes."

No matter what ails your feet or what under heaven you have used without getting relief, just use TIZ. It's different. It acts right off. It cures sore feet to stay cured. It's the only foot remedy ever made which acts on the principle of drawing out all the poisonous exudations which cause sore feet. Powders and other remedies merely clog up the pores. TIZ cleans them out and keeps them clean. You will feel better the first time it's used. Use it a week and you can forget you ever had sore feet. There is nothing on earth that can compare with it. TIZ is for sale at all druggists, 25c per box, or direct, if you wish, from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill.

FATE OF THE WORLD.

The Four Different Ways In Which a Scientist Says Our Planet Will Come to an End.

The earth and all its inhabitants are doomed inevitably to destruction, according to Professor Percival Lowell, who declared that one of four possible fates awaits this planet and everything on it. A tramp star might strike the earth, he said, and grind it and its people to powder or ride full tilt into the sun, when the earth's living creatures would be scorched to death. Tidal friction, by its gradually retarding force, might paralyze the earth's motion so that one side of the globe would be eternally baked by the sun and the other side forever frapped. This has already happened to Mercury and Venus.

By the loss of all water and air through depletion or absorption the earth might become a dry, desiccated mummy of a planet, wandering lifelessly through space. Mercury, again, is an example of this, and so is the moon. The most sure death of all, however, as depicted by Professor Lowell, is the decay and freezing of the sun, which is certain to occur some time. When the last flicker is extinct that gigantic ball, bereft of all radiance and warmth, and its retinue of inert, dark tramps, among them the earth, will drift about awaiting collision with some other planetary derelict, which would mean at once destruction and a new birth.—Boston Journal.

VIGOROUS OLD AGE.

Men Who Did Good Work In the Evening of Life.

Enrico Dandolo was not elected doge of Venice until he was eighty-two years old, and he still retained the fire and vigor of his youth. He assaulted and took the city of Constantinople when he was ninety-two years old, himself displaying the gonfalon of St. Mark and animating his followers to the charge. Villars, the French general, in his eighty-fourth year, when crippled with wounds and disease, led a cavalry charge with the same light hearted contempt for danger displayed by him in his youth. The men who won distinction in high command during the mutiny against the English in India in 1857-8 were all of them well advanced in years. Sir Colin Campbell, the commander in chief, was sixty-five; Havelock was sixty-two, Sir Hugh Rose fifty-seven and Sir James Outram fifty-four. They stood the fatigue of field service in a tropical climate, with the thermometer at from 110 degrees to 119 degress in the shade, as well as younger men.—English Magazine.

"Fourteenth" Louis.

It is a singular fact that if you want to recollect the prominent events of the life of Louis XIV. all you have to do is to resolve the dates at which they took place into the figure 14. Thus Louis XIV. became king in 1643 under a regency when five years old; add 1-6-4-3—14. Again, he was born on the fourteenth day of September; count the words "day of September," and you will find them to be fourteen. Again, he became of age at fourteen, the legal age for kings of France. Again, he began his personal government at the death of Mazarin in 1661; add 1-6-6-1—14. Again, he reigned seventy-two years; multiply 7 by 2—14. Again, he died at seventy-seven—add 7-7—14. Again, his father, Louis XIII., died May 14, 1643; add 1-6-4-3—14. His grandfather, Henry IV., died May 14. Louis XIV. died in 1715 and so kept the 14 up even to his death, for add 1-7-1-5—14.

Pretty Good Fishing.

A sportsman was once on the beach at the outlet of a creek in New York state looking for shore birds when he saw a colored boy, who was fishing for perch, lay down his pole at the call of his mother to do some errand. The sportsman put his gun aside and took the cane pole and fished, adding a dozen perch to the boy's string and then sneaked off. Presently a second sportsman, happening that way, asked the boy the usual question and received this answer:

"Yess'r, dey's good fishin' heah. W'en I stop to run to de sto' fo' to get some cawnmeal fo' mam, de perch dey come outen de crick an' jes' strings deyselves awn my string. I don' on'stan' it, but dey's jes' as good fo' breakfas' 's if dey was cotched awn a hook."

A Debtor's Woes.

"The worst thing about owing people," sighed the woman, "is that it seems to give them the right to ask us such personal and impertinent questions about things that really should be none of their business. I never stave off my piano man, for example, that he doesn't ask how it is that I can afford to pay so much rent for my flat."—New York Press.

Disliked the Other Kind.

Philanthropic Caller (with subscription paper)—I shall ask your attention only a moment, sir. Are you a friend of the dumb brutes? Shorty McGinnis—You bet I am! That's why I hate cats, parrots and donkeys.—Chicago Tribune.

The Financial Menagerie.

"Were you a bull or a bear in Wall street?"

"Neither," answered the cautious man. "Not having funds to invest, I was a giraffe. I just rubbernecked."—Washington Star.

Speaking Trumpets.

Alexander the Great is said to have used a speaking trumpet.

To know how to wait is the great secret of success.—De Maitre.

A STRANGE CASE

"I tell you, doctor, the basis of life is electric."

"Why do you think so, doctor?"

"Among many reasons I will give you one. Recently I laid open the body of a frog, exposing the heart, which I paralyzed, and it ceased to beat. I applied a current from a galvanic battery, and the pulsations recommenced. I paralyzed it again and this time waited ten minutes before applying the current, but got the same result. I kept adding to the time till I proved that if the heart is recharged with electricity before decay sets in it will recommence its beats, and the process of pulsation will continue till something interferes."

"In other words, a beating heart uninterfered with will beat forever, just as a body launched in a vacuum will move forever."

"Exactly."

"Well, what do you propose?"

"As soon as the man is pronounced dead by the prison surgeon he is to be taken down and given to me. I intend to experiment upon him instead of a frog."

"I will willingly be your assistant, but I have no confidence in your success."

The next day, when Peter Hunt, convicted on circumstantial evidence of the murder of George Stanton, had been hanged by the neck until he was dead, the body was taken to a room in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, where Dr. Baker and his assistant, Dr. Arbuckle were awaiting it. The bearers withdrew, the door was locked, and Dr. Baker made an incision between two ribs overlying the heart. Dr. Arbuckle then applied the electric current, while Dr. Baker made successive pressures on the heart as one works the arms of a newborn child to start respiration. Presently he put his ear down on the subject's chest.

"Good!" he exclaimed. "It beats, but very slowly."

Arbuckle also listened with astonishment. A faint moan escaped the patient. The current was increased. The patient—or corpse—opened his eyes, closed them, opened them again and rolled them wildly. Dr. Baker took his wrist in his fingers and found the pulse to be about thirty to the minute. The current was again doubled twice, with the final result of a beat a second; then it ran up rapidly, and the current was gradually reduced till at last it was withdrawn entirely. Meanwhile the pulse had settled at about eighty to the minute; then the patient asked where he was.

The next morning, long before daylight, Peter Hunt was taken by the two physicians from the college to a road leading from the town where he had been hanged. There he parted with them, having promised that he would send daily reports to Dr. Baker as to his conditon.

The occasion of Hunt's hanging was this: There had been a long and bitter enmity between him and George Stanton, a fellow criminal. A quarrel had occurred one night, and the next morning Stanton was not to be found. Blood was discovered on Hunt's clothing, but it had come from a punch on his own nose given him by Stanton. Hunt's defenders used every means to find the man supposed to have been murdered, but failed. Hunt knew a place where Stanton would likely be found, but he believed that his enemy knew that he (Hunt) was being tried for murder and would keep in hiding till after conviction.

Hunt after leaving the doctors set out for the place where he believed Stanton would go as soon as he heard that his enemy had been hanged. The reason why Hunt felt confident of this was because together they had deposited considerable plunder there, the division of which they could never agree upon. The reason Hunt surmised that his partner in crime would remain in hiding was that after Hunt's hanging Stanton would get all this hidden treasure.

Hunt one evening after dark visited the place where the "swag" was buried under an oak tree that had been split by a bolt of lightning. He examined the ground and found that it had not been disturbed. Then he camped at the edge of a wood a few hundred yards away where he could watch. He slept with one eye open during the day and with both open during the night.

It was at 2 a. m. of the third day after his arrival that he saw a sudden flash of a match under the blasted tree. A full moon was hidden under a cloud, but in a few minutes the cloud rolled away. Suddenly Stanton, digging at the foot of the tree, looked up and saw standing before him the man who had been hanged.

Hunt was still very pale, and the moonlight made him appear paler. Besides, clotted blood stood under the skin where the hangman's noose had pressed against his neck. Stanton spoke never a word, but looked at him with eyes that appeared more dead than alive. Stanton threw his arms aloft, with a moan, and fell unconscious.

Every day for four days Dr Baker continued to receive reports from Hunt, who wrote that his heart "fluttered" a great deal. He didn't seem to recover from the shock. The last report was written on the fourth day after the hanging. It said that he had been through a painful experience the night before, and his heart was failing. He knew he was doomed.

One morning Drs. Baker and Arbuckle received each a note from the cashier of a bank stating that a considerable sum of money had been deposited by a strange man to their credit.

NELLIE EDNA CURTIS.

Violets or Roses

By Clarissa Mackie

(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

When Noel Osmond asked her if he might send flowers the night of the Hasken ball Milred Vard smiled enigmatically.

"You are very kind, indeed; and I am especially fond of white violets." Her quick glance caught his little start of surprise at the hint. White violets at that season were quite beyond the slim purse of young Mr. Osmond.

Noel's lips hardened into a straight line. All the pleasure he might feel in knowing that Mildred would wear his flowers was lost in the thought that the flowers would hold no meaning for her beyond their novelty and extravagance.

He did not remain long after that. Rather grave and preoccupied, he held Mildred's hand in his own for a brief instant and then went away. When he reached the florist's he turned in and asked for white violets. The clerk brought out a jar of the white blossoms, velvety, exquisite in texture, but quite odorless. The price was away beyond Noel's pocketbook, and he hesitated. Of course they might be charged—although he was poor himself, was he not the nephew of the rich Mr. Osmond and very likely his heir—and he need not be mortified in the sight of the girl he loved. Still Noel Osmond had come to the city with very high ideals of paving his way in the world and going without what he could not pay for.

The Vards were rich and fashionable people. But Mildred herself, the youngest daughter, was quite unspoiled by it all. Noel had found himself telling her of his fight for a place in the world and the ambition that kept him bright and keen eyed and fresh and clean hearted in the midst of a world of temptations.

Mildred had seemed to understand and their relations had been growing a little closer and Noel was hoping—hoping—some miracle might happen whereby he might become rich in a day and so be in position to declare his love.

And, knowing his poverty, she had expressed a wish for white violets!

A telephone bell rang sharply and the clerk turned to the instrument. Noel looked wistfully at the jar of violets. How he would have enjoyed sending that great mass of white blossoms up to Mildred! What was the man saying at the telephone?

"Yes, Mr. Kenyon, we have a few white violets—well, a good-sized bunch—send them up to Miss Vard? Yes, sir, thank you, sir!" He turned briskly to Noel.

"If you do not want these, sir, I have an order for them all."

"I won't take them," said Noel, turning away with a sick jealousy tearing at his heart. He knew Tom Kenyon well—Tom was as rich as Noel was poor.

He ordered pink rosebuds with grim, unpleasant mouth, and paid for them. As he strode homeward he felt for the first time the gall of poverty; he despised himself because he was too poor to be able to indulge the girl he loved. He could never hope to win her for his wife—what had he to offer her save youth and a perpetual struggle to keep up appearances?

Once more he would see her, would dance with her, talk to her; then he would go as far away as he could from this cold, unfeeling New York, where money was the standard in every walk of life. He would go into the west, where fortunes are made quickly, and perhaps some day, if Tom Kenyon did not step in between with his ready-made fortune—but it was very likely Tom would step in!

The hours intervening he spent in bitter calculations that only strengthened his resolve to cut it all and go away, and start his career over again in some city where Mildred Vard's lovely face and charming presence might never tempt him from work.

He carried these bitter reflections with him to the Hasken palace, where so many millions rubbed elbows that it seemed to Noel that the very air of the lighted rooms sparkled with gold dust.

He saw Mildred dancing with Tom Kenyon. He had never been jealous of Tom before, but the episode of the violets had proved to him how weak his own standing was. And she wore on the bosom of her rose-pink gown—not his roses, but Tom Kenyon's white violets!

Noel made himself very wretched that evening. He did not dance often, but he glowered in distant corners where he might watch Mildred's dark head.

To approach her might be to invite a snub. When he did meet her it all happened so suddenly that he could not avoid the situation. He had wandered into the conservatory and was moodily watching the goldfish darting to and fro in the huge basin when there was the sound of quick steps on the marble floor and Tom Kenyon's deep voice saying:

"Sit down here, Millie; I'll bring you an ice." Then he was gone and Mildred herself, flushed and sparkling, came around the big palm and came upon Noel at the goldfish basin.

"Why, Mr. Osmond, I did not know you were here," she said as he bent above her hand. She drew away and looked at him oddly.

"I'm in a black mood, Miss Vard," said Noel. "In fact I'm so grouchy that I think I'll clear out!" His eyes lingered on her upturned face with its wistful look that he had surprised once or twice before. "I hope you are having a delightful time," he went on lamely.

Her head drooped a little. "Yes, it is a lovely ball. Thank you for the beautiful rosebuds, Mr. Osmond—they are just the color of my gown."

Noel flushed darkly and his eyes rested on the white violets. With a sudden impulse of angry despair he touched the blossoms with a tentative forefinger.

"I could not send you these," he said harshly. "I am too poor, Miss Vard—I sent what I could afford to pay for. You are very gracious to accept the roses when you asked for violets. You see, I've made a big mistake—I'm not in it with the other chaps—I can't play the game!"

Somehow her hand found its way to his arm and was timidly laid on his black sleeve. "I asked you to send violets, Mr. Osmond, because I knew they were extravagant," she said quietly.

Osmond stared, puzzled, yet strangely thrilled by her tone. "What do you mean, Miss Vard?" he asked.

"I wondered if you were like all the rest of them, living beyond your means, spending more than you could afford to pay for—or whether you were what you appeared to be, working your way upward with the courage of your convictions apparent in your actions! I am not disappointed, Mr. Osmond. If you had sent me white violets I am afraid I would have been quite disgusted with you."

Noel's heart was beating hard. "But I would have liked to have you wear my roses," he was beginning, when she touched the frill of pink chiffon that edged the low neck of her gown.

"Your buds are here," she said softly, and Noel saw that his pink roses formed a garland across her bosom above the violets. After that, events moved rapidly, and with Mildred's hands in his own and her head on his breast he was explaining all his doubts and fears since he had left her that afternoon. And Mildred explained that Tom Kenyon was engaged to her sister Ethel, and Ethel had pinned the white violets upon Mildred's gown, for generous Tom had sent her too many for one person.

The miracle did not occur till the next day when Noel's Uncle Francis Osmond offered him a place in his banking house. "In order to learn the business which you must one day inherit, young man!" he said sharply. "I've been watching you, Noel, and expecting you to fall into the fast pace every day, but I'm disappointed, agreeably, my boy! I happened to be in that florist shop yesterday (looking at orchids behind a screen) and saw you turn down the violets and pay for the roses like a man—you're the right stuff!"

Now It's Repeated.

"With my customary slowness it has taken me all this time to learn the fashionable medical terms for 1910," said the man who takes medicine. "There is the word that is properly applied to a refilled prescription, for instance. When I first began to use drugs in large quantities, refilled was the word used when we got a bottle of medicine put up a second time. Later somebody concluded that renewed would sound better, so for two or three years wo had our prescriptions renewed. But this year whet we get our old bottles filled the prescripton is repeated. I don't intend to be behindhand next year, and already I have commenced to study the dictionary to find out what word will most likely be favored next."

One of Sheehan's Ways.

R. F. Sheehan, connected with the Tod-Stambaugh company, is said to have the most unusual characteristic that there is any record of. It is this: He never laces up his shoes until after breakfast. It matters not whether he's at home or abroad, he dresses himself carefully to the minutest detail, pulls on his shoes and lets them go unlaced until he has been to the dining room. He says he doesn't know why he waits until after breakfast to tie his shoes, except that it's a habit. He's followed the practise so long that he cannot remember when he first took on that system of dressing.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Wedding Feast

By Martha McCulloch-Williams

(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

Peter Winboro, actor and gentleman, tapped rather hesitantly upon the door of his next neighbor, Natalie Peyton. For three months they had been harbored in Mrs. Jones' severely respectable lodging house, Natalie in the hallroom front, Winboro in the bigger chamber adjoining. Since their first meeting he had given the girl a respectful salutation at each encounter. She had answered with a nod, a smile and murmured word; nothing more. But somehow his days had been the brighter for them. It had hardly gone beyond that. Once he had ventured to lay a magazine at her door; once, also, she had sewed up deftly an untimely and annoying rent for him. He had got it carelessly just as he was starting out, and already late, so the kindness had been as real as it was trivial.

He had meant to return it in the shape of a matinee ticket. But he had found out that Miss Peyton was at work every day—their encounterings had been as she came in from the shop, and he went out to dine before the theater. The shop was a bedizened place on the avenue—Peter did not know it—where fine handsewn custom lingerie was made. But wages were not at all proportionate to prices, so when the slack season came and there was work only for the regulars, Natalie, new to the city last autumn, found herself idle, with no friends, faint prospects and a scant hoard of money.

Winboro had somehow sensed the situation—helped, perhaps, by hearing her move about her room in daylight. Her face, too, had a subtly terrified look, though she held herself straighter than ever, and smiled as brightly at him. "She's game—as game as she's good," he told himself upon a certain bright Sunday afternoon. "Hanged if I don't chuck the Blenton crush, and take her for a walk—and to dinner afterward."

Youth loves company the same as misery. Natalie, young and miserable, went without demur, though she had been bred to the strictest social observances. Neither did she balk at the suggestion of dinner.

Tapped Rather Hesitantly Upon the Door.

"It's a risk—I am truly frightfully hungry," she warned him, with a smile that was piteously brave.

It was memory of the smile that emboldened him, as they sat over their coffee in a quiet place, yet still far from cheap, to say, lightly touching her free hand: "Why don't you get out of all this? You don't in the least belong."

"How do you know I could get out of it?" Natalie parried.

Winboro smiled softly and flicked the ash from his cigar. Finding him silent the girl went on: "I haven't run away from adoring parents—only from a stepuncle and—well, Aunt Mary—and John—"

"I see," Winboro interrupted. "John—now, tell me all about him."

"I can't. There's nothing to tell—if there were—" Natalie cried, stopping short with a vivid blush that made Winboro smile again and shake his head.

"You'll never in the world make an actress," he said. "Those eyes of yours can tell only the truth. John is hasty—foolishly hasty. He wants to marry you out of hand. When you want to find the great adventure?"

"How do you know?" Natalie again demanded.

Winboro looked straight into her eyes, his own kindling. "I have been young—now I am—aging, if not old," he said. "Still, I have not forgotten the deliciousness of—folly. In your case—I wonder is it only folly, or some big hulking fellow six feet high, a regular football hero?"

"I—I—hate you. Take me home! At once!" Natalie said imperiously.

Winboro looked at her, his breath coming quicker. "I'm corry for John," he said. "So sorry you must listen to a little more."

"Well!" Natalie breathed rather than said, settling back to place. Winboro's face darkened.

"You know about the Minotaur—the fabled monster that devoured yearly virgins in thousands?" he asked abruptly, then waiting for no reply he ran on: "The most of life is in the fable—only we mortals refuse to understand. So our yearly sacrifices mount up almost to millions—and some heartaches for every one of the victims, involuntary victims mostly—there's the real pity of it. How much money is there tonight betwixt you and starvation?"

"You have no right to ask—to speak to me so," Natalie cried, making to rise, though she trembled violently.

Winboro smiled grimly. "I could guess," he said. "Severe respectability is costly—and you have laid up—let me see—possibly two dollars weekly—"

"Whether or no I have, I shall not tax—anybody's charity," Natalie said rising, her head very high, her eyes lambent.

Winboro also rose. "No; you would starve as becomes a gentlewoman," he said. "But you shall not—I will see to that—whether or no you like it. I'm your fairy godfather."

They went home in silence, Winboro torn by conflicting impulses. He was indeed aging—he had next to no money, and but dim prospects in a most uncertain profession. The same delicate tastes that so hampered Natalie were also among his inheritances. They had hampered him too—made him squeamish and finical in many ways—especially over things that other men held good business. The girl beside him deserved infinitely more of Fate than he could promise any woman. He must dragoon her, if needs be, back to the shelter and comfort of this half-confessed John—and pray that she might live happy ever after.

Yet—at her door, he kissed her, lightly upon the cheek, rushing away without a word. He hardly slept that night, but dawn brought heavy slumber. A light tap roused him from it around 11 o'clock, and Natalie's voice called:

"Come in! Quick! I want to show you something."

Half an hour later he stood staring open-eyed at cake, unmistakable country wedding cake, rich and sweet, and light as a feather, iced half an inch thick, in generous slices, in wedges, in half-loafs. Tarts likewise, and small fancifully ornamented cakes. Natalie beamed above the array, flourishing in her right hand wedding cards.

"John's," she explained succinctly. "Oh, I'm so glad. The best fellow in the world—but nothing else. If he had had a thimbleful of personality, I could never have said 'No.' All of them were so anxious to have us marry each other—indeed, Aunt Mary said she had raised me on purpose, so her best things would have the right care. But now—she's quite reconciled, and John happy as the day is long—"

"He was probably caught in the rebound," Winboro interrupted.

Natalie laughed softly. "I don't know," she said. "What I do know is—Aunt Mary wanted to send for me, but the bride forbade. You ought to see the apologies; I mustn't be hurt, but must come home and stay always if I choose—and it's such a shame to send me so little, but there was no bigger box candy—and ever so much more."

"No wonder you are consoled," Winboro said, possessing himself, uninvited, of a specially tempting slice of cake.

Natalie shook her head at him, saying, "This puts off the starving by at least a week—and maybe I shall find work again—but it must be rough on you, you had such a fine scheme of philanthropy all ready to put in execution."

"No, it only makes possible the execution of a finer scheme." Winboro said composedly. "Only this time the beneficiary is myself."

"Indeed? Tell me about it," Natalie said, crunching a tart as she spoke.

Winboro drew a deep breath. "The wedding feast is spread, the bridegroom ready," he said. "Don't you think you might be persuaded to act as bride?"

Natalie's answer is immaterial. Suffice it, that within a week the May family at Hazlehill farm were astonished and delighted to receive the wedding cards of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Winboro.

Warden Not Much for Changes.

When George J. Warden took his manufacturing business to a new location recently it was a noteworthy thing for him to do. For Warden is about as little addicted to making changes as any man in Cleveland. He himself was speaking of this fact a day or two ago.

"I lived more than 36 years in the same house on old Perry street, he remarked, "and for 42 years I took milk from the same family, never missing a day. Then, for 31 years I was shaved by the same man in the same shop.

"Our family began taking milk from Mr. Schurmer, a farmer out Strongsville way, about fifty years ago. When he died we bought milk from his sons and for 42 years we got milk from them without missing a single day. Eight years ago a man by the name of Shuman bought out their milk business and we have been taking milk of him ever since. So you could almost say that I've been getting milk from the same place for an even half century."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

TWO MORE DESERT SMITH

Senator Fielder, of Hudson County, Tis Said, Will Vote for Martine.

BALENTINE GIVES HIS REASON.

Essex Assemblyman Declares He Had Been the Victim of a Deception —Martine's Chances Are Brighter.

Deflections from the ranks of James Smith, Jr., in his fight for election as United States Senator over James E. Martine, the primary choice, continue. Assemblyman Edward D. Balentine has withdrawn his support from Mr. Smith. In doing so Mr. Balentine, in a letter to Mr. Smith, bluntly declared that he had been the victim of deception and that the best interests of the Democratic party could not be reconciled with Mr. Smith's candidacy.

Right on top of Mr. Balentine's withdrawal announcement was made yesterday that Senator Fielder, of Hudson county, will vote for Mr. Martine. Practically the entire sentiment of the people of Hudson was found against Mr. Smith by Mr. Fielder.

It is also understood that some of the most ardent Smith men in the Legislature, members from Warren and Sussex counties, realize that Mr. Smith's chances are now practically hopeless, and in the effort to prevent a continuance of the strife in the party, they will probably ask him to withdraw.

This request is contemplated, it was reported, by such close friends of Mr. Smith as Senators Cornish, of Warren county, and Price, of Sussex. Both counties are fortresses of Democratic strength. The senators, it is understood, will be supported by their assembly associates, George B. Cole, of Warren, and Charles A. Meyer, of Sussex.

After sounding sentiment in Warren and Sussex, the legislators are said to have found it very strong against Mr. Smith. Therefore, in trying to prevail on Mr. Smith, they seek to relieve him of further possible embarrassment should they find themselves compelled to vote against him.

Mr. Balentine is the third of the eleven Essex county assemblymen who has quit Mr. Smith. With Mr. Smith unable to retain the support of such a proportion of the men from his own county, it is believed probable that he may accede to the North Jersey petition to withdraw.

In Mr. Balentine's letter to Mr. Smith the writer does not say for whom he will vote. As the letter was direct to Mr. Smith and dealt only with the relationship between Mr. Smith and Mr. Balentine, that was not necessary.

Mr. Balentine would not say today that he would vote for Mr. Martine, but it is understood by friends close to him that he will respect the primary election result.

Mr. Balentine's letter follows:

"My Dear Sir—When I signed the invitation extended to you by the Essex assemblymen, assuring support in your probable candidacy for United States Senator, I was led to believe from statements advanced that the action had not only the approbation of a majority of the newly elected members of the Legislature, but that the course would meet the approval of the voters of the State, especially those who supported the Democratic ticket in Essex county.

"Subsequent events have proved that the representations made to me were not true. I believe that my constituents do not approve of my supporting your candidacy, and as my election is due to them, I think their wishes should be respected.

"Furthermore, from personal interviews during the past two weeks with members of the present Legislature, representing practically every section of the State, and in view of the circumstances enumerated above, I cannot reconcile my future support of your candidacy with the best interests of the party, and I therefore inform you that I will not support or vote for you as the successor of United States Senator John Kean.

"Yours very truly,

"EDWARD D. BALENTINE."

That Senator Fielder would vote for Martine was stated in positive terms by Senator Osborne, Democratic leader in the upper chamber of the Legislature. Mr. Osborne declared that Mr. Fielder had made up his mind some time ago, but that the Hudson man in addition, had found a sentiment "overwhelmingly against Senator Smith and for Mr. Martine."

Mr. Osborne said:

"Senator Fielder made up his mind several weeks ago on the Senatorship. He told me at the time that he was opposed to the candidacy of former United States Senator

PROGRESSIVE EUCHRE HELD IN PARISH HOUSE

Under the auspices of the Men's Association of the Church of the Heavenly Rest and the special committee of men appointed to assist the women of the parish were entertained in the parish at a progressive euchre last night and an enjoyable time was spent. For those who did not play cards, checkers, dominoes and other games were provided and afterwards refreshments were served.

Martin L. Givens, chairman; Jas. Hallard, A. Jordan, Albert Harris and Arthur Calleen comprised the committee who assisted the officers of the association in receiving and entertaining the guests.

Proceeding the euchre a meeting of the Board of Governors was held at which it was decided to hold an entertainment on February 9. On this occasion Thomas Muir and William H. Pope will be the entertainers. On February 23, a dance will be held in the parish house.

On Wednesday evening, February 1, Professor Henderson, of New York will give an evening of wizardy together with a Punch and Judy show, the proceeds of which will go to swell the fund for the new rectory.

TRINITY'S CONSISTORY HOLDS MONTHLY MEETING.

The consistory of Trinity Reformed church, at a regular meeting, last night, decided to continue Dr. Paul Wilberforce Harrison as its missionary in Arabia for the second year. According to advice received, he is doing an excellent work and is making much progress.

The clerk, Edgar F. Sheppard, reported the compilation of a list of the church membership, complete to December 15. The list was prepared by the pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek, and Mr. Sheppard at a considerable sacrifice of time and the consistory gave a vote of thanks to them.

Edgar F. Sheppard was chosen clerk for another year, and H. E. Gayle, treasurer and Philip A. Vroom, assistant treasurer, for the same period, and all were commended for their excellent work. The standing committees were re-appointed for the coming year, there being only two changes, F. E. Smith being added to the finance committee and A. L. Force to the music committee, taking the place of Robert Clark, Jr., on these committees during his absence from the city. Charles M. Dolliver and A. L. Force were chosen to audit the books of the treasurer.

RICH COPPER DEPOSITS FOUND AT SOMERVILLE

It is the opinion of Frederick W. Apgar, mineralogist, of Jamaica, L. I., that the copper deposits of Somerville can be made to yield to revenue of considerable amount if properly handled and an increased plant built for reduction of the metal from the loose shale of which the deposits consist. In a paper entitled "The Copper Deposits of New Jersey" read before the New York Mineralogical Club in the American Museum of Natural History, Mr. Apgar has this to say on the mines of Somerville.

"The copper deposits of the second type at Somerville closely resemble the conditions found in the Lake Superior regions, the average content of the ore being about 2 per cent., and the valuable mineral being essentially the native metal. So it would seem that with economical management and an improved plant for conducting mining operations on a larger scale it might still be possible, in view of the great demand for this metal, to profitably mine for copper in this vicinity.

"The underground workings as at present constituted consist of a main shaft 1,300 feet in depth which follows the contact and dips with the strata approximately 12 degrees. On each side at intervals of 30 feet drifts have been run alternately to the right and left of the main shaft. Ore of the same kind and value have been discovered in the Newark and Arlington district, Flemington and Watchung, although the deposits in these places have never been exploited."

NEW YORK WINS MATCH

Defeat Team of Local Bowlers After Injury to Harry C Van Emburgh.

WIN TWO OUT OF THREE GAMES.

Sixteen Pound Ball Drops on Bowler's Foot Causing Intense Pain —Treated By New York Physician.

An accident to Harry C. Van Emburgh in the first game of the series of three bowled by the local Elks against New York Lodge No. 1, at McNamara's alleys, 116th street and 8th avenue, last night, contributed in no small measure to the defeat suffered by the local men.

Mr. Van Emburgh had the misfortune to feel the weight of a falling sixteen pound ball on his left foot, which smashed the great toe and made playing the remaining games a thing of agony. At the conclusion of the match a physician dressed the toe and on his arrival home Mr. Van Emburgh was forced to engage a cab to reach his home.

The match developed into a seesaw after the first game and had luck been with the local men a victory would have been scored instead of a defeat. The last two men to bowl for the New Yorkers practically won the game as the first three of the team failed to equal the scores of Plainfield's representatives.

Chauncey Stout and Johnny Campbell put up the best game for the locals, rolling 540 and 550 respectively. Schmitt and Gordon for New York did some great bowling in the final game, the former scoring 232 pins and the latter 179. The latter score, while not large indicates the average work of the men while at their best. The alleys were not as good as the local men had been accustomed to use, the run being six feet short of the regulation alley. The score:

| PLAINFIELD. | | | |
| Kiely | 178 | 131 | 185 |
| Van Emburgh | 169 | 150 | 136 |
| Stout | 202 | 164 | 174 |
| Nash | 159 | 163 | 161 |
| Campbell | 171 | 202 | 177 |
| | 879 | 810 | 833 |
| NEW YORK. | | | |
| Koch | 163 | 155 | 141 |
| Mayer | 145 | 169 | 148 |
| Schuler | 186 | 155 | 165 |
| Gordon | 171 | 176 | 179 |
| | 825 | 853 | 865 |

The rooters who went along to lend their encouragement to the local team were John Slevin, Charles Woolston, Irving Neihgbor, Andrew Jennings, John Cose, Fred. Firstbrook, Harry Blimm, Harry Bennett, William Rockafeller and John Powers. Several of these went earlier in the evening, stopping in at the Automobile Show in Madison Square Garden.

The Plainfielders were handsomely entertained by their New York brethren at a collation after the game.

He was sought out by Mr. Morosini, Sr., and after much persuasion was made manager of the latter's big estate. They will reside on the estate on Long Island. Mrs. Werner has long been known for her charitable work among the poor of the East Side in New York.

MISS LISSIGNOLO DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Miss Clarissa J. Lissignolo, aged about twenty-two years, the youngest daughter of Mrs. Augusta C. and the late George A. Lissignolo, died at 10 o'clock last night, at her home on East Front street, following an illness which began in July of last year. She was under treatment at the hospital for a short time and then, accompanied by her mother, went to Belmar, occupying the summer cottage of the family. It was hoped that the change would be beneficial, but Miss Lissignolo did not improve and she returned home on Thanksgiving Day.

Since that time she failed rapidly, despite the best of medical attention and recently she was unable to leave her room. Miss Lissignolo was born in Brooklyn, but spent the greater part of her life in this city. She possessed a charming personality and was highly esteemed by a large circle of acquaintances. Her untimely death is a source of deep sorrow to many. Beside a mother, she is survived by two sisters, Mrs. R. F. R. Huntsman and Mrs. William H. Ochs, both of this city. The funeral will be private.

GESANG AND TURN VEREIN HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING

For the third successive time, Stephen H. Schlief was elected president of the Gesang and Turn Verein at the annual meeting in Saengerbund hall last night. There were two candidates for the office and the balloting was spirited. Mr. Schlief won out by two votes. The other officers elected were as follows:

Vive-president, John Reitz; recording secretary, John Koenig; financial secretary, August Wolf; treasurer, Fred Becker; trustees, Henry Haurand, John Wirth, Adolph Barre, John Oister and Fred Kohler; marshals, Herman Klinsman and Matthias Menzenbach; finance committee, John Retzer, Carl Felber and George Ahrnert. Joseph Landwherer, janitor of the hall, was also re-elected.

The reports presented showed the society to be in excellent condition. The membership is now 135, an increase of twenty over last year. After this announcement it was voted that in the future, all the young men over eighteen years who are active members of the turning classes should be admitted to membership in the society without payment of the customary initiation fee. The treasurer's report produced congratulations as the past year has been satisfactory from a financial point of view.

The question of the annual masquerade ball was taken up and February 21, Washington's birthday eve, was fixed upon as the date. The following committee was appointed to complete all arrangements: Charles F. Meyer, Jr., chairman; Herman Klinsman, Jr., George Schlick and John Gordon. An attempt will be made to surpass all previous efforts in this respect as the masquerade is one of the biggest events of the year for the members.

A discussion was held relative to the promulgated observance of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Gesang and Turn Verein and the fiftieth anniversary of its predecessor, the Liederkranz. Both dates fall late this year and a joint fitting celebration will be held. The matter was not gone into thoroughly but will receive undivided attention at future meetings, when committees will be announced. Following the business matters, last night, the members enjoyed a social session during which addresses were made by the officers.

DAVID BISPHAM'S RECITAL

Large Audience Charmed by Splendid Program of Classical Songs.

AMERICAN COMPOSERS PRAISED

Poe's "The Raven" Recited to Music Accompaniment a Fine Piece of Acting—Singer Generous With Encores.

David Bispham, the distinguished barytone, famous from coast to coast and in the musical centers of Europe, charmed an immense audience in the High School auditorium, last evening. In a program dealing with songs of three distinct periods he created an atmosphere of pure delight such as has not been Plainfield's privilege to enjoy for many a day.

A pleasing feature of Mr. Bispham's recital, and a novelty to many, was his prologue defending the singing of songs in good old Anglo-Saxon and American music and its composers. His defense of American music brought forth the declaration not often heard that there are as great composers and interpreters of music in the United States as there are in Europe. The statement pleased the audience and at once put the singer and his hearers on a footing of friendship which lasted as the evening passed.

Unlike a great singer recently heard in the Plainfield theatre, Mr. Bispham responded generously with encores, singing Tom Johnson's famous "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes" and "Danny Deever," the latter for the thousandth time. His exquisite phrasing should be a lesson to every student of singing. His diction is more than a delight, the head tones used in the various nuances absolutely skilful and to be admired, while his strict adherence to the pitch was a source of wonder. In the last respect he differs appreciably from Maurice Renaud, the French barytone, who when demands for low tones are made, invariably slips from the key.

Of the three groups of songs those most appreciated by the audience seemed to have been the four from American composers. They included two melodies from lyrics by Howard Weeden, the second being the "Banjo Song," of which a repetition was demanded and given. The "Song of the Flint" from the "Cave Man," an American drama of Western conception which was performed at Redlands, California, last year, gave Mr. Bispham the opportunity of displaying his wonderful dramatic ability as did the excerpt from "Paoletta," an American opera by Pietro Floridia, of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music. In speaking of this opera, Mr. Bispham said he hoped to see it staged at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York within the next two years. The singing of a single aria from any opera will hardly give an adequate idea of the whole score, but the "Invocation to Youth," as sung by Mr. Bispham, at least gives promise of something well worth hearing in complete form.

Poe's "Raven" was the medium taken by Mr. Bispham to acquaint his audience with his histrionic ability. This poem with all its ponderous and gruesome details permitted the use of extremes of pathos and savagery, despair and anguish and the most tremendous of fights against the powers of evil. The music accompaniment served to enhance the delusions under which the unhappy poet was suffering.

Not a little of the credit for last night's splendid entertainment must be credited to Harry M. Gilbert, the accompanist. His work at the piano left nothing to be desired and he shared in the applause which greeted Mr. Bispham at the end. The whole recital was one to be remembered and to Mr. McIntyre there is due a meed of thanks for the opportunities he affords the music lovers of this city to hear the best artists in the country.

WESTFIELD.

Funeral services of the late Charles Badgley were held yesterday at South Plainfield, and interment was in Vairview cemetery, this town. Mr. Badgley had lived all of his life of eighty years except the last four months in what was originally Westfield. Last summer he and his brother, John M. Badgley, the last of their family, sold the homestead in what is now Mountainside Borough, where the family had lived for more than 180 years and he took up his residence with a friend at South Plainfield. He was never married and is survived by his brother, John M., who is the last male member of the family. In his younger days Mr. Badgley was a mason and worked in Newark, but always returned to his mountain home every Saturday night, walking the distance from the city to his home and returning early Monday morning.

Augustus K. Gale, new postmaster of this town, received his commission from the department at Washington yesterday morning. Mr. Gale had been assistant postmaster under L. M. Whitaker for twelve years and is thoroughly acquainted with the work of the office. William Townley is to be advanced from delivery clerk to assistant postmaster and Ferris Pearsall is to be appointed delivery clerk. Application for an increase in the force of carriers will be made in a few days.

How she made the 137 miles from Sea Isle City, crossed the Delaware and found her way to Lancaster is a mystery.

GOLF.

The advance guard of Easterners who have arranged to attend the annual meeting of the United States Golf Association in Chicago tomorrow night, left for the West yesterday. Robert C. Watson, the secretary, has arranged to make an earlier start than usual, but most of the others will leave by way of the Twentieth Century Limited today. These include W. Fellowes Morgan, of Baltusrol, treasurer of the association; F. S. Wheeler, president of the Metropolitan Golf Association; James L. Taylor; John M. Ward, who will be the Garden City Golf Club's delegate; Charles B. Macdonald and Walter J. Travis.

From over Boston way Herbert Jacques, the retiring president of the association; H. L. Ayer and G. F. Willett are preparing to depart, while from Philadelphia Samuel Y. Heebner and Joseph Clark have announced their intention of attending. Practically all of the individuals mentioned will hold proxies from other clubs which will not find it convenient to send delegates. Travis, by the way, will be the delegate for the Deal Golf and Country Club, which is keen for the next national amateur championship tournament.

Since the professionals competed at Deal in the metropolitan open last August many improvements have been made in the links. The regulation pits and traps, absolutely necessary according to the new idea in course construction, are at last in evidence.

At the short eighth hole, for instance, the bunker guarding the green has been razed sufficiently in the centre to afford an unobstructed view of the hole from the tee, but instead of becoming easier the hole is the more exacting for the reason that a trap yawns a few yards beyond the opening. A half-topped shot will not do now.

Up the incline to the long ninth an even more pronounced alteration is in evidence. Part of the old bunker at the base of the hill has been removed, while the two wings are higher than ever, and beyond in the centre extends a wide hazard, so formidable, in fact, as to make a clean third shot a necessity.

Side traps on the way to No. 10 have stiffened up that hole, and the approach to the eleventh is more exacting since a trap was placed immediately behind the green. Pits along the fairway of the twelfth make this difficult hole more troublesome than ever. The brook crossing the fairway in front of the fifteenth green has been deepened and widened, making a good second shot necessary in order to avoid the "burn."

BASKETBALL.

TWO MORE DESERT SMITH

Smith, and he has reiterated that declaration several times since to me. There is therefore no doubt as to where he stands in the contest.

"He told me that he had made no secret of his position to those people of his county who had asked him about it. To all questioners, he told me, he had replied frankly. For that reason, he said, he did not feel that there had been any need of a public statement.

"Like all the Hudson county assemblymen, whether they all acknowledge it or not, he realized that practically the unanimous sentiment of the county is in favor of Mr. Martine and that this was most conclusively proven at the direct primary on the senatorship last September. Only a few days ago Senator Fielder told me that he had found sentiment overwhelmingly against Senator Smith and for Mr. Martine."

N. Y AMUSEMENTS.

Burton Holmes, traveller, author and lecturer, is to be heard in New York in one of the most interesting series of travelogues presented by him, since the beginning of his career as a lecturer on travel, eighteen years ago. The mania for motoring has heretofore been slow in taking possession of Mr. Holmes, but this summer he and his motion-picture expert and fellow-traveller, Oscar Bennett Depue, bought a motor abroad and made almost the entire tour in search of the quaint and beautiful. As his first topic this season, Burton Holmes brings from Munich and the neighboring scenic districts of the Bavarian lakes and highlands a remarkable picture-record of his wanderings in that land of beauty and romance; in Oberammergau he spent a number of weeks, completing a study of the place, the play and the people, which has taken him twenty years and attendance at the Passion Plays of 1890, 1900 and 1910. The Passion Play as it was and as it is, is his second subject. His third is a hearty testimony to the hospitality of the people of Bohemia and an enthusiastic tribute to the beauty of her cities and scenery. The fourth describes his delightful motor trip through Germany and his fifth lecture touches upon the highlights of beauty and interest to be found in twice circling the globe, via the principal routes, namely Suez and Siberia. Mr. Holmes will give three courses exactly alike in New York. A Sunday evening course at Carnegie Hall and Monday and Tuesday matinees at the Lyceum theatre, beginning January 15, 16 and 17. He will also give two courses on Wednesday afternoons and evenings at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, beginning January 11.

WOULD MAKE PRISONS SELF-SUPPORTING.

Tev. Rev. Dr. George B. Wight, State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections, in his annual report, submitted yesterday, advocated increase in the work done by convict labor of New Jersey, ignoring the vigorous objections of labor unions. Dr. Wight wants to make the prisons more nearly self-supporting. He also favors devoting a portion of the proceeds of convict labor to the support of the families of the imprisoned men.

Dr. Wight also recommends strict censorship of picture shows, cheap theatres and juvenile literature, that there may be a halt in juvenile delinquency, which, he says, is increasing alarmingly. It cost New Jersey approximately $2,000,000 last year to care for the 10,616 inmates of its penal and charitable institutions, which is $220,000 more than in the previous year.

HEN NOT A BIRD.

So Customs Court Says to Importers Seeking Only Albumen Duty.

Eggs are eggs. Also a hen is not a bird.

So says the United States Court of Customs Appeals in a decision which seems to settle a question which has muddled the customs officials, perplexed the experts, and finally called in the zoologists.

Eggs coming from China usually are broken out of the shells, packed in tin cans, and frozen. Customs officials contended they etnered this country in competition with home-laid eggs, and assessed a duty of 5 cents a dozen.

The importer objected, claiming they should be free of duty under that section of the tariff which puts the eggs of birds on the free list, and contended that at most they were only albumen and dutiable as such.

The full bench of five Justices agreed that the importers' claim that a hen is a bird lacked merit, and that an egg is an egg, in the shell or out of it.

Recently the court held that a yam was not a sweet potato. A customs agent also recently prepared a twenty-three page report on the undervaluation of turnips.

GERMAN PROCESS OF MAKING ARTIFICIAL SPONGES.

Artificial sponges, as made by a German process, is chiefly a result of the action of zinc chloride on pure cellulose. The pasty, viscous mass produced by the action is mixed with coarsely ground rock salt, and then in a press-mold armed with pins, it is pierced with a multitude of little canals, imitating the pores of a natural sponge.

After the necessary porosity is obtained the material is given a prolonged washing in diluted alcohol to remove the excess of salt.

The artificial sponge has the same action as the natural in absorbing and retaining water, and hardening on drying, and is especially recommended for the sanitary and industrial filtering of water, while it is adapted for all purposes to which the genuine product is usually assigned.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Miss Lora Bona, of New York, who has been engaged for the Plainfield theatre commencing tomorrow afternoon, during her short appearance before the public has unconsciously earned for herself such sobriquets as "The girl with the golden voice" and "Mark Twain in petticoats," made her regular professional debut in November at the B. F. Keith Bijou Dream, Boston, Mass. She was so successful that the term of her original engagement was lengthened by the management, who gave Miss Bona a standing offer to return to Boston whenever she chooses. Boston audiences took kindly to her work in "King Robert of Sicily," "A Lesson With the Fan," "The First Settler's Story," and equally appreciated her humor, sentiment and pathos. The first public engagement of Miss Bona was preceded by years of hard work and study. First of all, in order to equip herself for the task of appearing before the public Miss Bona took courses of study in literature, dramatic reading, etc., at Columbia University under well known professors. Many appearances before leading clubs and societies were made and her services were also retained for matinees at The Belasco theatre, the Waldorf-Astoria, the Manhattan theatre, the Hotel Astor, etc. As a dramatic reader and teacher of the cultivation of the speaking voice, Miss Bona has also assisted Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont in her settlement work. Her periodical receptions in New York are always well attended by the elite of the artistic and literary worlds in that city. She is personally known and appreciated for her work not only among the higher classes of New York society but also in the East Side, where she has often gratuitously appeared for charitable and philanthropic objects. She is also popular among clubs such as the Century Theatre Club, The Twilight Club, The Daughters of Ohio, etc.

SUIT DOESN'T STOP WEDDING.

Man Who Says He Was Rejected Asks $25,000 From Girl's Father.

Ignoring a suit for $25,000, started in the Circuit Court against her father for persuading her to give up a former suitor, Miss Elizabeth Puglia, of Paterson, the twenty-year-old daughter of Frank Puglia, Paterson's wealthiest Italian merchant, was married yesterday afternoon to William Cervino, of the Paterson detective bureau.

Puglia was served earlier in the day with the papers in the suit brought by Charles Abudato, of Newark. Abudato charges that on October 22, 1909, he became engaged to Miss Puglia with her father's consent. He alleges that when he visited his fiancee on New Year's Day he was told that Mr. Puglia had insisted on the engagement being broken off because he, Abudato, was not well enough supplied with this world's goods.

NEWS OF THE WORLD FOR THE BUSY MAN

Stocks were dull and firm yesterday.

Chili and Argentina intend to establish legations at Panama.

Charles A. Shaw, commissioner of water supply, resigned his place on demand of Mayor Gaynor.

The Mayor of New York offered an excuse for Hyde's absence from the city by saying that he was seriously ill.

President Taft sent a message to Congress, asking for $5,000,000 to begin the work of fortifying the Panama Canal.

John G. Milburn made the opening argument in defence of the Standard Oil Company in the United States Supreme Court.

Many thousands stopped during the Brooklyn Bridge rush hour to watch a spectacular fire in Broadway, opposite City Hall Park.

A dispatch from London says the arrangements for the coronation of King George are more elaborate than those made for his father.

Labor men, at the convention of the National Civic Federation, spoke against Louis Brandies' suggestion for a bonus system in railroad work.

More than twenty men were killed in a battle between a small band of insurgents and a large force of soldiers at a point in Mexico opposite Comstock, Tex.

Tammany men expressed the opinion that if C. F. Murphy succeeded in getting Sheehan named for the Senate it would mean his downfall as the Tammay leader.

Congress.—Senate: Adjournment was taken on account of the death of Senator Hughes, of Colorado. House: The legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill was passed.

An agreement was reached by conferrees in Washington by which the governments of Canada and Newfoundland change fishery regulations to make them acceptable to the United States.

In the opinion of ex-Senator William E. Chandler and Hannis Taylor, professor of constitutional and international law in George Washington University, the residuary clause in the will of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, giving about $2,000,000 to the Mother Church in Boston, is void under New Hampshire laws.

Overfatness Condemned.

Fat, or even fattish, women readers who want to be in the mode this year must understand that the demand is for lines, not curves, and govern themselves accordingly.

That means OFF with the fat. It has become a duty. Many are trying exercise or dieting; but it is certain they will find these methods too slow and unreliable. The cheapest and safest way to get in form for the Directoire mode is by means of Marmola Prescription Tablets. Any druggist (or the Marmola Co., 988 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich.) will give you a large-sized case of these elegant little fat reducers, containing a good, generous supply, for seventy-five cents, and even this quantity should be enough to make a decided impression on your excess fat. Many have lost as much as a pound a day.

These Marmola Prescription Tablets may be used with impunity and likewise perfect confidence, for, being made strictly in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription, they are, of course, quite harmless. They are rather beneficial than otherwise, in fact, never disturbing the stomach or causing a wrinkling of the flesh.

J. W. GREENE'S SWEEPING MID-WINTER CLEARANCE SALE is in full swing. As advertised, we will feature the first week of the great selling event with some marvelous bargains in Stoves, Ranges and Heaters. The announcement of this sale heralds the gleaning of a golden harvest for wise home-makers. No half-hearted price cuts; no penny-ante reductions; no fictitious or inflated values. We have made a no-limit, all 'round smash-up of prices and slaughter of values that will make the average wage-earner leap for joy.

$10,000 STOCK OF STOVES AND RANGES SACRIFICED
The time to buy a Range is now. The place to buy the right Stove is here. This is not mere advertising talk. We went into the Stove question deeply before we decided to handle the makes we sell. Then we placed our big 10-store order at a big price concession.

Women of Good Judgment Use the Matchless "Beaver" Range
Order one of these Ranges—try it for 30 days. If you're not satisfied, we'll take it back. In other words, this offer to you amounts to a demonstration. We want to show those who come after you. Don't take our word about these famous "Beaver" Ranges. Get your information first hand by using one yourself and testing the good qualities we claim for it. Then, and only then, you'll know that all we claim is true.

Beaver Ranges Are Fine Bakers
A good store is as essential to the housewife as a watch to the business man—both must be dependable. The woman who prides herself on baking the best bread in town can't do justice to her skill if she uses a range that won't hold its heat and that doesn't warm all sides of the oven uniformly. "Beaver" Ranges are fine bakers because the right amount of heat reaches every part of the oven at the right time. Save money, time, trouble and worry by investing now in one of these handsome Ranges during the great

It takes only a moment to change the fire-box and reverse the grates of a "Beaver" Range to burn wood instead of hard or soft coal. Burn whichever fuel is the handiest at the time and you'll burn 25 per cent. less of it than with old-fashioned ranges, because of the heavy, tight castings and scientific design. It will pay you to sell your old stove for junk and begin to save money with a "Beaver."

FINE LEATHER FURNITURE

Stickley Bros.' Make at 1/3 Off a Jan. Sale Feature of Importance

Here is library and office furniture of the most luxurious character, and coming, as it does, from the celebrated Stickley Bros.' Grand Rapids Factories, its quality must be undoubted. There is no better leather covered furniture made. Most of the pieces are copies from the fashionable London Club models and copies of Period furniture. They are made by the most skilled furniture builders in America. In the frames the best material and workmanship is embodied; the finest American tempered steel springs, best American webbing, and finest imported scrim and burlap also enter into the make-up. The coverings are of the best English morocco leather that can be had. It is genuine sumac tan and is in beautiful tones of red, brown and green. The American morocco is of Stickley's own tanning, which is considered next only to the English in beautiful texture and quality and is fully guaranteed. Either the English or American morocco coverings will harmonize with the finest American libraries, living rooms and clubs.

This important feature of our January Furniture Sale will lend new life to the event and will, doubtless, bring many buyers tomorrow.

WOULD SIFT ALLEGED BRIBERY CHARGE.

The Elizabeth Board of Education Wednesday night requested the grand jury to investigate the charges made by School Commissioner Charles Wenke that an architect who submitted plans for the proposed new High School offered him a $5,000 bribe should he favor the architect's plans.

Several New York architects were among the competitors, the plans having been submitted under the rules of the American Institute of Architects. Commissioner Wenke has not disclosed the name of the man who he says tried to bribe him.

BASEBALL.

Here's a brand new one, brought all the way from the American Association and Jimmy Murray, former Buffalo outfielder, who joins the St. Louis Browns this spring. Jimmy, Billy Young, Jimmy Moore and several others were discussing baseball generally when the former Bison went to the front with the following:

"Talk about your freak plays. One was pulled off in the American Association in a game between St. Paul and Toledo that I think pretty nearly takes the prize. St. Paul was at bat. One was out and Liese, who was subbing in the outfield, was on first and Right Fielder Armbruster was at bat. Armbruster signaled Liese for the hit-and-run, and it looked as though it was going through all right. Armbruster connected and Liese started for second with his head down. He had gone six or seven steps when the ball left the bat on a line and corked Liese on the back of the head. The ball bounded into the air and Homer Smoot, who was playing right field, came running in and took it on the fly. Can you beat that for a legitimate freak play?"

High Diver at Proctor's.

Charles A. Bigney, champion high diver, made a hit at Proctor's theatre, last night, with his clever work, eating, smoking and drinking in a tank of water, remaining there three minutes and ten seconds. Walters & Violette offer a skit, "On a Park Bench;" Margaret Severance & Co., present a sketch, "Nowadays," and Johnny Gilroy appears in "The Senior Student."

Woodrow Wilson in New Home.

Governor-elect Woodrow Wilson took up his residence yesterday at the Princeton Inn, Princeton. At the invitation of the Princeton University trustees, Dr. Wilson, after his resignation, continued living at Prospect, the home provided for the president of the university.

TUMULTY SECRETARY TO GOVERNOR-ELECT

Former Assemblyman Joseph P. Tumulty, will become private secretary to Governor-elect Woodrow Wilson when the latter takes his place as the chief executive of New Jersey on Tuesday. It is said that when Mr. Wilson was in Jersey City yesterday he called at Mr. Tumulty's office and offered him the place, and the former Assemblyman accepted.

Mr. Wilson has had no more loyal supporter than the former Assemblyman, both before and after election. He served four years as a member of the House, during which time he was the introducer of many progressive measures. Mr. Tumulty was born in Jersey City thirty-two years ago, and is a lawyer by profession. The salary is $4,000.

It is said that the new Governor will retain Miss Ida Phillips as assistant private secretary, and "Sam" Gordon, who probably knows personally more public men than any one else in the State. He has guarded the door to the Governor's room for more than twenty years.

PRIESTS LINING UP IN MODERNISM WAR

Practically all the 368 priests of the Catholic diocese of Newark have taken the oath of allegiance to the Holy See in what has come to be commonly known as the crusade by the holy father against modernism. At the quarterly diocesan conference held in the Cathedral Hall, Newark, recently the 250 priests present took the oath, which was administered by Right Rev. Dr. John J. O'Connor. Since that time many of the priests who were unable to attend the meeting have gone to the episcopal residence at South Orange to take the oath and but few remain who have yet to declare their allegiance to the sovereign pontiff.

In the diocese there are eighty-three members of religious orders and the oath in these communities is administered by the superiors of the various orders.

While the Catholic Church has always stood out against materialism through the ages, the decadence of piety throughout the world during the last twenty years and the many heretical doctrines promulgated from time to time moved Pope Pius X. to issue a decree more than a year ago calling upon the priests of the Catholic Church throughout the world to combat modernism and their oath of allegiance to the Holy See followed.

His Emminense Cardinal Vannutelli, who attended the Eucharistic congress held in Canada some months ago as a representative of the Pope, spoke on various occasions of the church's fight against modernism, and in an address to the students and seminarians of St. John's College, a Brooklyn institution under the dominion of the Lazarus Fathers, he told of the causes leading up to the decree issued by his Holiness Pius X.

Since the issuance of this decree many of the religious orders, and particularly the Jesuits, have spoken extensively on the subject and the fight against this evil of the twentieth century has swept over the United States.

NO PRESIDENT NAMED FOR PRINCETON UNIVERSITY.

No steps were taken by the trustees of Princeton University, at their regular quarterly meeting at Princeton yesterday, toward choosing a man to fill the presidency left vacant by Governor-elect Woodrow Wilson.

An echo of the old graduate school controversy was heard in the trustees' room yesterday when it was announced that William Cooper Proctor's proffered gift of $500,000 was actually about to enter the coffers of the university. Mr. Proctor had been assured that $200,000 would be given to the graduate college, but the name of the donor was not announced. All opposition to the graduate college plans has now disappeared, and plans for buildings were adopted. The college will have about $4,000,000 to start with.

Miss Bridget Gillespie.

Miss Bridget Gillespie, for many years housekeeper in the family of Charles W. McCutchen, died yesterday afternoon at the residence on Rockview avenue after a short illness. She was well known in both the city and borough. She is survived by a brother and sister in Ireland, a brother in Australia and a sister in this city, Mrs. Daniel Fitzgerald, of South Second street. The funeral will be held in St. Joseph's church tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Planning District Meeting.

The good and welfare committee of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, is arranging for a district meeting to be held here on Thursday night, February 9. The councils from Rahway, Somerville, Bound Brook and Westfield will be held and following a meeting there will be a banquet.

DEFENDS X-SCIENCE-CREED

Rev. Mr. Maguire's Attack on Tenets Answered by H. C. Fairchild.

SAYS CRITIC MISREPRESENTS.

Some Questions Are Propounded for Baptist Divine—The Teachings Explained.

As a reply to the sermon delivered last Sunday by Rev. Gabrieel Reid Maguire, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, H. Coulson Fairchild, of the publicity department of the Christian Science church, requests the publication of the following letter:

Editor, The Daily Press:—

In The Daily Press of January 9th you published an attack upon Christian Science made by the Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire during the delivery of his Sunday morning sermon. In justice to the Christian Science church and its respectable and intelligent following in your city, I assume that The Daily Press in all fairness will be willing to print our reply to the Rev. Maguire's unwarranted attack upon what he thinks Christian Science is.

First he stated that Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy "built up a private fortune of over a million dollars in obtaining for herself a pinacle of influence based upon the credulity of the easily beguiled." Question: If Mrs. Eddy accumulated from the legitimate and unsolicited sale of her writings a fortune of one million dollars or more "for herself," how does the reverend genlteman account for the fact that Mrs. Eddy left practically this entire fortune of over one million dollars (except for the legal demands of her relatives) to the Christian Science cause which she loved so well? If Mrs. Eddy had accumulated this money "for herself," it is axiomatic that she would have kept it for herself. As it is, her act is in itself a proof that Mrs. Eddy was sincere. Mrs. Eddy's belief in her teachings was sincere. Under these circumstances it must be apparent to all, that those whom the Rev. Maguire terms "credulous and easily beguiled" are to receive the full benefit of the money accumulated by their Leader, together with all mankind; for the influence of Christian Science extends to all.

The Rev. Maguire, it is said, charges Christian Science with being contrary to common sense, and evidently to substantiate this view quotes from the Christian Science text book, Science and Health with Key to Scriptures, by Mrs. Eddy, page 407, lines 22 and 23, "If delusion tells you what you have lost your memory, you must contradict it; no faculty is lost." Now let us see whether this statement is, or is not, a logical one from the standpoint of a true follower of Jesus Christ. I presume our critic would be willing to admit that all true and good thoughts are derived from God; that every spiritual and true mental faculty emanates from God in whom, as Paul says, "We live and move and have our being." I assume also that our critic together with all other Christians would be willing to subscribe to the statement that God is omnipotent, omniscient, and omnipresent; i. e. all power, the basis of understanding; and all presence. This being true, we will ask the Rev. Maguire to explain where a man's memory goes when he is said to have lost it. If God is our intelligence, memory cannot be lost, any more than God can be lost. The burden of proof lies with our critic to account for lost memory and explain how is can be lost in the presence of God. Christ Jesus demonstrated his teachings by healing the blind man and showing that sight cannot be lost. Moreover, he healed all manner of sickness among the people and said to his followers: "Preach the gospel; heal the sick." Disease is not healed in Christian Science by admitting its reality and power, but so-called disease and belief in the pleasure of sin are healed by knowing the unreality of both sin and sickness and through the understanding that God does not create that which is opposed to His own nature and not to be found in the Deific Mind.

The Rev. Maguire tells us that "Christian Science is contrary to the Scriptures," and Mrs. Eddy has been criticized for interpreting the Scriptures after the manner of the teachings of Christian Science, I would like to ask our critic upon what authority he presumes to state that Christian Science is contrary to the Scriptures and further if he desires to pose as having the only correct interpretation of Scripture in the denomination which he represents? If so, I wish to remind him that there are between one hundred and eighty and three hundred and some odd denominations of Christians in this country

ATTEMPTED TO SHOOT 2; HELD FOR GRAND JURY

John Gursky, of South Plainfield, is being held to await the action of the grand jury in the New Brunswick jail in default of $200 bail on a charge of attempting to shoot Joseph Delaney and John Thornton, both of South Plainfield.

Gurskey was arrested in the village, after a chase on Friday morning and Justice Smith was roused from his sleep to hear the charge preferred against the prisoner. Delaney complained that Gurskey had shot at him twice and then tried to get away. Delaney and Thornton followed for half a mile and finally caught up with the alleged shooter who it is said, had thrown his revolver in the back yard of the residence of C. L. Vanderhoff on Plainfield avenue. Three chambers of the revolver had been discharged. Gurskey was under the influence of liquor and was unable to give any coherent reason for his actions.

WITHOUT GOVERNOR FOR TWELVE HOURS

Because of the wording of the State Constitution which provides that the term of the Governor shall end "on the Monday preceding the third Tuesday in January," and the custom of not swearing in the new Executive until noon of the third Tuesday, New Jersey will again this year, as it has done each three years since the adoption of the Constitution in 1845, be without a Governor for twelve hours.

Although she will have no authority whatever to act as Governor, Miss Ida M. Phillips of Trenton, stenographer in the Executive office, will practically be in charge during these few hours, being the ranking clerk and with no "boss" to direct her actions.

Miss Phillips, who is to be retained by Governor Wilson, has proved herself to be a young woman of clever executive ability, and is well able to take care of the mail and other matters of routine business that demand attention and which can be transacted with Gubernatorial power. Of course, should the need of a chief executive be urgent, there is nothing in the Constitution to prevent Mr. Wilson from taking the oath immediately at the expiration of the retiring Governor's term at midnight on Monday next.

Kipp, an authority on eye and ear diseases, died at his home, 560 Broad street, Newark, at 2:15 o'clock yesterday morning. Dr. Kipp was well known in this city having had occasion to be called many times as consulting specialist.

Dr. Kipp was in his seventy-third year, and from the inception of his illness, ten days ago, his condition had been critical. He was unmarried and leaves surviving a number of nieces and nephews.

After a short service at Dr. Kipp's late home, the funeral will be held in Trinity Episcopal church at 11 o'clock Monday morning, Rev. Louis Shreve Osborne officiating. Interment will be in Mt. Pleasant Cemetery.

J. Chandler, Dr. Edward J. Ill, Dr. Walter S. Washington, Dr. Archibald Mercer and Dr. Charles Young.

Dr. Kipp was born in Hanover, Germany, October 22, 1838. He began his education there and continued it in New York when he came to this country in 1854, graduating from the College of Physicians and Surgeons (Columbia) in 1861.

In 1861 Dr. Kipp volunteered his services in defense of the Union and was appointed surgeon to the Fifth Regiment, N. G. N. Y. The following year he was made assistant surgeon of the Third Battalion, New York Artillery, and in May, 1863, assistant surgeon, United States Volunteers. Promoted to the position of surgeon of the United States Volunteers in March, 1864, Dr. Kipp was the following year accorded greater distinction when by reason of meritorious and faithful service on the field he was breveted lieutenant-colonel.

As a surgeon in the National Guard, the artillery and the volunteer service, Dr. Kipp spent three years on the battlefield and only retired to take up hospital work during the remainder of the war. He performed such work in Nashville, Tenn., and Indianapolis, Ind., subsequently being made chief of the United States Board of Inspectors of Recruits at the general rendezvous in Indiana. He also held the position of medical director of the freedman's bureau of that State from August, 1865, to February, 1868.

Beginning his practice in Newark by opening an office in Kinney street, in 1869, Dr. Kipp quickly assumed a leading position in medical circles. He organized the first eye and ear clinic at St. Michael's Hospital in 1870, and was elected president of the Essex County Medical Society in 1880. In retiring from this office he advocated the formation of the Society for the Relief of Widows and Orphans of Medical Men of New Jersey, which was incorporated in 1882. He was elected president of the organization, which office he held at his death.

Since 1880, Dr. Kipp had been consulting surgeon at the Newark Eye and Ear Infirmary. He was elected president of the Medical Society of New Jersey in 1886, and at his death was president of its board of trustees. From 1901 to 1906 he was president of the board of managers of the New Jersey Sanitarium for Tuberculosis Diseases. He was president of the American Opthalmological Society in 1907, president of the American Otological Society in 1908 and vice-president of the American Medical Association in 1909. He was also a member of the Opthalmological Society of Heidelberg, Germany; New York Academy of Medicine and the New York Pathological Society.

Dr. Kipp was well known in this city having had occasion to be called as consulting specialist.

PATIENTS ENJOY SOCIAL

Anti - Tuberculosis Society Entertains Fifteen Who Are Improving.

NEW SCALE FOR WEIGHING.

Educational Posters to Be Raised Throughout the Country—Contributions by Allied Trades at Cost of $100,000.

The first social of tuberculosis patients of the series to be held under the auspices of the Anti-Tuberculosis Society was held on Thursday afternoon fifteen patients being present. The hour was thoroughly enjoyed. It is believed that the socials will develope the interest of all patients and that they will tend to disseminate the right kind of feeling among those who are suffering but fighting to renew their strength. The passing of experiences between those who are ill it is expected will encourage others to follow the instructions of the society and finally get well.

The weighing scale which the society made an appeal for through The Daily Press has been donated and will soon become a factor in keeping faithful records of the progress of the patients.

During the next three months, the billboards of the United States will display 20,000 educational posters of tuberculosis, according to an announcement made today by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

This will conclude the campaign begun a year ago, when the National Billposters Association donated free space to the tuberculosis cause, the Poster Printing Association offered free printing, and nine paper manufacturers gave the paper for the posters. The combined value of these several donations for this three-month campaign is nearly $100,000.

The posters are in six different designs and are all printed in three colors. They are 7 feet wide and 9 feet high. Already nearly 2,500 of these posters have been hung on the billboards of 46 different cities, and it is planned to distribute 20,000 more before April 1st in over 400 towns and cities. Any anti-tuberculosis society in the United States may receive free of charge, except for transportation, as many of these posters as can be hung on the boards in its territory. The National Association with the Tuberculosis Committee of the National Billposters and Distributors are conducting the campaign.

The posters show in graphic form how fresh air, good food, and rest cure tuberculosis; how bad air, overwork, and closed windows lead to consumption; and how the careless consumptive menaces the health of his family by spitting on the floor.

MOTION PICTURES AT PLAINFIELD THEATRE

A high-class motion picture entertainment combined with the best of musical features was inaugurated at The Plainfield theatre this afternoon. There will be two performances each day, when regular shows are not booked for the house; at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and 8:20 o'clock at night. As a result of her scientific training in and teaching of the cultivation of the speaking voice, Miss Bona, who has been engaged to assist in the entertainment at the theatre, presents her dramatic and other selections to the public in an original manner.

Miss Bona uses her voice as an instrument; like the violinist or the pianist. She brings out the correct tones of the emotions she expresses and the words she utters. Scientifically considered, Miss Bona's method employes a series of (vocal) octaves, just as in pianoforto playing. She obtains her effects in a similar way to the trained pianist, singer or violinist, but with this difference, she neither sings nor plays; she talks. All seats for the lower floor and balcony are reserved for these performances.

Birthday Surprise.

Harry Ten Eyck, of Oak Tree, was given a surprise party in honor of his birthday last night. Fifty friends from this city and other places were in attendance and enjoyed games and dancing until an early hour this morning. The affair was arranged by Miss Florence Hartfelder, of the borough, and Ned Morton, of New Dover.

—Neuman Bros. will offer for tomorrow's trade a choice assortment of fresh vegetables, the finest grown, at reasonable prices. They will help to make your Sunday dinner complete.

AN OLD SPANISH SWINDLE

Victim Sought in Plainfield is Wise to the Game and Won't Bite.

LETTER TO L. SCHEELEIN.

"Beautiful Daughter" and a "Fortune of $480,000" Can't Be Saved This Time, Mr. Demidoff—Scheme is too Old.

Lawrence Scheelin, the Somerset street harness maker, has been selected by the workers of an ancient bunco game as a victim, but because Mr. Scheelein is wise he will not fall for the bait thrown out in a letter from Spain written by a Russian who alleges that he is in durance vile in London.

The scheme has been worked so often, but with indifferent success in this country that it would seem as though "Mr. Demidoff," the alleged prisoner would think twice before attempting to get another wide-awake American to become the laughing stock of the world. The scheme is so old that it is mossy. Read the following letter:

"Dear Sir: Although I know you only from good references of your honesty, my sad situation compels me to reveal you an important affair, in which you can procure a modest fortune, saving at the same time that of my darling daughter. Before being imprisoned here I was established as a banker in Russia as you will see by the enclosed article about me published in many English newspapers which knew of my arrest in London.

"I beseech you to help me to obtain a sum of $480,000 I have in America and to come here to raise the seizure of my baggage, paying the registrar of the court the expenses of my trial and recover my portmaneau containing a secret pocket where I have hidden the document indispensable to recover the said sum.

"As a reward I will give up to you the third part, viz.—$160,000. I cannot receive your answer in the prison, but you must send a cablegram to a person of my confidence who will deliver it to me. Awaiting your cable to instruct you in all my secret, I am, Sir, yours truly, Demidoff." "First of all cable not by letter as follows: 'Blas Latorre, Juanelo, tres segundo, izquierda, Madrid, 'Explain' Scheelein."

It is quite unnecessary to say that Mr. Scheelein is not at all excited over the prospect of rescuing a "beautiful daughter" or of receiving for his trifling trouble $160,000. The game has been attempted many a time and oft, but it is getting too old for successful operation in this year of grace 1911.

Monday Afternoon Club Lecture.

It will give pleasure to many who know Jonas Lie to learn that he is to deliver the first of three lectures at the Hartridge School auditorium, Monday afternoon, on "Ibsen and His Country." The subject for the first lecture will be "Norway, the Land and the People." Two of Mr. Lie's paintings from his recent exhibition in New York have been bought for the International Exhibition in Rome, although probably his best picture, "The Witches' Pool" remains in this country in the art gallery of Los Angeles.

Men's Conference Class.

An undenominationel Men's conference Bible class has been organized under the leadership of H. E. Parker, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. and meets for study and iscusssion every Sunday afternoon at four fifteen in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church. The course of study is an intensely interesting and instructive one, taking Dr. Josiah Strong's series on the "Gospel of the Kingdom." The topic for discussion on Sunday will be "The Church and Social Purity." All men are invited to these classes.

Y. W. C. A. Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Young Women's Christian Association will be held at the association building Monday night. Reports for the past year will be made and a new Board of Directors elected. Mrs. McCullough was born at Bound Brook. Her maiden name was Anna Eder, and she was the daughter of Philip Eder. She had been a resident of the borough for about twenty-five years since her marriage.

CONTRACTOR VIOLATED A STREET ORDINANCE

On a complaint made by Mayor George W. V. Moy to Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett the latter had Peter C. Johnson, a contractor, of East Front street, arraigned before Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court this morning charged with violating a city ordinance in failing to properly protect openings in the street at night.

The explanation made by Mr. Johnson satisfied the court that he was unacquainted with the law and that he had placed the necessary protection over some holes near the corner of John and West Fourth streets and the contractor was discharged with a warning.

In connection with the case Mr. Gavett notified the police that the ordinance against taking up the sidewalk flags without a permit should be stopped and those who neglect the provisions of the ordinance are to be apprehended and fined.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. JESSE HATFIELD

Funeral services of the late Mrs. Margaret Hatfield, wife of Jesse Hatfield, were held this morning at her late residence, 531 West Front street, Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinty Reformed church officiating. The body was later taken to Somerville for interment.

A large number of friends gathered at the home this morning and many handsome floral tributes were laid upon the casket of the dead woman. Mrs. Hatfield was a member of Trinity Reformed church and during her connection with the church had many close and enduring friendships. Mr. Broek in commenting upon her life spoke of her high Christian attainments and the affection she had always shown for those with whom she had come in contact with in and outside the church.

Colonel Margetts from the national headquarters of the Salvation Army, accompanied by Adjutant Underwood, will visit this city, tomorrow. In the morning he will speak at the Temple Baptist church. ### Field Pleasantries.

Al G. Field, whose minstrels will be here on Wednesday, says that at one time he attended a little dinner given by a somewhat bashful minister, who, naturally, was called on for a speech. For a moment after he arose, the minister was somewhat embarassed. Then he said: "My friends, I have come here to heal the dead, cast out the sick and raise the devil." The Al G. Field minstrels will give two performances at the Plainfield theatre.

Will Hold Yearly Meeting.

The yearly meeting of the Swedish Lutheran church, will be held in the German Lutheran church, Monday evening. After a short service there will be the election of officers and presentation of reports. Rev. John Estlund, the pastor, will be in charge.

FOR PUBLIC CONTROL OF THE WATER SUPPLY

Municipal Ownership Favored by Speakers at Taxpayers' Hearing.

The question of the advisability of establishing a municipal water plant in this city or purchasing the plant of the Plainfield-Union Water company was fully discussed at a meeting held for the purpose in the council chambers, last night, under the direction of the special water committee, of which Councilman F. E. Mygatt is the chairman. The weight of the argument was in favor of a municipal plant and a majority of those present either by applause or by word of mouth were unanimously in favor of the city controlling the local water supply.

After Mr. Mygatt explained the purpose of the meeting and invited everyone present to express an opinion. The speakers were L. V. F. Randolph, Dr. Leonard Waldo, W. H. Sampson, L. A. Johnson, L. B. Woolston, Howard C. Tracy, S. H. Voorhees, Jacob Sachar, John W. Harrison, Winfield S. Angleman and George Frost.

The only speakers who were pronounced in their views that the present water company is entitled to some consideration were L. B. Woolston, W. H. Sampson and S. H. Voorhees, the first two being strongly in favor of making a satisfactory contract with the company, while Mr. Voorhees stated that the company was entitled to consideration because it had come here and had invested its money and certainly had the right to control its own property. Mr. Voorhees said that he had no special interest in the water company, but it would not be just to take from them what they own.

Mr. Randolph in a lengthy address to the meeting outlined his objections to the present attitude of the water company declaring that today they are pumping water to towns outside of the limits of Plainfield in despite of the law and doctrine laid down by the Supreme Court of New Jersey in the case of Meeker vs. East Orange, and saying that it is the avowed intention of the company to pursue that policy.

Rehearsing his experiences of the past summer and in response to questions put to Mr. Bergen, Mr. Randolph said that the president of the company admitted that the supply of water had diminished during the past three years, and further admitted that the underground supply is probably insufficient for the consumption of an increasing population for the next thirty years. Mr. Bergen admitted at the meeting on Wednesday night that he could not see thirty years ahead, and really did not know just where the water came from.

"But so far as developed," he said, "the supply has proved insufficient for the keeping of the water company's contract. What assurances therefore are there for the future of our growing city? Mr. Bergen says that his plant was not designed for irrigation purposes, he probably meant that it was unreasonable to rely upon the water works for sprinkling lawns and streets. Laying aside the legal points involved, Mr. Bergen asked if his company would agree to not supply other towns if another contract were signed. He gave those present to understand very plainly that his company expected to continue to sell to other towns."

Mr. Randolph questioned the binding force of another contract as any contract made must be subject to a considerable mortgage indebtedness. "While" he said, "Plainfield is hazarding its very life by committing its existance to the mercenary grip of the corporation." Continuing Mr. Randolph said, "Mr. Bergen was even unwilling to make the concession in event of the point of hazard or peril being reached to stop the deportation of water to other and cities, declaring the proposition to be an unfair one. Mr. Bergen also suggested the engaging of arbitrators, and thirty days notices and other cumbrous impediments. What could happen then? What redress would the city have? Recourse to the courts for damages. What avail would damages be when water is the thing the city needs?"

The speaker then referred to the report of James H. Fuertes' water report quoting from page 104 and ended by saying that it is doubtful if Plainfield wants to enter upon a questionable policy as to its water supply. "Our population", he said, "has increased 33 per cent. within the past decade and within the next fifty years is liable to reach 100,000. Two great questions confront us—

HAPPY RESULTS.

Have Made Many Plainfield Residents Enthusiastic.

No wonder scores of Plainfield citizens grow enthusiastic. It is enough to make anyone happy to find relief after years of suffering. Public statements like the following are but truthful representations of the daily work done in Plainfield by Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. J. C. Manchester, 120 Lafayette place, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I was a sufferer from kidney and bladder trouble for a long time. I doctored a great deal but failed to find a cure until I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and made up my mind to give them a trial. Good results followed their use and my kidneys were soon restored to a normal condition. I believe my cure is a permanent one and I will always give Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement when an opportunity occurs."

300 IN PERIL AS BIG GIRDER SNAPS.

Workmen were busy last night propping up the ceiling of the main courtroom of the Middlesex County Court House, at New Brunswick, which almost gave away yesterday under the weight of 300 men. The upper courtroom is not often used, but yesterday Judge Adrian Lyon had to hold County Court there as Judge Frank P. Lloyd was holding a session of the Circuit in the main room.

It was naturalization day and about 200 men were present. A large number of pleas were taken of men accused of having slot machines in their places of business, increasing the number of principals and spectators to about 300. The weight snapped one of the big girders and the floor gradually sank.

Milton Jaques, custodian of the Court House, noticed the large cracks which appeared in the ceiling of the lower courtroom and Freeholder Peter Hendricks gave orders that supports be erected at once to prevent a serious disaster. No announcement was made of the break and there was no commotion in the courtroom.

GOLF.

Cases in court will keep Mr. Calkins away from the U. S. G. A. meeting at Chicago. Believing that all fair minded golfers will recognize that an important principle is at stake and that both sides are serious, Mr. Calkins sends the following letter as a parting shot.

"There is a very amusing paragraph in the second Macdonald circular letter, which has not been commented upon. Referring to statements which have been made to the effect that a Schenectady putter or any centre shafted putter is an American idea or invention, Mr. Macdonald allows his loyalty to St. Andrews (which we all admit and sincerely admire) to draw him into a very damaging admission so far as St. Andrews itself is concerned. He says:

"'Mr. Hodge, an eminent golfer of St. Andrews in the early '70s, made a putter fashioned like the Schnectady; also A. F. MacFie over twenty years ago did the same. * * I have a book published in 1897 in England extolling the merits of centre shafted clubs.

"So it seems that centre shafted clubs were in use nearly forty years ago! Yet St. Andrews now bars them because they are not of 'traditional form and make.' How much time ought to be given to an implement in this royal and ancient game that we have been talking about before it can honorably and fairly be called 'traditional?'

"To sum up: We all, or nearly all, believe that St. Andrews, notwithstanding its honorable and historic influence, has made a stupendous mistake in beginning an era of standardization, which is contrary to the basic character of a game which has always allowed freedom of choice as to clubs and balls. That is the first point. The second is this: Is it desirable to have uniform rules here and in England, so far as possible? To this every true golfer will say yes. Loyalty to the game requires it.

"It is on the third point that we part company. Mr. Macdonald sincerely believes that uniformity can be maintained only by our allowing St. Andrews to continue to make the rules for the whole world. He probably believes that St. Andrews knows so much more about the game that it is better qualified than we are to say whether a centre shafted putter shall be used or whether balls should be standardized, etc. We others look further into the future and see dark days ahead if our national association adopt a position so impossible to justify. If we are to have lasting uniformity in the rules it will come only through a recognition of the principle of mutually of obligation. Starting with the same rules here and in England, if neither country will make any changes until after conference, substantial uniformity will be assured and in no other way.

"The game is no longer young in this country. We do know something about it; enough at least to recognize what even in England is admitted to have been a fatal blunder on the part of St. Andrews in this instance. St. Andrews has not demanded that we shall adopt its rules, but we voluntarily have done so. Consequently it is not a question of 'tyranny' on their part or of 'owed allegiance' or 'loyalty' on ours. It is a practical question for us to decide for ourselves. I believe that Mr. Macdonald with the best of intentions misreads the signs of the times. Uniformity is to be had only at the price of a reasonable recognition of the widespread interest in golf in this country; in fact all over the world. A worldwide game will not forever take its rules from a single golf club—not even from the royal and Ancient Club of St. Andrews, much as we truly owe that organization for all that it has stood for in the past."

BASEBALL.

In spite of Willie Keeler's famous explanation of successful hitting, "Hit 'em where they ain't," Hans Wagner says it's all a matter of good and bad luck. Says the illustrious Dutchman: "If you hit 'em where they ain't you're all right, but if you hit 'em where they are you're out.

"That's all there is to it, and it's a whole lot easier to hit 'em where they are, too. Only luck puts 'em any place. A player may have a good year, then an off year with the stick. It's a case of luck, and it wasn't with me this year. I hit the ball just as hard and as squarely as I ever did in my life, but it went at the fielders instead of away from them.

"Luck cuts a figure in fielding, too. Errors in a large majority of instances are due to something besides inferior skill in handling the ball. The ground is uneven, a stone is in the way, the cover of the ball is wet or a fellow's spikes don't hold, but the player's hands and eyes are all right.

"For that reason I say mighty few fielding errors can be blamed on the players. If there ain't a hoodoo somewhere, well and good, but if there is a jinks, good night."

N. Y AMUSEMENTS.

William A. Brady has "put over" another big success. "Over Night," the new farcical play by Philip H. Bartholome, which was made known at the Hackett Theatre, New York, last Monday night, has proved to be one of the biggest laugh-sensations of the year, and a long and successful run is prophesied for it. The story of the play indicates its humorous possibilities. "Over Night" is presented by a company of notable cleverness, Margaret Lawrence, a tiny actress who is a delight to look at, plays the role of Elsie Darling, one of the wives, and Jean Newcombe, the antithesis of Miss Lawrence in stature, is the other wife, Georgina Kettle. The husbands are Herbert A. Yost and Robert Kelly, who do their share in creating merriment. Other clever people in the cast are Arthur P. Aylsworth, Max Freeman, Wallace Worsley, Nora Winslow, Grace Griswold and Teresa Deagle. The scenes representing the steamboat and the mountain inn are novel and handsome.

SCORES UNION TAX BOARD.

One of the breeziest sessions in the history of the Union County Board of Equalization of Taxes took place Thursday, when a score or more Westfield property owners appealed for a reduction of their tax assessments.

James Ross, whose appeal for a reduction of $300 from the original assessment was denied, criticized the assessors and asserted that they did not know their business. He said: "There is no justice for Westfield property owners and I have no use for the assessors. They don't know their business and simply go around like blockheads. It is an outrage the way they assess properties. I never saw such a lot of humbugs."

Dr. William Gale, who also appeared before the board, declared that "the present manner of assessing property is nothing more than confiscation. In my case they are driving an old soldier out of his home."

A total of $27,534 reduction was asked, and the board granted a total of $4,400 from the original assessment.

HERE AND THERE.

Herman J. Onnes, a sky-scraping citizen of Holland, 7 feet 2 inches tall in his sea-boots, was an arrival this week aboard the Noordam of the Holland-American line. Mr. Onnes is a well-to-do farmer who hails from the neighborhood of Groningen, in the old country, and he has come to see the remarkable land called the United States. He will stroll around Minnesota and Wisconsin, and if he likes the general appearance of things he may buy a farm and settle on this side. Among the other pasengers Mr. Onnes was a marked figure because of his height. He is 45 years old and weighs about 220 pounds, so it may be seen that he is not heavily built for his altitude. Among the American passengers he was known as "The Singer Building." He has a brother, who is not particularly tall, nor is any other member of his immediate family of more than ordinary height.

Presiding Elder A. L. Murray, of Atlantic City, will officiate at the celebration of the Lord's Supper at the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church tomorrow night.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Vail, who were recently married in the Holy Cross church, have returned from their wedding trip and are living with Mrs. Vail's mother on West Fourth street.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

The Woodbury Council has again decided to publish the delinquent tax list.

The sale of the Barnesboro Hotel to Augustus Prehl, of Woodbury, is reported. It is the oldest hostelry in South Jersey.

Mrs. Susanna Loudenslager, lifelong resident of Paulsboro, is very ill at her home, with little hope of her recovery. She is an aunt of Congressman Loudenslager.

The town of Paulsboro is at last awake to the needs of the citizens, and an ordinance has been introduced in the council to compel the erection of fire escapes on all public buildings where at least twenty persons assemble.

C. M. Van Tassell, of New York, one of the promoters of the proposed Millville, Tuckahoe and Ocean City Electric Railway, says that work is being rushed upon five Edison storage battery cars that are to be used by the company.

Mary Kilroy, five years old, 1809 South Seventh street, Camden, had an extra thumb on her right hand which bothered her because it always seemed in the way of the other digits. She went to the Cooper Hospital Thursday and had the superfluous member cut off.

A Gloucester County farmer is authortiy for the statement that several of the ring-neck pheasants, bought by the State at a cost of $20 each, are roosting with chickens all over the county, and that not a few of them have found their way with other poultry to the market.

Benjamin Yeager, eighteen years old, through his father, Thomas C. Yeager, of Trenton, has commenced su.. in the Supreme Court against the Trenton Street Railway Company for $11,000 damages, alleged to have been sustained when thrown off the rear platform of a crowded trolley car on a sharp curve.

The Wood brothers, founders of Woodbury, who lie buried in the old graveyard at the mouth of Woodbury Creek, have been remembered by a "friend," who sent $100 to the Historical Society to be spent in fixing up the ground. It has been suggested that the council also make an appropriation to assist the memorial.

Magistrate Daniel E. Iszard, the oldest member of the West Jersey Presbytery and for thirty-five years treasurer of the Atlantic County Bibel Society, has been re-elected superintendent of the Mays Landing Presbyterian Sunday-school for his thirty-seventh term. Mr. Iszard wished to retire this year, but his friends insit that he remain.

Caught by Policeman Fitzsimmons taking cinnamon buns from the box in front of a store at Third and Mt. Vernon streets, Camden, early Thursday morning, Elmer Palmer, seventeen years old, later in police court gained his liberty on pleading starvation for his act. Palmer told Recorder Stackhouse that since his mother broke up housekeeping he has had no place of abode and that he only resorted to theft when the pangs of hunger made him desperate.

Atlantic City policemen who seek shelter of warm boiler-rooms instead of pacing their beats on cold nights will hereafter stick to their assignments, as the result of the action of Mayor Stoy, who Thursday suspended Patrolman George W. Corbin for "catnapping" in boiler-rooms of apartment-houses on his beat. Corbin will lose a month's pay and a second offense will cost him his job. Patrolman W. S. Mathis was similarly penalized for failure to pull police boxes and for not reporting a fire which occurred on his rounds.

PERSONAL

David Angerbauer, of East Third street, is detained at home with the grip.

John Hall, of this city, has been visiting his sisters, the Misses Hall, of South Branch.

Mrs. L. A. Bellis, of Somerville, has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bellis, of this city.

Mrs. William Crounce, of Neshanic, is a patient at the hospital undergoing treatment for eye trouble.

Clifford Randolph, of Grant avenue, is rapidly regaining his strength, following a long illness with typhoid fever.

Dr. and Mrs. M. P. E. Groszmann, of Watchung Crest, left yesterday for Europe. They will be abroad for two months.

David H. Rowland, of West Seventh street, continues to improve from a recent illness, and hopes to be out again soon.

Mrs. T. J. Gillies, of this city, is at Muhlenberg Hospital, where she recently underwent an operation for eye trouble. She is improving nicely.

Bequeaths $50,000 Estate.

The will of Mary Pierson bequeaths the bulk of her real and personal property, which is estiamted at $50,000, to her sister, Hettie M. Pierson, of Westfield, with whom she resided at the time of death. Other bequests in the testament are: $100 to David T. Pierson, of Madison; $400 to the latter's daughter Gwendolen, and $500 to John H. Mahoney, of Westfield. Miss Pierson died on December 26. She was the daughter of the late Oliver W. Pierson.

FOR PUBLIC CONTROL

(1) shall we depend absolutely on this underground supply, (2) shall we depend upon the water supply?"

In the opinion of Mr. Sampson when a person finds food and drink that agrees with them they hate to part with it. One of the nice things about Plainfield, he said, is the purity and abundance of the water supply. Mr. Sampson said that it does not pay to experiment. Plainfield does not get its reputation from the P. S. C. trolley service or the lights that you cannot see, but from its pure water supply and the excellent railroad service.' Mr. Sampson was against the plan to bond the city and tear up the streets to install another plant, believing that the city should be able to make a satisfactory contract with the present water company.

Speaking from the viewpoint of an engineer, Dr. Leonard Waldo, declared that Plainfield has the most wonderful water filler that God Almighty ever gave to the universe. He said that when he came here twelve years ago he was pleased with the purity of the water and the reports on the same by Prof. Leeds, of Stevens Institute. He referred to the report of the company on the water read before the American Society of Engineers as being very complete.

Dr. Waldo said that there seemed to be a question as to whether the supply here is sufficient. In his opinion it would be better for Plainfield to own the supply beneath it. He said that he had kept a careful history of his own well, which is located two miles from the pumpling station, and it is at the present time dry. "What is to become of the vegetation if the water diminishes," said Dr. Waldo. "I believe we are entitled to this water which is beneath our feet."

"No sensible business man would go into any proposition without first knowing the legal status," declared Winfield S. Angleman. "It seems to me that the first thing that the city should do is to learn the legal status of the present water company and the legal rights of the city to prevent it from taking water and selling is elsewhere. The courts today seem to favor the city's position. It would be foolhardy to spend a million dollars to bring a water supply here and at the same time have a company that is selling our water elsewhere.

"It is a question as to the standing of the present company and whether the city wouldn't have the right to conserve its supply. There is plenty of water here, Mr. Bergen told me so last summer, but the lack of pumping facilities has been the trouble. The company is now installing large powerful pumps with which to raise the water into the standpipes and it is also laying larger pipes down the line.

"The trouble with the pressure in the city is that the mains are not large enough, there being double the laterals now that there were when the main was laid and consequently a heavier drain on the main line. The proper thing to do is to first find out what the company is and its legal rights and the legal rights of the city."

It was the opinion of George H. Frost that it is a very serious question that confronts the city, and especially those who have invested large sums of money here. He said in his opinion that the policy of the American people is along the line of least resistance. "When I first came here twenty-six years ago," said Mr. Frost, "there was an agitation for municipal ownership of water and the result was that the present water company got the plant. I am not objecting to the water company nor to the price we pay. The tendency throughout the country is in favor of municipal ownership of water plants. Since 1877 I have published statistics concerning municipal plants, and I find that some of the best men in the country are connected with plants. They are not grafters."

"Massachusetts is probably the most intelligent State in the Union, in thirty cities of our size in that State, municipal ownership of water plants is a success. The plants are not operated extravagantly neither are they going into bankruptcy, and I don't believe it would come to grief here.

"I believe there is plenty of water here. Why, some time ago a sewer contractor had to give up his contract because he couldn't get rid of the water. Our water supply is most remarkable. Mr. Bergen or no one else can tell its course or how long it will last. The supply is hard and it must be softened. We must look forward to the purity of the supply. As soon as there is the least suspicion regarding the purity of the water we will stop growing as a city.

"Many are opposed to municipal ownership, but we should start in right now on the proposition. The legal question is an important one. I don't believe that the present charter of the water company will stand much investigation.

"I know many men who are operating municipal plants and they are far superior to some others. I hope that the Common Council will receive strong backing in this matter. It is a serious question that of expending a million dollars, but the people need not be alarmed that the company will shut off their supply. They cannot do it, as water is an absolute necessity."

Others who spoke were L. B. Woolston, who believed a satisfactory contract should be made with the water company, taking exception to the plan to install a new plant at a great expense; Howard C. Tracy, who favored a municipal plant and concerning water rights; Jacob Sachar, also in favor of a municipal plant; J. W. Harrison, who talked at great length on the subject of city ownership; S. H. Voorhees, who favored city control, provided that it can be successfully financed and supported. Referring to the New Brunswick water, under city control, he said that the water has to be boiled and is of poor quality.

It was nearly 10:30 o'clock when the conference was concluded. Mayor Moy dropped in about 10 o'clock, but did not take any part in the conference.

P. H. S. NOTES.

The Juniors swamped the seniors in another of the inter-class series of basketball games yesterday afternoon, the score ending 36 to 12. The clean safe shooting of Line, Manley and Uhler was responsible for the big score. The standing of the teams to date follows: Sophomores, won 3 lost 0; seniors, won 2 lost 2; juniors, won 1 lost 3; freshmen, won 1 lost 2.

The first of a series of Friday afternoon entertainments was given yesterday in the auditorium and was folowed by dancing. This series of entertainments has for its object the better acquaintanceship among the pupils at the school and will be held every Friday for the balance of the season.

Dances to Help Borough.

All the girls and their best fellows of Mountainside Borough are in high glee over the prospects of a lively social season. The jubilation is the result of the action of the Borough Council in adopting the unique idea of conducting municipal dances to raise funds to liquidate the $500 indebtedness on the new borough hall. In all six dances will be held, the dates being January 20, February 17, March 17, April 14, May 12 and June 9.

OF PIANO BUILDING

A great deal of stress is laid on priority of manufacture by many piano makers.

We lay stress on the facts that we were pioneers when we started in 1839, and that fifty years ago our pianos were awarded the highest gold medals of award, but we attach far more importance to the fact that our piano is today the supreme quality and the maximum value.

Over 139 medals of award mean nothing to the buyer today unless we are still worthy of the "award of highest honors." Today the Hallet & Davis is better than ever, and is as good as a piano can be made.

Prices are very moderate. Catalogs and full information about buying a piano mailed free.

alone, who say they have the correct interpretation of the Scriptures. This being the case, it would seem that if our critic asserts that Christian Science is contrary to the Scriptures, his position is that of asserting that he has the correct interpretation out of the three hundred and more interpretations already extant. Christian Scientists do not wish to criticize denominations of Christians. All are entitled to work out their own salvation, but it is not right for any Christian clergyman to asert that Christian Science is "Anti-Christian and a lie," any more than it would be right for a Christian Scientist to assert that the teachings of the Baptist church are anti-Christian and a lie.

Our critic misrepresents the teachings of Christian Science with respect to marriages. Mrs. Eddy has declared that Christian Science does not prohibit marriage and says, "I leave the subject of marriage and progeny in my private teachings on Marriage in Science and Health which all approve." I will quote from a portion of this chapter on this subject. Page 56, lines 7 to 20. "Marriage is the legal and moral provision for generation among human kind. Until the spiritual creation is discerned, intact, apprehended, understood ,and His kindgom is come,——marriage will continue subject to such moral regulations as will secure increasing virtue." "Infidelity to the marriage covenant is the social scourge of all races." "The commandments, 'Thou shalt not commit adultery,' is no less imperative than the other, 'Thou shalt not kill.'" Among the statements of our critic set forth in quotation from Mrs. Eddy's Miscellaneous Writtings, Page 288. "Is marriage more right than celibracy?" "Human knowledge says it is, while Christian Science says not," I would answer that this is in accord with the celestial statement of Christ Jesus himself and relates to the celestial condition described by the Master when he said, "In the kingdom of heaven they neither marry or are given in marriage, but are as the angels." Thus we see that our critic has wholly misrepresented Mrs. Eddy's teachings on this subject.

In defining pure religion and undefiled, our critic asks if anyone has ever heard of Mrs. Eddy visiting the fatherless and widows in their affliction, etc., and further asks if we have ever heard of Mrs. Eddy's dispensing charity or contributing anything to the support of anyone besides herself. For many years, Mrs. Eddy visited the fatherless and widows in their affliction with the message of Christian healing and continued her activities in such ministrations directly or indirectly through the Christian Science church. The Bible says with respect to alms giving, "Let not your right hand know what the left hand doeth," Christian Scientists do not sound a trumpet before them when they give alms, but since our critic has brought up the question, I will say that Mrs. Eddy's charities amounted to about one hundred thousand dollars annually during her life time and at her decease her entire fortune of over one million dollars as before stated was bequeathed for charitable purposes. Unless our critic has done as well in the matter of alms giving, I say without fear of contradiction, that he is in no position to criticize harshly or at all, one who is not here to answer his unjust charges. There is an old adage which says, "If we cannot speak well of the departed, we should not speak of them at all." I agree with this statement and believe that your readers will do likewise. I will leave this subject to the good judgment of the readers of The Daily Press and am sure that they will "judge righteous judgment."

In closing I will say that Christian Science does not minister to sin in the sense which our critic implies, but would say that Christian Science does minister to the destruction of sin and sickness to the extent that no other church has ever attempted. The Christian Science organization has fearlessly enlisted in the destruction of the beliefs of sin, disease and death. Ags may pass before absolute Christian Science and its demonstration is reached, but those who are engaged in relieving mankind through Christian healing should receive commendation from every Christian church. We recall that the Disciples saw one casting out devils in the name of Christ and said, "Master we saw one casting out devils in thy name and forbade him, because he followeth not with us," but Jesus said, "Forbid him not; he that is not against us is for us." Luke 9: 49-50.

Respectfully,
H. COULSON FAIRCHILD.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Mrs. Ernest R. Brown, wife of the pastor of the Presbyterian church, has suffered a bereavement three times within the past two weeks. The relatives lived at Rahway the last one to pass away being her mother, who died the fore part of the week. All were victims of pneumonia. Mrs. Knox was prevented from attending her mother's funeral because of illness.

It is probable that the wax works entertainment given in the Presbyterian church, last night, may be repeated in the near future, either in Dunellen or New Market. The inclement weather kept many people form attending and another presentation will afford the desired opportunity. The matter will be decided upon within the next few days.

Mobus Brothers, of North Plainfield, commenced work, yesterday raising the W. G. Runyon house on Front street. Another story will be added to the building and will be fitted up for Mr. Runyon's new office.

Dr. P. W. Brakeley, who has been ill for the past two weeks, left yesterday for Atlantic City, accompanied by Mrs. Brakeley. They will remain at the shore for two or three weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Apgar, of Front street, are still victims of the grip. The former has had a severe attack and has been confined to his bed most of the time.

Rev. W. A. Knox has been mentioned among the grip victims during the past week but is now greatly improved.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The Young People's Choral Union, of the Baptist church, enjoyed a pleasant social after practice, last night, in the parlors of the church. Considering the weather the attendance was good.

Rev. George Hollingshead will have charge of the weekly prayer and praise meeting tonight at the Methodist church.

Ira Gage Walker, of Mountain avenue, has been entertaining his brother from Coxsackie, N. Y., for two weeks.

The township annual report will be ready for distribution among the taxpayers, the latter part of next week.

On account of the storm, only one session of the school was held, school closing for the day at 1 o'clock.

The next meeting of the Township Committee will be held Friday night, January 20, in the town rooms.

Mrs. Thomas Walsh, of Prospect avenue, has been entertaining friends from out of town.

Miss H. M. Squiers, of the corps teachers, is spending the week end at her home in Rahway.

Roy Day has taken a position with T. A. Garthwaite Co., of Watchung avenue, Plainfield.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

It is rumored that the dam of the New Market lake, which was destroyed some time ago will be rebuilt by private interests. The combined overflow from South Plainfield lake and the saw mill stream last summer barely supplied New Market with enough water to float a boat, and now that the Middlesex Water Co. have installed two powerful pumps, capable of pumping two million gallons a day, which will take the entire overflow from the lake here, it seems that the maximum of water fed to New Market by the saw mill stream alone will hardly be sufficient to furnish the requisite power.

Rev. J. J. Allen, pastor, will preach morning and evening at the Baptist church, tomorrow. In the morning the theme will be "How we Got Our Bible," and in the evening, "The Wiseman's Words to the Young."

A number of the young men of the town will witness the billiard exhibition at Newark between Willie Hoppe and Cutler, of Boston, on Monday night.

Mrs. W. E. Smith has gone to Harrisburg, Pa., to attend the funeral of her brother-in-law, W. O. Bishop.

George Gilbert has returned from a short visit with friends at Perth Amboy.

Mrs. William C. Dunham and son Donald are visiting at Brookside farm.

In the Borough Court.

Benjamin Eddy, arrested last night for intoxication and disorderly conduct had sentence suspended by Recorded Dolliver, this morning. The defendant was severely reprimanded and promised to behave himself in the future.

"JARLEY'S WAX WORKS" A SUCCESS IN DUNELLEN

The far famed "wax works" of "Madame Jarley" were exhibited in all their mechanical perfection in the chapel of the Presbyterian church at Dunellen, last night. Their coming for the benefit of the borough's projected public library had been announced as far back as two months ago and as a result standing room was at a premium. The audience included many people from this city as well as New Market, Bound Brook and other nearby places. The general opinion prevailed that it was the most elaborate entertainment of the kind that has ever been held in Dunellen in a long time and the probabilities are that it will be repeated in the near future.

The affair was first suggested by J. Watley Gangloff and he assumed the role of "Madame Jarley," who owned the wax figures. He was assisted by Fred Fedderman and Arthus Bogardus in putting the various characters through their respective parts. The entertainment was in five scenes, the first a general assembly of figures representing familiar personages in nursery rhymes and other stories; the second an allegorical picture in which Pocohontas saves the life of Captain John Smith; the third a statuary group which featured "Uncle Josh;" the fourth a representative of John Alden and Priscilla and the final a grand ensemble of all the figures. The sittings for each group were perfect, especially the Pocohontas scene, which produceed unstinted admiration. The various participants were thoroughly drilled in their respective parts and they were frequently applauded. Mr. Gangloff made a splendid "Madame Jarley" and at the close Robert Lowrie and Harry Gildes gave a song number that made a big hit.

Those taking part beside the principals mentioned were the following: The Misses Alice Fenner, Emma Voorhees, Ruth Voorhees, Bessie Morris, Elizabeth Hawthorne, Mary Logan, Mary Ryan, Jennie Ryan, Gladys Harrison, Irma Baldwin, Emily Gangloff, Florence Gangloff, Margaret Frederick, Nellie Gangloff, and Mrs. Field, Walter Law, John Logan, Leo Logan, Lewis Churchill, Clarence T. Voorhees, Paul Kratzel, Edgar Starker, Robert Lowrie, William Gildes, George Apgar, Stanley Field, and the Messrs. Pach, of Westfield.

The entertainment committee which arranged the affair was composed of Arthur Bogardus, J. W. Gangloff, Miss Ella H. Boice, and Fred Fedderman. Mr. Bogardus is the active head of the library committee and much of the success of the wax works presentation is due to his efforts. The fund will receive a neat sum in consequence.

ELECTRICAL WORKERS HOLD THEIR ANNUAL BALL.

Local No. 262, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, held their annual ball in Saengerbund hall last night. Music was furnished by Suhr's Imperial orchestra and Charles Ryan was floor manager assisted by William Reynolds and Augustus Utzinger.

The committee in charge was composed of Alden E. Wagner, chairman; Charles Ryder, William Reynolds, Albert Stryker, James Downing Thomas Harding and William Thorn.

Funeral of Miss Gillespie.

The funeral of Miss Bridget Gillespie, whose death occurred Thursday afternoon, was held in St. Joseph's church this morning. Rev. Father Miller conducted a solemn requiem mass in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. There were many floral offerings. Burial was made in St. Mary's cemetery, the pall bearers being Patrick and Michael Boyle, William and John Lyons, Daniel Sullivan and Thomas McDonald.

Will Re-open Clothing Store.

Mrs. M. Weinberger & Co., is making extensive alterations and purchasing a large stock of clothing and men's furnishings to re-open the store at 202-204 West Front street. It will be an up-to-date store in every respect and a full and complete line of clothing and furnishings for men and boys will be carried. A merchant tailoring department in charge of William Tunison, will be maintained. The store will be re-opened about February 1.

Hearing is Postponed.

Three of the five boys implicated in the alleged thefts at the store of William W. Warnock, the baker, failed to put in an appearance at court this morning and it was necessary to postpone the hearing of the case until next Saturday. Judge DeMeza declared that he would issue warrants for the arrest of the boys unless their parents produced them in court next Saturday morning. They are Hugh Lyon, Jules Foggi and George Boland.

A Colonist of Canaan

By Izola Forrester

The Southwestern flier drew up at Canaan Junction. It never stopped, merely slowed up long enough to throw out the mail sack, and give the curly-headed boy in the express car a chance to call hello to Nell.

But today it stopped, stopped while one man swung off a sleeper, and the porter dropped a suit case and grip on the platform beside him. Nell stood in the doorway of the little red depot, waving her hand to the curly-headed boy, while the train pulled out. The starched cuffs of her blue-and-white shirtwaist were turned up to her elbows as a concession to the heat and the business duties of Canaan Junction. Many a warm, tired traveler in the dusty, stifling cars turned for a second look at her as she was good to rest your eyes on.

The man left behind was young, so young that he had outgrown his years, and there was a latent, careless strength, mixed with awkwardness about him that reminded one of a cub.

Nell took one look at him and caught her breath sharply. She knew him in an instant, but there was a bare chance that he had forgotten her. It had been four years, and four years is a lengthy stretch when one is 17.

He set the suit case down under the ticket shelf, and went back to the water bucket.

"It's hot enough down here, isn't it?" She watched him drain the tin cup a second time before she answered: "We don't mind it much."

"I suppose not. I came from the north. Don't suppose you know anybody here named Acton?"

The girl's hand closed tightly over the package of letters she had drawn from the mail sack. Her back was toward him. But her voice was steady and natural.

"No, I don't."

"You'd be pretty likely to know, handling all the mail, and so on, wouldn't you?"

"Oh, yes, I would know. I know the name of everybody in this town!"

"Except mine."

He came over to the ledge and leaned one elbow on it, smiling in at her cheerfully. She did not answer.

"Maybe he's using a different name," he went on, presently. "He had plenty of cause to change it, the Lord knows, when he started down this way. I know he's here all right, and I'm going to find him."

She Knew Him in an Instant.

The telegraph instrument set up its call, and she sat down to answer it. When she rose her face was flushed slightly, and anybody well acquainted with Nell would have surmised that she was on the war path. Jopman, the town nearest the state line, was asking about Colonel Acton. Canaan Junction again stated that the party was unknown there.

"Is there a chief of police here in town?"

"Chief of police!" She flashed a startled glance at him. "No. There's a constable. He's the undertaker, too."

"Nice, handy combination," he laughed. "You people down here in this small, new town certainly economize on public offices. Thanks, I'll hunt him up. Goodby."

"Goodby." She watched him as he went along the road towards the main street, his long, easy strides kicking up a flurry of dust behind him.

The whistle over at the factory was blowing for noon. She caught up the telephone receiver and called a number.

"I want to speak to father, please. Is he there? Well, wait. Give him a message. Tell him to come over to the depot right away. Tell him to come around by the river road, not Main street. I want to show him something there."

Then she waited. It seemed hours before she caught sight of the dear old figure, swinging along the river road, his gray felt hat well back on his head, his gray mustache and imperial giving added distinction to the fine, gracious face. The tears rushed to her eyes as she watched him, but she controlled herself, and met him with a smile.

"Sit down and rest a minute, honey. You've got 20 minutes. They—they've wired for you to come down to Alcazar. It's some committee meeting, I believe." She turned away, and bent over a time table, so that he should not see her tell-tale eyes. "You can make the 1:10 local, dear. And—don't bother about coming back tonight. I'm sure they need you down there."

"In a rush, aren't they?" laughed the colonel, wiping off his forehead. 'Guess it's about their new town hall. It consists of four flags on a center plot at present, with a geranium bed in the middle. I suppose I'll have to go. Be all right, won't you, Nell?"

She nodded and smiled. It was 15 minutes now. She watched the road to Main street every now and then, half expecting Fate to play her a trick and send the long-limbed stranger back again. It wasn't wrong. She told herself over and over again, it wasn't. They had no right to come after him now, and ruin his whole life. It would have been different if he had been guilty.

A hundred suggestions and plans swept through her mind as she listened to him chat of the new town hall at Alcazar. Then all at once there was a dead silence, and she turned quickly. The colonel stood in the center of the little depot, his hands clasped comfortably under his coat tails, his lips pursed up for a whistle. And he was looking at the suitcase under the window ledge, a suitcase with the owner's name written boldly across it, "J. P. Dexter."

Nell leaned her hands on the desk and waited tensely. She had forgotten to hide the suitcase.

"Well, honey girl, the cat wouldn't stay put, would it? And you going to all this trouble just to try and save your dad from himself." The colonel spoke very calmly, very reflectively, almost with a glint of humor in his blue eyes, as he saw the look on Nell's face. "When did Jack Dexter get here?"

"Father, listen." She put both hands up on his shoulders and leaned her face against his chin. She was just about on a level with his chin. "You must take this train. Surely, when you know you're in the right, it doesn't matter what other people think. They don't know for sure that you are here yet. The night operator said you were, but I know he isn't certain. I can turn Jack Dexter away. He didn't know me at all. Think of them sending him down here to bring you back, the boy that owed everything to you."

"He had to do his duty if they sent him. I certainly wish it had been some one else. I always set a heap by Jack. He's a right fine boy. Studied law with the judge after we left, Nell. I understand he's prosecuting attorney."

From the bridge came the whistle of the 1:10. She was on time to the minute. The ticker was calling the Canaan operator, and she went to it, the tears streaming from her eyes. As the local pulled in the colonel stood in the doorway and swept his broad-brimmed felt hat off in a general salute.

And the 1:10 pulled out without its extra passenger.

Somebody came hurrying along the platform and into the depot.

"I can't locate him yet, but I'm going to stay over—" Jack Dexter stopped short and whistled softly under his breath. The colonel held Nell close to him, and smiled.

"How are you, boy, how are you?" he said, heartily. "I can't offer you my hand, because, you see, they're both engaged. I'm mighty glad to see you again, Jack. Just take your suitcase right over to my house, sir, and we'll have a good dinner before we start north tonight. "He put up one hand as Jack started to explain, and shook his head warningly. "No need for explanations. I understand the situation thoroughly. I don't want to disturb Nellie here, with any of the details."

"But, Colonel Acton," Jack exclaimed. "You don't know what I'm after, sir. I came down to let you know that that indictment is squashed flatter than a pancake. The whole city is waiting to welcome you back, if you'll only come. The president of the bank confessed to the full amount, swore he had made a scapegoat of you, sir, and then gracefully committed suicide. It was the wisest thing he'd done in five years."

"Well, now, that's too bad," the colonel said, regretfully. "He need not have done that. I was comfortable down here. It's home to Nell and myself. In fact, we feel rather responsible for the future of Canaan. Mighty fine of you to come down and let me know, Jack, though; mighty fine."

"I wanted to be the first to tell you, sir." Dexter's hand gripped the colonel's closely. "A crowd of the newspaper boys were after your trail, but I knew you'd be in the same place where you left word we could find you if you were wanted."

The colonel smiled in a pleased, comfortable fashion all his own.

"We keep our word, we Actons," he said. "Don't we, Nell?"

"I can hardly say that," she faltered. "I—I didn't tell the truth to Mr. Dexter when he asked me if I knew you. I just couldn't. I don't know what he must think of me."

"Think of you?" gasped Dexter. "I think you are the bravest, truest, bulliest—"

The colonel coughed and glanced at his watch.

"We will all lunch in honor of the occasion over at the hotel, sir. Jack, just give my little girl your arm along Main street. I'll lock up the station and carry the suitcase until the next train comes along. No, sir, I can't permit it, as my guest, you will allow me to have my way." Jack hesitated still, looking down at the heavy suitcase, and the colonel gave him a delicate poke in the side. "Ladies first, sir, right about face—forward, march!"

LITTLE MIXED.

Two Frenchmen stood admiring a pastoral scene from the brush of a young American. It chanced that the artist was in the gallery.

"And how did monsieur ever create such a wondeful painting?" asked one in broken English.

"Ah," said the artist, with a far-away look, "that picture was an offspring of my brain."

The other Frenchman was interested.

"What did he say, Henri?"

"I can hardly explain," whispered the other excitedly; "he said ze picture was one spring off of his brain. Ees eet any wonder zat ze Americans act queerly when they have springs on their brains?"

Precious Pet.

"In the name of goodness, what is all that noise in your flat, ma'am?" demanded the janitor as he came up from the basement three steps at a time.

"It's the baby," explained the proud mother, "and isn't he a precious little pet?"

"What has he been doing, ma'am—making boilers?"

"Of course not. Mamma's little wootsy-wootsy has a musical ear. He thinks the radiator is a xylophone and has been trying to beat a tune on it."

Setting Bad Example.

"Been reading up astronomy of late, Mr. Hardapple?" asked the windmill salesman.

"No, son," drawled the old man. "Comet hasn't arrived yet, has it?"

"No, but in the east a meteorite struck a kitchen stove and cooked two eggs."

"Land sakes! Don't talk so loud. If my old woman heard that sh'd keep breakfast waiting until a meteorite came, if it took a thousand years."

In Olden Days.

Cleopatra had sent the slave for the adder.

"There's nothing like having a spectacular finish," she confided.

"I should say not," approved Mark Antony. "Keep your name before the public and some day you may have an Egyptian cigarette named after you."

For even in those days the press agent was not unknown.

NO AIM.

It made her hopping mad.

Drop in the Bucket.

Mrs. Yeast—It is said that the world's postal business is increasing at the rate of seven per cent. per annum. What do you think of that?

Mr. Yeast—Well, I think that these letters of yours I forgot to mail, dear, don't cut so much ice, after all.—Yonkers Statesman.

Wise Girl.

"I can't understand why you want to marry young Twiggs. Can't you see how foolish he is?"

"Yes, pa. That's why I'm marrying him."

"What!"

"I can see how foolish he is about me."

Seeking Information.

A Yale professor says many of the stories of the Old Testament are myths. If the whale didn't swallow Jonah, maybe the professor will be so kind as to tell us where Jonah was during those three days he was missing.

A Thoughtful Soul.

"What makes you think so?"

"He told his architect he wanted his den to be an octopus-shaped room."

TOWN OF GOLD BRICKS.

Great Wealth Found In Walls of Mexican Adobe Houses When These Were Torn Down.

There are many remarkable towns in Mexico, but none more interesting than Guanajuato, "the hill of the frog." It might more properly be called the "gold brick town," for the houses have been found to contain much gold.

This is a curious situation, but it came about naturally. Guanajuato—pronounced Wah-nah-wahto—is one of the oldest mining towns in Mexico, but the value of the place as a town was discovered when a railroad company decided to build a station there. It was found necessary to tear down about 300 adobe buildings, which were made of the refuse of various mines after the ore was extracted.

When it became known that the old adobe buildings would be torn down pieces taken at random were assayed. It was found that because of the old process, which left much gold and silver, they assayed from $3 to $24 a ton. The mean value was estimated to run about $8 gold a ton.

The old buildings have brought about $30,000 Mexican, in gold, and persons who have built since the new machinery has been installed in the mines are bemoaning the fact that the new houses do not contain as much gold as the old.—Scientific American.

USE OF PILLOWS.

A Habit That Is Unnecessary and at Times May Be Harmful.

"Pillows are little more than a fad and a rather harmful one at that," said a Germantown doctor. "They should, indeed, only be used by those who sleep on their sides, as they are really injurious to others. When you sleep on your side your shoulder prevents your head from lying level on the bed, and pillows are useful to raise the head to this level.

"The natural and most healthful position for the ordinary person in sleeping is for one's head to be kept perfectly even, just as it would be standing up. Now, for the one who lies on his back while sleeping no pillow is needed to keep the head in this position, and yet 99 per cent of the persons who sleep on their backs use pillows, while those who sleep on their sides use far more pillow than is necessary.

"People get used to having their heads and shoulders propped high up and imagine they could not sleep any other way; but, as a matter of fact, if they would try sleeping with little or no pillow they would not only find that they would feel better in the morning, but also would actually be more comfortable in bed and sleep much sounder thoughout the night."—Philadelphia Record.

At the Head.

It is stated in Mr. and Mrs. Pennell's "Life of James MacNeill Whistler" in that part which relates to his brief West Point career that the great American painter was not "soldierly in appearance, bearing or habit." Whistler's horsemanship is said to have been hardly better than his scholarship. According to General Webb, it was not wholly unusual for him at cavalry drill to go sliding over his horse's head. On such occasions Major Sackett, then in command, would call out:

"Mr. Whistler, aren't you a little ahead of the squad?"

According to Whistler's version to the Pennells, Major Sackett's remark was:

"Mr. Whistler, I am pleased to see you for once at the head of your class."

She Almost Remembered.

Little Josephine, aged four, was intently studying the pictures in a book and seemed very much interested in a picture of Charles Dickens.

Taking the book to her mother, she inquired who it was.

"That is Dickens, dear," said her mother.

The picture was wonderfully fascinating to the little girl, and when her big sister came from college in the evening she ran and got the book, turned to the picture and said:

Her sister replied, "No, dear, that is Mr. Dickens."

"Well," said Josephine, "I knew it was some kind of a swear word."—Delineator.

Concrete Church.

"Colonel, we want a contribution from you to help build a mission church."

"Judge, you know well enough that, while I am in sympathy with morality and religion, I don't believe in churches in the abstract, and"—

"Neither do I, colonel. We're going to build this one of concrete."—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Changed Her Mind.

Nearsighted Lady—The boy who is trying to tie that tin can to that poor dog's tail ought to be thrashed within an inch of his life—the horrid little brute! Maid—It's your boy, mum. Nearsighted Lady—My boy? Maid—Yes, mum. Nearsighted Lady—Tell him if he'll stop I'll give him some cake.—Christian Advocate.

A Frank Confession.

Watchmaker—Your watch seems to be erratic. Have you had it near a powerful magnet? Customer (confused)—Why, I was carriage riding last evening with Miss Bright.—Jewelers' Circular.

There is a fellowship among the virtues by which one great, generous impulse stimulates another.—Garfield.

AMATEUR STRATEGY

By TEMPLE BAILEY

[Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Perceval's den in Burkeley hall was hung with the usual conglomerate collection of trifles on which college youths pride themselves. Strangely enough, however, though otherwise complete, it lacked one of the essentials—indeed, a vital essential—of a student's room decorations. There were no photographs.

The other fellows had pictures of girls in evening gowns, girls in street costume, girls in golf garb, girls on horseback, girls afoot—always girls. But not a girl's picture adorned Perceval's den except one lonely small miniature, and that stood far withdrawn, hidden on the back of his desk.

Randolph Chase hauled it out on one occasion before Perceval could reach him with a detaining hand.

"What a queer little girl!" Randolph said.

"Put it back," Perceval said shortly, his face aflame.

But the other fellows crowded behind Randolph and looked at the picture over his shoulder.

"Such a mop of hair and such a little face!" said one of them.

"Put it back!" Perceval's tone rasped with irritation. "Put it back, Randolph!"

Randolph, after one glance at the younger man's countenance, set the miniature back on the desk hastily. "Oh, if you feel that way about it," he apologized.

But the next night when he was alone with Perceval he said: "I don't want to be inquisitive, but I was awfully interested in that girl's face. Who is she?"

Perceval was standing at the window, looking out upon the elm bordered street, where the big electric lights cast great shadows.

"That," he said without looking around—"that girl, as you call her, is Mrs. Perceval Moore."

"What!" Randolph's tone expressed extreme incredulity. "You surely don't mean"—

Perceval whirled around. "That I am married? Yes."

Randolph whistled. "Well, of all things!" he said. And after that there was silence.

Then Perceval came over and flung himself into a chair opposite Randolph. "I've simply got to tell somebody, Chase," he said. "I'm in an awful fix, and she's the dearest and truest and best little thing in the world."

Randolph reached over and picked up the miniature again. "She truly looks it," he said after he had studied it for a long time.

Perceval choked a little before he answered. "She's an angel, Randolph."

"Then what's the matter?" Randolph questioned.

Perceval leaned forward.

"I've deceived her. She doesn't know that I am in college. She thinks I am earning a good salary in business."

"Well, son," said Randolph Chase, "it seems to me that sort of deception is a kind that a girl can forgive easily enough. I guess she won't be wildly indignant when she finds that next year—it is next year that you come of age, isn't it?—you'll have a big pile of money coming to you. Any girl would be tickled to death to find that."

Perceval shook his head. "Not Annabel," he declared. "Isn't her name dear and old fashioned, Chase?"

"Yes," Randolph agreed. "But why will she object to a million, Perceval?"

"Because she will say that I lied to her," Perceval said slowly, "and Annabel can forgive anything but a lie."

"Out with it!" Randolph probed. "Tell me the whole story. It must be a queer one, and if you don't mind my saying so, old man, she must be a queer girl."

"That's just what she is," said Perceval. "I met her last year at the beach. She was such a quaint, queer little thing that she attracted me. She always wore white, and I would find her sitting on the sand singing little songs to herself. There was an old sea captain to whom she talked a good deal, and I got him to introduce us.

"Well, she had read a lot of books on social equality, and she just simply didn't have any use for the gilded youth with money. What Annabel wanted was a man who worked, preferably with his hands, but, failing that, one who lived in the thick of the fight for existence. And she meant it too. And that is where I fell.

"I was head over heels in love with her," continued Perceval forlornly, "and I simply wouldn't let her go. So I let her believe that I was working my way up in business. The first lie was simple enough and looked like one of those things that could be squared easily enough afterward. But, oh, Chase! I had to back that lie up with details on details until I had lied to her at least ten lies to the hour. Well, we were married before I left in the fall. I wasn't of age, and she wasn't, and she wouldn't leave home until I could support her without hampering my business career.

"I knew I had to come back to college or get dad down on me, so I told her to stay," groaned Perceval. "But I made her marry me for fear something might come between us, and I couldn't stand that, Randolph. But think how I'll appear to her, for I've lied in every letter, telling her how business was, and all that."

The young fellow's voice broke. Randolph held out a sympathetic hand.

"She'll forgive you, all right," he said. "But you sit right down tonight and confess, old man. It's not only the right thing, but the best policy, to be perfectly frank with her, and if she's in love with you she'll forgive you."

But Perceval shook his head. "I don't dare," he said huskily. "I am so afraid I'll lose her, Randolph, and she is the dearest thing in the world."

"You have said that before," Randolph remarked patiently. "I think you are making an awful mistake, but it will have to work itself out if you won't take any advice."

Then he went to his own room and smoked another pipe on it, and after that he wrote a letter.

And in three days came a letter to Perceval. "Dear boy," it began, "I must come to you at once. Things at home are in a dreadful state. I will tell you when I reach you. I know you haven't much for us to live on, but I have a little money in the bank that I have saved from my allowance, and I shall follow this note at once. Expect me on the 10:30 a. m. Friday.

"ANNABEL."

"And this," said Perceval desperately as he showed the note to Randolph, "is Thursday. What am I going to do with her when she gets here, Randolph?"

Randolph smiled inscrutably. "Find some rooms in a cheap quarter and set up housekeeping."

Perceval's face brightened. "And go out every morning and make her think I've gone to work? You are a genius, Randolph."

It took the two men several hours to find a little furnished apartment that would seem suitable for a young couple with little money. Perceval grumbled disconsolately. "I hate to put my jewel in such a setting," he said.

"Tell her the truth," Randolph again advised, "and you won't have to put up with such cheap things."

But Perceval refused. The next morning he met Annabel at the station, and together they went to the little cheap apartment, and here Annabel wept on his shoulder.

Her account of the trouble at home was somewhat vague, but she was enthusiastic over the thought of her housekeeping. "It will be lovely to work for you," she said.

But Perceval found it anything but lovely. He hated to see her soft white hands in the dishwater. It made him wince to see her bending over the flaming stove, and even the joy of her presence could not take away his sense of infinite guilt.

And so he grew thin and pale and worn.

"You are working too hard," Annabel said one night. And when he shook his head drearily his little wife crept out to the janitor's room and telephoned to some one.

"He is punished enough," was her queer message. "Can't you have him go to his old quarters tonight and have it over?"

The next night Perceval said to Annabel: "I have an engagement with Randolph. You won't mind if I leave you, will you, dear?"

"Of course not," she acquiesced. "I can get along just this one time."

Randolph told him that he wished to borrow some of Perceval's books. "I knew they were in your rooms, and I thought you wouldn't mind coming over," said he, "so I took the liberty of asking you to desert your wife for one evening."

As the two men entered the luxurious quarters Perceval sighed. "To think of my condemning Annabel to such hideousness as that apartment we are living in!" he said, leaning down to turn on the low electric lamp on his study table.

The light flared up and showed the cozy room, the little fire already lighted in the open grate, the blue flame burning under the brass teakettle.

"Why, what?" Perceval demanded, like the big bear in the fairy tale. "Who has been living in my room?"

From behind a tall screen came a little figure in white.

"Oh, Perceval!" cried Annabel and threw herself in his arms.

And when Randolph had explained that he had taken chances and had written the truth to Perceval's little wife and Annabel had explained that she had known he was going to school and not to work ever since she had come to him, and, oh, didn't he know that she would love him if he was rich, Perceval drew a long breath of happiness.

"I don't deserve it," he confessed, with his eyes shining, "and we can't live in these rooms, Annabel. But I am going to take my chances with dad, and when he sees what a dear little, queer little thing you are he will give in, and if he doesn't I can earn my living like a man now that I am square with you, sweetheart."

Made the Most of It.

A famous big game hunter visited the Swazis one winter, and the king took a liking to him and loaned him, on his first hunt, the court praiser. The praiser's business was to laud the king and the king's favorites. The white hunter on his expedition had bad luck. He only shot a rabbit. But as he passed with his retinue through the Swazi village on his return the praiser marched before him chanting in a loud voice:

"The great white huntsman has killed a rabbit! Let all the Swazi people hear. It was as big as an ox, as fierce as a lion and as swift as a buck. The brave white huntsman killed it alone and unaided. He killed it with his thunder tube. Listen, ye people! The white huntsman has killed a rabbit! It was as terrible as a tiger, as large as an elephant, and yet the huntsman from afar, the great white slayer, he alone has killed it!"

Old time barristers in England did not openly receive fees for their services. An early method of collecting fees was the pocket which in mediaeval times a barrister used to have placed in the back of his gown, into which the solicitor would surreptitiously slip the fee.

A man had just become engaged to the widow of a rich tobacco manufacturer. A friend of his, meeting him, remarked chaffingly:

"Hello, old man! I hear you are going to marry the widow!"

"Yes," he replied seriously. "And the weeds too!"

"Quigbee is a queer sort of chap. He told me yesterday that when he feels particularly blue and melancholy he always sits down and reads a book of poems."

"And then when he gets hungry, I suppose, he sits down and reads a cookbook."

A little girl, who was trying to tell a friend how absentminded her grandpa was, said, "He walks around, thinking about nothing, and when he remembers it he then forgets that what he thought of was something entirely different from what he wanted to remember."

"I see you have my pamphlet on your desk," said the economist. "What do you think of it?"

"It's betwixt and between," answered the heartless friend. "It's entirely too light as an argument and not heavy enough for a paperweight."—Washington Star.

"Y-e-s," hesitated Mr. Justwed, "these biscuits are pretty good, but don't you think there ought to be just a little more"—

"Your mother made them," interrupted Mrs. J. quickly.

—"of them?" ended Mr. J., with a flash of inspiration.—Cleveland Leader.

"What are you doing here?" said the woman to the tramp, who had got over the wall just in time to escape the bulldog.

"Madam," he said, with dignity, "I did intend to request somethin' to eat, but all I ask now is that, in the interest of humanity, you'll feed that dog."

The albatross, the largest webfooted bird, measuring sometimes seventeen feet from tip to tip of wing and weighing up to twenty pounds, frequently accompanies ocean steamers from the Cape to Melbourne, a distance of 5,500 miles, without being seen to rest on the way.

The village drunkard of a little Connecticut hamlet staggered up to a man one evening and mumbled, "Shay, mister, do you know where Tom Brien lives?"

"Why, you are Tom Brien yourself."

"Hang it, I know that, but where does he live?"

Butler (to a friend who smokes in the home of a rich man)—How does it come that you are smoking cabbage leaf cigars here in the house? Friend—I must, so that when my master returns he will not think that I smoked so many of his imported brands.—Meggendorfer Blatter.

"If you didn't take so much interest in horses you would be better off!" exclaimed an angry wife to her husband. "You have had horses on your brain all your life!"

"I suppose that is how I happened to marry a nag!" retorted the husband.—London Express.

When the composer Sullivan was knighted some one asked him why he, and not his collaborator, W. S. Gilbert, was chosen for this honor.

"I don't exactly know," said Sir Arthur, "but I suppose her majesty did it to make the punishment fit the crime."

"Those Joneses are a bad lot. Two of them at least ought to be in jail," said a suburbanite, referring to a family in his district.

"Some redeeming quality about the third one, eh?" remarked a visitor.

"Yes; he's already there."—London Telegraph.

To polish a piano wring a cloth out of warm water as dry as you can, then sprinkle a little paraffin on it. Rub lightly on the case of the piano with cloth, only wetting a small piece at a time, then polish immediately with a soft dry duster. This method produces a brilliant polish and is quite safe.

Keeping Susie In Spirits.

He was so busy waving his hands at a window that as he backed around the corner he backed against a friend, who happened to be coming the other way, and nearly knocked him down.

"I beg your pardon," he said quickly. "You see, we haven't been married but a little while, Susie and I, and she said if I didn't wave at her until I was out of sight maybe she'd cry."—New York Press.

Interpreted.

They were talking about the wonders of wireless telegraphy.

"And 'C Q D' is the signal of distress," remarked the pretty co-ed.

"Yes," laughed the big freshman. "I always use those letters when I send a distress message to the old folks at home."

"Really? And what does 'C Q D' stand for."

"Cash quick, dad."—Chicago News.

Bessie's Task.

"Mamma," said little Bessie at table one noon, "I'm to write something to read in school, but I've forgotten what teacher called it."

"An essay, perhaps," suggested Bessie's father.

"An oration," offered the little maid's high school brother teasingly.

"No," said Bessie, suddenly brightening. "I remember now what it is—it's an imposition."

A Spectular Performance

"Whither, good friend, is the crowd going?" asked an American tourist of a citizen of the Romagna, Italy.

"To the execution, senor."

"And who is the poor devil to be executed?"

"There are many of them, but none is of importance except Il Passatore."

"And who is Il Passatore?"

"Have you never heard of Il Passatore, the brigand? Ah, he is a brave man. We have had daring men in Italy, but none has ever done the brilliant work that he has done. Did you never hear of the entertainment he gave us some time ago?"

"No. Tell me about it."

"Thanks, senor," pocketing a coin. "It was the last day of the carnival. The streets were packed with people, masked and in costume, throwing confetti and making all manner of noises. The police were in the streets, where the throngs were to be kept in order and scattered through the deserted parts of the town, for you know, senor, that when everybody is masked there are fine opportunities for pilfering.

"The theater of Formlipopoli was packed from the orchestra stalls to the top gallery. As soon as the doors were opened people pushed in to get those seats that were free to all. Long before the hour for the commencement of the performance every chair was occupied, and no more people were admitted. At a quarter of an hour before the time for raising the curtain the orchestra began to play. When it had finished one piece, the conductor looked for the signal to begin the music intended for the opening of the play. He waited some time, and, not getting it—the audience was becoming impatient—he tapped his music rack with his baton for an extra piece.

"This piece finished, he waited again. Still there was no signal. The audience pounded and stamped, and the boys in the top gallery gave catcalls and whistles. Still there was no signal. Again and again the orchestra performed, but the curtain remained where it was, only there seemed to be motion behind it, for it swayed to and fro as if moved by changes in the atmosphere on the stage.

"Finally the signal came. Every one could see that, for the conductor gave a preliminary look to the right and left of him at his orchestra, spread his arms, his right hand holding up his baton, and, looking once more at the first violins, he gave the signal to begin.

"Slowly the great curtain rolled upward. Those familiar with the play were surprised to see, instead of the few feet and ankles of the ordinary performers, a forest of boots. As the curtain rolled higher the muzzles of rifles came into view pointing in every direction from the parquet to the top gallery. There the full figures of a hundred men were exposed to the audience.

"What departure from the opening of the play was this? Who were these men, and why were their rifles pointed at the audience? The orchestra stopped playing. The conductor, his baton half raised, was staring up at the men on the stage, bewildered.

"Then a man from among the riflemen on the stage stepped forward and, hat in hand, bowed profoundly to the audience. Four words from him were enough to send a thrill of horror over the assembly.

"'I am Il Passatore.'

"Then he told them that the theater was surrounded by his men, that the first man who attempted to resist or escape would be shot and that he and those with him on the stage would proceed to collect their valuables.

"At the conclusion of this brief speech, the audience sitting quiescent, he descended with his men from the stage and proceeded to collect from the audience money and jewels valued at $400,000. Il Passatore then returned to the stage and said:

"'My friends, please accept my heartfelt thanks for the peaceful manner in which you have accepted the inevitable. Had any of you by resistance compelled us to discharge our rifles the noise would have been heard without. This would have brought a crowd outside, the guard there would have been overpowered, and, as for me and my brave men, we would have been shut up here like rats in a trap. I assure you we appreciate this kindly consideration in your not attracting any attention from without, while you have been also laying us under obligations for your abundant contribution.'

"Having thus gracefully thanked his audience for their double favor, Il Passatore told them to remain in their seats while he and his band withdrew. Those bandits nearest the wings, their rifles still pointed into the theater, first disappeared behind them, then those next, until all had vanished. Then Il Passatore, throwing a kiss to the audience from the tips of his fingers, also passed out. The robbers had a free passage to the stage door, through which all of them went out into the open street and got away with their plunder before a single person in the audience could give the alarm. Indeed, those first leaving the theater were obliged to do so by the stage door through which the bandits had passed and unlock the doors for the rest.

"Alas, senor, this brave leader and a hundred of his men have since been captured, and these people are hurrying by to see them all executed. Perhaps many of the crowd were in the theater the bandits plundered. May heaven comfort them."

"The plundered?"

"No; the brave bandits."

"The Girl in Pink" will be the big attraction at Proctor's theatre Monday. She will appear in a sensational novelty act and is sure to make as big a hit as the "Aeroplane Girl."

FAMOUS POET'S WIDOW VISITS HER SISTER HERE

The recent sale of the Chester county, (Pa.) farm, where Thomas Buchanan Read, the author of "Sheridan's Ride" spent his boyhood, has brought to light the fact that while Read died in 1872, his widow, Mrs. Harriet Read, still survives and is in very good health. At present she is visiting her sister, Mrs. Whitehead Cornell Duyckinck, of 816 Madison avenue, this city. She was Mr. Read's second wife. His daughter, by the first marriage, was almost as old as herself.

The sale of the farm led the poet's Philadelphia admirers to make inquiry whether any members of his family are now alive, with the result as stated. Like the widow of that other Chester county poet, Bayard Taylor, who also survives, Mrs. Read is one of the few links that bind the present with the past era in American literature.

Read, who was born in 1822, acquired distinction both as a poet and as a painter before and during the Civil War. He made Sheridan's ride at the battle of Winchester the subject of a poem as well as a painting. There are specimens of his art in the Academy of the Fine Arts, the Union League, the Philadelphia School of Designs for Women and in many gallaries in the city of Philadelphia. He lies buried in Laurel Hill cemetery. The farm in Chester county where he spent his early days, a 19-acre tract near Guthrieville, was sold for $1,261. Mrs. Read's home is in Philadelphia, but she spends part of the year here with her sister.

TWO KILLED WHILE DODGING EXPRESS.

Two men, whose identity has not been established, were struck and instantly killed by an eastbound express on the Central Railroad at Westfield last evening. The men were walking on the tracks near the Osborne avenue crossing and had stepped out of the way of a freight train directly in front of the express.

The bodies of the two men lying along the tracks were found by the crew of a freight train. Both were horribly mangled. The remains were brought to Westfield and later sent to Cole's morgue in this city.

Badly Hurt Shunting Ice.

Stanley Roll, son of J. B. Roll, of Mountainside, was seriously injured at the Wheeler icehouse, Echo Lake, Branch Mills, Wednesday afternoon. He was at the top of the ice chute directing the ice cakes as they came to the slide. A cake jammed, and as he was attempting to straighten it out he lost his footing and fell eighteen feet to the ground, hitting on his head. He was taken to his home, a couple of miles distant, and Dr. Harrison, of Westfield, called. He has a fracture of the skull.

A Young Reformer.

"In Baltimore," says Senator Depew, "I made the acquaintance of a beautiful girl with yellow hair. This little girl and I talked of a number of things. We deplored many of the evils of modern life. Then for a time the little girl was silent, lost in thought. Finally she sighed and said, 'Why can't the toy shop man call for orders every morning, the same as the butcher and grocer do?'" —Blue Bull.

Time Limit.

"How long did you stay at Monte Carlo?"

"Six days."

"Only six days? How was that?"

"Well, you see, I only had six frocks."

William C. Kelly, of Oak Tree, will leave Wednesday morning by rail for Crescent City, Florida, where he will spend the rest of the winter.

Philip Street, a civil engineer, formerly in the employ of H. C. Van-Emburgh, left today on the Steamer Megantic, for Hull, England, his former home.

NO TUNNEL CONNECTION

No Liklihood of Improvement in Near Future for Jersey Central.

INTERVIEW WITH MR. BESLER.

Road's Vice President Tells a Reporter to See McAdoo—Tunnel Builder Won't Be Quoted.

"The dream of Philadelphians—to get out of their city and into New York in one hour and one-half or less—seems a long way from fulfillment, according to a statement made yesterday by W. G. Besler, Vice-President and General Manager of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, over whose lines the Reading Railroad trains reach this city," (New York) said the New York World yesterday.

"In the Quaker City there is a boom in progress for the Reading and Jersey Central to arrange a connection with the McAdoo tubes. The Reading opens a new elevated system out of its terminal in Philadelphia next week. This will save five minutes upon the one hour and fifty minute schedule already in operation by the Jersey Central and the Reading lines. A connection with the tubes would mean a through schedule of not more than one hour and thirty minutes.

"But at this point the dream strikes realities. The realities appear to be a decided difference of opinion between William G. McAdoo and the directors of the Reading and Jersey Central as to who shall build the necessary connecting link.

"Mr. Besler says:

"'Our directors have talked frequently regarding the advisability of a tunnel to New York. I can say that at the present time there does not appear to be the slightest likelihood of our having tunnel connection with New York in the near future. Whenever I am asked about the matter I simply say, see Mr. McAdoo. He has arranged his line so that it connects with all the other roads and if he has any proposition to make we would undoubtedly consider it.'

"Mr. McAdoo said that he did not care to be quoted."

On Saturday she won the hearts of all her hearers by her finished readings of "The Legend of the Organ Builder," "King Robert of Sicily," and some minor pieces of a humorous order.

ALLEGE THEY STOLE COAL FROM R. R. CARS

Central Railroad detectives Camp and Hand got busy with alleged coal thieves on Saturday afternoon and had three of them arraigned before Judge William G. DeMeza this morning. After hearing the testimony of the railroad officers the case was adjourned until Wednesday morning in order that other witnesses might be subpoenaed.

George Busse, Annie Wagner and Joseph Wagner, were three of the alleged offenders arraigned this morning. All pleaded not guilty. Captain Camp and his assistant, Charles Hand said that on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock they were on the caboose of a coal train which came to a standstill near the Ransome Concrete Machinery Works and saw the prisoners gathering coal which had been kicked off the cars by Busse and Robert Cashman. The latter was not in court. After the coal had been thrown to the ground the two men alleged that all four people gathered it up in buckets and bags which they hid behind an adjoining fence.

Camp and Hand chased the alleged thieves along the track for some distance and finally caught Busse and Mrs. Wagner. The boy, Joseph Wagner hid behind a fence, but was afterwards apprehended. In court this morning the boy denied that either he or his mother were taking coal. He said that his mother had sent him to the postoffice and because he had stayed too long on the errand she had come up on the railroad tracks to call him to his dinner. He claimed, as did his mother, that they were not on the tracks to steal coal.

Mrs. Wagner said she had nine children and that her husband was in a hospital in New York and that she had sent the boy to mail a letter to him and as he was gone too long went to look for him on the railroad track and call him to dinner. She said she did not see anybody on the track at the time nor did she see anybody kick coal off the cars of the company.

THE CHURCH VS. SALOON

Rev. John Y. Broek Attack's Saloon as Destroyer of Humanity.

SAYS THE CHURCH WILL WIN.

Calls On All Patriotic Christians to Rally to the Standard of the Cross—Battles Along Moral Lines.

Declaring that the only way to fight the saloon was in the open and with all the power of the Church of Christ at its back, Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, launched an attack against the liquor dealers of the country in his sermon, last night. Mr. Broek emphasized the fact that even the brewers are ashamed of their calling and instanced particulars in which one western brewer did all in his power to keep saloons off the one big thoroughfare of his city, even petitioning the legislature to act with him against the sellers of his own product.

"The Church," said Mr. Broek, "can never be destroyed because its head is Christ. The Church stands for good government without which a community cannot grow. The saloon stands for all that is evil and for the tearing down of the bulwarks of good. In spite of the conquest waged against the Church by the saloon interests the body of God's edifice cannot be shaken nor turned from its warfare against sin.

"Second Corinthians 6-14 tells us that we should not be yoked together with unrighteousness and if the saloon and all that it represents is not unrighteousness, then what is it? The Church will win eventually for God is with us in the fight. If every true Christian will stand by his convictions the time will shortly come when the evils of intemperance will be swept from the face of our beloved land. Just think, say some, there was a fire in Newark the other day in which sixteen lives were lost. Another says 216 men were killed or drowned when the Maine was blown up in Havana harbor. I tell you to contemplate the 250 men and women who are driven to their graves every day by the demon liquor. Isn't that appalling enough for you?

"There is no blot upon our escutcheon so black as the liquor evil. If we are to be true to ourselves and to our country let us get out and fight against this stupendous enemy. There is a splendid opportunity now while the temperance wave is sweeping over the land. It demands that Christian patriots shall do their duty and do it quickly. The stainless flag of your country has taken the field; the flag which every honest American loves; the flag which means protection to your home and men, demands that we go out and take up the fight in defense of our loved institutions. The apparently secure position of the domestic enemy is only a temporary security. Victory for the red banner of the Cross of Christ will be only temporarily delayed.

"Battles as great as those of Gettysburg and Lookout Mountain are yet to be fought here, but not with guns and ammuniton. They will be moral battles and along the lines of righteousness as opposed to sin. And the surest way for Christian patriots to do their duty is at the ballot box on the days of election. Let us do our duty."

WILSON'S INAUGRATION

Elaborate Ceremonies Tomorrow When Democrat is Made Governor.

SOME PROPOSED LEGISLATION.

One Measure to Allow Sunday Selling—To Ballot For United States Senator Next Week.

This week in the Legislature—the second of the session—brings the inauguration of Dr. Woodrow Wilson, the first Democratic Governor in a decade and a half. It will be followed next week by balloting in joint session for United States Senator. Aside from the inauguration of Dr. Wilson, this week will be featured by the introduction of bills, especially reform measurse originating in the Democratic Assembly.

One of the measures, by Assemblyman James, of Hudson county, will be aimed against the cold storage plants, which are charged with storing food products for the purpose of cornering the markets and raising the prices. Mr. James got a bill of this kind through the House last winter, but it failed of passage in the Senate. Another matter that may come up this week and which will attract much attenfion is the Sunday selling of intoxicants in municipalities voting for such excise privilege. North Jersey Democrats are favorable to such legislation. The church and temperance people will unite to oppose such measures and to demand the enactment of a local option law giving municipalities the right to prohibit the sale of intoxicants at all times. They are counting on Governor Wilson to veto any "open Sunday" measures that may get through, but have little hope for favorable action on local option.

Dr. Wilson will be inaugurated tomorrow in Taylor Opera House at Trenton. The ceremonies will be elaborate. Following the inaugural there will be a parde of political organizations and civic societies, to be reviewed by the new Governor and other officials.

Both the Smith and the Wilson factions are asserting confidence of victory in the Senate fight. A compromise, however, is likely, and in that event the next Senator may be Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., of Trenton, who was the Gubernatorial candidate three years ago.

The Martine supporters say their candidate has thirty-five votes at this time. The Smith boomers are making few definite claims but say that they can control in caucus.

Governor-elect Wilson has struck conservation in the hearts of the office seekers by declaring that he will give preference to men who do not thrust themselves upon him. About fifteen hundred jobs will be available for the Democrats during the Wilson administration.

YOUTH SUDDENLY SEIZED WITH CEREBRAL MENINGITIS

Walter Cuming, the eighteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Cuming, of 1012 Putnam avenue, is seriously ill at his home suffering with meningitis of the brain and a partial paralysis of the eyes. Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, the physician in attendance, is hopeful that the young man will recover.

The young man in company with several companions was on his way down town from his home about three weeks ago. When Franklin place was reached he complained of a queer sensation in his head. The next instant he fell helpless on the sidewalk. Cuming was assisted to his home by his companions and Dr. Buchanan was summoned. He appeared to be improving, when a week ago he suffered a relapse and his eyes became affected. Dr. Ard pronounced it paralysis of the eyes. For a time the young man could not see, but the sight is now gradually returning. For several days Cuming was unconscious, but now he is quite conscious again.

FOLLOWS WIFE IN DEATH

'Uncle Jess' Hatfield Passed Away Suddenly This Morning.

HER FUNERAL HELD SATURDAY

Well-Known Aged Resident Succumbs to Enlargement of the Heart—One Daughter Survives Him.

Closely following the death of his wife, which occurred last Thursday, Jesse B. Hatfield passed away suddenly this morning at his home on West Front street, from enlargement of the heart. During the long illness of his wife covering a period of nearly four months, Mr. Hatfield suffered a great mental and physical strain and his short illness was doubtless the result of that. His death caused a great shock among his many friends throughout the city.

Mr. Hatfield retired last night feeling about as well as usual. This morning he arose and after eating his breakfast, he made a business telephone call, arranging to meet a man at 11 o'clock. Shortly afterwards he complained that he had a pain at his heart. He was assisted to his bed room and the family physician, Dr. P. B. Creagar was summoned. When he arrived, Mr. Hatfield was dead.

"Uncle Jess," as he was familiarly known and called, was born near Somerville, seventy-five years ago, being one year younger than his wife. The couple were married at Millstone. The couple lived in Plainfield altogether about twenty years, having lived in Somerville for a short time during that period, returning here later and continuing their residence here to the time of their death.

During the younger days, Mr. Hatfield was an engineer on the New Jersey Central. Later he engaged at different times in the produce business both here and in Somerville. For a long time he was employed as a conductor on the trolley being among the first men engaged when the trolley lines were opened in this city.

After giving up his position, Mr. Hatfield engaged in the lunch business, his store being located on Watchung avenue, near North avenue. When the trolley stand removed to Fourth street and Watchung avenue, Mr. Hatfield leased that corner and with his son-in-law, T. A. Garthwaite, has been conducting a fruit, confectionery and cigar business there. Some months ago he disposed of the lunch business to another man.

Mr. Hatfield had been a familiar figure on the streets here for years. He had a genial disposition and he always had a good word for everyone.

Mr. Hatfield is survived by one daughter, Mrs. T. A. Garthwaite, with whom he lived, also a sister, Mrs. J. S. Smith, of West Front street.

The funeral service will be held at the late residence, 531 West Front street, Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock. The burial will be at Somerville beside the remains of Mrs. Hatfield, which were taken to that place on Saturday.

Col. Margetts Here.

Two services were conducted by Colonel Margetts, of The Salvation Army, yesterday. In the morning the colonel spoke at the Temple Baptist church. His subject was taken from Ephesians 5:25-27. He portrayed Christ's wonderful love for His Church, His purpose regarding it and His ultimate hope concerning its perfection. In the evening, in the Salvation Army Hall, a large number of people listened with marked interest to the colonel's thrilling and inspiring lecture, "Heroes." Heroes of the country, heroes of the Reformation, of the early Christian Church, present day heroes, many of them in the ranks of the Salvation Army, were exhibited by beautiful colored slides. Incidents in the lives of many of these heroes were brought out forcefully by illustrated songs.

Mrs. Maria Archibold.

Mrs. Maria Archibold, aged eighty-two years, widow of the late William Archibold, died at her home near Washington Valley at 4 o'clock yesterday morning, after a short illness. She was one of the best known among the older residents in Washington Valley, having lived in the house where she died for many years. Mrs. Archibold was a member of the Baptist church and until the infirmities of age prevented was a regular attendant at all its meetings. She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Susie Rockwood, with whom she made her home. Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon.

Two games of basketball will be played tomorrow evening at the Grace church parish house, one between the Alumni team and Hope chapel and the Grace church team and Holy Cross church five.

MRS. J. C. MAC CLYMONT STRICKEN WITH APOPLEXY

Mrs. J. C. MacClymont, mother of William E. MacClymont, is quite ill at her son's home on Woodbine avenue, suffering from a stroke of apoplexy on Saturday evening. She was waiting at Watchung avenue and Fourth street about 5:30 o'clock for an Arlington avenue trolley car, being on her way home, when stricken. Several bystanders assisted her to Marshall's laundry and she was soon afterward removed to her home in a carriage and Dr. T. S. Davis, the family physician, was summoned.

Although Mrs. MacClymont is advanced in age, being seventy-two years old, she has always possessed unusually good health. Today she was reported as resting easy. Her granddaughter, Miss Dorthy MacClymont, is also ill, having an acute attack of grip, while her son, W. E. MacClymont, has also been detained at home by illness.

HE TRIED TO SLASH WIFE'S TORMENTER

Henry Palmer got a suspended sentence of $5 and James Hawkins was mulcted in the sum of $10 or thirty days in the county jail, for fighting at Hawkins' home on Saturday night. Both men are colored and according to Patrolman McCarthy both were drunk and Hawkins was attempting to cut Palmer with a knife when the patrolman interfered and arrested both men.

When Hawkins was arraigned this morning he was still under the influence of liquor, but he managed to tell Judge DeMeza what the trouble was all about. He claimed that Palmer had insulted his wife and when he arrived at the house, 611 South Second street, and being informed by his wife of what she alleged had occurred proceeded to beat Palmer.

When McCarthy arrived Hawkins had a knife poised over Palmer's head and two women were holding up his arm so that he could not use the weapon. McCarthy disarmed the infuriated man and landed him and his intended victim in the lock-up.

Mrs. Hawkins said afterwards that she would prefer a complaint of assault against Palmer for what he had done to her.

White Out of Rep. Committee.

Leavitt, treasurer.

THREATENED SANTA'S LIFE

Tony Biondo Wants to Marry Maria Santa Regardless of Obstacles.

THE GIRL'S FATHER OBJECTS.

Four Letters Figure In Case—Biando Denies Authorship—Fined $15 or Must Spend Sixty Days In Jail.

For threatening to shoot Merlino Santa and his daughter, Maria, Tony Biando, formerly a boarder in the Santa household and now living whever he can get work, was sentenced to pay a fine of $15 or go to jail for sixty days by City Judge William G. De Meza this morning. In all probability Biando will go down the road.

Biando was accused of not only threatening to shoot the two people but had decided that he would kidnap the daughter, with whom he had become violently enamored. Three weeks ago he was chased out of Santa's house for an alleged attempt of assault on Maria. On that occasion several bullets were fired at him in the street at the East End of town and he escaped sentence on his promise to get out of town and to cease annoying the Santa family.

Four letters figured in the case, all of which were alleged to have been written by Biando and they bear all the earmarks of the kind usually attributed to the Mafia. In one of the epistles filled partly with endearing terms to the daughter and threats for the father, Biando says he will, in event of not securing the girl for his wife, bring a gang of his friends from Philadelphia and Elizabeth and shoot up the premises in the excitement of which performance he will steal the girl and defy the parents to follow him and regain her.

Biando denied on the stand this morning that he either wrote or caused to be written the alleged threats or in fact any port of the letters saying that the whole crowd in the house were conspiring against him to do him harm. However, Maria said that she had been afraid to go to school or to even leave the house for fear that Biando's threats would be carried out. She is about fourteen years old, but looks older and is rather good looking.

Ambrosio Giuseppe, a witness for Mr. Santa, declared that Biando had confided to him that he would shoot the whole family unless he could have the girl, at the same time he exhibited a revolver with which he said he would accomplish the trick. This was also denied by the prisoner.

The court failed to be impressed with Biando's denials and sentenced him as noted above.

DR. J. L. HURLBUT IN MINISTRY FORTY-FIVE YEARS

Rev. Dr. Jesse Lyman Hurlbut, formerly pastor of the First M. E. church here and well-known by Plainfielders, will celebrate on February 15 next his sixty-seventh birthday anniversary. He has been in the ministry forty-five years. He continues in active service, at present being superintendent of the Newark district of the M. E. church. He recently conducted the union evangelistic revival under the auspices of the several groups of local churches in Newark, during the past week.

Dr. Hurlbut began his first pastorate in Newark in 1865, shortly after his orination and after serving later in charges in Montclair, Paterson, Staten Island, Hoboken, Morristown and this city, he returned to Newark. He has always been a prominent factor in the Methodist church. On March 5 his forty-third wedding day will be celebrated.

Illness Causes Postponement.

Owing to the fact that her sister is ill at her home in Bound Brook with scarlet fever, and she herself is quarantined, Miss Anna Strickland, of that place, has been obliged to postpone her marriage to Edward Hardingham, of this city, which was announced for Wednesday. The wedding will take place later.

Planning D. A. R. Luncheon.

Arrangements for the annual luncheon of Camp Middlebrook Chapter, Daughters American Revolution, of Bound Brook, which is to be held at Truell Inn, on February 1, are progressing satisfactorily. It promises to be an elaborate affair.

DEMOCRATIC ORGAN SUPPORTS MARTINE

Branding as false and malicious the statement of those who are toiling for James Smith, Jr., that there is a lack of interest in Sussex County over the selecttion of a successor to United States Senator Kean, Jacob L. Bunnell, editor of the Sussex Herald (Democrat), declares in his leading editorial this week that public opinion is behind Governor-elect Wilson on his attitude in the Senatorial controversy, and that James E. Martine is the choice of his party. Not only this, Mr. Bunnell says, but the proper method of electing United States Senators, "is discussed in this county at the fireside, at the creamery, at the store and at all places of public meeting while every reference to the Senatorial problem in the papers is read and commented upon with deepest concern."

Sussex county was recently flooded with unsigned circulars in the interest of James Smith, Jr., as has been done in other counties. This, it seems, according to The Herald, has aroused the voters to the extent of resenting the attack upon the vital issue to which Governor-elect Wilson adheres, and which is written upon the platform of the Democratic party.

The voters are as firm in their belief that their Senator and Assemblyman should vote for the choice of the majority of the party, the Herald says, as they are that their honest debts be paid, their homes protected and defended; their sons and daughters grow up to be honest and respected men and women. The fact that a comparatively small vote was cast for a Democratic choice for United States Senator, it is pointed out in the newspapers, is due to the apathy of the Democratic State and county leaders.

"By their conspicuous inactivity," the editorial sets forth, "they discouraged rather than encouraged an emphatic vote upon a matter so vital to the interests of the people, so important to clean and respectable politics; a reform for so many years pleaded for in the platform indorsed with so much sincereity by State, district and county conventions."

There is no question as to where the voters stand, Editor Bunnell avers, but the problem is to bring the expression of public opinion to bear on the Senator and Assemblyman. A petition is now in circulation in various parts of the county demanding the representatives to carry out the wishes of the voters in standing by Governor-elect Wilson and the party platform respecting the election of the United States Senator.

As to its own conviction, The Herald says:

"The New Jersey Herald would be untrue to its record of service to the Democratic party for a period of more than four score of years; untrue to the party whose principles it has for so many years battled with undeviating zeal; untrue to that great body of Democrats who are today striving so earnestly for an enforcement of a principle they have so long and earnestly sought, if it did not join in the well-established and righteous plea that Senator Jacob C. Price and Assemblyman Charles A. Meyer cast their votes at the coming election for United States Senator for James E. Martine, of Union county, the Democrat for whom 40,000 fellow Democrats cast their votes at the primary election last fall."

The present stand of The Herald differs from that which it took soon after the Essex Assemblymen-elect invited James Smith, Jr., to be a candidate. In an editorial then The Herald had this to say:

"Of available candidates there seems to be no limit—all good Democrats, too. Former Senator James Smith, Jr., who has many warm political and personal friends in this county—if the tone of the press of the State can be depended upon—is well at the head of the race, where he should properly be if continuous service to the Democratic party is to be computed at its true value. The eleven Assemblymen of Essex county have declared in favor of Senator Smith. His candidacy could not have received a higher compliment, or his fitness for the honorable position better indorsement."

This Caruso a Bootblack.

Like Campanini, who was a blacksmith; Wachtel, who was a cab driver; Isaac Routman, who was an East Side huckster, and Mme. Scalchi, who sold fish, a new singer has been discovered. He was "found" on a subway local train Friday night, and, to those who were thrilled by his wonderful voice, he gave his name as Raphael Giovanni, twenty-two years old, of Passaic, N. J. As a bootblack, he is earning money to study for grand opera. Seemingly unconscious of the presence of others, the youth sang selections from Puccini's opera, "The Girl of the Golden West." He was applauded by the passengers, some of whom were on their way to the Metropolitan Opera House. Men and women crowded around the young man at Seventy-second street to congratulate him. Giovanni said he came to America in the steerage when he was seventeen years old. He speaks English fluently, although he said he had not been to school in this country.

News and Notes

GOLF.

Golf players of the United States may go right on playing with such golf clubs as they see fit. The United States Golf Association at its annual meeting in Chicago, Saturday, adopted a resolution which received the approval of a large share of the members, failing to uphold the ban of the Royal and Ancient Club of St. Andrews, Scotland, against the centre shaft putter known as the Schenectady putter.

The resolution was drafted during the meeting of the association held that the form and make of a golf club should not be a matter of rules in this country and that no club except real mallets should be barred from American greens.

The question of approving or disagreeing with the St. Andrews ruling was the chief question considered by the association. A sentiment frequently expressed prior to the meeting was that numerous members, notably several Eastern clubs would withdraw from the association should the body vote to uphold the St. Andrews rule.

Despite this feeling, the meeting was conducted with harmony. Active support of the St. Andrews' ruling was limited largely to John M. Ward, of the Garden City Golf Club, of New York, who urged that American golfers maintain the same standard of play as Scottish players. The determination of the Garden City Club to indorse St. Andrews ruling had been reached by a decided vote in the New York organization, and Mr. Ward urged that his club be upheld.

President Calkins, of the Plainfield Country Club, was the leader of the move to oppose concurrence in the Scottish ruling.

The award of the championship for 1911 proved of little less interest than the decision over the putter. The National Amateur championship, the tourney for which the greatest contest was waged, was awarded the Apawamis Golf Club, of Rye, N. Y., the Deal Golf Club and the Philadelphia club being the chief contestants.

The national open championship went to the Chicago Golf Club. The national woman's championship went to the Baltusrol Golf Club, of New Jersey.

For the first time the highest office of the association went to a Western club, Silas H. Strawit, of the Midlothian Golf Club, of Chicago, being elected president. The following were elected officers of the association: President, Silas H. Strawit, Chicago; first vice president, William A. Alexander, Exmoor Club, Chicago; second vice president, Milton Dargan, Atlanta Athletic, Atlanta, Ga.; secretary, Robert C. Watson, Garden City Golf Club, New York; treasurer, William F. Morgan, Baltusrol Golf Club, of New Jersey.

The following is the resolution approving the Schenectady putter as it finally was adopted: The United States Golf Association will not sanction any substantial departure from the traditional and accepted form and make of golf clubs which, in its opinion, consists of plain shaft and a head which does not contain any mechanical contrivance, such as springs; it also regards as illegal the use of such clubs as those of the mallet-headed type, or such clubs as have the neck so bent as to produce a similar defect.

BASEBALL.

Rube Waddell, sent from the major leagues to the Eastern, back to the big show, into the American Association and then to the St. Louis Americans, Friday night fanned twenty-five men in nine innings at indoor baseball. He pitched for McGrath's stars, including Wiltse, Magee, Zimmerman and others, against a team of Rochester players managed by John Ganzel, manager of the Rochester Eastern League team. The stars won, 9 to 0.

WILSON ATTACKS SMITH: SMITH ATTACKS WILSON

Governor-elect Wilson evaded the home of his political enemy Saturday night in his campaign against James Smith, Jr., as a Democratic candidate for United States Senator. The New Auditorium, Newark, in which the incoming governor delivered his second instalment of "pitiless publicity," following his recent address in Jersey City, was crowded. Most of his auditors were Democrats, but there were many Republicans and progressives in the assemblage. Senators Harry V. Osborne, of Newark, the sole representative of Smith's county in the State Senate, and an earnest advocate of the election of James E. Martine to the United States Senate, presided.

Dr. Wilson declared with reference to the statement that his course might tend to split the Democratic party in New Jersey, that there was no possibility of such a result. He said that in opposing Mr. Smith he was not opposing any organization except that which had been built up around Mr. Smith's own personality in Essex county, which was purely local and identified only with Mr. Smith's interests.

He still held to the view expressed in Jersey City, that the removal of Mr. Smith from the senatorial campaign like the removal of a wart, was not a dangerous or capital operation, and that the party was likely to suffer but little in the "open clinic" which Dr. Wilson is conducting.

James Smith, Jr., in Newark, last night issued a statement in the New Jersey United States Senatorial contest in reply to the speech of Dr. Wilson.

Mr. Smith scores Dr. Wilson roundly for not having accepted the challenge to name the man who told him Mr. Smith would not be a Senatorial candidate, and charges him with failure to answer many other pertinent questions asked by Mr. Smith. He also reiterates the charge that Dr. Wilson has been untruthful.

PROMINENT JERSEYMEN AT MR PITNEY'S FUNERAL

Simple, but impressive, were the funeral services of former Vice Chancellor Henry C. Pitney at Morristown on Saturday afternoon. They were held from the First Presbyterian church in that place and were conducted by the pastor, Rev. William Russell Bennett, assisted by Rev. John Macnaughtan, D. D., of the Ogden Memorial church, of Chatham, and formerly pastor of the Morristown church.

The church was filled with friends of Mr. Pitney, including many men of note from about the State. During the services the stores of the town were closed and flags were at half staff in the park and on many public and private buildings. The pall-bearers were Chief Justice William S. Gummere, Judge James J. Bergen, former Judge Bennett Van Syckel, former Chancellor William J. Magie, Vice Chancellor John R. Emery, Vice Chancellor Frederick W. Stevens, Vice Chancellor Eugene Stevenson, Vice Chancellor James E. Howell, Amzi Dodd, formerly president of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company, of Newark; A. Pennington Whitehead, of New York; Gilbert Collins, of Jersey City; Alfred Mills, of Morristown; John L. Cadwalader, of New York; Dr. Stephen Pierson, Philander B. Pierson, president of the Morris County Savings Bank; Robert D. Foote, vice president of the National Iron Bank, and John E. Taylor, president of the Library and Lyceum of Morristown. Interment was in Evergreen cemetery.

Lord's Day Alliance.

The third meeting of the Lord's Day Alliance, of New Jersey, will be held on Thursday, January 26, at W. C. T. U. hall, Trenton. There will be two sessions, one at 10:30 o'clock in the morning, the other at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Addresses will be made by several pastors of churches in the State.

Mrs. Samuel M. Clark.

Mrs. Sevina Clark, wife of Samuel M. Clark, died at the home of her son Samuel W. Clark, 610 Riverside Drive, New York, yesterday morning, following a long illness. She is survived by her husband and one son Samuel W. Clark. The funeral will be private and the burial will be tomorrow in Westfield.

FAVORS DIRECT VOTE FOR U. S. SENATORS

The joint resolution to amend the constitution to provide for the election of Senators by direct popular vote brought the State to the verge of upheaval in Washington Friday. Charges of undue haste to change the fundamental law of the land and counter charges of designs to smother the resolution were exchanged and a more spectacular conflict was averted only by the decision of Senator Borah, sponsor of the resolution, to postpone further debate until next week. Incidentally, however, the sentiment of the Senate was foreshadowed in the vote on the motion to adjourn, made by Senator Hale, the purpose of which was to head off the possible adoption of the amendment. He was supported in his attempt by only seventeen Senators, while forty-three voted against him. Meanwhile the senior Senator from New Jersey was audible as well as visible.

When the resolution was reached Senator Kean was ready with an objection which would have prevented immediate consideration.

"Then," said Mr. Borah,' "I move to take up the resolution notwithstanding the objections of the Senator from New Jersey."

"Oh, don't do that," pleaded Mr. Gallinger, in charge of the postal subvertion bill, "the effect of favorable action would be to displace the ship bill as the unfinished business and I know the Senator does not want to do that."

He appealed to Mr. Kean to withdraw his objection. The New Jersey Senator consented, and the Senate, which had been giving its attention to perfunctory legislation, suddenly found itself on the point of upsetting its traditions and voting to change the Constitution without debate.

Overt Lombardi.

Overt Lombardi, aged ten years, died in Muhlenberg hospital this morning. He had been undergoing treatment for a complication of troubles. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Lombardi, of Richmond

WEATHER TO BE FAIR FORCAST FOR WEEK

Following is the forecast of the Washington weather bureau:

An area of high barometric pressure that now covers the Middle West will advance eastward and cause generally fair weather the first part of the week in the eastern districts and a change to moderately low temperature Monday and Tuesday over the northern and central states east of the Mississippi Valley. A disturbance of considerable intensity will appear on the north Pacific coast by Monday, and move eastward crossing the Middle West the middle of the week and the Atlantic States Thursday or Friday; this disturbance will be preceded by rising temperature attended by widesperad precipitation and be followed by a general change to colder weather.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The executive committee of the Dunellen Board of Trade held a meeting Friday night at which several matters that are to be brought up at the board's regular meeting this week were discussed. One of these was a suggestion to change the name of North avenue to Front street, in order to make it conform with the Plainfield thoroughfare, of which it is a continuation. Mr. Swackhamer mentioned the fact that the present Front street in Dunellen might be changed to Wilson street, in honor of the governor-elect who is to assume office tomorrow and who is making a commendable fight in the Martine-Smith controversy for the rights of the people. The suggestion was received with enthusiasm and will be presented at the board's regular meeting for action against or otherwise.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Presbyterian church will hold a novel gathering, Thursday night. It will be known as a "college" social and those attending will have to undergo an examination in a four years' "course" before being eligible to further privileges. The entertainment committee, of which Miss Laura Todd is chairman, has charge of the arrangements.

H. B. Eckert has withdrawn as a member of the Home Building Association which has been erecting a number of houses in the borough. Mr. Eckert will continue building operations individually.

The New Market fire department will hold its annual meeting tonight at which officers will be elected and reports presented.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The rain of the past few days has made the sidewalks on Park avenue miniature mud rivers. There is only one redress; the taxpayers should vote a bigger appropriation for sidewalks, the small amount appropriated each year only repairs the walks on a small number of the streets.

Mrs. Louis Morel, of Park avenue, who has been ill for several days, was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital, Saturday morning, and was operated upon for appendicitis the same day. The operation was a successful one and Mrs. Morel is doing nicely.

Interment of the body of Miss Emily Moore, sister of the late George Moore, of Fanwood, who died at her home near Alton, Friday, was made in the family plot in the Baptist cemetery here, yesterday afternoon.

Miss Marion Goodwin led the weekly meeting of the Epworth League held last night in the class rooms of the Methodist church.

The weekly B. Y. P. U. meeting was held last night in the Baptist church. Mrs. John Z. Hatfield was the leader of the meeting.

The stormy weather of the past week has put an end for a time to the excellent skating which has been enjoyed for two weeks.

John Ford, Jr., has resigned his position as a conductor on the main line trolley of the Public Service Corporation.

Identifying Train Victims.

The body of Joseph Sebranch, one of the two young men killed by a Central "flyer" at Westfield, Friday, was positively identified by a relative who called at Cole's undertaking rooms, Saturday night. He lived at 311 East Seventy-first street, New York, and the body was immediately shipped to that address. The other victim, Patrick Gorman, is believed to have lived at Summit and a sister is coming to Plainfield this afternoon to make the identification positive.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Meeker have taken posession of their new home on Belvidere avenue.

SEPTIC POISONING FROM OLD WOUND

William E. Briggs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Noble H. Briggs, of Albert street, is seriously ill at his home with septic poisoning, the result of helping to dissect a cat at the Plainfield High School, four years ago. Shortly after taking part in the operation Mr. Briggs experienced considerable trouble with a finger which had become infected in some way. He was obliged to go to the hospital for treatment and as a result he was obliged to loose the nail on the finger.

The trouble disappeared and nothing more was thought of the incident until the latter part of December, when Mr. Briggs was taken ill. His trouble was diagnosed at first as nervousness, but later it was discovered that it was due to poor circirculation of the blood and septic poisoning, it being the belief that some of the poison must have remained in the system after the wound healed in the finger. The physician, however, hopes that he will be able to counteract the effects of the poison and effect a recovery within a reasonable time.

102 YEARS OLD AND DIDN'T KNOW IT

John M. Butler, of Ocean Grove, is celebrating his 102nd birthday today by receiving his friends and joking with them about the mistake he made in computing his own age. According to Mr. Butler himself the joke is on him. And it happened this way: Last year he announced to his friends that he would celebrate his arrival at the century mark today and that he would invite all his old cronies and later acquaintances to help him do it up in style.

There were some skeptics among his friends who doubted the age of the centenarian and they proceeded to look up the records. After a search through the home the old family Bible was found and there was the record of Mr. Butler's birth. Instead of being 100 years, Mr. Butler is 102 years old, but he does not know where the two years got away from him.

According to all accounts Mr. Butler is spry as a man of sixty and can read without glasses. He attributes his longevity to careful living and a strict adherence to the principles of temperance which his mother taught him in the old southern home. Mr. Butler's reminiscences of the Civil War and the troublous times preceding it are interesting and he is never so happy as when he is recounting slave times in his old Virginia home.

ARKANSAS SAFELY LAUNCHED AT CAMDEN, SATURDAY.

Splashed with the traditional bottle of champagne, the Battleship Arkansas, whose displacement of 26,000 tons makes her the largest warship ever constructed in this country, was launched early Saturday afternoon from the yards of the New York Shipbuilding Company at Camden. Miss Mary Macon, daughter of Representative Robert B. Macon, of Helena, Ark., was the sponsor for the ship.

Following the launching the officials of the company entertained the guests at luncheon, spread in one of the big buildings of the plant.

The principal dimensions of the latest and largest addition to the navy are:

Length over all, 562 feet; beam over armor, 93 feet 2⅝ inches; draft, 28 feet 6 inches; displacement, 26,000 tons. The contract for the ship calls for a speed of twenty and one-half knots an hour.

When complete the Arkansas will have the greatest gun power in broadside fire of any ship afloat. The main armament will consist of twelve twelve-inch breech-loading guns mounted in six heavy armor-protected turrets. For defense against torpedo boat attacks there will be a battery of twenty-one five-inch rapid fire guns. There will also be two submerged torpedo tubes and ten small guns. The total weight of broadside fire will be about 11,000 pounds. The armor belts will have an average thickness of ten inches.

The Arkansas will be turbine-driven and will have 28,777 horsepower. The vessel will be fitted for a flagship, and her complement will consist of eighty-five officers and 1,030 men.

The keel of the Arkansas was laid last January, and at present the ship is about sixty per cent. completed.

Knew What was Popular.

When Bishop Phillips Brooks sailed from America on his last trip to Europe a friend jokingly remarked that while abroad he might find some new religion to bring home with him.

"But be careful, Bishop," remarked a listening friend; "it may be difficult to get a new religion through the custom house."

"I guess not," laughingly replied the Bishop, "any new religion popular enough to import will have no duties attached to it."—The Housekeeper.

The State Department has instructed the American Legation at Guatemala City to make strong representations to President Cabrera regarding enforcement of Washington conventions relating to the rebellion in Honduras.

A dispatch from Washington said that the exports of iron and steel manufactures for 1910 aggregated $200,000,000, exceeding in value those of any other year, and forming one-fourth of the total manufactures exported last year.

City Chamberlain Hyde returned from Florida and denied he would resign, but instead defended his long absence from his duties, saying he went away for the sake of his health and selected a place where he could not be reached and disturbed.

Plainfield in .... The Olden Days.

Re-printed from The Weekly Constitutionalist

August 7, 1873.

Our old and esteemed friend, "Uncle Billy Lane," on Tuesday last laid upon our table a cucumber grown on his farm, which had a curious freaked nature connected with it, being a perfect leaf growing from the end of the cucumber.

We received a visit this morning from Mr. Robert Little, an old gentleman residing at North Branch, who has not visited Plainfield before in 40 years. He was most agreeably astonished to note the many changes that have taken place here since he used to drive through the village of Plainfield, on his way to "York."

Accident.—On Friday afternoon, last, while workmen were engaged in tearing down J. S. Cutter's building on Front street, a portion of the roof fell and seriously injured a workmen named Isaac Colter. He received a severe cut on his head. He was taken into Voorhees' Drug Store and the wound dressed by Dr. Voorhees.

August 14, 1873.

Our thanks are tendered our old friend Sam. D. Frazee and his daughters, Sarah and Julia, also Mr. J. D. Brown, for the excellent serenade given us by them on Wednesday evening last and we trust we may often be the recipient of like favors.

False Alarm—This (Wednesday) morning, smoke was discovered issuing from the basement of the store occupied by Shotwell & Staats, (Pruden's Block) on Front street Chief Voorhees, with other members of the department, being called upon, investigated the cause and after cutting holes in the ceiling became convinced that the smoke originated from a fire being built in a store in another part of the building, the dampness of the atmosphere causing the smoke to fill the lower part of the building.

The "Junior" of the Constitutionalist is enjoying a relaxation from busines by a trip through New York State.

August 28, 1873.

Mrs. C. B. Clifton will shortly occupy the handsome store next to I. D. Ten Eyck's Meat Market, Cherry street.

Wetumptka Falls, at the "Notch" was a splendid sight on Thursday morning last, the heavy rains having swollen the stream and sent the waters dashing in torrents over this really magnificient falls.

Mr. Halstead Compton, residing at Evona, laid upon our table last week, one of the largest and finest melons, of the nutmeg variety, that it has been our fortune to put a knife into for a long time. Mr. Compton prides himself on raising the finest melons of any one in this section.

Mr. S. S. Vermeule, the Clothier, who has been engaged in busines for the past 16 years, has sold out his establishment to Messrs. L. L. Martin, of New York, and J. H. Adams, late cutter for Gaston & French. Mr. Vermeule purposes moving with his family westward.

One who claims "to know" asserts that if every place in the City of Plainfield wherein intoxicating drinks are sold, paid two hundred dollars license fee, the city treasurer would be benefited to the tune of nearly $9,000 dollars.

Lost—On Saturday evening last, between the City Hotel and the Depot, a pocketbook, green leather, about six inches long, marked on the pocket "G. Riggs, New York," containing a quantity of visiting cards with owners name. The finder will receive the thanks of the owner by leaving the book at this office.

A FEMININE DEFICIENCY

When I asked my present father-in-law for Dora he talked to me very plainly about her. He said she was a dear, good girl and had been brought up to bear any household responsibility that might devolve upon her. She could cook and sew and knew very well how to manage servants. He had also tried to inculcate in her something of ordinary business methods. In one thing he admitted he had failed—he had found it impossible to teach his daughter anything about keeping a bank account. He excused her, however, by saying that there was something in the female mind incompatible with check and deposit books. He had tried the same thing with Dora's mother and after many explanations had found that his instructions had been in vain. She had once inadvertently destroyed a check he had given her and supposed that the money it represented was a dead loss.

I told him that I was sure I could make the matter clear in Dora's mind, that I considered it essential for a woman to understand how to use a bank and I would not rest till I had made my wife entirely at home in keeping her account. Dora and I had not been married long before I opened a bank account in her name for our household funds and gave my wife instructions how to keep it. I soon taught her to draw a check and make a deposit. Sometimes she could make her check book balance tally with her deposit book balance, and sometimes she couldn't. But what surprised me most was that at times when there were many corrections to be made in the check book before it would agree with the deposit book she would have it all beautifully straightened out. Then when the matter was very simple and I asked her to make them agree while I was watching her she couldn't do it. She said I bothered her, but I afterward learned that she was paying a bank clerk to do these jobs for her.

I did not know anything of this when I went off on a trip. Indeed, I supposed she had become quite proficient. I had been away a week when I found it necessary to make a further trip rendering a longer absence necessary. Needing more funds, I thought it a good opportunity to test Dora's financial ability. I telegraphed her to send me a hundred dollars. I felt so sure that she would acquit herself well in the matter that I bought her a pretty finger ring to take home as a token of my appreciation.

In twelve hours after sending my dispatch I received a telegram from her begging me to come home at once. Confident that some terrible calamity had happened, I took the first train. Driving furiously from the station to my house, I entered. Dora was not there. The maid came running to me, crying: "La sakes, sir, she's been arrested. They've taken her to the police station." "Great heavens!" I cried. "On what charge?" "I don't know, sir, but they said it was criminal."

I returned to the cab I had left and told the driver to take me to the nearest police station. There I found Dora. She had not been locked up, but was held in the office.

"Good gracious, Dora!" I exclaimed. What does this mean?"

"They say I'm a forger."

"A forger!"

"Yes, but I don't know what it means."

"What did you forge?"

"Why, when I got your telegram I drew a check on my bank for the money and took it to the bank. They said the account was already overdrawn. Then I went home, found your check book and drew another check. I thought they'd give me the money when I told them I was your wife. I signed your name and copied your signature from one of your letters as nearly as I possibly could. I don't see how they could tell the difference. Then I went to what I supposed was your bank, but it wasn't. I asked them for the money, and they told me to come inside while they counted it out. I waited an hour, when a policeman came in and made me come here with him. Oh, dear! Will I have to go to prison?"

I looked at her in blank amazement. Was it possible that I had married an idiot? Then I remembered the warning her father had given me on this particular matter. I remembered, too, that on one occasion she had warned me against trusting a man because he had two prominent pointed teeth, one on each side of his mouth, how I had made fun of her woman's logic and how the man had turned out a swindler, relieving me of a considerable amount. Then the truth rushed upon me. The male and female mind is differently constituted. What is the strength of one is the weakness of another. It is not in the scheme of nature that women should be bankers. I took my weeping wife in my arms.

I persuaded the man at the desk to go with me to the bank that had made the charge, and a policeman, my wife and I got into a carriage and drove there. I approached the cashier and made an explanation. A broad grin spread over his face, and, looking at the clerk, I saw the same on the countenance of each. The cashier apologized for having been too hasty and immediately withdrew the charge.

It was not till we reached home that the absurdity of the affair rushed upon me. Then I sat down and laughed till I was tired. This irritated Dora, and I was sorry. Remembering the ring I had brought her, I made haste to produce it. She slipped it on her finger and forgave me my "brutality."

I now do the family banking.

Hot Blood

On a sunny April morning some fifty years ago a young man, Edward Page, and a girl, Delia Venard, were walking along the bank of a stream in Louisiana. Page was a recent graduate of a northern university and had gone to Louisiana as a teacher. Previous to his coming Miss Venard had accepted attention from Pierre Legate, a creole and the son of a planter. Page had no sooner appeared than the young lady began to divide her favors between the two men. Legate, a hot blooded son of the south, was furious and took no pains to conceal his enmity toward Page. Page, who considered it the lady's part to decide to whom she would grant her favors, paid no attention to his rival's wrath. He did not know the danger of interfering with a man whose inherited excitable French blood had been heated by the hot sun of Louisiana.

As I was saying, Page and Miss Venard were walking on the bank of the stream. They were protected from the sun by the moss which in that country hangs in festoons upon the boughs of the trees. About them was that fan shaped vegetation peculiar to the climate, while here and there scampered a tiny green lizard. Suddenly from among the trees on the other side of the stream the girl saw Legate step forth, and in an instant he had drawn a pistol and pointed it at Page, who did not see him. Miss Venard sprang before the northerner just as a puff of smoke appeared at the muzzle of Legate's weapon, followed by a crack. She sank down, blood trickling from a wound in her side.

Legate, seeing what he had done and being unable to cross the stream, wrung his hands, then started to a bridge some distance above. When he arrived at the spot where the girl had fallen Page and Miss Venard were gone. Page had carried her to her home.

Miss Venard's wound was not serious. The first thing she did after her arrival at home was to exact a promise from Page that he would not reveal the cause of the trouble and that he would not seek revenge from Legate.

After her recovery Miss Venard continued to accept Page's attentions as before. Whether she met Legate or not no one knew. Legate expected that Page would challenge him, but since he did not the creole resolved to force him to fight. One morning the two happened to meet in the central square of the little town where they lived, and Legate in presence of others approached Page, called him a northern mudsill and threw a glove in his face. This new offense virtually relieved Page from his promise. Besides, he had now either to challenge Legate or leave the country, for at that time public opinion would not admit of any other course. He sent Legate a challenge.

They met in an open space by the stream on whose bank the outrage had occurred. Their seconds tossed for first shot. Legate just before the meeting had come to his senses so far as to see that if he killed Page his previous attempt to murder him might come out. He decided to simply get the better of him, though he found it difficult to forego a shooting to kill. He was a splendid shot and if he won the toss could wing or kill his enemy, as he liked. Fortune favored Legate. He won first shot and struck Page in his right hand, the hand in which he held his pistol, knocking the weapon from his grasp.

This ended the matter, at least temporarily, for Page could not or did not attempt to shoot with his left hand. But if the southern blood is quick to anger the northern blood is sure. Some months after Page's wound had healed he sent his enemy word that he wanted the affair between them finished. They met again, this time, at Page's suggestion, on the very spot where Legate had tried to murder him.

Again they tossed for first shot, again Legate won, and again he struck his opponent in the right hand, rendering it useless. Legate looked relieved, and the seconds considered the affair ended. But Page took up his pistol with his left hand and covered his enemy.

"Mr. Legate," he said, "since our last meeting I have learned to shoot with my left hand, but I am not going to kill you. I have given away your life, not to you, but to a lady you have injured. She is now my promised wife, and I warn you that she and I in future will plan together to defend ourselves from your hostility. Do you see that knot on that tree?" He raised his pistol and put a bullet in the center of it. "I have shown you that your life is mine to give, but I require something in return. Leave this state and never return. If you are here tomorrow morning proceedings will be commenced against you to answer to a charge of attempted—you know what and with what result."

The villain as he used to be pictured in song and story has passed out. Legate had been mastered by his passions. His love for Miss Venard interfered with by another had impelled him to attempt murder and to unintentionally injure the girl he loved; but, if his southern hot blood impelled him to demean himself, in the end it prompted him to do penance. When his successful rival ceased to speak Legate's head dropped upon his breast, which heaved convulsively. Finally he mastered himself sufficiently to say:

"I ask you only to crave her pardon for me. Neither she nor you shall ever see me again. I am convinced that self control is what all men should first strive for, and I am going to the cool northern land where it is to be found."

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

The Salem Board of Education has appointed Chief of Police Waddington a truant officer, subject to confirmation by Council.

Mrs. Mary Brennan, twenty-three years old, entered Kelly's saloon, at Brunswick and Montgomery streets, Jersey City, Thursday night, spoke to her husband, the bartender, and then drank carbolic acid. She died in the City Hospital.

With his jaws tightly locked, Louis Murray, a well-known Millville contractor, was hurried to the Vineland Hospital in the hopes of saving his life Friday. Mr. Murray has been suffering from a severe cold, but is unable to tell what has caused tetanus to develop.

In Passaic Police Court, Friday, Charles Penta, of River road, Garfield, defended himself in a desertion case, instituted by his wife, by declaring that his wife had driven him from the house by throwing water on him. He was put under $200 bail for court.

County Judge Hughes has ruled that Sheriff Johnson, County Clerk Wirby and Surrogate Shaner, of Atlantic City, are entitled to $4,500 per annum instead of $3,000 from January 1, as a result of an increase of the population of the county from 46,000 to more than 60,000.

The Englewood Field Club at its annual meeting in its newly constructed clubhouse elected these officers: President, Peter S. Duryea; vice president, Gerald M. Curran; secretary, James C. Chapin; governors, Franklin Bien, Jr., Dooley Humphrey, Gerald Curran and Peter Duryea. The old clubhouse was destroyed by fire a year ago. The club has a membership of three hundred.

Eloping from Camden several weeks ago with Kissar Hadad, a boarder, Mrs. John Fearis was located at Newport News, Va., and when the couple were taken to the Camden Courthouse Friday to answer a charge preferred by the woman's husband the latter withdrew the complaint, declaring that he would forgive his wife if the boarder promised to remain away from her. The boarder not only promised, but immediately left for Virginia, where he had secured a position.

With a seven-inch silver plate in his leg, which was broken when the ferryboat Camden, on which he was a passenger, collided with the Wenonah during a fog on March 1 last, Michael O'Connor was on the witness stand in the Camden Circuit Court, Friday afternoon in his $25,000 suit against the Philadelphia and Camden Ferry Company. O'Connor, who lives at Gloucester, claims that he is permanently injured.

Federal revenue officers have been notified of the raid made on the idle plant of the Atlantic City Distilling Company and the disappearance of a big copper distilling tank. The care with which the still was disconnected leads the police to the belief that the thieves may be preparing to set up a "moonshine" plant in the lonely pine woods, and the federal officers will start a close hunt in the effort to prevent the setting up of the plant.

That the Fish and Game Commission is in earnest in trying to break up purse-net fishing in the three-mile limit in this State is being brought home to fishermen. As a result of the cruises from Barnegat City along the coat of the new patrol boat New Jersey, with Game Wardens Alex Brinley, of Cedar Creek; Anson J. Rider, of Bass River, a number of fishermen have pleaded guilty to purse-net fishing and have been fined $200 each. The latest offender is Willis Sculthorpe, who lives at Toms River, but fishes from this place. He was fined by H. B. Spackman, a justice of the peace, at Tuckerton.

HOLD ANNUAL ELECTION

The Anti-Tuberculosis Society Selects its Directors.

REPORTS ARE ENCOURAGING.

It Cost $1.10 a Day to Care for One Patient—Dr. W. H. Murray Talks About Finance.

Trustees were chosen at the annual meeting of the Plainfield Anti-Tuberculosis Society last night in the parish house of Grace Episcopal church. There was a large attendance. William S. Tyler, the president, was in the chair. The new trustees elected were George L. Babcock, Joseph W. Gavett and Mrs. Thomas Joust. Those re-elected were Dr. F. E. DuBois, Leighton Calkins, Edward F. Feickert, Hugh F. Fox, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, George M. Holstein, Dr. Fred Hughes, James P. Murray, Dr. William H. Murray, Miss Mabelle C. Phillips, Miss Georgiana Smith and William S. Tyler.

The reports of the president, treasurer and Dr. Frederick Hughes, the physician in charge of the tuberculosis camp, were read and revealed the encouraging condition of the society. Mr. Tyler said that he thonght it the duty of the society to broaden its work during the coming year. One feature reqnires special consideration—education of the public for their own benefit in the matter of Health. In this respect the members as individuals and as a society had obligations which if carried out would eventually improve the general conditions of the community.

Dr. Hughes in reporting upon the work of the past year said that eighteen patients had been successfully treated, ten of them being discharged, eight with the disease arrested and two improved. The largest gain in weight was 26 pounds and the average gain was 11 pounds and as this gain represents that of children mostly it is remarkable. The small comparative cost of the treatment of patients here is a source of congratulations. It averaged about $1.10 per capita per diem which is a smaller average than that of any other similar institution in the country Much of this it is reported, is due to Mr. Harrison manager of Muhlenberg Hospital through whom the supplies for the camp were brought.

Others who spoke were Dr. William H. Murray, whose topic was "Finace" and Mrs. Murray on "Membership." Miss Mabelle C. Phillips spoke on publicity and rendered a report on the Red Cross seals: Up to date $395.74 has been received and there is $55.17 still to be heard from.

Dr. Murray's report on the receipts and expenditures for the year showed that with a balance on hand on January 1, 1910, of $378.71, there had been eded from membership fees and contributions from members, $3,254; other incomes, including entertainments, sales of Christmas seals, Kings Daughters, etc., $1,638.97, making a total of $5,271.68. The expenditures were: Maintenance, $2,590.66; payroll, $1,391.86; City nurses salary, supplies, repairs, furnishings, stamps, stationery, etc., $875.77; total, $4,858. 29, leaving a balance on hand of $413.39.

The election of officers for the ensuing year was postponed until a later meeting.

PUNISHED ENOUGH.

So the Court Thought and Thorne Was Released.

Because he appeared to have been punished enough Willis Thorne, a carpenter of the West End, was allowed to go with a lecture this morning after having been arraigned before Judge William G. DeMeza on a charge of intoxication. He was found lying helpless at the corner of Fourth street and Plainfield avenue at 9 o'clock.

Thorne's face was a sorry sight. He looked as though he had had an argument with a tiger cat. It was necessary to sew up several cuts in his head when brought to police headquarters last night by Patrolman McGinley.

Taken up Bible Study.

FORESTORS ENTERTAIN

Court Plainfield Holds Annual Dance and Vaudeville in Saengerbund Hall.

THE ATTENDANCE VERY LARGE.

Numbers on the Program Receive Deserved Applause—Organization Now Eighteen Years Old—429 Members.

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order of Foresters, conducted its annual entertainment and dance in Saengerbund Hall, last night. A capacity audience composed of the families and friends of the members, enjoyed the affair and voted it the most successful the organization has yet conducted. The committee of arrangements worked hard to make it so, receiving congratulations at the close that assured them they had succeeded.

The fore part of the evening was devoted to a vaudeville program furnished by Sam Howard, of New York. It comprised eight numbers in all, each one receiving generous applause. A distinct hit was made by Maurice, a comedy conjuror, who kept the audience in roars of laughter with a line of funny talk while performing many clever tricks, and Collando, a clay modellor. The latter produced familiar faces in the putty-like substance in an incredibly short time. The features of Washington, Lincoln, McKinley and Roosevelt were among those easily recognized.

Other numbers on the bill were William Hoehn, character monologuist; the Hurleys, comedy singing and dancing act; the Two Pages, singing comediennes; Wilkins and Wilkins, singers and dancers and the Four Musical Comets, comedy musical act.

Suhr's Imperial orchestra gave selections at intervals and at the close of the vaudeville show, the floor was cleared for dancing. The major portion of the audience remained to enjoy this part of the program which continued until 2 o'clock this morning. Frederick Breem acted as floor manager and he was ably assisted by Edward J. McCue, James T. McCarthy, LeRoy De Camp and William F. Skinner.

The committees in charge of the affair was composed of Louis J. Feiring, Chairman; Robert T. Skinner, John R. Cline, Henry Hansen, Frederick Breem, James T. McCarthy, Edward J. McCue, John F. Casey, William F. Skinner, Thomas Fitzgerald, LeRoy De Camp, John D. Vardon and James F. Brown.

The officers of Court Plainfield are as follows: Court Deputy, Louis J. Feiring; junior post chief ranger, James T. McCarthy; chief ranger, Edward J. McCue; vice-chief ranger, Frederick Breem; recording secretary, Henry Hansen; financial secretary, Robert T. Skinner; treasurer, John R. Cline; orator, Frank J. Winzenreid; senior woodward, Martin J. Flattley; junior woodward, John F. Donnolly; senior beadle, Francis J. Keenan; junior beadle, Thomas Fitzgerald; finance committee, Patrick Harrington and Peter C. Thomeson; trustees, John F. Casey and Martin N. Whalen; court physicians, Dr. H. H. Lowrie and Dr. A. K. Brennan.

This court was instituted July 1, 1892, with fourteen charter members; its present membership is 429. During the eighteen years of its existence the court has paid to sick and disabled members $12,600; this in addition to the insurance paid by the Supreme court to the beneficiaries of the members of Court Plainfield who have died during this period. At this date the court has to its credit, for the payment of benefits to sick and disabled members, $4,100 with no liabilities.

The Independent Order of Foresters, of which Court Plainfield is one of the six thousand courts, was organized in Newark in 1874, and now has a membership of over 235,000; has paid for benefits over $30,000,000; has not called an extra assessment, and has a surplus fund of over $16,000,000.

Proctor's Good Show.

"Tangled and Twisted" is the title of an amusing sketch being offered at Proctor's theatre. "The Girl in Pink" a novel singing act in three scenes, with electerical effects makes a hit, especially her distribution of candy in the audience. Wilson & Franklin offer a sketch, "Taking a Chance," and Valentine's dogs are clever.

"How We are Not Saved."

At the First Baptist church tomorrow evening, the mid-week meeting will be under the direction of the Men's Conference class. The topic will be "How we are Not Saved." All are cordially invited.

SPEAKERS FOR BANQUET

Gov. Wilson and Geo. W. Perkins Invited to Address Chamber of Commerce.

OTHERS TO BE ANNOUNCED.

"Profit Sharing" to Be Theme of Banker—The Executive May Talk on "Employer's Liability to Employees.

Preparations for the banquet of the Chamber of Commerce on February 13 are going on apace and it is quite likely that those who attend will have cause to remember the occasion as an event in their lives. While it has not been positively announced it is expected that Governor Woodrow Wilson will be one of the speakers on that occasion and will have for his topic the "Employer's Liability to His Employee." He has said already that certain concerns use dangerous and powerful machinery over whose repair and renewal they have no control. He has advocated strenuously that new rules be devised with regard to the obligations of these employers and that they should shoulder certain responsibilities which they now evade. It is quite probable in view of the pressing invitation he has received to be present and speak that he will accept and touch upon the subject indicated.

Another whose fame is world wide, George W. Perkins, late partner of J. Pierpont Morgan and the man slated for the place occupied by the late Grover Cleveland in the Equitable Life Assurance Society, has accepted an invitation to speak and will tell of the profit sharing scheme between employers and employee of which he is an ardent advocate and promoter. Mr. Perkins has been instrumental in puting this system of profit sharing in operation in industries with which he is identified with the result that in everyone of them such a thing as a strike or kick is unknown.

Other speakers of renown will be present, but it has not yet been definitely decided who shall be the toastmaster, although the probabilities are that this important post will fall to the lot of former Mayor William L. Saunders whose ability along that line is among his well established attributes.

In any event the proposed banquet which will be held at Truell Hall promises to be one of the most important and largest ever held in Plainfield. Applications for tickets for the affair may be made at the office of the secretary of the chamber, Judge John Ulrich, in the Frost building.

ELLIS AGAIN PRESIDENT OF DEMOCRATIC CLUB

LeRoy J. Ellis was again elected president of the Plainfield Democratic club at the annual meeting last evening and in addition three new members were admitted. The vice-presidents named for the ensuing year are: Edward Lynch, Robert C. Woodhouse, A. H. Atterbury and Dr. C. A. Gesswein. Secretary J. F. Zerega was again elected as was treasurer J. O. Stevens.

A general discussion of the bills presented before the present legislature followed the regular business of the meeting particular attention being given to the Employers' Liability law.

Following the discussion the members of the County Democratic Committee was called to order by temporary chairman Walter Hetfield, who appointed Robert C. Woodhouse temporary secretary. The purpose of this meeting was the formation of a permanent Democratic City Committee. One member from each election district in the city was appointed and at a future date the ten members will come together and elect officers.

The meeting room of the Democratic club has been changed to the room back of the office of D. J. Carney as the old quarters was found to be more room than the club needs at present.

License Committee Conference.

The Councilmanic license committee held its first meeing of the year, last night, to outline its work. Mayor G. W. V. Moy was called into the conference, the committee desiring to confer with him as to certain details regarding license matters. All licenses expire on March 1 and the committee will be kept pretty busy until that time. Special attention will be given to a consideration of the liquor license applications prior to the time when they are to be presented to the council for action.

POLICEMEN'S PENSION MEASURE INTRODUCED

A new act for the pensioning of police officers and policemen was introduced by Assemblyman Calvin E. Brodhead in the lower house of the Legislature last night. This bill is originally intended for Plainfield, but will include all cities and municipalities.

This bill will make the city treasurer the custodian of funds and will reduce the assessment on salaries one per cent. The old bill does not specify a custodian of funds and makes a levy of 4 per cent. in addition to the tax levy which is sometimes high.

SMITH COUNTY CHAIRMAN

Plainfielder Chosen for Seventh Term as Head of G. O. P. County Committee.

THE ELECTION WAS UNANIMOUS.

James G. Calvert vice-Chairman; Dr. J. E. Rowe treasurer and William H. Randolph Secretary.

For the seventh consecutive term, Frank H. Smith, of this city, was unanimously elected chairman of the Union County Republican Committee at the annual meeting held at headquarters in the Dix building, Elizabeth, last night. He had told the members of the committee that he felt he had done his share in serving so long as head of the committee and that it was time that the burden fell on the shoulders of another. Despite his wishes, the committee elected him again.

The nomination was made by former County Chairman Hamilton F. Kean, who referred to Mr. Smith's excellent record as head of the organization and was seconded by half a dozen members at once. An unanimous motion prevailed to have the secretary cast the necessary ballot. In thanking his colleagues for the honor, the county chairman said that he was heartily satisfied with the support given him in the past and the work accomplished. He said that what he and his colleagues had done was at all times for what they considered the best interests of the party and that he hoped that the future would be as satisfactory as the past.

James C. Calvert, of Elizabeth, the popular county clerk, was unanimously re-elected vice-chairman, Dr. J. Edward Rowe, of Summit, was again chosen as treasurer. William H. Randolph, of Rahway, was elected secretary in place of James E. Warner, of Cranford, who declined another term. For the fifteenth consecutive time, Asistant Postmaster James White, of Elizabeth, was elected as sergeant at arms,

Mr. Smith was not prepared to announce his committees.

TRIED TO PASS CHECK; IRA PANGBORN IN TOILS

Ira Pangborn, aged about twenty-three years, a former resident of North Plainfield, was arrested in Westfield, last night by Policeman Rosecranz, on a charge of attempting to pass a worthless check at that place. According to the police, Pangborn went into the store of Herman Frowery and asked the proprietor to cash a worthless check. Being refused, he then sought Town Clerk Clark, who also declined to cash the check. It was through Mr. Frowery that Policeman Rosecranz arrested Pangborn.

Pangborn was arraigned before Justice Toucey later and held for the grand jury. He will be taken to Elizabeth, today. The check in the possession of Pangborn was made payable to L. M. Arnold, of Westfield and bore his endorsement. It was signed "John Goltras," the name of a contractor at Westfield, and was drawn on the People's National Bank.

Pangborn, according to the Westfield police, has been hanging about the place at different times with apparently nothing to do. He has a bad reputation and has been regarded with more or less suspicion. He has not lived in North Plainfield for some time.

Mrs. J. T. Lee.

Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Mundy, wife of the late John T. Lee, formerly of this city, and a niece of the late John W. Laing, well known here for many years as a hotel man, died at her home in Birmingham, Ala., last Friday morning. She was the daughter of Edgar Mundy, deceased, who lived on Peace street, now Watchung avenue, in the building still standing, north of Charles P. Sebring's building with the marble front. John T. Lee was a Justice of the Peace, his office being on Front street, opposite Park avenue, where Schwed's clothing store now stands. Mrs. Lee leaves two daughters and a son Robert E. Lee.

James E. Martine Improved.

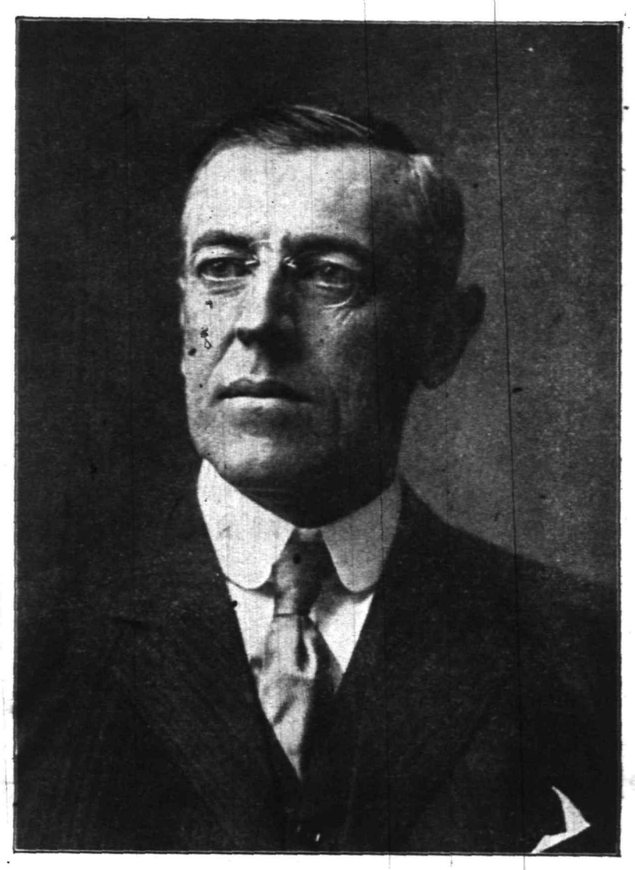
James E. Martine, who has been detained at home with an aggravated attack of the grip, was reported today as resting easy. He spent a very restless night. Accompanying the attack of grip, Mr. Martine appears to have been suffering with a gathering in the head, which caused a deafness and a discharge from the ears. This gave the family considerable anxiety but his condition today would indicate a slight improvement.

DR. WOODROW WILSON TAKES THE OATH OF OFFICE AS GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY

Impressive Scene When Chief Justice Gummere Administers the Solemn Pledge.—New Executive Delivers a Remarkable Speech in Accepting the Exalted Position.



HON. WOODROW WILSON.
Inaugurated Governor of New Jersey at Trenton Today.

New Jersey has a new Governor. As the governor's salute of seventeen guns boomed forth at noon today at Trenton, Woodrow Wilson took the oath of office. The inauguration exercises took place in the Taylor Opera House.

As Governor Wilson concluded the oath of his office he was handed the great seal of the State by the retiring Governor John Franklin Fort and the induction of the new chief executive into office was complete. It was then that Governor Wilson launched on one of the most remarkable inaugural addresses that has ever been delivered in the State of New Jersey. He spoke of the progressive trend of the times and pointed out that New Jersey had much to learn and he referred several times to the State of Oregon as an example, a State which leads the Union in progressive legislation. Governor Wilson recounted laws, which, in his opinion should be enacted.

This inaugural address, while it touched upon many points, was especially strong in its reference to the passage of a law to regulate the placing of foodstuffs in cold storage. The Governor told of the introduction of the James bill in the House last year and of how it had been mysteriously lost. He said it would be a pleasure to attach his signature to a bill which would prevent the present practice of cornering the market in food by placing it in cold storage. The address is published on pages 6 and 7.

It was just 11:45 when the Governor-elect left the State house for the Theatre, where the great crowd was already in waiting. In the carriage with the incoming executive were Governor Fort, Senator Harry D. Leavitt, of Mercer, and Assemblyman Allen B. Walsh, of Mercer, members of the inaugural committee. The open landau in which the two governors rode was drawn by four magnificent black steeds The escort was composed only of Company L of Princeton, in which are many personal friends of the new Governor. After the carriage containing the executive party came two coaches with the members of the inaugural committee.

The opening prayer was by the Rev. Dr. Henry Collins Minton, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Trenton. It being a joint session of the Legislature, Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, president of the Senate, was the presiding officer. After the prayer, the oath of office was administrated by Chief Justice William S. Gummere. It was then that Governor Fort turned over the seal of the State, and introduced Governor Wilson to Senator Ackerman, the next highest officer of the State. Governor Fort made a few remarks in presenting the seal and Governor Wilson responded. During the administration of the oath of office the Governor's salute was fired from the rear of the State House.

Then followed the address by Governor Wilson and the benediction was given by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor John H. Fox, rector of St. Mary's Cathedral, Trenton. In one of the Stage boxes sat Mrs. Wilson, the wife of the new executive and his daughter, and Mrs. Grover Cleveland.

Governor Wilson was taken back to the Capitol where he reviewed from a temporary stand the civilian parade arranged in honor of the inauguration. It is estimated that between four and five thousand men were in line. After reviewing the parade, Governor Wilson was taken to the Hotel Sterling where the inaugural luncheon took place at 3 o'clock. At the Hotel Governor Wilson dined the State departments. At 3:30 he was taken to the State House and until 5 o'clock he will hold a reception in the Governor's suite of offices. The Capitol has been beautifully decorated for the reception tonight and Hickey's orchestra of 25 pieces will provide music throughout the evening.

MISS ELSIE HASSINGER NOW MRS. A. F. BALDWIN.

Miss Elsie Hassinger, daughter of Mrs. Caroline M. Hassinger, and Albert Fairchild Baldwin, of Chelsea place, East Orange, and a step-brother to P. Frank Stone, the photograhper, of this city, were married last evening at the home of the bride's mother by Rev. George P. Eastman, pastor of the Orange Valley Congregational church, of Orange.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, John G. Widenmayer, of Irvington, wore a gown of white crepe de chine, with designs of pearls and a large white hat trimmed with willow plumes. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. Her only attendant was Miss Hedwig Thum, of Hammond, Ind., who wore a gown of pink messaline veiled in white marquisette and a pink hat trimmed with pink roses. Cyril Baldwin, of East Orange, was his brother's best man.

A reception followed for relatives and intimate friends. The couple will reside at West Orange, a completely furnished home being given them by the bride's mother. Mr. and Mrs. P. Frank Stone were guests at the ceremony.

STRENGTH OF SMITH GROWS WEAKER DAILY.

That Senator Johnston Cornish, of Warren county, will vote for James E. Martine for United States Senator was indicated by a significant statment made by the former yesterday, to the effect that he will support the man whom the people of his county want.

Mr. Cornish's statment which he dictated to the papers was:

"I propose to cast my vote on the Senatorship for the man whom the people of my county favor. I have been connected with political affairs a long time and one lesson I have learned is that a man in office must follow the dictates of the people. They may be wrong, but if he obeys them it is their fault and not his.

"I have asked the members of the county committee to meet me at my home in Washington tomorrow. I shall then go over the situation with them for the pupose of ascertaining the views of the people of the county."

When asked if he intended to follow the wishes of the county committee in case its members advised some other candidate than James E. Martine, who carried Warren county by an overwhelming vote, Senator Cornish intimated in a significant manner that the people's will in the matter was already quite fully understood.

PRINCETON'S PLANS FOR NEW BUILDINGS.

At a recent meeting of the committee on grounds and buildings of the board of trustees, the plans for a new dormitory for the college campus, to be located between Brown and Patton halls, Princeton, were adopted as to the general features of style.

The dormitory, which will be built by subscription of the alumni, has been designed by Frank Miles Day, of Philadelphia, the designer of Mrs. Russell Sage's recent gift, Holder Hall. The plans call for a building of the university Gothic type of architecture, similar to that of Patton Hall, to which it will be annexed at the north wing. The new building will hold 160 students in its eight entries. Two of these entries have already been paid for by the class of 1881, and the remaining six entries will be erected by the classes of '02, '03, '04, 06, '07, '08, '09 and '10.

It is also planned that some time in the near future a new infirmary will be built near the present Isabella McCosh Infirmary. Plans have been transferred for inspection to Dr. J. M. T. Finney, '84, of Baltimore. Dr. Finney will submit the plans to members of the Johns Hopkins Hospital, of Baltimore, for suggestions concerning the arrangement of rooms, etc.

The following Sunday-school classes of Trinity Reformed church have contributed to the building fund: Class No. 13, of which Mrs. W. H. Kirch is teacher, $3; Class No. 31, of which Mrs. L. R. ### WEALTHY WIDOWER TO WED TELEPHONE GIRL.

Friends of Miss Louise Wersch, who was telephone operator at the Somerville exchange, are handing her congratulations, for they have just learned that she is to wed Alexander W. Mack, one of the wealthiest residents of that place. The engagement was to have been kept a secret.

Mr. Mack became acquainted with his bride-to-be through conversations over the telephone, it is said, when Miss Wersch was employed in the Somerville exchange. The voice of the young woman, who is still in her teens, and the business-like manner in which she dispatched her duties, strongly appealed to Mr. Mack, his friends say, and he set about arranging to meet her.

Mr. Mack is the principal stockholder and manager of the Raritan Woolen Mills, which employs more than one thousand persons. He has the most pretentious residence and estate in Somerville, called Crest Hill. It is one of the show places at that town. He is forty-eight years old, and has two children, the oldest being almost the age of Miss Wersch, who is twenty years his junior. He was divorced five years ago.

Miss Wersch, who is a stepdaughter of Rev. H. J. Wahl, pastor of the Fourth Reformed German church, resigned her position the first of this year and since has been devoting most of her time in being introduced and received into Somerville society.

The Women's Society for Christian Work of the Seventh-Day Baptist church will meet in the church parlors tomorrow afternoon. The tract committee will provide an interesting program.

News and Notes.

GOLF.

A committee of the Cranford Golf Club will submit a report this evening regarding the proposed purchase with the Westfield Golf Club of the property known as Echo Lake Farm, with a view of converting the tract into an 18-hole golf course. Both clubs, which now have only nine-hole courses, seem to look favorably upon the project, and it is quite probable that the deal will be put through.

The proeprty in question comprises 165 acres. An admirable golf course could be laid out there. The tract is in a good location for both clubs, being about three-quarters of a mile from Westfield and two miles from Cranford. Persons interestsed in the project say that $20,000 could easily be raised here, and assurances have been received from Westfield that $15,000 or more will be forthcoming from there if the purchase is made. The purchase of the proeprty, the erection of a clubhouse and the laying out of an 18-hole course, would involve an expenditure of about $100,000.

If the Cranford Golf Club decides to go into the scheme, the Westfield golfers will hold a meeting shortly afterward to submit the proposition to the members for decision. The Cranford Club's lease for its present links will expire in 1915.

BASEBALL.

The National Board of the National Baseball Association has handed down decisions awarding the service of Umpire Eckman, of Chicago, to the Virginia League; disallowing the claim of the Minneapolis club to Player Beisser; declaring Player Bock, of the Paducah (Ky.) club a free agent; awarding the services of Manager Strands, of Huntington, Ind., to the Lynn (Mass.) club, and disallowing the claim of Player Kustus, of Detroit, against the Bridgeport (Conn.) club.

Official notice was received by Steve Kane, who has been handling the indicator in the National League during the past two years, from President Tom Lynch to the effect that the Louisville umpire will not be in the list of 1911. Kane says that he knows no reason for the request of the president of the National League. Kane is in correspondence with Ban Johnson, of the American League, and the probability is that he will be able to land a berth.

414 Teams in A. B. C.

Four hundred and fourteen five-men teams, instead of 412, are entered for the eleventh international tournament in St. Louis of the American Bowling Congress. This fact was ascertained Saturday, when Secretary Abe Langtry made a final count of the entries.

NAME THE MAN!

The Newark Stars, assets of James Smith, Jr., the disappointed office-seeker, are stooping to the lowest possible level of journalism in assailing Governor Wilson. Now that the proprietor of the Newark publications sees clearly that the "schoolmaster in politics" told the plain truth when he declared that the people of New Jersey did not want the Essex county boss for United States Senator it is resorting to the meanest sort of newspaper tactics in its campaign of abuse. Witness this introduction to a column of ridicule and scorn for the Governor as published in this morning's edition of the Jim Smith organ:

"An old friend of Governor-elect Woodrow Wilson literally tears to pieces his address in Newark last Saturday. While not a politician this man has made a deep study of politics and keeps in touch with political moves. He warmly greeted a representative of The Star and said he would thoroughly read Dr. Wilson's speech."

To use his own favorite expression it is up to the Newark publisher to "Name the Man!" or to admit that this sample of his scheme to injure the Governor is the old anonymous trick well known in the newspaper business.

A CLASSIC

The inaugural address delivered by Woodrow Wilson after taking the oath of office at noon today as Governor of New Jersey, (published in this issue) we believe, will be regarded generally as a classic in political literature. In delivering himself on the matters demanding the immediate serious consideration of the Legislature he rises to lofty rhetorical expression, making his views as impressive as the English tongue will permit. The message is a refreshing document, especially when compared with the stereotyped, statistically top-heavy, disconnected and wearisome addresses to which we have been accustomed.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

"Madame Sherry," the Hamerbach-Hoschna musical comedy, which has scored such a tremendous success in Chicago and New York will be seen at the Plainfield theatre on Monday night. If perchance you haven't learned the words of "Every Little Movement," you surely know the tune. If you have not, there is something decidedly amiss with your musical education. Surely you cannot lay the blame at the door of the cafe orchestras, the parlor pianos or the street whistlers. "Every Little Movement" is a tuneful epidemic. Two weeks after the initial American production of "Madame Sherry" at the Colonial Theatre, Chicago, last April, the score of the piece, and especially its theme number, were becoming popular in every part of the country from Boston to San Francisco. By the time "Madame Sherry" reached New York last August the melody had encircled the globe and the publishers of the score reported sales in London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, South Africa and Australia. After its first New York performance the tune was heard on the streets and in the subways.

NEARLY FRIGHTENED THIS COLORED MAN TO DEATH.

Henry Williams, a colored man, employed by a Trenton coal dealer thought he saw a corpse rise and look at him from a casket in the cellar of a local undertaker's establishment Saturday night.

Williams delivered a load of coal to the undertaker, and was told to place the coal in the cellar. Williams was a little cautious in passing among the caskets in the basement, when suddenly a lid on one of the caskets raised slowly, and a small, white face peeked through. The negro yelled as he dropped his basket of coal and fled. He did not stop running until he reached the coal office, where he issued his ultimatum to the effect that he would resign his position before he would ever again deliver coal to an undertaker.

When the coal dealer attempted to verify the statement of his driver, he learned the undertaker's boy, ten years old, had been playing "hide and seek" with a number of companions, and had slid into the casket to hide. When the youngster heard a noise in the cellar he thought it was some one looking for him, and he opened the lid on the casket to peer out.

EXAMINATION FOR CIVIL SERVICE JOBS.

There will be civil service examinations for prison and reformatory guards as follows:

Medical examination, Monday January 30; physical examination, Monday February 13; written examinations (reformatory guards), Monday February 20; written examination (prison guards), Thursday, March 2.

The examination will consist of a lot of physical exercises together with sprints, and the marking will be by the point system.

A civil service examination open to male and female residents of Essex County only, will be held in Newark, on Monday, January 13, for the position of second grade stenographer and typewriter. The salary is to be $50 to $60 a month. Candidates must have had a common school education, be proficient in the ordinary operations of mathematics, be able to spell and punctuate correctly, be familiar with idexing and filing; they should also have had some practical experience and be able to take dictation at the rate of from eighty to one hundred words per minute with few mistakes.

TRAVELOGUE ON NORWAY

Jonas Lie Vividly Pictures His Native Land, its People and Customs.

A NATURE LOVING FOLK.

Artist's Lecture Before Monday Afternoon Club Yesterday One of Real Merit.

Love of country is an instinct so interwoven with the best impulses of human nature that its expression always awakens a thrill of sympathy and enlists the profound interest of other nationalists. Partly from this reason, and partly because of the pleasing personality of Jonas Lie, a large and appreciative audience listened with captivated attention to his lecture on "Norway, the Land and the People," delivered yesterday before the Monday Afternoon Club, in the Hartridge School auditorium. Mr. Lie is a Norwegian artist and his early efforts to win a recognized place in the art world were made in this city and on the hills that overlook it.

His description of Norway, its topography, the more fertile South, the waste lands of the North and its consequent isolation was graphically given. He told of the small communities in which most of the two and a half millions of inhabitants were divided and said it was difficult to speak of Norwegians as one people, these communities differed so greatly in customs and costumes. A person in the community was spoken of as a stranger because his family had lived there only three generations. Fishing and farming, he said, were the main occupations, Norway's merchant marine numbering the fourth largest in the world. Mr. Lie described artistically the thousands of vessels sailing out for the capture of fish, declaring it to be a sight for the Gods. The fishermen, he considered less stable and reliable than the farmers. Every bit of tillable land was utilized, but the farmer's life was hard with the long, cold winters in which he was a veritable prisoner. The carving of all domestic utensils and of the house itself, was one of the occupations of these long, dark days, he said. His wife and Mr. Lie described the journeys of himself two summers ago, when they had a home in Norway and gave a vivid picture of work turned into play, when the farmer's hay making and grain harvesting were done by a group of neighbors, ending with festivities and a merry dance that was a brilliant spectacle of color and motion.

The Norwegians, he said, were strongly developed poetically being a nature loving people. There was no poverty in Norway, he affirmed, for poverty and riches are only names for content and discontent. In answer to the question why Norwegians are the acknowledged best sailors in the world, he said it was due to their self-forgetfulness in times of emergency.

The Norwegians' superstitions, water-spirits, thralls, spirits of the air and woods with the demon of the sea formed an interesting part of the lecture.

Most of Mr. Lie's address was devoted to the peasant type, a primitive country folk, but there was another class, he said, that stood like giant trees, showing they had their root in cultivated soil. In literature, he considered they had great strength and cited the works of Ibsen and other Norwegian writers. He paid a high tribute to Bjornstjerne Bjornson, whose name, he said, sent a thrill of patriotic pride through every Norwegian breast and who was more patriotic than the flag itself.

Mr. Lie had a variety of curios from his native land and a few paintings of native scenes that were full of interest to a large number in the audience.

CERTAIN NOW THAT IT'S "ONE GRAND SWEET SONG"

The Men's Club of the Netherwood Reformed church held a "ladies night" affair at the home of Mrs. Rhoda Noel, on Netherwood avenue, last night, the feature of the affair being a debate of the question, "Is Marriage a Failure?" The men present told the women that they would debate any question and the above one was decided upon, at the same time they informed the women that they were for or against anything proposed.

Claude Gonod led the affirmative side and James C. Hanson the negative. Women were chosen for judges, Mrs. W. T. Banks being chairman, because of her long experience in married life; Mrs. Stout, wife of Rev. Royal A. Stout, pastor, because of her short experience and Miss Lillian Mattell because she had had no experience.

After a lively debate in which many original suggestions were brought out, the committee decided that marriage is a grand success. A social hour followed and refreshments were served.

Prior to the entertainment there was a short business meeting of the club, when several new members were elected and the men decided to attend service at the church in a body, Sunday evening, January 29, when Mr. Stout will deliver a special sermon. Miss Iona Wood rendered several piano selections during the evening.

FIRE COMMITTEE'S TALK CONCERNS IMPROVEMENTS

The Councilmanic fire and building committee met last night, and among things proposed was that of purchasing an additional steamer for the department. There is a tendency on the part of the members of the committee to secure an apparatus. Mayor Moy, who was invited to the conference, did not so express himself on the subject. He declared, however, that he is opposed to increasing the expenditures of the department or adding expense to the taxpayers except for necessities.

The committee also discussed the question of making some needed repairs at some of the fire houses, and no doubt those matters will be taken up early this year. Another matter discussed by the committee was the petition from the firemen for an increase in wages, similar to that of the police department. There seems to be a disposition on the part of the committee to give the firemen an increase, but no decision has been reached.

BRADFORD WILLIAMS' SHAKESPERIAN TALK

Bradford Williams, a Shakespearian scholar, gave a lecture at the Park avenue Baptist church last night, on the subject, "All the World is a Stage." He compared the writings of Shakespeare with those of the Bible, depicting Judas as the villian in the drama of Biblical times, describing his acts in selling his Lord for thirty pieces of silver.

The speaker's description of people as actors, showing how some consciously and unconsciously are playing the different parts, was both entertaining and instructive. Mr. Williams referred to the villians in Shakespeare's dramas, including "Shylock," and "Macbeth," telling of their traits. The lecturer showed that he possessed an extensive knowledge of Shakespeare and his writings and the audience felt as though it had spent a profitable evening.

Clan Mackenzie, Order of Scottish Clans, will meet in Exempt Firemen's hall, Park avenue, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock sharp. Several candidates will be initiated.

THE OLDEST INSTITUTION

Is the Church, Says Rev. Dr. C M. Anderson to Dutch Arms Club.

MEN HUNGRY FOR GOSPEL.

Perseverance and Co-operation Essential for Good Christian Work—Club Officers continue—Committees.

Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, was the principal speaker at the regular monthly meeting of the Dutch Arms last night in Trinity Reformed church Sunday school rooms. Members of the Men's Club of the Presbyterian church, of Westfield, were present as visitors and Arthur N. Pierson, president of the Westfield club, made a short address during the social hour which followed Dr. Anderson's speech.

A fifteen-minute devotional meeting preceded the business session of the club led by Rev. Dr. E. G. Read. Three new members were added to the club roll; Thomas Power, John Wendell and Arthur L. Titsworth. President F. S. Cutter announced that as the fiscal year of the club had been constitutionally changed from January 15 to May 15 the officers of last year would hold over until May, but that he thought it advisable to appoint new committees which he announced as follows: Entertainment, (social) A. B. Cole, chairman; William Williams, N. Woodruff and E. F. Young; entertainment (good and welfare), Horace J. Martin, chairman; George Saums, Henry Seader, A. Gaskill, Elmer Gayle and Chauncey Colthar; devotional, T. R. VanZandt, chairman; Rev. Dr. E. G. Read and A. Swalm; vestibule, Edgar F. Sheppard, chairman; T. R. VanZandt, Fred Willett and Charles Beiter; finance, J. P. Laire, chairman; H. C. VanEmburgh, C. Frank French. The entertainment committee is divided into two sections in order to facilitate the work and provid both the social feature and gastronomic enjoyment without over-burdening any one body of men.

Rev. Dr. Anderson spoke on the "Church as an Institution." In part he said: "The church is not second to any organization on earth. It is the greatest institution that ever was or ever will be. There has not been a time in the history of the world that there has not been some sort of a church. From Adam to the mission of Malachi there has been an institution of the worship of God. After a laspe of 400 years it was continued from the time of the appearance of Jesus Christ on the earth.

"The mission of the church is to reform the world through the regeneration of man. It is, of course, easier to criticize the church or anything else, for that matter, than it is to lend a hand and help it along. In these days there ought to be no uncertain voice ringing from our pulpits. There ought to be no deviation from the preaching of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. When a man ceases to have the right sort of thoughts about the doctrine he ought to step down and out and give some one else a chance to preach it. You business men are hungry for the Gospel and it is the duty of your pastors to give it to you. When if ever my people get to the point where they do not want to her of the blessedness of salvation through the blood of Jesus, then I will quit.

"Perseverance of the pastor aided by the co-operation of the laymen, which means you, will accomplish much. Let me tell you that the increase of membership in evangelical churches has kept on increasing with the increase of population ever since 1800 and the latest figures derived from the last census shows that the proportion is keeping pace just as much as in the earlier days. I congratulate you on the splendid organization you have here and I am sure that the sympathetic bond which unites your pastor with me will be as strong with the men of our organizations. I wish you God speed in your work."

Others who spoke at the meeting were President Fred S. Cutter and F. E. Smith.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

District Deputy Frank Nelson, of New Market, visited Rockview Council, Daughters of Liberty, last night, and installed the following officers: Councilor, Mrs. John Kinney; associate councilor, Mrs. Ella Kennedy; guide, Mrs. Eva Bowlby; recording secretary, Miss May Apgar; assistant recording secretary, Miss Lillian Kennedy; financial secretary, Miss Elsie Peters; treasurer, Miss Lulu Adams. The installation was followed by a social hour.

Sparks from a locomotive set fire to the dry grass in the field south of the railroad and Washington avenue yesterday afternoon. It made quite a blaze for a time but was beaten out by boys before becoming dangerous.

Miss Anna Ace has resigned her position as bookkeeper with D. T. Hume and Son to take affect February 1. She will go to her former home in Stroudsberg, Pa., soon after for a visit with relatives.

The fixtures for the new Kirckhoff drug store are now being installed in the Runyon building. They were made by a Pittsburg firm and a foreman from the factory is in charge of the work.

A delegation of Foresters from Court Dunellen attended the annual entertainment and dance of Court Plainfield in Saengerbund hall, North Plainfield, last night.

W. G. Holton, Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., will meet tonight. A number of important business matters will come before the session.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kerwin, of Rock avenue, are entertaining the latter's sister from Perth Amboy.

WILSON FAVORS MANY NEW LAWS

Governor Elect Takes Oath and Outlines Plans.

SAYS HE IS STATE'S SERVANT.

No One May Dare to Be Sure He Is Qualified For Highest Office In His State, the New Executive Says. Urges Changes In Statutes to Keep Pace With Advancement In All Lines.

Trenton, Jan. 17.—Governor Wilson delivered the following inaugural address today:

Gentlemen of the Legislature—I assume the great office of governor of the state with unaffected diffidence. Many great men have made this office illustrious. A long tradition of honorable public service connects each incumbent of it with the generation of men who set up our governments here in free America to give men perpetual assurance of liberty and justice and opportunity. No one dare be sure that he is qualified to play the part expected of him by the people of the commonwealth in the execution of this high trust. It is best for him as he sets out to look away from himself and to concentrate his thoughts upon the people whom he serves, the sacred interests which are intrusted to his care and the day in which he is to work, its challenge, its promise, its energies of opinion and of purpose, its sustaining hopes and exciting expectations. The scene will inspire him, not thought of himself.

The opportunity of our day in the field of politics no man can mistake who can read any, even the most superficial, signs of the times. We have never seen a day when duty was more plain, the task to be performed more obvious, the way in which to accomplish it more easy to determine. The air has in recent months cleared amazingly about us, and thousands, hundreds of thousands, have lifted their eyes to look about them to see things they never saw before, to comprehend things that once seemed vague and elusive. The whole world has changed within the lifetime of men not yet in their thirties, the world of business and therefore the world of society and the world of politics. The organization and movement of business are new and upon a novel scale. Business has changed so rapidly that for a long time we were confused, alarmed, bewildered, in a sort of terror of the things we had ourselves raised up. We talked about them either in sensational articles in the magazines which distorted every line of the picture, or in conservative editorials in our newspapers which stoutly denied that anything at all had happened, or in grave discourses which tried to treat them as perfectly normal phenomena, or in legislative debates which sought to govern them with statutes which matched them neither in size nor shape.

A Word on Corporations.

But if only by sheer dint of talking about them, either to frighten or to reassure one another or to make ourselves out wiser or more knowing than our fellows, we have at last turned them about and looked at them from almost every angle and begin to see them whole, as they are. Corporations are no longer hobgoblins which have sprung at us out of some mysterious ambush, nor yet unwholy inventions of rascally rich men, nor yet the puzzling devices by which ingenious lawyers build up huge rights out of a multitude of small wrongs, but merely organizations of a perfectly intelligible sort which the law has licensed for the convenience of extensive business, organizations which have proved very useful, but which have for the time being slipped out of the control of the very law that gave them leave to be and that can make or unmake them at pleasure. We have now to set ourselves to control them, soberly, but effectively, and to bring them thoroughly within the regulation of the law.

There is a great opportunity here; for wise regulation, wise adjustment, will mean the removal of half the difficulties that now beset us in our search for justice and equality and fair chances of fortune for the individuals who make up our modern society. And there is a great obligation as well as a great opportunity, an imperative obligation, from which we cannot escape if we would. Public opinion is at last wide awake. It begins to understand the problems to be dealt with. It begins to see very clearly indeed the objects to be sought. It knows what has been going on. It sees where resistance has come from whenever efforts at reform have been made and knows also the means of resistance that have been resorted to. It is watchful, insistent, suspicious. No man who wishes to enjoy the public confidence dare hold back, and if he is wise he will not resort to subterfuge. A duty is exacted of him which he must perform simply, directly, immediately. The gate of opportunity stands wide open. If we are foolish enough to be unwilling to pass through it the whip of opinion will drive us through.

No wise man will say, of course, that he sees the whole problem of reform lying plain before him or knows how to frame the entire body of law that will be necessary to square business with the general interest and put right and fairness and public spirit in the saddle again in all the transactions of our new society, but some things are plain enough, and upon these we can act.

Wants Liability Law.

In the first place, it is plain that our laws with regard to the relations of employer and employee are in many respects wholly antiquated and impossible. They were framed for another age which nobody now living remembers, which is indeed so remote from our life that it would be difficult for many of us to understand it if it were described to us. The employer is now generally a corporation or huge company of some kind. The employee is one of hundreds or of thousands brought together, not by individual masters whom they know and with whom they have personal relations, but by agents of one sort or another. Workingmen are marshaled in great numbers for the performance of a multitude of particular tasks under a common discipline. They generally use dangerous and powerful machinery, over whose repair and renewal they have no control. New rules must be devised with regard to their obligations and their rights, their obligations to their employers and their responsibilities to one another. New rules must be devised for their protection, for their compensation when injured, for their support when disabled.

We call these questions of employers' liability, questions of workingmen's compensation, but those terms do not suggest quite the whole matter. There is something very new and very big and very complex about these new relations of capital and labor. A new economic society has sprung up, and we must effect a new set of adjustments. We must not pit power against weakness. The employer is generally in our day, as I have said, not an individual, but a powerful group of individuals, and yet the workingman is still, under our existing law, an individual when dealing with his employer in case of accident, for example, or of loss or of illness, as well as in every contractual relationship. We must have a workingman's compensation act which will not put upon him the burden of fighting powerful composite employers to obtain his rights, but which will give him his rights without suit, directly and without contest, by automatic operation of law, as if of a law of insurance.

This is the first adjustment needed, because it affects the rights, the happiness, the lives and fortunes of the largest number and because it is the adjustment for which justice cries loudest and with the most direct appeal to our hearts as well as to our consciences.

But there is regulation needed which lies back of that and is much more fundamental. The composite employer himself needs to have his character and powers overhauled, his constitution and rights reconsidered, readjusted to the fundamental and abiding interests of society. If I may speak very plainly, we are much too free with grants of charters to corporations in New Jersey. A corporation exists not of natural right, but only by license of law, and the law, if we look at the matter in good conscience, is responsible for what it creates. It can never rightly authorize any kind of fraud or imposition. It cannot righteously allow the setting up of a business which has no sound basis or which follows methods which in any way outrage justice or fair dealing or the principles of honest industry. The law cannot give its license to things of that kind. It thereby authenticates what it ought of right to forbid.

I would urge, therefore, the imperative obligation of public policy and of public honesty we are under to effect such changes in the law of the state as will henceforth effectually prevent the abuse of the privilege of incorporation which has in recent years brought so much discredit upon our state. In order to do this it will be necessary to regulate and restrict the issue of securities, to enforce regulations with regard to bona fide capital, examining very rigorously the basis of capitalization, and to prescribe methods by which the public shall be safeguarded against fraud, deception, extortion and every abuse of its confidence.

His View of Corporations.

And such scrutiny and regulation ought not to be confined to corporations seeking charters. They ought also to be extended to corporations already operating under the license and authority of the state, for the right to undertake such regulation is susceptible of easy and obvious justification. A modern corporation—that is, a modern joint stock company—is in no proper sense an intimate or private concern. It is not set up on the risk and adventure of a few persons, the persons who originated it, manage it, carry it to failure or success. On the contrary, it is set up at what may be called the common risk. It is a risk and adventure in which the public are invited to share, and the hundreds, perhaps thousands, who subscribe to the stock do in fact share in it, oftentimes without sharing also in any effectual manner in the control and development of the business in which their risk is taken. Moreover, these modern enterprises, with their exchequers replenished out of the common store of the savings of the nation, conduct business transactions whose scope and influence are as wide as whole regions of the Union, often as wide as the nation itself. They affect sometimes the lives and fortunes of whole communities, dominate prices, determine land values, make and unmake markets, develop or check the growth of city and of countryside. If law is at liberty to adjust the general conditions of society itself it is at liberty to control these great instrumentalities which nowadays, in so large part, determine the character of society. Wherever we can find what the common interest is in respect of them we shall find a solid enough basis for law, for reform.

The matter is most obvious when we turn to what we have come to designate public service or public utility corporations—those which supply us with the means of transportation and with those common necessaries, water, light, heat and power. Here are corporations exercising peculiar and extraordinary franchises and bearing such a relation to society in respect of the services they render that it may be said that they are the very medium of its life. They render a public and common service of which it is necessary that practically everybody should avail himself.

We have a public utilities commission in New Jersey, but it has hardly more than powers of inquiry and advice. It could even as it stands be made a powerful instrument of publicity and of opinion, but it may also modestly wait until it is asked before expressing a judgment, and in any case it will have the uncomfortable consciousness that its opinion is gratuitous and carries no weight of effective authority. This will not do. It is understood by everybody who knows anything of the common interest that it must have complete regulative powers—the power to regulate rates, the power to learn and make public everything that should furnish a basis for the public judgment with regard to the soundness, the efficiency, the economy of the business—the power, in brief, to adjust such service at every point and in every respect, whether of equipment or charges or methods of financing or means of service, to the general interest of the communities affected. This can be done, as experience elsewhere has demonstrated, not only without destroying the profits of such business, but also with the effect of putting it upon a more satisfactory footing for those who conduct it no less than for those who make use of it day by day.

Such regulation, based on thorough and authoritative inquiry, will go far toward disclosing and establishing those debatable values upon which so many questions of taxation turn. There is an uneasy feeling throughout the state, in which, I dare say, we all share, that there are glaring inequalities in our system—or, at any rate, in our practice—of taxation. The most general complaint is that there is great inequality as between individuals and corporations. I do not see how any one can determine whether there are or not, for we have absolutely no uniform system of assessment. It would seem that in every locality there is some local variety of practice in the rate, the ratio of assessment value to market value, and that every assessor is a law unto himself. Our whole system of taxation, which is no system at all, needs overhauling from top to bottom. There can be no system, no safety, no regulation, in a multitude of boards. An efficient public utilities commission will be a beginning toward a system of taxation as well as toward a system of corporate control. We cannot fairly tax values until we have ascertained and established them.

Plea For Conservation.

And the great matter of conservation seems to me like a part of the same subject. The safeguarding of our water supply, the purification of our streams in order to maintain them as sources of life and their protection against those who would divert them or diminish their volume for private profit, the maintenance of such woodlands as are left us and the reforestation of bare tracts more suited for forest than for field, the sanitation of great urban districts such as cover the northern portions of our state by thorough systems of drainage and of refuse disposal, the protection of the public health and the facilitation of urban and suburban life—these are all public obligations which fall sooner or later upon you as the lawmakers of the commonwealth, and they are all parts of the one great task of adjustment which has fallen to our generation. Our business is to adjust right to right, interest to interest, and to systematize right and convenience, individual rights and corporate privileges upon the single basis of the general good, the good of whole communities, the good which no one will look after or suffice to secure if the legislator does not, the common good for whose safeguarding and maintenance government is intended.

This readjustment has not been going on very fast or very favorably in New Jersey. It has been observed that it limped or was prevented or neglected in other states as well. Everywhere there has been confusion of counsel and many a sad miscarriage of plan. There have consequently been some very radical criticisms of our methods of political action. There is widespread dissatisfaction with what our legislatures do and still more serious dissatisfaction with what they do not do. Some persons have said that representative government has proved too indirect and clumsy an instrument and has broken down as a means of popular control. Others, looking a little deeper, have said that it was not representative government that had broken down, but the effort to get it. They have pointed out that with our present methods of machine nomination and our present methods of elections, which were nothing more than a choice between one set of machine nominees and another, we did not get representative government at all—at least not government representative of the people, but government representative of political managers who serve their own interests and the interests of those with whom they found it profitable to establish partnerships.

New Election Law.

Obviously this is something that goes to the root of the whole matter. Back of all reform lies the method of getting it. Back of the question what you want lies the question, the fundamental question of all government, how are you going to get it? How are you going to get public servants who will obtain it for you? How are you going to get genuine representatives who will serve your real interests and not their own or the interests of some special group or body of your fellow citizens whose power is of the few and not of the many? These are the queries which have drawn the attention of the whole country to the subject of the direct primary, the direct choice of representatives by the people, without the intervention of the nominating machine, the nominating organization.

I earnestly commend to your careful consideration in this connection the laws in recent years adopted in the state of Oregon, whose effect has been to bring government back to the people and to protect it from the control of the representatives of selfish and special interests. They seem to me to point the direction which we must also take before we have completed our regeneration of a government which has suffered so seriously and so long as ours has here in New Jersey from private management and organized selfishness. Our primary laws, extended and perfected, will pave the way. They should be extended to every elective office and to the selection of every party committee or official as well in order that the people may once for all take charge of their own affairs, their own political organization and association, and the methods of primary selection should be so perfected that the primaries will be put upon the same free footing that the methods of election themselves are meant to rest upon.

We have here the undoubtedly sound chain and sequence of reforms, an actual direct choice by the people of the men who are to organize alike their parties and their government, and those measures which true representatives of the people will certainly favor and adopt—systematic compensation for injured workingmen, the careful regulation in the common interest of all corporations, both in respect of their organization and of their methods of business, and especially of public service corporations; the equalization of taxes and the conservation of the natural resources of the state and of the health and safety of its people.

Another matter of the most vital consequence goes with all these—namely, systematic ballot reform and thorough and stringent provisions of law against corrupt practices in connection alike with primaries and with elections. We have lagged behind our sister states in these important matters and should make haste to avail ourselves of their example and their experience. Here again, Oregon may be our guide.

A Big Program.

This is a big program, but it is a perfectly consistent program and a perfectly feasible program and one upon whose details it ought to be possible to agree even within the limits of a single legislative session. You may count upon my co-operation at every step of the work.

I have not spoken of the broad question of economy in the administration of the state government, an economy which can probably be effected only through a thorough reorganization upon business principles, the familiar business principles so thoroughly understood and so intelligently practiced by Americans, but so seldom applied to their governments. We make offices for party purposes too often instead of conducting our public business by the organization best adapted to efficiency and economy. I have not dwelt upon the subject in this address because it is a very complicated one, hardly suited for brief exposition, and because so obvious a requirement of honest government needs hardly more than to be mentioned to be universally indorsed by the public. I shall try to point out to you from time to time the means by which reorganization and economy may be secured with benefit to the public service.

But there is a subject which lies a little off the beaten track to which I do wish to turn for a moment before I close. The whole country has remarked the extraordinary rise in the prices of foodstuffs in recent years and the fact that prices are successfully maintained at an intolerably high level at all seasons, whether they be the seasons of plenty or of scarcity. We have a partial remedy at our own hand—a remedy which was proposed to the legislature last year by Mr. James of Hudson county, but which is said to have been defeated in some questionable fashion in the last hours of the session. It is estimated that most of the food supply of the people of northern New Jersey and half the food supply for New York city is kept in cold storage warehouses in Hudson county, awaiting the desired state of the market. There is abundant reason to believe that it is the practice of dealers to seclude immense quantities of beef and other meats, poultry, eggs, fish, etc., in cold storage in times of abundance in order that the price of these indispensable foods may be kept high and the foods dealt out only when the market is satisfactory for that purpose even if the meats and eggs have to be kept for years together before being sold. Figures said to be actually of record foot up almost incredible totals of the amounts thus held in waiting, running into millions of heads of cattle, of sheep and lambs, of hogs, millions of pounds of poultry and hundreds of millions of eggs.

The result is not only to control prices, but also to endanger health, because of the effect of too long storage upon the foodstuffs themselves and because of the deleterious effects of taking them out of cold storage and exposing them to thaw in the markets. The least effect is loss of nutritious quality; the worse, the generation of actual poisons by decay and even putrefaction.

No limit at all is put upon this abuse by law, and strong influences are brought to bear by interested parties to prevent the enactment of remedial legislation. Indictments were brought in Hudson county, but there was no sufficient law to sustain them. A bill was introduced, as I have said, at the last session of the legislature, but was, I am told, after lingering a very long time in the assembly committee, mysteriously lost when called up for passage in the senate during the last hours of the session. I earnestly urge that the legislature take up this important matter at the earliest possible time and push some effective law of inspection and limitation to enactment. It would give me great pleasure to sign a bill that would really accomplish the purpose.

The People's Servants.

We are servants of the people, of the whole people. Their interest should be our constant study. We should pursue it without fear or favor. Our reward will be greater than that to be obtained in any other service—the satisfaction of furthering large ends, large purposes, of being an intimate part of that slow but constant and ever hopeful force of liberty and of enlightment that is lifting mankind from age to age to new levels of progress and achievement and of having been something greater than successful men. For we shall have been instruments of humanity, men whose thought was not for themselves, but for the true and lasting comfort and happiness of men everywhere. It is not the foolish ardor of too sanguine or too radical reform that I urge upon you, but merely the tasks that are evident and pressing, the things we have knowledge and guidance enough to do, and to do with confidence and energy. I merely point out the present business of progressive and serviceable government, the next stage on the journey of duty. The path is as inviting as it is plain. Shall we hesitate to tread it? I look forward with genuine pleasure to the prospect of being your comrade upon it.

A good stove is as essential to the housewife as a watch to the business man—both must be dependable. The woman who prides herself on baking the best bread in town can't do justice to her skill if she uses a range that won't hold its heat and that doesn't warm all sides of the oven uniformly.

"BEAVER" Ranges are fine bakers because the right amount of heat reaches every part of the oven at the right time. The "BEAVER" has stood the test of time. It has baked the bread and cake for the children and for grandmother, too. The "BEAVER" is a range of quality in the fullest sense of the word. ## DR. VAN DYKE ANXIOUS TO LEAVE PRINCETON

Finding that the trustees of Princeton University were loath to act on his resignation presented last November, Dr. Henry Van Dkye, Murray professor of English literature, issued a statement Saturday night. This was really a supplement ot the formal resignation. In it Dr. Van Dyke says that his letter of November 24 was "laid on the table" and it "is the first time that a letter of mine has had this particular experience." He then adds:

"But there is nothing about the reasons for resigning alluded to in my letter which is not perfectly clear and simple. Here they are as they were given in my letter of 1907: 'While this action will not take from Princeton anything that she needs or wants, it will add to the available resources of the university, the endowment which was contributed by the generosity of my friends when I came, and will leave me free to pursue my work in other directions.'

"That letter of 1907 was withdrawn in deference to certain requests and opinions, which seem to be sufficient for the purpose. I am deeply attached to Princeton as my alma mater, but you see, she can easily spare a mere writer of books and teacher of reading from her notable faculty. Future plans I have none, except to go on writing for my living and preaching for love in an atmosphere friendly and favorable to that kind of work."

In giving out this statement, Mr. Van Dyke said:

"I have been sitting on the back porch with my boys (the students) long enough, and if I pick up my knapsack and get out I guess it will not make very much difference."

Dr. Van Dyke has gone to Wilkes-Barre, Pa., to install Rev. James M. Farr as pastor of the Presbyterian church in that city.

17-Year Locust is Due.

This is the year for the seventeen year locusts to appear. They are due along the Atlantic seaboard from Virginia to New York, but Dr. Raymond E. Ditmars, curator of the Bronx Zoo, said Sunday that he believed the Hudson River would check the pest. "I do not believe the swarms this year will cross the Hudson," said Mr. Ditmars. "The locusts will probably migrate north as far as Nyack, while the interior of New Jersey will be hit the heaviest in this neighborhood. I think the damage that will result will not be of any great moment."

ANNUAL MEETING Y.W.C.A

New Members Elected to Board of Managers Last Night.

AN EDUCATIONAL EXHIBITION.

Membership Now Largest in Its History—Lectures and Classes Are Largely Attended.

More than 200 persons were present at the Young Women's Christian Association's meeting last night, and enjoyed the evening spent in hearing reports of the work done during the past year. It has been undoubtedly the best year in the history of the association and the actual good accomplished cannot be measured in dollars and cents.

Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, president of the association, read a report in which the work was outlined for the past year. It showed improvement all along the line. In closing Mrs. Mead thanked the clergymen, doctors and others who had so materially assisted in the association's welfare. All the friends who had in any way contributed to the success were remembered and thanked.

Mrs. James R. Joy, treasurer, reported the total receipts for the year as. $6,681.58; expenditures, $6,433.53; balance on hand, $248.05. Miss Lillian Force chairman of the membership committee, reported a total of 784 members. Mrs. Foster as chairman of the House committee told the excellent work of the committee and said that transient guests had been cared for on 648 nights.

Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, chairman of the finance committee, thanked friends for their generous support, mentioning the legacy left to the association by Mrs. Edgerton. She said that her committee expected to continue the conservative financial policy of the preceding year and to run the association finances in every way consistent with the growing needs of the work. They appreciate the support of the public and hope for a continuance of it in the great work being done among the girls and women of Plainfield.

In the educational department of the association great progress has been made. Mrs. William D. Murray under whose direction this work is carried on, said that there were 193 girls enrolled in the classes which include domestic science, art and English. There were on exhibition many fine examples of the sewing, embroidery and other classes in the rooms last night, all of which elicted favorable comment. Of the religious work there was much to be said. At present there are 148 girls enrolled in the Bible classes and the ten-cent Bible class suppers have been well patronized.

There has been an average attendance of 55 at the vesper services on Sundays. These services have had the advantage of splendid speakers and a tremendous interest has been shown by those who have attended. During the year the members have contributed $105 for the association's representative in India. It was announced that Mrs. Richard Boardman had taken the chairmanship of the Personal Service committee and Miss Dorothy Fleming of the Missionary committee.

Miss Margaret McCutchen, chairman of the physical culture department, told of the splendid work being done along physical lines. Especial stress was laid upon the efforts of Dr. Clara Krans in preparing the lecture on "First Aid Nurse" and by Miss Margaret Mosher for her efficient manner of conducting the actual physical development of the girls.

Reports were also received from the Junior department. There are 91 girls in this department with two clubs who hold weekly meetings for recreation and sewing.

The nominating committee announced through the chairman, Mrs. Lowry the following for election to the Board of Managers; Mrs. Margaret McCutchen to succeed Mrs. William Taliaferro; Miss Isabel Ashwell to succeed Miss Elsie Goddard; Dr. Clara Krans to succeed Miss Edith Smalley and Mrs. Henry Fullerton to succeed Mrs. Walter McGee. Those re-elected to the board were, Mrs. James R. Joy, Miss Ethel Titsworth, Mrs. Rufus P. Lincoln and Miss Harriet Mattison.

Greetings from the Berlin, Germany conference were brought by Miss Elizabeth Dodge who attended the conference last April. Miss Helen Barnes a guest of the association for the evening, spoke briefly upon the great world wide awakening in all departments of endeavor.

FIRE DEPARTMENT HAS A BUSY AFTERNOON

The city fire department was called out on box alarms twice within an hour at noon today. The first call came at 12:33 and was for a blaze in the house at 316 East Seventh street, owned by Mrs. William A. Wheeler and occupied by Mrs. Lena M Hellstrom The flames originated under a stairway in the basement, but from what cause is unknown, unless it be that a spark blew in from some paper that a workman was burning in the backyard.

The department was first notified by telephone and Chief Doane responded with the chemical engine. On his arrival the flames had made such progress he had a general alarm sent in. The fire worked its way into the kitchen and then by means of a stairway to a room on the second floor. A hydrant stream was used downstairs and the chemical in the upper part. The damage is placed at about $500 covered by insurance.

The various appartuses had just returned to their respective houses at 1:24 when the second alarm came in from box 63. A Philadelphia flyer locomotive had passed by emitting sparks all the way from Berckman street to Netherwood station, leaving a trail of fire for that distance Back fences, chicken coops, woodsheds and dry grass all began to blaze and the entire neighborhood experienced a mild panic. The firemen scattered over the territory and extinguished the flames before any great damage resulted.

TYPO PRESIDENT TELLS OF UNION'S BIG GROWTH.

About 200 delegates from those cities and towns in the State where there are typographical unions met in Elizabeth Sunday and were addressed by James M. Lynch, the international president. Mr. Lynch spoke of the growth of the union, saying that it had 56,000 members in the United States and Canada. He added that there were 25,000 printers in towns where unions existed who were not affiliated and he urged that these be brought into the organization.

Flattering reports were made by the unions in New Jersey.

The following officers were elected:

Assemblyman Cornelius Ford, Hoboken, president; L. W. Niles, Somerville, vice-president; Kenneth W. Forbes, Jersey City, secretary; H. W. Thomas, Plainfield, treasurer; Edward Fitzsimmons, Hoboken, sergeant-at-arms.

After the meeting the Elizabeth union entertained the delegates.

IRISH DANCERS COMPETE

Colleens and Laddies Jig and Reel for Prizes at Harvest Home Affair.

CROWD APPLAUD CONTESTANTS.

Entire Affair Given up to Dancing as it is Done in the Emerald Isle —Robert McCormack the Originator.

Irish jigs, reels and horn-pipes of the kind danced at Donnybrook and Tipperary were exemplified for the benefit of the younger generation that never saw Erin at the Irish harvest home given in Sebring's Hall, last night. It was a wide departure from the usual dances locally popular but the result was even more successful than the promotors had anticipated. The place was crowded as it never has been before and almost every one remained until the last strains of the pipe resounded. Many of the attendance came from out of town places as far either way as Elizabeth and Somerville.

The idea of giving a typical Irish dance originated with Robert Mc Cormack. The "owld folks" had been protesting that they never had a chance at the waltz and two step affair that predominate and he decided to give them a night when they could "hit the floor" as they had been taught on the "owld sod." To begin with, he discarded the orchestra accompanient and substituted proper music. Patsy Trohey on the Irish pipes; Tim O'Rourke with the flute and Dan Donnelly handling the fiddle. Their program included "Mrs. McLeod's reel," "The wind that shakes the barley," "Where the River Shannon flows" and other Emerald airs.

An occasional waltz or two was given for the younger folks but primarily the intention was only for sets and reels. Every time a tune was struck up, it found response in the hearts and heels of colleens and laddies who knew how to step. Those who didn't took kene delight in watching, now and then applauding a particular intrical move.

The general program was carried on until 10:30 when the floor was cleared for the event of the evening, a prize step dance such as is held on the barn floor at the Irish fairs. Men and women took part and separate awards were made for each. The contestants were allowed three minutes each for a jig and a horn pip, the number of steps, grace and ability being counted. The judges were John Buckley, of Jersey City; James Cunniffe and Robert Murray, of this city. Mr. Murray is an authority on step dancing as seen in Scotland and appeared in Hielan' kilts to carry out the effect. The spectators gathered about the improvised platform and if applause is any criterion, enjoyed every movement of the contest. At the close the prizes were awarded as follows: Women's first, Miss Kate Fritzgerald; second, Miss Mary Mack; third, Miss M. Duffy; men's first, Michael Mahoney; second, Charles Martell; third, Stephen Boland. The judges decision conformed with the popular selections.

Following the prize dance, the sets were resumed and continued until two o'clock. The proceeds from the affair will be donated to the building fund of St. Joseph's church.

The success of the affair is largely due to the efforts of Robert McCormack, who acted as general chairman of the committee of arrangementsand his assistant Miss Elizabeth Day. The reception committee was composed of Bernard Smith, Edgard Conshea, Miss Molly McCann, Miss Catherine Conshea, Miss Nellie Burke, Miss Kate Cassidy, Miss Delia McGerry; entertainment committee, Cornelius D. Guinee, John McLaughlin, John Hurley, Thomas Farrell, Miss Delia Bowen, Miss Annie Bowen, Miss Kate Milken, Miss Annie Milken and Miss Kate Keogh. The floor managers were Joseph F. McCann and Thomas Phelan.

Long Lease for Kurtzman.

Charles Kurtzman, the furrier, signed a lease for a long term of years yesterday for the same store, 178 East Front street, he now occupies on East Front street in the Pittis block, where he has been located for two years. Since coming here Mr. Kurtzman has built up a good trade reputation and announces that in the future he will conduct his business along the same lines thus continuing to merit the support of the public. His experience in his chosen line have made him familiar with the tastes of Plainfield women and he purposes always to have these tastes in mind when preparing his stock. He makes a specialty of storing furs during the summer.

MISSIONARY ADDRESSES OF CONGREGATIONALISTS

Under the auspices of the Women's Association of the Congregational church a missionary meeting was held yesterday afternoon. Mrs. F. G. Mead, president, and Mrs. John Gray Foster, treasurer, of the McAll Auxiliary, upon invitation of the association, appeared and gave the women a delightful talk concerning the McAll work in Paris, and making a strong appeal for greater support on the part of the women of Plainfield.

These talks were followed by the beginning of the course of study in Turkey, led by Mrs. Charles L. Goodrich. She presented a synopsis of the ancient history of Turkey, giving an account of the recent revolution in that country. At the close of her talk a letter of unusual interest received from the church missionary, Rev. Dr. Cornelius H. Patton, who is in Constantinople, described the first session of the new parliament, which he attended. This letter was daetd December 8, last, and is considered to be about the latest information concerning affairs in Turkey which has been received by the churches here. The letter tended to arouse greater interest in the work that the Congregational church is doing in Turkey.

HERE'S A SAD CASE; AN APPEAL IS MADE

An urgent case of need where some money must be quickly raised has been brought to public notice today which is we are positive will meet with a ready response from the charitably inclined. The case is an unusually sad one.

William H. Hall, with his wife and six children has been residing at 14 Regent street, North Plainfield. The man is one of those unfortunates who scarcely make both ends meet. He has been working in Hand's brickyard until that closed down some time ago. One of his children, a boy died on December 6 and another on January 6 while his wife passed away at Muhlenberg Hospital last Sunday. Her remains are in the morgue awaiting burial. The funeral expenses of the two children are still unpaid and Hall has no money.

Two prominent business men of this city when they heard of these circumstances yesterday, at once notified the undertaker to proceed with the burial of Mrs. Hall. They ask those who can afford to to contribute small amounts through The Daily Press. The money will be used to liquidate the expenses of all three funerals and any amount left over will be judiciously expended in necessaries for the unfortunate family.

Mr. Hall is not a drinking man. He is just unforunate enough to not be able to get along. The Daily Press has already received $10 from sympathizers.

JACK MARTIN SIGNS TO PLAY WITH HIGHLANDERS.

The signed contract of Jack Martin, the local baseball player, was received yesterday by Secretary Davis of the New York American League, and he has been assigned to the first squad to go south early in February. Martin was recommended to Manager Chase of the Highlanders, by Scout Irwin, who feels assured that the Plainfielder will make good.

Martin played with the Clinton Avenue Baseball Club, afterward the Plainfield Baseball Club, for several years, and last summer played regularly with the New Brunswick Sunday team, as well as at Paterson. He is rated as a first-class infielder, usually covering short, and his batting is good.

"Anti-Saloon League Sunday."

"Anti-Saloon League Sunday" will be observed in this city next Sunday, when many pulpits will be occupied by speakers representing that movement.

Entertained "500" Club.

Mrs. U. G. Tingley entertained the members of the Tuesday 500 club at her home on Grandview avenue last night. The evening was spent in playing cards and with a program of vocal and instrumental music. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. Margaret Wilson and Mrs. A. E. Force and Messrs. U. G. Tingley and A. E. Force.

Week of Prayer Services.

The second of the series of week of prayer services will be held at the Netherwood Reformed church, this evening at 8 o'clock. The subject will be "Repentance," and the pastor, Rev. Royal A. Stout, will be in charge.

GEORGE R. WYCKOFF SUCCUMBED LAST NIGHT

George R. Wyckoff, aged 47 years, for many years a well-known carpenter in this city, died last night at his home, 216 East Second street, following a long illness from dropsy and kidney trouble. Mr. Wyckoff was born in Bound Brook, but had resided here for the past twenty-five years. He was a member of the Carpenters' Union and was well-known among the members of the craft.

Besides a wife, Mr. Wyckoff is survived by four brothers, William, Lewis, Charles and Edward Wyckoff; also two sisters. The funeral will be held at the late residence, on East Second street, Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and Rev. J. W. Musson, pastor of the Temple Baptist church, will officiate.

FORTY-FIRST CONCERT OF Y. M. C. A. ORCHESTRA

One of the best of the long series of concerts by the Y. M. C. A. orchestra was given last night in the auditorium. Between the two parts of the splendid program a silver collection was taken which netted a goodly sum.

The assisting soloists were Mrs. Guy Bender, soprano; Miss Emily Moffett, 'cellist, and Whitney Frazee, cornetist. To one who has followed the fortunes of Mr. Korff's splendid aggregation of instrumentalists it is plain that each succeeding concert is an improvement over the preceding one. The orchestral work was superior to any of the band's previous work, showing a conscientious study and appreciation of the works interpreted.

Miss Moffett, ably accompanied by her sister, Miss Laurabelle Moffett, disclosed a warm and dignified sentiment in her numbers and was compelleld to respond to hearty encores. Mrs. Bender was as usual pleasing in her songs and Mr. Frazee evoked applause with his splendid work with his favorite instrument. It was a successful concert.

JUDGE ULRICH CHOSEN EMBASSY ASSN. MEMBER.

The American Embassy association has informed former Judge John Ulrich, of this city, that he has been placed upon the National Advisory committee of the organization. This association is composed of some of the most influencial citizens of the country and is of a non-partisan character. It believes with President Taft that the choice of ambassadors for important posts should not be limited merely to men of great wealth th and that all ambassadors should look alike and that it reflects on the dignity of the Nation for one ambassador to live in a palace and for his successor to live in a flat.

As the Nation believes in appropriating annually over $200,000,000 preparation to keep on a hostile footing with other nations that we can well afford to expend three million dollars to promote friendship with them. A bill is now before Congress introduced by Congresman Lowden of Illinois, providing for the purchase or election of Embassy Legation and consular buildings and which the association is very vitally interested in and will lend its influence in the direction of its passage. Judge Ulrich has accepted the honor.

TEMPORARY WELL BEING SUNK AT PUMPING STATION.

A temporary sunp well is being sunk by contractor, J. A. Christie, of Newark, on Monroe avenue near the pumping station in connection with the additional sewer connections which are being made. The well is for the purpose of draining the permanent one and is three feet lower than the latter. Pumps not less than 8" centrifugal will be used on this well.

The mild weather and the absence of snow has made it possible for the street men to clean out the surface outlets and do other work in connection with the surface drainage. The street committee will probably meet within a week or two to go over the work done during the past year on the city streets and roads.

John Ritter.

John Ritter, aged 70 years, a well known resident in the Washington Valley section, died yesterday afternoon at his home on the Valley road, after a long illness. The funeral service will be held tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock from St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield, where a solemn high mass of requiem for the repose of his soul will be offered. The burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

PRESENT DAY PEOPLE OF MEXICO DESCRIBED

An interesting paper on "The Present Day People of Mexico" was presented by Miss Margaret W. McCutchen at the meeting of the Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church held yesterday afternoon in the lecture room. After describing the Federation of twenty-seven states, not unlike our own United States, Miss McCutchen told of the varieties of temperature in the country the result of the varied altitudes of the hills and plains and described the Indian villages as not unlike in appearance those of Africa. The haciendas or estates, she said, were almost like feudal castles with always a church, a priest, a doctor and 1,000 or more peons or slaves. The ignorance and indolence of this class, which is also indisputable, she gave as a serious obstacle to progress in Mexico. They were born in debt, lived in debt and left an inheritance of debt to their children, she said. The women of Mexico were described by Miss McCutchen as secluded, lovers of home and devoted to their religion. The Indian women in their adobe cabins, she said, had a life of hard realities and generation followed generation, bare-headed, barefooted and empty minded.

The Mexican religion was spoken of as paganism baptized. The work of Protestants was begun in 1856 and after more than forty years there are not more than 25,000 members of the Protestant church. A hopeful sign of the times, she said, was the broader-minded attitude of the Roman Catholic church toward the efforts of Protestant workers.

Mrs. Reuben Knox, the president, added some items gleaned during a two months' stay in Mexico last Spring.

A devotional service led by Mrs. Frank W. Jones, preceded the paper.

Colored Independents to Meet.

DEATH COMES SUDDENLY TO MRS. CHARLES TAYNOR

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Taynor, wife of Charles Taynor, died suddenly at her home on Chatham street, early this morning. She retired in her usual health and spirits early last evening, but became ill at 1 o'clock. Dr. Zeglio was sent for but she died soon after his arrival. Heart trouble is assigned as the cause.

Mrs. Taynor was thirty-six years old and had lived in this city practically all her life. She was a member of Warren chapel and an active worker. Beside her husband, she is survived by five children, Mrs. Horace Adams, of Johnson avenue, is a sister. The funeral arrangements have not been made.

BUILDING OPERATIONS NOT MANY JUST NOW

Building operations in this city have not been very brisk since the beginning of the year, but it is likely that if the present weather continues favorable a perceptible increase in this activity will be noticed. Most of the work now going on or in contemplation is in the nature of alterations to buildings.

Walter F. Emmons, of Leland avenue has been issued a permit for the erection of a frame garage on his property and Frank Spalluto, of George street, will build a 25 foot barn on his property near Hill street.

Mrs. C. B. Lawrence, Jr., will build a three story and basement brick dwelling on Hillside avenue for which Alexander Milne has the contract. Nathan Bloom, of New York city, will erect three frame dwelling houses, each for two families on West Fifth street near Plainfield avenue. Mr. Bloom will do his own work.

U. B. Crane has had plans accepted for a meeting room to be built at 303 Filmore avenue. This will be a frame structure 28 by 42 feet and only one story. Frank McInerney and L. T. Titsworth will build for Dr. O. B. Whitford on Lenox avenue a two-story frame dwelling, and Enoch Berry will build for himself a two-and-a- half story frome dwelling on Leland avenue near East Second street. Permits for all the above have been issued by Building Inspector T. O. Doane.

GEORGE H. FROST TO TOUR SOUTH AMERICA.

Accompanied by George S. King, of Philadelphia, George H. Frost, of Watchung avenue will leave New York on Saturday on the Mamburg-American liner "Blucher" for a tour of South America. The itinerary includes Punta Arenas, Sandy Point, the southern most city in the world, and a trip up the Pacific coast to Valparaiso.

From Chile the globe trotters will cross the continent on the trans-Andean railway and will visit Buenos Aires and Rio Janeiro, taking the steamer from the latter port for home. Messrs. Frost and King will be gone about three months. The southern trip will take the travelers through the Straits of Magellan.

Charles Fury Administrator.

Charles J. Fury, formerly of Somerville, and at one time part owner in a business in North Plainfield, but now proprietor of the Hotel Sterling, Trenton, was appointed by Surrogate Bullock yesterday as administrator of the estate of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Fury. The application for the naming of an administrator was made by the heirs. No inventory of the estate has yet been filed with the surrogate. Mrs. Fury died last week without leaving a will.

Missionary Societies Meet.

The women's home and foreign missionary societies of the First M. E. church, held their monthly meetings in Vincent chapel, yesterday, the foreign society meeting in the morning and considering the subject "Western Women in Eastern Lands," and the home society considering the subject of "Cuba," in the afternoon. There was a large attendance of women at both meetings.

Home Missionary to Speak.

Miss Miriam Woodberry, one of the most interesting representatives of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Congregational church, will address the mid-week meeting at the Congregational church, this evening at 8 o'clock. She will present certain phases of the home mission work.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF 'UNCLE JESSE' HATFIELD

The funeral services of Jesse B. Hatfield, who died suddenly on Monday morning, were held at 11 o'clock this morning at the late home on West Front street and were largely attended by relatives and friends. The double affliction which has come to this home in the recent death of Mrs. Hatfield on Thursday last and which was followed so closely by the death of Mr. Hatfield, has aroused deep sympathy for the family.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, of which Mr. Hatfield was an attendant with his wife, conducted the services. He read appropriate Scripture selections and made a short address in which he referred impresively to the double affliction which had befallen the home, conculding his remarks with a fervent prayer in which he invoked the divine blessing on the bereaved ones.

There was a large number of beautiful floral tributes from relatives and friends, which almost covered the bier. The burial was in the family plot at Somerville, beside the remains of Mrs. Hatfield, who was interred on Saturday. The pallbearers were B. F. Tallamy, H. B. MacDonald, H. H. Taylor, George Cornwell, Frank Weed and Charles Johnson.

NEWARK CONFERENCE WEDNESDAY MARCH 28

The annual session of the Newark Conference of the M. E. church, will be held in Central M. E. church, Market street, Newark, commencing Wednesday, March 29, and continuing for one week. Bishop H. W. Warren, of University Park, Colorado, will preside at all sessions of the conference. While it is a little early to make any predictions, it is the belief that no changes will be made in the city or borough, invitations having been extended to the local Methodist pastors to remain another year.

There is a report, however, that many changes will be made, especially in the northern end of the State. The members of the centenary church Newark, where Rev. Dr. C. L. Mead was formerly pastor, were anxious for his return, but in the meantime he has gone to Baltimore, which is part of another conference, and there is little likelihood of his returning. He left Hoboken to go to Baltimore. His transfer to Hoboken caused such a stir in the Newark church. It was at the time that Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea was transferred from the First M. E. church, to the pastorate held by Dr. Mead.

FUNERAL OF RAILROAD VICTIM HELD TODAY.

The funeral of Patrick Gorman, one of the two men killed on the Central railroad at Westfield, Friday, was held in St. Rose's new Catholic church, Short Hills, this morning. A solemn requiem mass was said by Rev. J. T. Brown in the presence of relatives and friends. Burial was made in the church cemetery in the family plot of his aunt, Mrs. Boyle.

The identification of Gorman was made at Cole's undertaking rooms in this city by Mrs. Boyle and a sister. He made his home in both Summit and Milburne at various times and was well know in both places. He had been to Westfield in search of a position when the accident occurred that resulted in his death.

Sears Fell From Cart.

Ellsworth Sears, 28, colored, fell from a train at the east bound station last night, shortly after 6 o'clock and was so badly bruised that it was found necessary to sew up several cuts in his face. Patrolman McGinley found Sears and took him to the office of Dr. Pittis where his wounds were dressed. He was afterwards locked up on a charge of intoxication. Sentence was suspended by Judge DeMeza this morning on Sear's promise to leave town.

Book Party at Y. W. C. A.

MARTINE MUCH BETTER

Senatorial Candidate, Suffering With the Grip, Greatly Improved Today.

SMITH IS STILL IN THE RACE.

A Conservation Estimate Gives Martine 22 Votes—Necessary to Elect on Joint Ballot of Legislature 41.

James E. Martine, candidate for United States Senator to succeed John Kean, who has been ill with an aggravated case of grip for ten days, is much improved today. He spent the morning reading Gov. Wilson's inaugural address and going over his mail. It is expected that he will able to be about again next week.

That James Smith, Jr., is still in the race for the United States Senate became apparent yesterday when there was engaged for him in the Trenton House a suite of ten rooms, which he will occupy with his lieutenants, including James R. Nugent, chairman of the Democratic State Committe, beginning next Monday, when the Democratic majority of the Legislature will have another conference preparatory to the vote for Senator. The houses will vote separately on Tuesday with a joint session on Wednesday. The Smith forces are declaring that they will be able to control the Democrats in caucus and will win in the joint session.

Both houses of the Legislature met for a few minutes yesterday morning and adjourned until next Monday evening, remaining only long enough to attend the inauguration. Martine's forces are also predicting the election of their man on the first ballot. They declare the lawmakers will not be bound by caucus action. An impartial estimate gives Smith a slight lead at this time, although he is by no means sure that he can hold all of his men in line. His main object now is to force the lawmakers into caucus, but if he fails to do this the fight will be an open one in joint session. This estimate was prepared by a conservative observer of political affairs.

For Smith—Senator Low, of Ocean; Senator Cornish and Assemblyman Cole, of Warren; Senator Price and Assemblyman Mayer, of Sussex; Assemblymen McGrath, Ford, Cristie, James and Martin, of Hudson; Assemblymen Backes, Brown, Bracken, Phillips, Leveen, McGowan, Shalvoy and Macksey, of Essex; Assemblyman Matthews, of Hunterdon; Assemlymen Ramsey and Booraem, of Middlesex; Assemblyman Taylor, of Monmouth; and Assemblymen Burke and Bunn, of Morris. Total—24.

For Martine—Senator Gebhardt, of Hunterdon; Senator Silzer, of Middlesex; Senator Osborne and Assemblymen Milod and Butler, of Essex; Assemblymen Egan, Donnelly, Simpson, Davidson, Kenney and Griffith, of Hudson; Assemblyman Lafferty, of Gloucester; Assemblyman Walsh, of Mercer; Assemblyman Steltwolf of Middlesex; Assemblyman Goran and Hendrickson, of Monmouth; Assemblyman Newman, of Ocean, Asemblymen Brodhead and McLaughlin, of Union. Total—22.

Doubtful—Senator Johnson of Bergen; Senator Fitzherbert, of Morris; Assemblyman Agnew and Senator Filder of Hudson; and Asemblyman Balentine, of Essex. Total—5.

Necessary to control caucus, 26; necessary to elect on joint ballot, 41.

Mr. Balentine has said he would not vote for Smith, but is not committed to Martine. Some of Smith's men are claiming some of the votes here accredited to Martine and the Martine people claim some accredited to Smith, notably Senator Johnson, of Bergen, and Assemblyman Bunn, of Morris. Few of the Legislators have actually committed themselves to Smith or Martine, and it would not be surrpising to see most of them break away and bring about the selection of a compromise candidate. It takes 26 votes to control the Democratic caucus and 41 votes to elect on joint ballot and at this time neither Smith nor Martine have enough votes to control either.

The two houses will vote separately on Tuesday and jointly on Wednesday.

The senatorial situation was enlivened yesterday at Trenton by an impassioned interview with "Jim" Nugent who is the chairman of the Democratic National Committee, but who is more particularly the chairman of the Smith committee. Mr. Nugent is usually a very calm individual, but yesterday something moved him to cut out diplomatic verbiage and to speak apparently, al-

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

No musical comedy in recent years has won the unanimous praise of the New York critics in such unqualified measure as has "Madame Sherry," which Woods, Frazee and Lederer are now presenting in New York, at the New Amsterdam, and which will be seen here in all its beauty and completeness at The Plainfield theatre, next Monday night. Adapted from a French original which has charmed Paris, Berlin, Vienna and London for the past three years, "Madame Sherry" has been revised for the American stage by Otto Hauerbach and given a most enchanting musical setting by Karl Hoschna. "Madame Sherry" sparkles like champagne and its twenty-two musical numbers are positively infectious in their idea and manner of construction, and its cast numbers such musical comedy celebrities as Edward M. Favor, Tessa Kosta, Edith Sinclair, R. Emmett Lennon, Emilie Hayward, Joe Smith Marba and the wonderful chorus which has been the talk of Manhattan ever since the opening night. A special orchestra and massive scenic production further add to the attractiveness of "Madame Sherry."

CHRISTIAN FIELD

The Men's Conference Bible class will have charge of the prayer-meeting at the First Baptist church this evening.

"My Grace Sufficient for Thee," will be the subject of the mid-week meeting at the Crescent Avenue church this evening.

The quartet choir of the Crescent Avenue church will sing the "Stabat Mater," next Sunday evening. Organist Russell will be in charge of the musical service.

Danish Lutheran services will be held this evening in the Swedish Pilgrim church, West Sixth and New streets, with preaching by Rev. N. H. Nyrap, of Brooklyn.

A sacret concert will be given at Bethel chapel on Sunday evening, January 29. No charge will be made for admission but a silver offering will be received at the door.

A drama entitled, "Uncle Horace from California," will be rendered at Bethel chapel tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock under the management of the Circle of Earnest Workers.

THE I. G. H. CIRCLE ELECTS OFFICERS AND HOLD A SOCIAL.

The I. G. H. Circle of the West End Tabernacle at a meeeting held Monday afternoon elected these officers for the coming year: President, Miss Bertha Stryker; vice-president, Miss Florence Weaver; secretary, Miss Irene Mattox, treasurer, Miss Laura Miller.

The circle has a membership of nine girls, who meet every Friday afternoon at each others homes for sewing. The following are members: The Misses Bertha Stryker, Frances Weaver, Irene Mattox, Laura Miller, Mary Norgard, Anna Nuss, Maude Lancaster, Beatrice Weaver and Carrie Pennoyer. Following the business Monday, a soccial time was enjoyed.

Theatre Entertainment Pleases.

The high-class motion picture and musical entertainment being offered at The Plainfield theatre, matinee and evening, on days when regular plays are not booked, is being enjoyed by persons who are especially fond of this sort of entertainment. The pictures are the best obtainable and are operated in a way that entirely eliminates the flickers usually noticed in such pictures. The musical part of the entertainment is also of a high-class, including violin, and vocal selections and dramatic readings. Two shows are given each day, at 3 and 8:20, with a change of pictures every day.

Swedish Church Elects Officers.

Officers were elected at the annual meeting of the Swedish Lutheran church, held Monday night, as follows: Financial secretary, E. J. Hellstrom; cashier, E. Fosmand; trustees, E. Johnson, C. Johnson, Christopher Hove, Albert Gilbert; deacons, Messrs. Martinson, E. Johnson and John Getjetlesen. It was decided to raise the salary of the pastor, Rev. John Estlund; also that of the organist, Miss Svendensen. The church has a membership of fifty-eight and there are sixteen children in the Sunday-school.

News and Notes

GOLF.

The United States Golf Association, at its annual meeting, not only declined to bar the centre-shafted clubs, but went further and specifically amended the association bylaws so as to permit it hereafter to legislate for itself, if it so wished. It also voted to confer with St. Andrews with a view to establishing a general code in all countries. This is a distinct victory for Leighton Calkins, of this city. In discussing the subject, Mr. Calkins says:

"Full reports from the annual meeting of the United States Golf Association, held last Saturday in Chicago, show that broadminded and liberal views prevailed, and an important step has at last been taken in the direction of practical uniformity in the playing rules. Not only did the delegates decline to accept the St. Andrews rule barring centre-shafted clubs (which nearly every delegate admitted to be absolutely unnecessary and uncalled for by any existing evil and also vicious in principle, as tending toward standardization), but they amended the bylaws of the association which now require us to play according to the St. Andrew rules. The new bylaw requires us to play according to the revision of 1908, enacted and adopted jointly by St. Andrews and by the United States Golf Association, except so far as such revision may hereafter be amended by us. In other words if St. Andrews should amend the rules in any particular in the future the change would not apply in this country. No rules will hereafter obtain in this country unless affirmatively adopted here.

"In addition a resolution was adopted directing the appointment of a special committee to confer with St. Andrews on the subject of the adoption of a universal code of rules for the whole world. The resolution went further and authorized this committee to confer with any recognized national golf association in any country. The powers of the committee are broad and are aimed at the establishment of a uniform code of rules, which all prominent countries and associations shall have a voice in enacting.

"It was not felt that St. Andrews could reasonably decline to co-operate with us in this. Nor was it felt that we would be disloyal to the best interests of a world-wide game to take this stand. While fully recognizing all that St. Andrews has done in the past, the United States Golf Association has decided to put up to St Andrews in a courteous and dignified manner that it cannot continue to legislate by itself and hope to have other countries follow blindly without voice or vote.

"It is hoped that St. Andrews will recognize our earnest desire to establish uniformity and will fall in line. If not, as many of us have been pointing out, the responsibility for separate codes in different countries will be their, not ours.

"St. Andrews has for decades and almost for centuries borne the brunt of the work. St. Andrews is now asked to share its responsibility with other countries where the game is played and loved in equal measure. Admitting the great service performed by St. Andrews in the past, the United States Golf Association proclaims itself unable longer to abide by any rule in the making of which it has had no opportunity to be heard.

"It is now going to be up to St. Andrews to agree to the principle of 'mutuality of obligation" as regards the playing rules of the game, or to decide to paddle its own canoe. I believe the sentiment in Great Britain will support our decision and that St. Andrews will fall into line. In any event, we have now the respect not only of half a million of golfers in this country but all other countries where golf is played.

"Fortunately the arguments of those who felt that this action would be ungenerous or disloyal to an ancient organization did not appeal to our association. There was practically no support given to that argument. It was conceded to be a practical question for us to decide for ourselves, without excitement and as becomes gentlemen and golfers."

BASEBALL.

King Cole, the young twirler who pitched the only game the Cubs won during the world's series, believes that he has found a way to put a new twist on the horsehide. Cole says:

"I discovered an odd freak of a curve just after the season closed. I practised it in Bay City and found out that it might be turned into a winner. I thought that if I could perfect it it would be just the sort of a delivery to baffle hitters who take a mighty swat at the ball, like Hans Wagner and Sherwood Magee.

"I'm going to work hard during the spring training trip and perfect that curve, so as to have it in good working order by the time the season opens. Then you watch and see."

Home papers of Messrs. Magee, Wagner, Konetchy, Mitchell and Doyle please copy. They may be interested.

Johnny Evers' broken leg seems to have mended in record time, and he expects to go South with the team instead of joining it later in the season. He is credited with the following statement in a letter written at his home in Troy:

"I expect to be back in Chicago about January 20, and I hope the weather is cold, so I can go skating. I have been doing that here and find it is helping my ankle. The stiffness is going out and I feel sure now that I will be ready to play ball in the first game."

ways apparently, "from the heart out."

"This situation all goes to show the strength of a newspaper campaign," Mr. Nugent said. "There wouldn't be anything to it if it was not for the newspapers.

"I want to tell you something. Who is responsible for Wilson? When they stood up in the convention and all were for Katzenbach they bowed to the will of one old man, James Smith, Jr., and chose Wilson."

Mr. Nugent was much wrought up. He clinched his teeth and fists and looked as if he really meant what he said.

Alleged Thieves Freed.

Mrs. Joseph Wagner, John Busse and William Cashman, alleged coal thieves arrested by Central Railroad detectives on Monday were given suspended sentences of $10 each this morning by City Judge William G. DeMeza. Busse pleaded guilty to trespassing on the railroad company's property, but denied stealing as did Mrs. Wagner. Cashman said he stole a ride on a coal train from Lincoln to Plainfield, but did not steal any coal nor did he see any stolen by Busse. He saw Mrs. Wagner picking up coal along side the tracks.

NEW LIBRARY BOOKS WELL WORTH READING

Following are some recent books in the Public Library:

Chesterton, Gilbert Keith—What's Wrong With the World. "There is no need to say that Mr. Chesterton's latest books is in its main features a counterpart of its predecessors. In no part of his book is Mr. Chesterton more startling, and to our mind more convincing, than in the chapters on education."

Galsworthy, John—Justice. "This play is an arraignment of both the English divorce laws and prison system. Its literary qualities are such that it reads far better than many plays that were never intended for the stage."

Garrison, Wendell Phillips—Letters and Memorials.

Hamilton, Allen McLane; intimate life of Alex. Hamilton. "The grandson of this conspicuous figure among a group of distinguished men has here undertaken to reveal all that could possibly be learned from extant documents of the real and intimate life of Alexander Hamilton."

Johnston, Sir Harry Hamilton—Negro in the New World. "The title of this volume of 500 pages hardly does justice to the author's comprehensive and thorough treatment of his subject. The book is of great interest and permanent value; and it should be in the library of every American who cares to devote a little thought to one of the largest problems of today."

Lincoln, Joseph Crosby—Cape Cod Ballads and Other Verse.

Littell, John Stockton—Historians and the English Reformation.

Lucas, Edward Verrall—Second Post. "This addittion to 'The Friendly Library,' is a supplement and companion to the anthology of letters called 'The Gentlest Art.' It is so vital and fresh in its choices that one reads it continuously as if it were a logically fashioned whole, instead of a mass of parts."

Maeterlinck, Maurice—Mary Magdalene; a three-act Biblical play.

Moody, William Vaughn—Faith Healer; a drama.

Murat, Caroline—My Memoirs. "Autobiographical reminiscenses which the Princess Caroline Murat, granddaughter of the grsat Murat, King of Naples, left unpublished at her death in the summer of 1902. Many famous persons appear in he pages, notably the Empress Eugenie, whom she seems to have cordially hated, and the Emperor himself, whom the kindred blood in her veins made her judge more kindly."

Platt, Thomas Collier—Autobiography of Thomas Collier Platt.

Sharp, Elizabeth Amelia—William Sharp.

Taft, William Howard—Presidential addresses and state papers from March 4, '09, to March 4, 1910. "This second volume of Mr. Taft's addresses and writings covers the period from his nomination to the end of his 13,000-mile tour of the country. They comprise a discussion of those larger questions so vital to the nation including his opinion on such matters as Cuba, the corporation tax postal savings banks, the tariff, conservation, Alaska, the Phillippines, the Republican party's promises."

Tanner, Amy E.—Studies in spiritism. "Dr. G. Stanley Hall, with whom Dr. Tanner worked in her investigation of spiritualism, in his introduction to this volume declares it to be a searching, impartial, critical estimate of the work of the psychical research society and expresses his belief that it will bring into vogue a sounder and more scientific attitude toward spiritualism. She gives special attention to the work of the English society on telepathy and related phenomena, and draws from her evidence the conclusion that telepathy and spirit communication are unsupported by any valid evidence."

Villard, Oswald Garrison—John Brown, 1800-1859. "The author believes that fifty years after the Harper's Ferry tragedy, the time is ripe for a study of John Brown, free from bias and prejudice. He has left no stone unturned to make the smallest detail accurate and the result is a minute and judicial biography, which will appeal to all students of this thrilling and dramatic period in American history."

Women's Educational and Industrial Union—Vocations for the trained woman.

Wright, Chester Whitney.—Wool Growing and the Tariff.

PETROLEUM AND PLANTS.

The influence of petroleum on the growth of plants has been studied by Kryz. The experiments were made by watering plants by stramonium and plantain with water containing 10 per cent. of petroleum. No injurious effects were produced unless the patroleum accumulates in considerable quantities about the roots of the plants—that is to say, when it is possible for petroleum to be absorbed by the roots. The application of petroleum makes the soil physically and physiologically dry, and the plant gradually perishes in consequence of the difficulty of absorbing water. No directly poisonous action of petroleum, like that which it exerts on animal organisms, occurs in the case of plants. The fermentation of solutions of sugar is not checked by an addition of petroleum.

HERE AND THERE.

The bashful young man with the rocking chair habit apologized when he found himself sliding across the room, chair and all, toward the girl on the piano stool. Several times during the evening that involuntary trip across the carpet was repeated, to the evident distress of the shy young man. The next time he called the young man picked out the same animated chair, but though he rocked vigorously it remained rooted to that spot. Presently he bent down and examined the rockers. Each rocker had been bandaged in two different places with wide velvet ribbon. The girl on the piano stool smiled.

"I put those velvet bands on the rockers for your benefit," she said. "You can rock just as easily with them on, but your chair will not budge half an inch all evening."

"Ah, thanks," said the young man, but he eyed the intervening distance disapprovingly, and it seemed doubtful if he appreciated her efforts to make him comfortable.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Don't shout till you're out of the woods. Don't say that this is the mildest winter you ever experienced, for the winter isn't ended yet. In point of fact, however, the season thus far has been remarkable. It started in vigorously like the "good old-fashioned" kind. Snow fell in November; it was cold, the ground was frozen away down deep, the streams were low and the water was scarce. Then came rains and such mild, melting weather that some were in doubt whether our Christmas was "green" or not. The frost went out of the ground almost completely. The New Year set in with three days of rain and high temperature, and since then there have been but five days when the mercury fell below the freezing point, and even then only a few degrees. Of course the croakers shake their heads ominously and say "Oh, but we'll have to pay for all this! The spring will be very backward, etc.," but the optimist takes each day as it comes and says every nice one is clear again. Still, the weather has been unusual, for this midwinter season.—Newark Evening News.

EMPLOYER'S LIABILITY COMMISSION REPORTS

The State Commission appointed by Governor Fort to investigate the question of employers' liability has filed its report with the Governor. The report was given to the Legislature this week.

The commission thinks that an act which would compel an employer to compensate an injured employee, without regard to the fault or negligence of the employer, would be unconstitutional.

"We are advised," says the commission, "that as the law stands at present the employer is held liable only when the accident is due to his fault or neglect. He is not liable (a) when the negligence of the employee contributes to the accident; (b) when the accident is due to a natural risk of the employment; (c) or when the accident is due to the act of a fellow servant."

After discussing the theories of contributory negligence, assumption of risk and comparative negligence in a technical manner, the commission states, that, while it is unable to recommend the passage of a compulsory compensation act, it recommends the elective act which is included in the bill which was given in the newspapers last week. This is done with the expectation that such an elective act will be generally accepted by both employers and employes for the following reasons:

By the employer, first, because his liability is limited and he is thus relieved of the danger of harassing law suits for excessive damages; second, by reason of the abrogation of the defenses of "assumption or risk" and "fellow servant," the position of the employer who refuses to accept the elective law will be less tenable; third, because he can, in a large measure, add the expense to the cost of manufacture and recover it in his selling price; fourth, because he can readily insure his liability.

By the employe, first, the practical certainty of settlement in accordance with the schedule, as against the uncertainty of an appeal to common law rights; second, promptness in settlement, as against the "law's delay;" third, all of the money is paid to the injured person, or his dependents, as against the heavy attorney fees and court expenses of the suit at law.

The commission was appointed by Governor Fort pursuant to a Senate resolution passed last year, and is composed of William B. Dickson, of Montclair; J. William Clark, of Newark; John T. Cosgrove, of Elizabeth; Samuel Botterill, of East Orange; Colonel Walter E. Edge, of Atlantic City, and E. K. Mills, of Morristown.

MOTOR CLUB BANQUET AT NEWARK MONDAY

Festoons of incandescent lights stretched beneath the great blue canopy that will completely conceal the roof of the big First Regiment Armory, Newark, will shed a brilliant glow over many exhibits at the coming Newark Automobile Show, which is now just one month away, as it opens on February 18, a month from today. The lighting effect during the week's motor cer exhibition will be far more beautiful than enything that has hitherto been attempted in the last three local shows, and upward of 6,000 incandescant lamps will be utilized, in addition to the big culster of lamps that already provide illumination for the armory.

The streamers of lights will be festooned from the present clusters, about midway between the domed roof and the floor, and they will extend in every direction so that there will be no dark spots in the coming show. A row of lights will be placed beneath the balcony for the entire distance around the building, and more lights will be used on top of the bandstand and on the columns marking the aisles. In addition there will be a special lighting scheme carried out on the exterior of the structure, and the whole Sussex avenue approach will be brilliantly illuminated throughout show week.

A dozen 250-watt Tungsten lamps will be suspended at intervals on the Jay and Hudson streets sides of the building and these will make the section light for a considerable distance. It is estimated that nearly 10,000 lamps will be used for the combined lighting within and ouside.

Arrangements were practically completed for another feature that will be attractive last week, and it is expected that Stewart Carl Schweltzer, of the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club, will conduct a restaurant in the large squad room on the fourth floor of the armory. Steward Schweltzer plans to carry out his portion of the show along the broadest lines.

The New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club will also have a large room on the main floor of the armory set aside for club mebers, and here motorists from all sections of the State will be hospitably received. Secretary A. B. LeMassena is making the arrangements for the club headquarters, which will probably be the large library near the entrance to the show floor.

At the present time practically every motorcar dealer in New Jersey has been heard from regarding space to show their cars, and nearly all have their applications on file with the show management. As the allotment of spaces is scheduled for the later part of the coming week, the date is January 27, it is desirous that all who are intending to show cars shall send in their applications before next Wednesday, in order to avoid confusion at the last minute. An effort is being made to have all aplications on hand before Saturday and wherever possible this is desirous. Practically 90 per cent. of the dealers in the State as well as a number from New York, have already bid for space and when the allotments are made next week, it is probable that every standard make of cars sold in this State will be included in the exhibit.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The local Holy Name Society and the A. O. H., have decided to give a fair the first three nights following Easter Sunday for the benefit of St. John's church. The preliminary committee have been appointed and permanent ones will be named within the near future. The fair will be held inJunior Hall and will be on a par with those of previous years.

Patrick Tharpy, of the borough, was one of the contestants in the prize Irish jigs and reels at the Irish harvest home in Plainfield, last night. He made an excellent showing and was vigorously applauded at the finish but failed to receive an award. There were twelve dancers competing.

The flashlight pictures of the "Madame Jarley" groups taken at the close of the entertainment, last week, have been developed with exclint results. Charles Johnsou was the photographer.

Mrs. Charles Dineen and daughter, Miss Margaret Dineen, visited sister Oandine at Atlantic City from Saturday to Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Apgar are still confined to their home by illness. The condition of the former has been quite serious.

Adam Dealaman, of Washington avenue, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia, is now somewhat improved.

BOUND BROOK ITALIAN FLEECED OUT OF $900

Salvatore Finelli, who keeps a tailoring shop on Main street, Bound Brook, is still hunting about the State and New York city for two dapper looking Italians who fleeced him out of $900 last week by a very old game. Finelli had not been reading the newspapers, or he would not have fallen such a ready victim.

The two strangers arrived in Bound Brook last week and at once went to the tailoring establishment. One of the men was measured for a suit of clothes, and during the course of a conversation, the stranger stated that he had lived there during the building of the Port Reading Railroad through Bound Brook about twenty years ago. He said at that time there was an Italian boss on the road who was in the habit of accepting a bonus of $5 from each workman he employed. The boss, he said, moved to Virginia and amassed great wealth, and his conscience troubling him, decided to pay back, if possible, the money he took from the workmen. In order to do this it would require about $2,700. Finelli and the two strangers to produce $900 apiece.

They wanted to make Finelli custodian of the money to pay it out as the claimants would come to his store, and he was to advance $900 and for it the strangers would give him $1,000 which they appeared to have in a package.

Finelli went to the Bound Brook National Bank and drew the $900 and went directly to Newark where, with the other men, he placed his money in a package. He was requested to ascertain the time a train would leave for Virginia. He returned shortly and was handed a package supposed to be the one of $1,000. On some pretext, the strangers excused themselves to return in a few minutes, but they never came back.

Finelli's suspicions were aroused at the length of time it took the men to return, and on opening the package discovered he had a lot of worthless paper.

Finelli is a hard working tailor who had just begun to prosper in Bound Brook, doing a nice business and his friends greatly sympathize with him in his loss. He went to New York and in the Rogues gallery recognized a picture of one of the swindlers who had just served a term in Sing Sing.

MEANS TO START SENATE IN OPERATION ON TIME.

President Ernest R. Ackerman, of the Senate, intends that the upper branch of the Legislature shall meet on schedule time.

There was a grasp of surprise in the Senate chamber Monday night, when the President brought the gavel down with a bang at 8 o'clock and announced that the Senate would be in order. The gavel also seemed surrpised at being so summarily used, for its head flew off and narrowly missed the heads of the hard-working clerks in front of the President's desk.

"I am going to be a stickler for beginning on time," said President Ackerman. "There is no reason why time should be lost by delay."

New Market Firemen Elect.

The New Market volunteer fire department held its annual meeting Monday night, and elected the following officers: President, A. G. Nelson; vice-president, B. DeWitt Giles; financial secretary and treasurer, C. T. Rogers; recording secretary, W. T. Piddington, Jr.; chief, C. T. Rogers; first assistant, H. J. Piddington; second assistant, Alex Stillwaggon; foreman, G. A. Schenck; first assistant, F. F. P. von Minden; second assistant, George Harris; stewart, H. Y. Krooks; representative to F. R. A., R. F. P. von Minden. The reports showed the department to be in a flourishing condition.

Defended Her Well.

Defending her old oaken bucket at one of the oldest wells in the town, Mrs. Aramatha Zeliff, of Ward street, Hackensack, was arrested Monday. She was held under $100 bail to appear at a hearing next Wednesday. For a year or so the Hackensack Board of Health has been crusading against wells and many a relic has disappeared of late. Mrs. Zeliff paid for tests of the water in her well and claimed the results were satisfactory to her. For many years the water has been drunk and no cases of illness have been reported. While the police were taking the woman to Justice Bratt's office a gang of men closed the well.

Operation a Success.

A telegram has been received from Mrs. Charles E. Herring, stating that her husband, Rev. Dr. Herring, successfully underwent an operation at Rochester, Minn., yesterday, and the prospects for an early recovery are excellent. The operation was performed by Mayo Brothers, celebrated surgeons at Rochester.

Harvard Students Number 6,279.

The Harvard University catalogue for the year 1910-1911, just issued, shows a total enrollment at that institution of 6,279, a decrease of twenty-nine from last year's figure. The formation of a New Jersey Club is now under way.

Argument in the Standard Oil case was closed and that in the corporation tax case was begun in the United States Supreme Court.

Dr. W. G. Furness, of New York, was killed by being crushed under his automobile, which he drove into the elevator shaft of a garage.

Lewis Nixon pointed out that nothing in existing treaties prevented the fortification of the Panama canal, which he regarded as a necessity.

The will of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy was admitted to probate in Concord, N. H.; the proceeding does not effect suits of her son and adopted son.

Congress.—Senate: Mr. Purcell attacked Secretary Ballinger; the postal subvention bill was considered. House: The army appropriation bill was passed.

WANTS FINAL CLOSING OF LAWMILL AT 3 P. M.

The only thing that enlivened a dull session of the Senate Monday night was the presentation by Senator Silzer, of Middlesex, of a joint resolution fixing the hour for adjournment on the last day of the session at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Speaking for immediate passage of the resolution, Senator Silzer said its object was to destroy the ridiculous fiction whereby, though adjournment was fixed by rule for 3 p. m., the session lasted until 3 next morning through the simple procedure of stopping the clock. He said that its passage now would make it plain from the very start that there was to be no all night session at the close.

Senators Prinse and Frelinghuysen said that they both liked the idea contained in the bill, but thought it ought to lie over for a few days. It was accordingly held up, the yeas and nays, on a motion to suspend the rules, showing a strict party vote.

Collector is Accused.

Roselle's Borough Auditor John Gazey, in submitting his report for 1910 to the Borough Council Monday night, recommended that the council have the bonding company that furnished Borough Collector Abram L. Burdick's bond send an expert here to go over the collector's work. The auditor declares that while Mr. Burdick was honest he was incompetent, and had not completed his work, in his opinion. Former Mayor Louis V. Ebert closed his administration by accusing Mr Burdick with being incompetent.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 22, 1911.

Topic.—The law of prevailing prayer.—Mark xi, 20-25. (Led by the prayer meeting committee.) Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

There are many elements combined that enter into prevailing prayer, and yet when they are all looked at from the proper standpoint they all merge in some way into the one great law of prevailing prayer—Faith. Perseverance is a characteristic of prevailing prayer. Jacob received an answer to his prayer because he persevered. All night he wrestled with the angel of God, declaring, "I will not let thee go, except thou bless me." But what led Jacob and what leads others to persevere in prayer until they are successful but faith? If their faith were weak they would soon give up if the answer did not speedily come. But their unwavering faith in God and their firm belief that He can and will answer their petition keeps them praying until the answer comes.

Humility is a trait of prevailing prayer. Yet humility succeeds through faith. The faith of the humble in a great and all powerful God, though they themselves be poor and unworthy, leads God to grant their requests. The publican could not even raise his eyes to heaven; but, in spite of recognizing his own sinfulness, he had faith in God's willingness to pardon even the greatest of sinners, and after his humble prayer to Almighty God "he went down to his house justified." God had heard his prayer and been "merciful to him, a sinner."

Righteousness is another factor in prevailing prayer. The man who lives a righteous life has the ear of God, yet upon what is his righteousness based except faith? He lives right because he believes in God. If he did not believe he would pay no attention to what would to him simply be called the laws of God. If there were no God there could be no laws of God. Therefore the fact that he keeps God's laws proves his faith in God and is the cause of his success in prayer.

The law of faith as the supreme element in prevailing prayer is constantly emphasized by Christ. On His way to Bethany one evening He cursed a fig tree because it gave signs of having fruit, but had none. The next morning on His return with His disciples the tree was dead. Peter called this fact to his attention, and Jesus replied, "Have faith in God." Faith in God is the supreme element of answered prayers. Moreover, this success in prayer depends not upon the quantity of the faith, but the quality. It is only real, genuine faith that prevails. There must not be a doubt in the heart. "Therefore I say unto you," says Christ, "what things soever ye desire when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." This is the law laid down by Christ, and His laws never fail in the fulfillment.

Having a Standard.

Many Christians fail and many Endeavor societies come far short of the success they might achieve because they do not set before themselves a standard of excellence to be reached with God's help and within a definite limit of time.

The trouble with most of our good resolutions is their vagueness. They have no definiteness and no time limit; hence they are as spineless as an angleworm.

"I will pray more," we say to ourselves, and we congratulate ourselves inwardly on a good resolution, which always remains only a good resolution, a resolution which merely weakens instead of strengthens our characters, as do all such resolutions that are not carried out.

But if we had said, "I will, beginning tomorrow morning and for at least one month, spend fifteen minutes in prayer and meditation," we should be much more likely to carry out our resolve, and at the end of the month we should be ready to join the Comrades of the Quiet Hour and perhaps make our resolution effective for the rest of the year and the rest of our lives as well.—Francis E. Clark, D. D.

For a Missionary Committee.

Every missionary committee that does not wish merely to fight the air should have a definite policy or aim. Mrs. Florence Bussert outlines one in the Ohio Endeavorer as follows:

First.—To bring every member face to face with the great commission (Matt. xxviii, 18-20).

Second.—To encourage definite daily prayer for missions.

Third.—To have a missionary meeting the last Sabbath of each month, to be planned at least two months in advance.

Fourth.—To ask for four missionary sermons during the year.

Fifth.—To secure a definite amount for missions (not too small), to be secured during the year by systematic giving.

Sixth.—To have the library books and magazines read and studied.

Seventh.—To conduct mission study classes.

Eighth.—To have one missionary social each year.

Ninth.—To do home work, such as hospital work, personal evangelism, visitation.

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

The Great Conservation Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

INTRODUCTION.

My Dear Mr. Garland — You have been kind enough to let me see the proofs of "Cavanagh, Forest Ranger." I have read it with mingled feelings—with keen appreciation of your sympathetic understanding of the problems which confronted the forest service before the western people understood it and with deep regret that I am no longer officially associated with its work, although I am as deeply interested and almost as closely in touch as ever.

Western frontier people faced life with a manly dependence on their own courage and capacity which did them and still does them high honor. Some of them were naturally slow to see the advantages of the new order. But now that they have seen it there is nowhere more intelligent, convinced and effective support of the conservation policies than in the west. The establishment of the new order in some places was not child's play. But there is a strain of fairness among the western people which you can always count on in such a fight as the forest service has made and won.

The service contains the best body of young men I know and many splendid veterans. It is nine-tenths made up of western men. It has met the west on its own ground, and it has won the contest—an episode of which you have so well described—because the west believes in what it stands for.

I have lived much among the western mountain men, differed with some of them and worked with many of them. Sometimes I have lost, and sometimes I have won, but every time the fight was worth while. I have come out of it all with a respect and liking for the west which will last as long as I do. Very sincerely yours,

GIFFORD PINCHOT.

CHAPTER I.

THE DESERT CHARIOT.

LEE VIRGINIA WETHERFORD began her return journey into the mountain west with exultation. From the moment she opened her car window that August morning in Nebraska the plain called to her, sustained her illusions. It was all quite as big, as tawny, as she remembered it, fit arena for the epic deeds in which her father had been a leader bold and free.

Her memories of Roaring Fork and its people were childish and romantic. She recalled vividly the stagecoach which used to amble sedately, not to say wheezily, from the railway to the Fork and from the Fork back to the railway in the days ten years before when she had ridden away in it a tearful, despairing, long limbed girl and fully expected to find it waiting for her at Sulphur City, with old Tom Quentan still as its driver.

The first hint of "the new west" came to her by way of the pretentious Hotel Alma, which stood opposite the station at Sulphur and to which she was led by a colored porter of most elaborate and kindly manners.

This house, which furnishes an excellent dinner and an absorbing mixture of types both American and European, was vaguely disturbing to her. It was plainly not the old time west—the west her father had dominated in the days "before the invasion." It was indeed distinctly built for the tourist trade and was filled with all that might indicate the comfortable nearness of big game and good fishing.

Upon inquiry as to the stage she was amazed to hear that an automobile now made the journey to the Fork in five hours and that it left immediately after the midday meal.

At 2 o'clock, as the car came to the door, she entered it with a sense of having stepped from one invading chariot of progress to another, so big and shining and up to date was its glittering body, agleam with brass and glowing with brave red paint.

As they whirled madly down the valley the girl was astonished at the transformation in the hot, dry land. Wire fences ran here and there, inclosing fields of alfalfa and wheat where once only the sagebrush and the greasewood grew. Painted farm houses shone on the banks of the creeks and irrigating ditches flashed across the road with an air of business and decision.

For the first half hour it seemed as if the dominion of the cattleman had ended, but as the swift car drew away from the valley of the Bear and climbed the divide toward the north the free range was disclosed, with few changes save in the cattle, which were all of the harmless or hornless variety, appearing tame and spiritless in comparison with the old time half wild broadhorn breeds.

Lee began to wonder if she should find the Fork much changed—her mother was a bad correspondent.

Her unspoken question, opportunely asked by another, was answered by an old woman passenger. "Oh, Lord, yes! Summer tourists are crawlin' all over us sence this otto line begun. 'Pears like all the bare armed boobies and crosslegged little rips in Omaha and Denver had jest got to ride in and look us over. Two of them new hotels in Sulphur don't do a thing but feed these tenderfeet. I s'pose pro-hi-bition will be the next grand stand play on the part of our town lot boomers. We old cowpunchers don't care whether the town grows or not, but these hyer bankers and truck farmers are all for raisin' the price o' land and taxin' us quiet fellers out of our boots."

The girl was brought back to the vital phases of her life by the harsh voice of one of the men. "Lize Wetherford is goin' to get jumped one o' these days for sellin' whisky without a license. I've told her so too. Everybody knows she's a-doin' it, and what beats me is her goin' along in that way when a little time and money would set her straight with the law."

The shock of all this lay in the fact that Eliza Wetherford was the mother to whom Lee Virginia was returning after ten years of life in the east, and the significance of the man's words froze her blood for an instant.

The young fellow on the back seat slowly said, "I don't complain of Lize sellin' bad whisky, but the grub she sets up is fierce."

"The grub ain't so bad; it's the way she stacks it up," remarked another. "But, then, these little flybit cow towns are all alike and all bad, so far as hotels are concerned."

Lee Virginia, crimson and burning hot, was in agony lest they should go further in their criticism.

She knew that her mother kept a boarding house, and, while she was not proud of it, there was nothing disgraceful in it. Happily, the conversation turned aside and fell upon the government's forest policy, and Sam Gregg, a squat, wide mouthed, harsh voiced individual, cursed the action of Ross Cavanagh, the ranger in the district above the Fork. "He thinks he's secretary of war, but I reckon he won't after I interview him. He can't shuffle my sheep around over the hills at his own sweet will."

The young fellow on the back seat quietly interposed. "You want to be sure you've got the cinch on Cavanagh good and square, Sam, or he'll be a-ridin' you."

"He certainly is an arbitrary cuss," said the old woman. "They say he was one of Teddy's rough riders in the war. He sure can ride and handle a gun. 'Pears like he thinks he's runnin' the whole range," she continued, after a pause. "Cain't nobody so much as shoot a grouse since he come in, and the supervisor upholds him in it."

Lee Virginia wondered about all this supervision, for it was new to her.

Gregg, the sheepman, went on: "As I tell Redfield, I don't object to the forest policy—it's a good thing for me; I get my sheep pastured cheaper than I could do any other way, but it makes me hot to have grazing lines run on me and my herders jacked up every time they get over the line. Ross run one bunch off the reservation last Friday. I'm going to find out about that. He'll learn he can't get 'arbitrary' with me."

The old woman chuckled. "'Pears like you've changed your tune since '98, Sam."

He admitted his conversion shamelessly. "I'm for whatever will pay best. Just now, with a high tariff, sheep are the boys. So long as I can get on the reserve at 7 cents a head—lambs free—I'm going to put every dollar I've got into sheep."

"You're going to get thrown off altogether one of these days," said the young man on the back seat.

Thereupon a violent discussion arose over the question of the right of a sheepman to claim first grass for his flocks, and Gregg boasted that he cared nothing for "the dead line." "They've tried to run me out of Deer Creek, but I'm there to stay. I have 10,000 more on the way, and the man that tries to stop me will find trouble."

The car was descending into the valley of the Roaring Fork now, and wire fences and alfalfa fields on either side gave further evidence of the change in the land's dominion. Down past the courthouse, refurbished and deeper sunk in trees, Lee Virginia rode, recalling the wild night when 300 armed and vengeful cowboys surrounded it, holding three cattle barons and their hired invaders against all comers, resolute to be their own judge, jury and hangman. It was all as peaceful as a Sunday afternoon at this moment, with no sign of the fierce passions of the past.

The car crossed the Roaring Fork and drew up before two small shacks, one of which bore a faded sign, "The Wetherford House," and the other in fresher paint, "The Wetherford Cafe." On the sidewalk a group of Indians were sitting, and a half dozen slouching white men stood waiting at the door.

As Lee went past the hotel porch her heart beat hard and her breath shortened. In a flash she divined the truth. She understood why her mother had discouraged her coming home. It was not merely on account of the money. It was because she knew that her business was wrong.

What a squalid little den it was! How cheap, bald and petty the whole town seemed of a sudden! Lee Virginia halted and turned. There was only one thing to be done, and that was to make herself known. She retraced her steps, pulled open the broken screen door and entered the cafe. It was a low, dingy dining room filled with the odor of ham and bad coffee. At the tables ten or fifteen men, a motley throng, were busily feeding their voracious jaws, and on her left, behind a showcase filled with cigars, stood her mother, looking old, unkempt and worried. The changes in her were so great that the girl stood in shocked alarm. At last she raised her veil. "Mother," she said, "don't you know me?"

A look of surprise went over the older woman's flabby face—a glow which brought back something of her other self, as she cried, "Why, Lee Virginny, where did you come from?"

The boarders stopped chewing and stared in absorbed interest, while Virginia kissed her blowsy mother.

"By the Lord, it's little Virginny!" said one old fellow. "It's her daughter."

Upon this a mutter of astonishment arose, and the waiter girls, giggling, marveling and envious, paused, their platters in hand, to exchange comment on the newcomer's hat and gown. A cowboy at the washing sink in the corner suspended his face polishing and gaped over his shoulder in silent ecstasy. Some of the men came forward to greet her, and, though she had some difficulty in recognizing one or two of them (so hardly had the years of her absence used them), she eventually succeeded in placing them all.

At length her mother led her through the archway which connected the two shanties, thence along a narrow hall into a small bedroom, into which the western sunset fell. It was a shabby place, but as a refuge from the crowd in the restaurant it was grateful.

Lize looked at her daughter critically. "I don't know what I'm going to do with a girl like you. Why, you're purty—purty as a picture. You were skinny as a child. I'm fair dazed. Great snakes, how you have opened out! You're the living image of your dad. What started you back? I told you to stay where you was."

"I had no place to go after Aunt Celia died. I had to come home."

"You wrote they was willing to keep you."

"They were, but I couldn't ask it of them. I had no right to burden them, and, besides, Mrs. Hall wrote me that you were sick."

"I am, but I didn't want you to come back. Lay off your things and come out to supper. We'll talk afterward."

The eating house, the rooms and hallways were all of that desolate shabbiness which comes from shiftlessness joined with poverty. Everything on which the girl's eyes fell contrasted strongly with her aunt's home on the Brandywine—not because that house was large or luxurious, but because it was exquisitely in order and sweet with flowers and dainty arrangement of color.

She regretted bitterly that she had ever left her eastern friends. Her mother, in truth, showed little pleasure at her coming and almost nothing of the illness of which a neighbor had written. It was, indeed, this letter which had decided her to return to the west. She had come, led by a sense of duty, not by affection, for she had never loved her mother as a daughter should—they were in some way antipathetic—and now she found herself an unwelcome guest.

With aching head and shaking knees Virginia re-entered the dining room, which was now nearly empty of its "guests," but was still misty with the steam of food and swarming with flies. These pests buzzed like bees around the soiled places on the tablecloths, and one of her mother's first remarks was a fretful apology regarding her trials with those insects. "Seems like you can't keep 'em out," she said.

With desperate effort Lee conquered her disgust. "Never mind; I'm tired and a little upset. I don't need any dinner." Hastily sipping a cup of coffee, she tried hard to keep back the tears, but failed, and no sooner did her mother turn away than she fled to her room, there to sob unrestrainedly her despair and shame. "Oh, I can't stand it!" she called. "I can't, I can't!"

"MOTHER, DON'T YOU KNOW ME?"

She felt herself alien and solitary in the land of her birth.

Lize came in half an hour later, pathetic in her attempt at "slicking up." She was still handsome in a large featured way, but her gray hair was there and her face laid with a network of fretful lines. Her color was bad. At the moment her cheeks were yellow and sunken.

She complained of being short of breath and lame and tired. "I'm always tired," she explained. "'Pears like sometimes I can't scarcely drag myself around, but I do."

A pang of comprehending pain shot through Virginia's heart. If she could not love she could at least pity and help, and, reaching forth her hand, she patted her mother on the knee. "Poor old mammy!" she said. "I'm going to help you."

Lize was touched by this action of her proud daughter and smiled sadly. "This is no place for you. It's nothing but a measly little cow town gone to seed—and I'm gone to seed with it. I know it. But what is a feller to do? I'm stuck here, and I've got to make a living or quit. I can't quit, so I stagger along."

"I've come back to help you, mother. You must let me relieve you of some of the burden."

"What can you do, child?" Lize asked gently.

"I can teach."

"Not in this town you can't."

"Why not?"

"Well, there's a terrible prejudice against—well, against me. And, besides, the places are all filled for next year. The Wetherfords ain't among the first circles any more."

Lee Virginia remembered Gregg's charge against her mother. "What do you mean by the prejudice against you?" she asked.

Lize was evasive. "Since I took to running this restaurant my old friends kind of fell off, but never mind that tonight."

Their Money's Worth.

Two men—an Englishman and a Scotchman—were traveling from Aberdeen to London in the train. They reached Carlisle without exchanging a word, and during the stoppage there the Englishman got out and had some refreshments. When he got back to his compartments he had left he found the Scotchman sitting where he had left him and looking more sour and solemn than ever.

"It's a long wearisome journey," said the Englishman when the train started by way of making conversation.

The Scotchman looked at him with an angry frown.

"So it ought to be!" he replied, frigidly. "It cost fifty-nine and ninepence!"—London Globe.

The second night's play in the match for the pool championship between Alfred De Oro and W. H. Clearwater left the players in the same positions as at the conclusion of Monday night's clash. De Oro played a consistent game without having to have recourse to any sensational shots and at all times held his rival safe.

Clearwater seemed to be suffering from stage fright and would not take any chances on leaving a set up for De Oro who would invariably clear the table after such a break. De Oro made a run of sixty-four which is within twelve of the record.

The final score was De Oro, 408; Clearwater, 321. They will finish the game tonight at Doyle's Academy, in New York.

Various seats of learning and Presbyterian churches, missions and charities are beneficiaries by the will of Mrs. Emily H. Moir, probated in New York Monday afternoon. The value of the estate is not given, but it is expected that appraisals will show it aggregates at least $1,000,000.

To Tuskegee Institute and Howard University similar bequests are made. Harvard, Princeton and Lincoln universities each will get one-twelfth of the estate. The Presbyterian Board of Missions for Freedmen and the Presbyterian Board of Relief for Disabled Ministers will receive $5,000 each, and the Presbyterian Boards of Home and Foreign Missions each one-forty-eighth of the residuary estate.

Mrs. Susan Eastman, of Conway, N. H., who is visiting her daughter, Miss Adie Eastman, of Grant avenue, will leave for home on Saturday morning.

JOHNNY DOVE TELLS OF EARLY EXPERIENCES.

Johnny Dove, the Scotch minstrel, a member of the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels, which appears at the Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight, is a product of New Jersey and was born in New Brunswick. This is Mr. Dove's first visit to Plainfield for several seasons, but it is not likely that he will ever forget his first experience here.

When aspiring to break into the show business he answered an advertisement in a prominent dramatic paper, and secured a position as general comedian with a medicine show that was playing the towns near here. Without knowing what his salary was to be he packed his belongings, which consisted of a ham sandwich and a pair of clog shoes, and started for Bound Brook on foot. Arriving in that village late, hungry and footsore, he learned that the troupe had already left for Plainfield. After eating heartily of his sandwich he started to hoof it on to the show. When he finally caught up with the cure-all entertainers he was about all in, fagged out and nearly famished.

"Whenever I see a cracker," said Mr. Dove, "I always tip my hat to it, no matter what breed it belongs to, for I really believe I owe my life to that inviting morsel. When I arrived in Plainfield on that memorable occasion I was nearly starved and crawled into the theatre on my hands and knees. The first things I espied was at plate of property crackers that the company used in one of the acts. Without waiting to even introduce myself I pounced upon that bunch of dusters and nearly choked to death when one of the crackers got stuck in my throat. After hanging on to the end of a garden hose for some time I regained consciousness, and the next night appeared as "Chimmie Fadden, the Powery Boy," and have been in the show game ever since."

Several of Mr. Dove's friends from New Brunswick have engaged seats for the minstrels tonight and Johnny can expect an ovation when he appears in his famous Scotch specialty.

MARTIN AND DOWD WIN

Judgements Rendered for $300 and $200 Respectively in Damage Suit.

THE JURY OUT 45 MINUTES.

Judge Whittemore's Charge Considered An Excellent One—No Contributory Negligence Shown By Defense Is Decided.

It took but forty-five minutes for the jury of which J. Wiswall Drayton was foreman, in the suits of the F. L. C. Martin Auto Co. and William Dowd against Alfonso Colluci to arrive at a verdict in the district court at 8 o'clock last evening. The trial lasted all day and part of the evening, finally resulting in a verdict of damages for both complainants. $300 was awarded to the auto company and Mr. Dowd recovered judgment for $200.

Fourteen witnesses were examined for the appellants and only four of the defendant. The former included besides those mentioned in yesterday's Daily Press, Chief P. J. Kiely, Roundsman Maurice Higgins and Patrolman Nicholas Meyers of the police force; F. L. C. Martin and William Mazzucca, an employee of the Martin company. For the defense Mr. Collucci, Nick Matarazza, Michael Harrington, an employe of L. V. F. Randolph and Michael Gill, a driver for Roth & Co. These testified as to the positions of the lights on the night that an automobile belonging to the F. L. C. Martin Automobile Co. driven by Carroll Runyon ran into an open trench on East Front street.

Judge Whittemore, who sat in place of Judge William Newcorn, made an admirable address in charging the jury of eleven men. It was said by the many legal lights present that Judge Whittemore's charge was a masterpiece of delicate, but comprehensive language in which the detail of the action before him was made clear to the jury. Walter Hetfield, Jr., and W. S. Angleman represented the petitioners, while Mr. Collucci was defended by Robert Newton Crane and Francis J. Blatz. The defense tried to show contributory negligence as Mr. Collucci claimed that he had arranged the protecting lights so that any careful driver could have avoided the hole that had been dug by his men. No notice of appeal from the judgment was filed yesterday.

COLUMBUS CLUB HOLDS ITS FIRST "LADIES" NIGHT.

The first of a series of "ladies" nights planned by the Columbus Club was given in the clubhouse last night. The attendance was not large owing to a mistake in the issuance of invitation cards but the women present enjoyed an informal program of cards and music. Violin selections were contributed by James Matthews, of New York, and Edward Harding, Jr., sang several solos. The affair was in charge of the house committee.

The club has set apart one night a month for the entertainment of the wives and friends of the members and the programs will be different on each occasion.

The Public Is Invited.

The Chamber of Commerce extends an invitation to everyone interested in the subject to attend the meeting to be held in its rooms, Monday evening, for a discussion of the question of the consolidation of Plainfield and North Plainfield. ## JOS. S. FRELINGHUYSEN IS HEAD OF FARMERS

Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, president last year of the New Jersey Senate and a prominent candidate for the nomination for governor on the Republican ticket last summer, was yesterday chosen president of the state board of agriculture. It is not generally known that Senator Frelinghuysen has a model milk producing plant at his Raritan home, that he is interested largely in breeding horses and that he carries on farming on a large scale, devoting as much time as he possibly can to this phase of his life, the one he admires most, from his large insurance brokerage business.

The selection of Senator Frelinghuysen at the head of the farmers of the state means that for the first time in the history of the board a millionaire has reached that office., and a millionaire who prides himself on being a farmer.

TALKS ON MOUNTAINEERS

Address by Miss Agnes Smith, a Deaconess, on Poor of Virginians.

MRS. T. H. TOMLINSON PRESIDES.

Work Among Illiterate Whites Graphically Told — Fight Against Illicit Whiskey Distilleries.

One of the best attended meetings in the history of the Women's Christian Temperance Union was held at the residence of Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux, Fairview avenue, yesterday afternoon, the principal speaker at which was Miss Agnes Smith, a Plainfield young woman, who as a deaconess of the Episcopal church, has been spending some time as a missionary among the poor whites of the Virginia mountains. Miss Smith's vivid accounts of the conditions among this illiterate and shiftless people electrified her audience.

The meeting was called to order by Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, who after some preliminary remarks introduced the speaker of the afternoon. Miss Smith is a member of Holy Cross church and took a special course of study in New York in preparation for her work in the south. That the efforts of herself and a companion have been appreciated by the people of the region in which they worked cannot be doubted when it is known that the two women may travel absolutely alone without fear where men dare not go.

"One of our men," said Miss Smith, "took a whole day to learn four letters of the alphabet, but he progressed faster as time went on and is now able to read and write. While they are ignorant and shiftless they are people who when once they have promised to do a thing will do it no matter what the cost to them in labor or hurt feelings. One boy who promise d to attend one of our meetings did so at much sacrifice to himself, going without his meals and walking long distances to be able to learn of the Christian life."

Miss Smith told of the work against the moonshiners and the many attempts to put out of business the only licensed distillery in the district. While it has been impossible to destroy the distillery they have had success in preventing the manufacture of illicit whiskey. She told of feuds stopped; the necessity of knowing something about "first aid" and the immorality which prevails; the need of clothing for the poorest of the natives, who are all Americans, and papers, books and illustrated magazines. These latter are used for wall decorations and the former for making their huts secure against the elements. A silver collection was taken and refreshments were served by Mrs. Ira West and Mrs. A. G. Negley. Mrs. C. F. Windham sang two solos accompanying herself on the piano.

DEPUTY INSTALLS IONA COUNCIL'S NEW OFFICERS.

District Deputy Mrs. Anna Robinson, and staff, of High Bridge, visited Iona Council, Degree of Pocohontas, last night, and installed the following officers: Prophetess, Mrs. Henry Angleman; pocohontas, Mrs. Julia Hallard; winonah, Mrs. Mary Meyers; powhatan, Charles F. Meyer, Jr.; keeper of records, Mrs. Charles L. Holstein; collector of wampum, Mrs. Ruey Mattis; keeper of wampum, Mrs. Sadie Bowman. A social hour and dance followed the ceremonies.

The committee appointed at a recent meeting of this council to arrange for the annual masquerade ball, reported that February 15 had been fixed upon as the date and that the affair would be held in Sebring's hall.

CHILDREN ARE NOW CARED FOR Employment Found For Father of Family While Relatives Will Look After Children—$131 Contributed.

The fund which has been gathered by The Daily Press for the family of William H. Hall, of North Plainfield, was closed this afternoon, $131 having been contributed for the relief of the pressing needs. This amount will cover the expenses of the burial of the three children and Mrs. Hall and will leave a small amount to be devoted to the uses of the children.

One of the children has been taken by relatives in Chatham, which leaves three here to be taken care of which will be done. Hall will return to work tomorrow with Ernest Hand.

This sad case was brought to the notice of this paper by David J. Carney and W. L. Smalley, Jr. The instantaneous and generous response of The Daily Press readers was both pleasing and gratifying and Messrs. Carney and Smalley desire to thank the contributors. There was no intention or desire of conflicting with the splendid work of the Charity Organization Society in this matter, but a desire to pay the undertaker's claims and set the man on his feet.

BROOKLYN'S ELKS MEET DEFEAT HERE

The Plainfield Elks' bowling team carried off the honors on Johnny Campbell's alleys, last night, by taking three games in the match with the Brooklyn Elks. The locals took the first game by a score of 892 to 884. The second game was a tie, 879 each, but on the roll off, Plainfield put up a score of 75 to 74 for Brooklyn and won out. They also took the last game by a score of 908 to 823. Causebrook, Blatz, Nash and Stout got in the double century class, and it was largely through their efforts that the Plainfield five was able to defeat the visitors.

Gave Third "at Home."

The third "at home" in the series arranged by Rev. and Mrs. J. O. McKelvey, was held in Warren chapel last night. As on the previous occasion, the affair was informal and included no set program. The Missionary and Aid Society was in charge and a committee from it, of which Mrs. John Higgins was chairman, served refreshments.

Edwin D. VanNest, of Larned, Kansas, is visiting relatives in this city and Somerville. At present he is the guest of his cousin, Mrs. Samuel Kriney, of Mariners place. He will remain in New Jersey for some time.

JUSTICE IS SPEEDY THERE

Tener Tells Y.M.C.A. Banquetters Why Manila's Courts Clean up Dockets.

ON CIVILIZING THE FILIPINOS.

Dr. Fisher and H. W. Herrman Also Speak—J. E. Kimball Acts As the Toastmaster At Annual Dinner.

What the Young Men's Christian Association has done and is doing in the Philippine Islands was the subject of much comment last evening after W. H. Tener, general secretary for the islands had finished his address to the 120 men diners at the annual banquet of the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Tener portrayed in unmistakable language the magnificent results of ten years' work among the natives and other men and said that notwithstanding their great new $120,000 building they were handicapped now for the work. The increased membership made absolutely necessary the acquisition of more buildings and better equipment for the teaching of men.

One of the facts brought out about the conduct of the islands was new to many. In speaking of the law courts Mr. Tener said that the judges were compelled to earn their salaries by cleaning up their dockets before they received their pay with the result that justice is administered with much more alacrity than it is in the United States. Under the beneficent rule of the United States the Philippines had not only grown in value as a commercial nation, but had advanced rapidly in economic, sanitary and religious attributes.

"There is a middle class growing up," said Mr. Tener, "which is forming a sure foundation for a great nation. The children of today are to be the men and women of the future and the principles inculcated in their minds are already bearing fruit. Habits are being changed, customs brought up to the Western standard; evil is being fast eliminated and the Christian influences of our missionaries are working wonders among what was a horde of illiterate and pagan people. In such circumstances, then, it is not worth while to risk a little more for the Kingdom of God?"

Dr. George J. Fisher, of New York, was the first speaker and delivered his address before President Kimball made his report owing to the illness of his little son which necessitated a hasty return to his home. Dr. Fisher said that the great trend of life today is cityward. The old fashioned muscular activity is absorbed by modern inventions and the nation is training its mental and psychic forces at the expense of the physical. He contrasted the health of rural communities with that of cities with the latter in the ascendant because of better sanitary conditions. Forty to 70 per cent. of the school children are defective and some method must be devised to bring about a change. Scarlet fever and diphtheria will disappear in a decade and organic disease will become extinct if we follow proper methods of eating, resting and exercising. He advocated physical righteousness which means that the body must be saved as well as the soul.

President J. E. Kimball commented on the work of the past year, reading extracts from Secretary Parker's report. He complimented Mr. Whitaker, the physical director, for his splendid work and praised the Women's Auxiliary which is doing so much for the creature comforts of the boys. Referring to Miss Zoe Bateman's work among the Italians of this city, he said it was a work whose great results cannot be estimated. From learning the language they have turned to learning Christian living. Strong endorsement of Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews' series of lectures to the mothers of the city followed.

H. W. Herrman, vice-president of the association, made a most impressive appeal for greater expansion of the work in this community through the medium of greater facilities. A new building, withe better ventilation; better plumbing, and more conveniences in every department. At present the ventilation is bad, the plumbing worn out, quarters are cramped in every department and a new building is an urgent necessity. "The very things which should be our magnetic and star attractions the the very things which are against us," he said. A plea was also made for the colored boy and young man. His needs were eloquently outlined. More than $30,000,000 have been given to the association during the past five years by the business men of the country, which indicates the confidence they have in the Y.M.C.A.

Among other things Mr. Herrman

MITCHELL AND SHERMAN SPEAKERS FOR BANQUET

There is a strong probability that among the speakers for the first annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce at Truell Hall, February 13, will be John Mitchell, former president of the Mine Workers' Union, whose oratorical ability is well-known, and P. Tecumseh Sherman, son of the distinguished war general. The committee is busily engaged in completing the list of speakers and it feels confident of securing these two famous men in addition to George W. Perkins, of New York, who has accepted the invitation to speak.

The committee is not sure of the presence of Governor Woodrow Wilson. He is especially busy at this time and having accepted several invitations of a similar character may be obliged to decline the one to come here at this time. The tickets for the banquet are selling rapidly and those intending to be among the guests are advised to speak for their tickets at once.

BIRTHDAY PARTY FOR MISS MINIE TAYLOR

Miss Minie Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Taylor, of 804 Grant avenue, was given a party in honor of her eleventh birthday anniversary at Mt. St. Mary's College, yesterday afternoon. The junior dining hall was tastefully decorated in pink and green and all the little folks in gala array presented a pleasing picture of happy child-like enjoyment. When little Miss Minie applied the taper to the candles which surmounted the birthday cake the hearty round of applause which greeted her, showed clearly the delight of the little ones.

In a few well chosen words, Miss Minie thanked her friends for their kind greeting and the pretty gifts they presented to her. After the dinner all repaired to the gymnasium where the following program was rendered:

MRS. JNO. D. RUNYON DEAD

President of Boice, Runyon & Co., Succumbs After a Long Illness.

WAS SIXTY-NINE YEARS OLD.

One Sister, Miss Anna L. Boice, Survives Her—Funeral Services On Monday Afternoon.

Mrs. Sarah Randolph Runyon, widow of John D. Runyon, died at 3 o'clock this morning at her home on Park avenue, following a long illness from a complication of troubles which became serious last October. Since that time she failed rapidly. During the past few days she was in an unconscious condition and her physician, as well as the family, expected her death at any minute.

Mrs. Runyon, who was born in this city, was about sixty-nine years of age. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. David J. Boice, who were numbered among the oldest and best known citizens of Plainfield. Mr. Boice was for a great many years engaged in the coal and lumber business where VanZandt & Voorhees place of business is now located on Park avenue. Later the present place of business, which was owned by Cook Brothers, was purchased by the firm of Boice, Runyon & Co., and is still conducted by the concern.

Mrs. Runyon was the senior member and president of the corporation of Boice, Runyon & Co., Miss Anna L. Boice, her sister, and Hugh A. Todd being the other members. Mrs. Runyon's husband was for a number of years manager for the concern. He died in 1899, the result of injuries received in an accident in the lumber yard. At the same time, J. D. Spicer, of West Fifth street, was in the yard, and he was seriously injured. He did not recover for a long time afterward.

Mrs. Runyon was a life-long member of the First Baptist church, and prior to her illness a faithful attendant at the services. She leaves one sister, Miss Anna L. Boice, with whom she lived; two distant cousins who reside in Illinois and one cousin in this city. The funeral service will be held Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the late home on Park avenue. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, will officiate.

"Shower" for Miss Spicer.

Mrs. William C. Hubbard, of West Fifth street, gave a "shower" yesterday afternoon in honor of Miss Ida L. Spicer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Spicer, also of West Fifth street, whose marriage to Irving Hunting, of this city, will take place soon. There were about twenty school friends of Miss Spicer present and she received a large number of beautiful gifts. During the afternoon refreshments were served.

In Charge of Child Exhibit.

Charles Powlison, formerly of this city, is the secretary of the "Child Welfare Exhibit" now being held in New York, which is attracting so much attention. Mr. Powlison is a brother to J. A. Powlison, of the firm of Powlison & Jones and Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux, and will be pleased to receive any of his Plainfield friends.

Turn Verein Team Wins.

The basketball team of the Gesang and Turn Verein's turning class and the Hope chapel five played a game in the former's "gym" last night. The chapel team was defeated by a score of 14 to 5. The winning five was composed of Fred Becker, Jr., Ernest Luthman, Neils Luthman, Bert Hansen, Charles Allen and Thomas Mullen.

"Madame Sherry."

Sixty Days For Drunkenness.

Edward Kiely, of the borough, was arrested on Somerset street, yesterday afternoon, for helpless intoxication. He was walking on all fours when the police picked him up. He was arraigned before Recorder Dolliver, this morning, and because of broken promises to the court was sentenced to sixty days in jail.

150 Dozen More Girls' and Misses' 1911 Wash Dresses at Attractive Prices

Last Saturday we placed on sale a wonderful display of girls' colored wash dresses and in spite of the fact that the day was most inclement the sale was wonderful, breaking the record of a year ago by about 250 per cent., and, believe us, we had a wonderful sale a year ago. As success in one venture inspires greater effort for another, we shall endeavor to outdo our last Saturday's business tomorrow. And to this end have replenished the assortment with plenty of sizes of the good sellers and have added many more. PEOPLE SIMPLY ACKNOWLEDGE THEIR INABILITY TO UNDERSTAND HOW SUCH DRESSES CAN BE MADE FOR SO SMALL A PRICE. AND THAT IN ITSELF IS THE GREATEST RECOMMENDATION OF THE UNUSUALNESS OF THE VALUES. One customer said if the real Scotch zephyr dress that we offer at $2.98 were $5.00, she would think it good value, and just such values as this brought the mothers out in the rain last Saturday. 150 dozen more tomorrow—we say nothing of the styles; materials are ginghams, percales and madras, and a number of white lawns at $1, $1.50, $2 and $2.98

News and Notes

BASEBALL.

President Lynch, of the National League, announced the following contracts and releases today: Contracts—With Boston, P. J. Flaherty, Hub Perdue, William McTigue, William Rariden, W. E. Parson and W. J. Sweeney; with Chicago—John F. Kane; with Cincinnati—Joseph A. Berger, T. J. Dougherty and Henry Sovereid; with New York—Clyde H. Fullerton, Harry Rostenhaven, Glover Hartley and George Schlei; with Philadelphia—W. V. Cannell, Ad F. Brennan and H. M. Welchonce. Releases—By Philadelphia to Scranton (N. Y. S. L.), Byron A. Slaughter; by Pittsburg to New Britain (C. S. L.), C. W. Brown.

A new backstop was dug up by the Philadelphia Nationals yesterday. He is Waldo T. Jackley, who played most of last season with the Fairmont, W. Va., club, but who finished the year with Haverhill. Jackley weighs 190 pounds, and with Fairmont made fifty-seven hits out of 161 times at bat, for an average of .354. After Jackley's contract was safe in the Phillies' strong box, President Fogel said that Owner Watkins, of the Indianapolis team was willing to pay $1,000 for the man.

It is not because of a nickname applied to him in a Cincinnati paper when the deal was made with Philadelphia, Eddie Grant has refused to sign a Red contract. More money is demanded by the former Quaker. Grant, who is slated to play third base for the Reds next summer, is still outside the barriers, and it is now frankly stated that he is in full cry after added currency. It was supposed, for quite a while, that Grant was simply biding his time and was in no hurry to sign so early, but a recent letter shows that he is holding out for more money.

President Navin, of the Detroit club, has written to the Philadelphia Nationals suggesting a spring series between the two clubs during their stay in the South. The Phillies train at Birmingham, Ala., while the Tigers are located at Monroe, La., the jump between the two points being a short one. It is quite likely that seven games will be arranged between the two clubs, as the Phillies have no objection to playing these games.

A Japanese baseball team is to invade the United States, landing in San Francisco in April. Games will be played in Chicago, Boston, St. Louis and other cities. The Japanese will return home in September or October. The team will be composed of picked players from the Waseda and Keio universities and other clubs.

Umpire Augie Moran, of Philadelphia, who has officiated in the National and Eastern League organizations, has several good offers for the season of 1911. Two of his best offers are from the Pacific Coast and Three I League.

Pitcher Jenkins, who was drafted by the New York Nationals from the Peking club, of the Illinois-Missouri League, signed his contract with the Giants yesterday. Jenkins was the leading twirler in the Illinois-Missouri League last season.

GOLF.

Although the "war is over" with regard to the much abused centre shafted putter, there continues to exist more or less confusion and uncertainty concerning the recent legislation. Leighton Calkins, who has followed the subject probably as closely as any one, writes as follows:

"I noticed an error in some of the morning papers, in a statement purporting to have come from Secretary Watson, to the effect that the new bylaw of the United States Golf Association has the result of putting into effect in this country, ipso facto, any changes in the rules which St. Andrews may hereafter make. That is exactly what the new bylaw puts a veto on.

"The mistake must have been inadvertent, because of course Mr. Watkins could not have so stated. The important reform accomplished at Chicago last Saturday was to provide that hereafter no rule adopted by St. Andrews shall ever become operative in this country unless we decide affirmatively to adopt it.

"Perhaps golfers do not appreciate that the Schenectady putter was absolutely outlawed in the United States from last September until our annual meeting last Saturday in Chicago. Why? Because our bylaw then provided that competitions should be played in accordance with the St. Andrews rules, except as interpreted otherwise by us. The new bylaw reads that 'competitions shall be played in accordance with the rules of golf as approved by the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews, Scotland, September, 1908, with such amendments and interpretations only as may have been or may be hereafter adopted by the United States Golf Association.'

"In other words, St. Andrews legislation in the future will not immediately become operative in this country. This was the one really important and vital bit of legislation enacted last week. The adoption of the amended clause on form and make of clubs operates to bar anot-and-out mallet; but great care was taken not to include anything remotely approaching a Schenectady. Even the title to or rules must now be changed. Up to last week they read: 'The Rules of Golf as Approved by the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews, September, 1908, and as Amended by the United States Golf Association, February 17, 1909.' The date, February 17, 1909, is now struck out. We now accept nothing from St. Andrews except the revision of 1908, which we helped to make and which we affirmatively adopted ourselves.

FAVORS USE OF ROD IN SCHOOL.

"As a New Jersey teacher, I have to obey the law on corporal punishment, but I do not believe in it," was a statement made by Dr. Charles S. Chapin, principal of the State Normal School at Montclair Heights Wednesday.

When asked for his ideas on corporal punishment, Dr. Chapin said that personally he had never struck a pupil during the twenty-seven years that he has been a teacher, although the law of Massachusetts, where he began his scholastic work, permitted him to do so under certain conditions if he found it necessary. He said further that he did not wish the right to use the rod in the Normal School. The only place where the whip ever should be used, if used at all, he declared, was on pupils in the grades. Continuing, he said:

"I have been told of schools in New Jersey where children have struck teachers and then dared the teachers to strike them, because of the law. If some of the stories I have heard of physical attacks on women teachers by pupils are true, it would not be safe to make me principal where such things are done, for I would thrash the pupil who did it if I went to jail for it."

Miss Elsie Staats, of Brooklyn, has returned home after a visit with friends here.

Miss Annie G. Fisk, daughter of former Mayor and Mrs. C. J. Fisk, of West Seventh street, is improving from an attack of scarlet fever.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lesher, of Brooklyn, have returned to their home after a visit of several days with Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Laporte, of Jackson avenue, North Plainfield.

Miss Stahlberger, teacher of German and French in the North Plainfield High School, who was summoned to her home in New York State owing to the illness of her mother, will not return to her duties until next week owing to the death of her parent. Miss Anna Rafferty is substituting for Miss Stahlberger.

'ANTI-SALOON' CRUSADE

Addresses Concerning League's Work to be Made in Churches Sunday.

SPEAKERS' LIST ANNOUNCED.

Representatives of State Organization to Be Heard By Many of the Christian Congregations.

The Anti-Saloon League of New Jersey, will hold on Sunday what it calls an "Anti-Saloon League Field Day," in the evangelical churches of Plainfield, when prominent temperance advocates will occupy the local pulpits and speak on the work of the league. A mass meeting will also be held at 4 o'clock in the afternoon in the First M. E. church, to be addressed by John G. Woolley, to which the public is invited. The following speakers have been assigned to the churches:

Morning — Crescent Avenue church, J. Frank Burke, State superintendent; Warren chapel, Joseph H. Collier, editor of "The Issue;" First M. E. church, E. G. Randall, superintendent Men's Industrial Home, of Newark; First Congregational, Rev. Thomas B. Shannon; Trinity Reformed, G. A. Munroe, associate superintendent; First Baptist, Rev. T. Alex. Cairns, assistant State superintendent.

Evening—South Plainfield, Rev. Thomas B. Shannon; Grace M. E., E. G. Randall; Swedish Congregational, Joseph H. Collier; Monroe Avenue M. E., Rev. W. C. Kinsey, State organizer; Temple Baptist, G. R. Munroe; Mt. Olive Baptist, Rev. T. Alex. Cairns. The last named will also speak at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, tomorrow morning.

Arranging Baseball Schedule.

Sewell Ulrich, manager of the Plainfield High School baseball team, is busy arranging his schedule for the coming season and he has already arranged to play a number of strong teams from both high and preparatory schools. The class basketball teams have selected the following captains and managers: Seniors, captain, Luther Banks; manager, Benjamin Buse; juniors, captain, Frank Cullin; manager, Burnett Doane; sophomores, captain, Monroe Good; manager, Joseph Carty; freshmen, captain, Franklyn Newell; manager, Wilton Smith.

P. H. S. Defeats Somerville.

The Plainfield High School hockey team defeated the team from the Somerville High School yesterday afternoon, on Holly's Pond by a score of 4 to 1. The local squad had the best of the game in both halves, outplaying its opponents in team work and control. Bristol did the best work for Plainfield, making all the goals for his team. Ricketts and Davenport also played well for Plainfield and Sharp made a strong blockade at goal. The team will play Cranford at Cranford this afternoon.

Church Society Elects.

The Young Ladies' Aid Society of the Evangelical Lutheran church met last night at the home of Miss A. M. Ruschki, when these officers were elected for the year: President, Miss Sophia Faber; vice president, Miss Emily Echhart; treasurer, Miss A. M. Ruschki; secretary, Miss Hedwig Grotman. The proposition to meet twice a month was not decided, but it was agreed to abandon the custom of serving refreshments so as to allow more time for work. A social will be held every three months.

Break Several Footlights.

While rehearsing "My Lord in Livery," which is to be presented as the Junior play at the Plainfield High School, tomorrow afternoon, several footlights were broken yesterday afternoon during a struggle between Bruce Conlin and Edward Hanrahan. The damage will be repaired by the high school electrician.

P. H. S. vs. Montclair.

The Plainfield High School basketball team will play the strong Montclair aggregation in the local gymnasium, tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

said that if the Masons or Elks or any other secret order build a clubhouse and install pool tables, shower baths and other accessories the Y. M. C. A. would lose a large contingent from their present patronage. "It is because I love the Y. M. C. A. and because I am enlisted for life in its service that I speak thus plainly. Right now we need not less than $6,000 to take care of our present membership." He enumerated the various things that are lacking and left them as food for thought with the members.

Among the things needed in the industrial work were reading rooms stocked with trade papers and other periodicals. The rooms must be near the shops. Classes on subjects dear to factory employes to be held nightly as a means of improving their ability, thus making them greater bread winners, are needed. "Suppose we enlisted the doctors," he said, "to talk to the shop men at intervals on 'first aid,' health and how to preserve it, disease and how to prevent it, social purity and the physical basis of temperance. Wouldn't this kind of social service be worth while?

"What we need is a new building, a hundred thousand dollar 'man factory' fully equipped. We want to take the public into our confidence to tell them the actual conditions and sow them what there is to do. It may be that Plainfield is too complacent, too well satisfied that all is well. If so, let us tell the truth and disturb this ill-founded complacency. Let us 'start something' and keep it going."

Those at the speakers' table included J. E. Kimball, Dr. George J. Fisher, H. W. Herrman, three former presidents, W. D. Murray, C. W. McCutchen, John W. Gavett, Rev. Edwin Shaw, Mayor George W. V. Moy, H. O. Newman and W. A. Tener.

JENNINGS' COMMENT ON X-SCIENCE LETTER

Following is a communication received from F. C. Jennings on the reply made by F. Coulson Fairchilds, of Passaic, to a sermon delivered by Rev. G. R. Maguire, both of which were published in this paper:

Editor, The Daily Press:

Without any desire to forestall Mr. Maguire's reply to Mr. Fairchild, and which is sure to be given with the Irish appreciation of an "argument," I would like to express the keen delight with which, in common with all right-thinking people, I have read Mr. Fairchild's letter with its lucid and convincing reasoning there is surely enough to sweep us all into Mrs. Eddy's wake. (I trust I have not quite inadvertently stolen Mr. Maguire's thunder here.)

I was particularly impressed with the striking evidence of Mrs. Eddy's peculiar unselfishness in not keeping that million dollars or so, she had not been able to distribute in charity "for helself" as to leave it behind; and wish such a choice possible. I know of no example in all history of equal self-denial. It makes even her own benefactions of "about $100,000 annually during her life time" of about ninety years, sink into insignificance; it is surely enought to substantiate Mrs. Eddy's highest claims. We can only murmur "beautiful!"

Then again one can readily understand some delay on Mr. Maguire's part in replying to his correspondent as quickly as his ardent Hibernian nature might urge him, when he has such a poser to answer as "When a man loses his memory where does it go to?" I have been trying to think it out myself; but I confess, after being rendered almost distracted in the endeavor, that I am thoroughly beaten. I am sure I am not alone in awaiting Mr. Maguire's solution with keenest interest, for my own part I give it up; and beg for an easier one next time.

But leaving this, there can be no question but that our scientific friend makes a telling point when he says that the healing "the blind man showed that sight cannot be lost." Of course not; and this may give occasion to ask a few more true Scientist's questions. Seeing the manifest truth that sight cannot be lost, where was the sight that the blind man seems not to have had? If he had not lost his sight, why hadn't he still got it? If his sight cannot be lost, and all true Christion Science is clear that it cannot, from what was he healed?

Will Mr. Maguire kindly help us out on these questions, too, whilst he is about it.

Then again, is it not a pity that our enlightened Scientists were not there to correct him properly when he said "one thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see." Can we not hear the well-merited rebuke "You fool, you were never blind at all; you were only born with a pernicious belief of mortal mind that you were not able to see; if you had only I said, "I see;" insisted upon it, inspite of mortal mind, or father or mother, or everyone else, you would have been all right.

But stay, this word as to "saying I see" recalls me from, and makes me ashamed of levity. The smile dies on my lips; all lightness departs from my spirit, as I listen to that some voice the blind man heard and which some of us, too, have learned to know as we know no other; and He says, "If ye were blind ye should have no sin; but now ye say, We see, therefore your sin remaineth."

Then perhaps, after all, he may be found to be the fool who denies these manifest needs (which physical as then, or spiritual as now) that alone give us a claim on His love and power in meeting them.

F. C. JENNINGS.

BEREA COLLEGE.

A Seat of Learning In the Kentucky Mountains.

Nothing Unusual For Students to Bring Shotguns Into Their Classes Either For Attack or For Self Protection.

Louisville, Ky.—A small boy trudged into the classroom. He placed the shotgun which he carried on his shoulder carefully on the floor beside his desk. Opening a book, he immediately began to study his morning's lesson.

"William," commanded the teacher, "why did you bring that shotgun to school?"

"I'm goin' to get Henry Jett at recess," answered the boy. Then he added, "He insulted my pap, and I'm goin' to get him."

This dialogue took place not many days ago in a classroom of Berea college in Madison county, Ky.

The small boy was less than eleven years old, yet he had brought a shotgun to school with the avowed purpose of killing one of his schoolmates for some real or fancied wrong. Needless to say, the teacher took steps to prevent the killing. The small boy's father was summoned, the shotgun was confiscated, and a severe lecture was administered. However, the incident did not occasion any great surprise either on the part of the teacher or his pupils. It is not unusual to "get" an enemy in Madison county. To come to school armed with a shotgun or rifle is an everyday occurrence. In fact, Berea college is probably the only institution of learning in this country today where many of the students carry books under one arm and rifles over the other.

For, be it known, Berea college is in the great mountain district of Kentucky, and its students are the mountaineers and their sons and daughters of that sparsely settled, wild and untutored region. It is a college unlike and situated unlike any other institution of learning in the United States.

Its students, with the exception of the two or three hundred who live in Berea during the college year, come from all over the surrounding country within a radius of twenty-five miles, the most typical mountain district of Kentucky. Most of them come on horseback, often two and three on one horse when brother and sister are learning together. Probably half the men and boys are armed with rifles and shotguns, which are carefully placed in their lockers after they have tied their horses and prepared for their day's work.

These Kentucky mountaineers are the descendants of the hardy English and Scotch pioneers who settled that region in the early days of the nineteenth century. They have preserved the purity of their race and probably come nearer being simon pure Americans than any other class of people in the United States today. During the civil war they remained loyal to the Union. There is hardly a known instance of a Kentucky mountaineer fighting on the Confederate side. Right here at Berea is a little country graveyard that is filled with the graves of mountaineers who gave their lives to save the Union.

The college was started before the civil war for the purpose of providing education for the mountaineers.

There are well equipped carpentry, machine and blacksmith shops for the mountain youths, and classes in cooking, sewing and domestic science are conducted for the girls. So poor are most of the mountain families that they can only afford to send their sons and daughters to Berea for six or nine months, but even in that short time they learn many things to make their home life happier and more comfortable.

When the college day is over the students who do not live in Berea mount their horses and ride over the hills to their distant mountain homes. After their day's work and a long, hard ride they frequently have several hours' work to do at home before they can light their kerosene lamps and study their dog eared textbooks.

That they are being made into better citizens through their college there is little doubt. The influence of Berea is having a wholesome effect even in the "Bloody Eleventh," as the district in which it is situated is called. Feuds are gradually becoming rarer, killings today are comparatively few, and it is even rumored that less moonshine whisky is being made, although investigators are inclined to doubt this statement. At any rate, the health and morals of the mountaineers are better than in other mountain districts in Kentucky, so it is evident that the college was not founded in vain.

Sneezed Out the Bullet.

New York.—Willie Roth, four years old, of this city sneezed a 44 caliber bullet out of his nose at the Har-Moriah hospital just as the surgeons were about to probe for it. Willie was playing in the street before his home when an Avenue C car exploded a cartridge some one had placed on the track. The ball entered his cheek and lodged in his nose. He recovered rapidly.

AS USUAL.

For two long hours he worked away
And shoveled to the street;
That night when he was fast asleep
It snowed about two feet.

Next morn, to get them clean once more,
He worked with might and main.
Came from the roof an avalanche
And filled them up again.

When ordered by the stern police,
Grim guardians of the law,
He shoveled out those walks once more—
And it began to thaw.

Jimmy Slinger's Mistake

Young Jimmy Slinger, down on Cherry street, was only fourteen years old, but had come to have a great admiration for the law. He knew that certain detectives took their whack, and he heard a professional bondsman affirm that the police got a divvy on all his cases. As for pool room men, gamblers and pickpockets, Jimmy knew that they owned the town. Now and then there was a patrolman or detective who would not shut his eyes when there was a case of pocket picking or a con game, but a complaint to certain politicians soon brought about a transfer. At the age of fourteen Jimmy was to be apprenticed to a cobbler. He bolted from home in consequence. He had made up his mind as to his future career. He had decided to stand in with the law.

Jimmy had no sooner bolted than he began to look around for a job. It so happened that a couple of young men who had just graduated in law had formed a partnership and hung out their sign. They didn't want police court cases, and they didn't want to be classed among the shysters, but the want of better patrons forced them to appear in the lower courts quite often. Jimmy made their acquaintance there. He didn't catch them at any shyster tricks, and he heard certain policemen sneering at their straightforward way. The boy didn't give the lawyers credit for this. He simply took it that they had a trick up their sleeves and were the sort of men he was looking for. In a month after he knew them he was their office boy. He didn't care how humble the beginning as long as the aroma of law hung about the place. He didn't ever expect to be a leading member of the bar, but he felt that he could pick up enough law to enable him to do as others were doing.

One day the boy picked up a pointer. The partners had been consulted about a big case. If they could win it, they had their start on the road to success. The bar to the winning was certain papers in the hands of a certain citizen. If they had those papers, their case was sure. Without them it was no use to take a single step. Jimmy felt that the success of the firm would be his success, while failure would send him adrift. It was perfectly natural that he should sit up and take notice. He couldn't figure out how the papers were to be got unless he got them. The only way he could get them was by robbing the house. It didn't take him five minutes to come to a decision. It might be going a little further than the police when they perjured themselves or a little further than the shyster lawyers when they juggled a case, but he would take the risk. He spotted off the house, hung around for a few days and then one night effected an entrance and secured the papers. He hadn't had much preliminary experience in the burglar business, but he brought off this trick like an old hand. He didn't even leave a half burnt match behind for a detective to pick up and examine through a microscope and announce that it had been scratched on the right leg of a red headed boy with a cockeye at exactly the hour of midnight.

Jimmy had to lie to get the papers into the hands of the firm, but that didn't trouble him in the least. He had heard shyster lawyers lie a thousand times over. He claimed to have found them on the street, and the young attorneys drew long breaths and declared that Providence was surely with them. They won their case and jumped into Easy street. Jimmy Slinger was not forgotten. He was patted on the back and called a lucky young dog and his salary raised, and but for his learning law so fast he might have held down his job indefinitely. After he had been at it six months he began to give legal advice and to express legal opinions around the courts. In fact, he arranged to stand in with the police on certain things, but found too late that he could not deliver the goods. This brought about strained relations and an exposure, and the law firm and the student of law had to part company. From thence forward for the next three years Jimmy traveled. He traveled as a lawyer, as a pickpocket, as a con man, and now and then burglared a bit for a change. No, it wasn't burglary. The law says that entering an occupied dwelling before sunset is only robbery, and Jimmy never let the sun flimflam him. At the end of three years he returned to town to make a great mistake. The sun got in a hurry to go down or Jimmy's watch was ten minutes off or the witnesses swore falsely. At any rate, he was caught with the goods on him and felt rather homesick until arraigned. Then he chirked up. The judge was one of the old law firm. He had stolen the papers for that firm and had given it its start. The judge must remember it. He couldn't go back on him. It would be black ingratitude. Jimmy went ahead and made his plans for the future, and there was a smile on his face when the evidence was all in. It bore hard on him, but the judge would find a way. He had seen lots of judges find lots of ways.

"James Slinger, I sentence you to ten years at Sing Sing for the crime of burglary."

Jimmy is up there still. He will tell you how he fainted away on hearing the sentence, how he was rewarded with ingratitude, how a rosy career was cut short, and he will then add:

"But what I can't understand is what the gang was doing to get him, an honest man, up there on the bench. Say, things must be getting whizzy wazzy."

N. Y AMUSEMENTS.

Miss Billie Burke, whose beauty and charm of acting has gained a following among theatregoers that is the envy and the admiration of many older women stars, next Monday night enters upon the second month of her extended engagement at the Lyceum Theatre. In her new play, "Susanne", an exquisite comedy of Belgian life, she is called upon to play the daughter of an amusing old brewer, who finds that she can succeed in doing anything she wants to through her sunny temperament. And in this congenial role she is literally smiling herself to success. As one enthusiast said the other evening on leaving the theatre, there has never been an actress who can smile quite like Miss Billie Burke. But her delightful role allows her to do more and reveal a wider range of talent than in her other plays. The little comedy centers on a very serious situation in which Susanne discovers that she cannot marry her fiance because he is pledged to another woman. Her duty impels her to awaken a sense of honor in him and the persuasive manner in which she does it, is one of the most effective bits of serious acting that has been seen this season. But the piece clouds only for awhile, and, after the touch of pathos, is sunnier than ever. Messrs. Fenson and Wicheler, the authors, managed to weave into this first play of theirs an atmosphere of happiness and to touch the homely philosophy to parents and lovers. Among the notable players supporting Miss Burke are George W. Anson, called the English Coquelin; Julian L'Estrange, Conway Tearle, Harry Harwood, and Ross Rand. Miss Burke gives Thursday and Saturday matinees of "Susanne."

WOMEN RANCHERS.

Four California Sisters Also Famed as Guides and Hunters.

Left Fatherless at an Early Age, They Shifted For Themselves and Are the Managers of a 3,500 Acre Ranch.

San Francisco.—Nowhere in the west have the achievements of women excited more admiration and respect than the heroic struggles of the four young daughters of the late Timothy J. Crowley of Black Rock ranch, near Laytonville, Mendocino county, Cal.

The Misses Abbie, Melitos, Una and Leota, respectively twenty-two, twenty, eighteen and fourteen, superintend and do all of the work on their 3,500 acre cattle ranch without the assistance of any man or even the advice of their semi-invalid mother.

Black Rock ranch lies in one of the wildest and most picturesque spots in Mendocino county, but embraces the best land in the district for agriculture and stock raising. It surrounds about 7,000 acres of government lands, which can only be reached by passing through the Crowley lands.

By the time each of the Crowley girls had reached the age of ten she was the constant companion of her father in all of his work, which she helped to do with the ease and accuracy of an experienced man. Before any one of them was fourteen she could lasso, break, mount and throw almost any of the wildest horses, frequently without the assistance of her sisters or her father; round up the cattle, drive a six horse team over the most dangerous mountain and canyon roads, fire a musket or the latest improved rifle with unerring aim, shoe the horses, milk the cows, plow, plant, harvest and market the crops, as well as sing, dance, cook and sew.

Some of the neighbors were envious and jealous of the extensive possessions of Mr. Crowley, and despite the fact that he posted notices warning poachers not to come on his lands they came in and out of season, frequently leaving their dead game to be devoured by wild hogs.

Angry poachers openly defied him, claiming that they hunted on the public domain and only passed through his property going to and from it.

The ill feeling culminated in the shooting and killing of Crowley Aug. 14, 1907, about fifteen miles from his home by a man named John Butts, who, with his two sons, each with a deer, was met by Crowley, who accused them of poaching.

The Famous Crowley Sisters.

There was a party going on in the Crowley home when the announcement of the shooting was received over the telephone. Although it was black night outside, Abbie, the eldest daughter, harnessed a team and drove at rapid speed over the steep and dangerous mountain roads to the spot and brought her father's body home.

Being suddenly bereft of father and companion did not daunt the brave Crowley girls. They were well trained for the many duties that without warning fell upon them. Without a murmur they started on a long and strenuous battle for a livelihood. Under the leadership of the brave little Abbie, "boss of the ranch," no part of the work on their broad acres flagged.

The fame of the four young women is widespread as hunters and guides. When Abbie was fourteen years old she killed a deer with an old rusty musket at a range of 200 yards. The act so pleased her father that he bought her a fine 30-30 rifle. With this she never fails to drop a deer. In August of this year she won the everlasting admiration of a party of San Francisco hunters by killing several deer at distances ranging from 300 to 800 yards. During the summer seasons these thrifty girls rent out many little huts on their property to campers, furnish them supplies and act as guides.

About two years ago two young men, Jack Hammond and E. Door, students at Belmont Military academy, spent their vacation at Black Rock ranch, and young Hammond had the misfortune to shoot himself through the foot with a 12 gauge shotgun, crushing all the bones in the instep.

Young Door had never dressed a wound and knew nothing of surgery. The Crowley girls had dressed many wounds for both man and beast and had done some surgical stunts. Abbie operated on the injured foot and dressed it after dispatching a messenger for a surgeon, who said the injured foot needed no further attention, as it had been treated with as much skill and success as the most scientific could have given it.

Her ability and liking to care for the sick and wounded caused Abbie to enter the German hospital of San Francisco to take the trained nurse course.

So much at a loss were the home folks without the "boss of the ranch" and so greatly were her services needed every day that she was compelled to give up her much cherished professional career and return to the ranch, over which she now reigns supreme.

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

The Great Conservation Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

Virginia started. "What makes you think so?"

"Well, I knew a woman who went just that way. Had that same flabby, funny look—and that same distress after eatin'. I told her this mornin' she'd better go up to Sulphur and see that new doctor."

"What did you mean by 'the war?'" asked Virginia.

"Why, you remember the rustler war? We date everything out here from that year. You was here, for I saw ye."

"Oh!" exclaimed Virginia. "I understand now. Yes, I was here. I saw my father at the head of the cowboys."

"They weren't cowboys. They were hired killers from Texas. That's what let yore pa out o' the state. He were on the wrong side, and if it hadn't 'a' been for the regular soldiers he'd 'a' been wiped out right hyer. As it was he had to skip the range and hain't never been back. I don't s'pose folks will lay it up agin you—bein' a girl—but they couldn't no son of Ed Wetherford come back here and settle, not for a minute. Why, yore ma has had to bluff the whole county a'most—not that I lay anything up agin her. I tell folks she was that bewitched with Ed she couldn't see things any way but his way. He fought to save his ranch and stawk, but she couldn't do nothin'—and then to have him go back on her the way he did—slip out 'twixt two days and never write; that just about shot her to pieces. I never could understand that in Ed; he 'peared so mortally fond of you and of her too. He sure was fond of you.'" She shook her head. "No, can't anybody make me believe Ed Wetherford is alive."

Lee Virginia started. "Who says he's alive?"

"Now, don't get excited, girl. He ain't alive, but yet folks say we don't know he's dead. He jest dropped out so far as yore ma is concerned and so far as the county is concerned, but some thought you was with him in the east."

The girl was now aware that her visitor was hoping to gain some further information and so curtly answered: "I've never seen my father since that night the soldiers came and took him away to the fort. And my mother told me he died down in Texas."

Mrs. Jackson rose. "Well, I'm glad to 've had a word with ye; but, you hear me, yore ma has got to have doctor's help or she's a-goin' to fall down some day soon."

Every word the woman uttered, every tone of her drawling voice, put Lee Virginia back into the past. She heard again the swift gallop of hoofs, saw once more the long line of armed ranchers and felt the hush of fear that lay over the little town on that fateful day. The situation became clearer in her mind. She recalled vividly the words of astonishment and hate with which the women had greeted her mother on the morning when the news came that Edward Wetherford was among the invading cattle barons—was indeed one of the leaders.

In Philadelphia the Rocky mountain states were synonyms of picturesque lawlessness, the theater of reckless romance, and Virginia Wetherford, loyal daughter of the west, had defended it, but in the coarse phrase of this lean rancheress was pictured a land of border warfare as ruthless as that which marked the Scotland of Rob Roy.

Commonplace as the little town looked at the moment, it had been the scene of many a desperate encounter, as the girl herself could testify, for she had seen more than one man killed therein.

Then her mind came back to her mother's ailment. Eliza Wetherford had never been one to complain, and her groans meant real suffering.

Her mind resolved upon one thing. "She must see a doctor," she decided. And with this in mind she re-entered the cafe, where Lize was in violent altercation with a waitress.

"Mother," called Lee, "I want to see you."

With a parting volley of vituperation Mrs. Wetherford followed her daughter back into the lodging house.

"Mother," the girl began, facing her and speaking firmly, "you need help, and if the doctor here can't help you you must go to Sulphur or to Kansas City. I can run the boarding house until you get back."

Eliza eyed her curiously. "Don't you go to counting on this 'chivalry of the west' which story writers put into books. These men out here will eat you up if you don't watch out. I wouldn't dare to leave you here alone. No; what I'll do is sell the place, if I can, and both of us get out."

"But you need a doctor this minute."

"I'll be all right in a little while; I'm always the worst for an hour or two after I eat. This little squirt of a local doctor gave me some dope to ease that pain, but I've got my doubts—I don't want any morphine habit in mine. No, daughter Virginny, it's mighty white of you to offer, but you don't know what you're up against when you contract to step into my shoes."

Visions of reforming methods about the house passed through the girl's mind. "There must be something I can do. Why don't you have the doctor come down here?"

"I might do that if I get any worse, but I hate to have you stay in the house another night. It's only fit for these goats of cowboys and women like Hett Jackson. I don't care till somebody like you or Reddy or Ross comes along.

"No, child; you get ready and pull out on the Sulphur stage tomorrow. I'll pay your way back to Philadelphy."

"I can't leave you now, mother. Now that I know you're ill I'm going to stay and take care of you."

Lize rose. "See here, girl, don't you go to idealizing me neither. I'm what the boys call an old battleax. I've been through the whole war. I'm able to feed myself and pay your board besides. Just you find some decent boarding place in Sulphur, and I'll see that you have $10 a week to live on just because you're a Wetherford."

"But I'm your daughter!"

Again Eliza fixed a musing look upon her. "I reckon if the truth was known your Aunt Selia was higher to being your mother than I ever was. They always said you was all Wetherford, and I reckon they were right."

CHAPTER IV.

THE NEW WEST AND THE OLD.

THE knowledge that she must spend another night in the inn led Lee Virginia to active measures of reform. She hurried from one needed reform to another. She drew others into the vortex.

She organized the giggling waiters into a warring party and advanced upon the flies. By hissing and shooing and the flutter of newspapers they drove the enemy before them, and a carpenter was called in to mend screen doors and windows, thus preventing their return. New shades were hung to darken the room and new tablecloths purchased to replace the old ones, and the whole place had such a cleaning as it had not known before in five years.

In this work the time passed swiftly, and when Redfield and Cavanagh came again to lunch they exclaimed in astonishment, as, indeed, every one did.

"How's this?" queried Cavanagh humorously. "Has the place changed hands?"

Lize was but grimly responsive. "Seems like it has."

"I hope the price has not gone up."

"Not yet."

Redfield asked, "Who's responsible for this—your new daughter?"

"You've hit it. She's started right in to polish us all up to city standards. She can run the whole blame outfit if she's a mind to—even if I go broke for it. The work she got out of them girls is a wonder."

Lee Virginia came in flushed and self conscious, but far lighter of spirit than at breakfast, and stood beside the table while the waitress laid the dishes before her guests with elaborate assumption of grace and design. Hitherto she had bumped them down with a slash of slangy comment. The change was quite as wonderful as the absence of the flies.

"Do we owe these happy reforms to you?" asked Cavanagh, admiring Virginia's neat dress and glowing cheeks.

"Partly," she answered. "I was desperate. I had to do something, so I took to ordering people around."

"I understand," he said. "Won't you sit at our table again?"

"Please do," said Redfield. "I want to talk with you."

She took a seat a little hesitatingly. "You see, I studied domestic science at school, and I've never had a chance to apply it before."

"Here's your opportunity," Redfield assured her. "My respect for the science of domestics is growing. I marvel to think what another week will bring forth. I think I'll have to come down again just to observe the improvement in the place."

"It can't last," Lize interjected. "She'll catch the western habits. She'll sag, same as we all do."

"No, she won't," declared Ross, with intent to encourage her. "If you give her a free hand I predict she'll make your place the wonder and boast of the county-side."

"When do you go back to the mountains?" Lee Virginia asked a little later.

"Immediately after my luncheon," he replied.

She experienced a pang of regret and could not help showing it a little. "Your talk bolsters me," she said. "I've decided to stay and be of use to my mother."

Redfield overheard this and turned toward her.

"I want Mrs. Redfield to know you, I'm sure her advice will be helpful. I hope you'll come up and see us if you decide to settle in Sulphur or if you don't."

"I should like to do so," she said, touched by the tone as well as by the words of his invitation.

"Redfield's house is one of the few completely civilized homes in the state," put in Cavanagh. "When I get so weary of cuss words and poaching and graft that I can't live without killing some one I go down to Elk Lodge and smoke and read the supervisor's London and Paris weeklies and recover my tone."

Redfield smiled. "When I get weak-kneed or careless in the service and feel my self respect slipping away I go up to Ross' cabin and talk with a man who represents the impersonal, even handed justice of the federal law."

Cavanagh laughed. "There! Having handed each other reciprocal bouquets, we can now tell Miss Wetherford the truth. Each of us thinks very well of himself, and we're both believers in the new west."

"What do you mean by the new west?" asked the girl.

"Well, the work you've been doing here this morning is part of it," answered Redfield. "It's a kind of house-cleaning. The old west was picturesque and in a way manly and fine—certain phases of it were heroic—and I hate to see it all pass, but some of us began to realize that it was not all poetry. The plain truth is my companions for over twenty years were lawless ruffians, and the cattle business as we practiced it in those days was founded on selfishness and defended at the mouth of the pistol. We were all pensioners on Uncle Sam and fighting to keep the other fellow off from having a share of his bounty. It was all wasteful, half savage. We didn't want settlement; we didn't want law; we didn't want a state. We wanted free range. We were a line of pirates from beginning to end, and we're not wholly reformed yet."

Some one at the table accused Redfield of being more of a town site boomer than a cattleman.

He was quite unmoved by this charge. "The town site boomer at least believes in progress. He does not go so far as to shut out settlement. I don't care to have my children live the life I've lived. Besides, what right have we to stand in the way of a community's growth? Suppose the new life is less picturesque than the old. We don't like to leave behind us the pleasures and sports of boyhood, but we grow up nevertheless [illegible] more loyal to the state's forest supervisor than I was when I was riding with the cattlemen to serve up the nester."

At this moment Sam Gregg entered the room, followed by a young man in an English riding suit. Seeing that "the star boarder table" offered a couple of seats, they pointed that way. Sam was plainly in a warlike frame of mind and slammed his sombrero on its nail with the action of a man beating an adversary.

"That is Sam Gregg and his son Joe. Used to be ranch cattleman, now one of our biggest sheepmen," Cavanagh explained. "He's bucking the cattlemen now."

Lee Virginia studied young Gregg with interest, for his dress was that of a man to whom money came easy, and his face was handsome, though ather fat and sullen. In truth, he had been brought into the room by his father to see "Lize Wetherford's girl," and his eyes at once sought and found her. A look of surprise and pleasure at once lit his face.

Gregg was the greedy west checked and restrained by the law. Every man in the room knew that he was a bitter opponent of the forest service and that he "had it in" for the ranger, and some of them knew that he was throwing more sheep into the forest than his permits allowed and that a clash with Redfield was sure to come. It was just like the burly old Irishman to go straight to the table where his adversary sat.

Virginia's eyes fell before the gaze of these two men, for they had none of the shyness and none of the indirection of the ruder men she had met.

Redfield did not soften his words on Gregg's account. On the contrary, he made them still more cutting and to the line.

"The mere fact that I live near the open range or a national forest does not give me any rights in the range or forest," he was saying as Gregg took his seat. "I enjoy the privilege of these government grazing grounds, and I ought to be perfectly willing to pay the fee. These forests are the property of the whole nation. They are public lands and should yield a revenue to the whole nation. It is silly to expect the government to go on enriching a few of us stockmen at the expense of others. I see this, and I accept the change."

"After you've got rich at it," said Gregg.

"Well, haven't you?" retorted Redfield. "Are you so greedy that nothing will stop you."

Gregg growled out: "I'm not letting any of my rights slip. I'll have your head, Mr. Supervisor. I'll carry my fight to the secretary."

"Very well," returned Redfield, "carry it to the president if you wish. I simply repeat that your sheep must correspond to your permit, and if you don't send up and remove the extra number I will do it myself. I don't make the rules of the department. My job is to carry them out."

A LEPROSY TRAGEDY.

The Sacrifice of Kaomouna, the Hawaiian Beauty.

HER LIFE FOR HER MOTHER.

A Story Which Sheds a Bright Light Upon the Filial Devotion of Kanaka Women—The Reason a Baby's Advances Were Not Returned.

The usual Honolulu crowd was down at the dock when the steamship from San Francisco pulled alongside the pier on a brilliant, balmy afternoon in January some years ago. American women in summer afternoon costumes, a few English and a few German women of society, arrayed also for steamer day, leaned back languorously in their carriages and phaetons, under the shade of parasols, listening to the lazy complimentary talk of the duck clad, lei enwreathed young business men who combined duty with pleasure in thus waiting for the great steamer to slip laboriously into her measured berth beside the pier.

All of the Kanaka women had bare feet. They stood about in little groups as silent as the men of their race. A few of the Kanaka women carried tiny brown babies—silent also. The young women were of varying degrees of beauty, their figures showing a uniform excellence of proportion.

One of these Kanaka women at the dock on this brilliant January afternoon was particularly beautiful. She was clad like the rest of the women of her race. She was fully five feet ten inches in height, and the white silk cord with which, unlike the other Kanaka women, she drew her white dress about her waist emphasized the splendid heroic proportions of her figure. Kaomouna seemed quite unconscious of her beauty. The young shipping clerks, hurrying to and fro on the dock with their pencils behind their ears, stopped suddenly when they caught sight of her. The women in the carriages, who had not been long down from the States or from Europe, saw Kaomouna and asked the women of longer Honolulu residence, "Who is that glorious creature?" Kaomouna, with a very sad face, spoke only an occasional word to one of the Kanaka women.

The steamship was made fast to the pier, and the passengers began to troop over the gangplank. There was one man with his pretty young wife and three-year-old little girl. The little girl was the first to catch sight of Kaomouna as she reached the bottom of the gangway. She quickly freed her hand from her father's grasp and ran toward Kaomouna with baby words. Kaomouna smiled at the little girl, but did not offer to take her up. Instead she folded her arms, looking down at the little pink faced child pleasantly. When the mother had taken the little girl she raised her eyes to look at Kaomouna.

"Did you ever in your whole life see such a perfectly beautiful woman?" asked the young wife of her husband in a whisper when he came up. "And Tita seemed to take to her immediately. If we could only have her for a nurse for Tita!"

Kaomouna heard her.

"Kaomouna would love to be that," she replied in a soft Kanaka accented speech, smiling. Then a look of pain came into her face. "But it may not be—it may not be!" And, with her hands at her eyes, Kaomouna turned suddenly and disappeared among the departing men and women of her race.

Three months later the parents of the little girl were at the dock together to witness for the first time the saddest of sights—the departure of the lepers for the island of Molokai. The Kilauea Hou, the leper steamer, was out in the stream, and the lepers were being carried out to her in barges. A litter was borne through the roped inclosure for the lepers. On it lay a very old Kanaka woman in the final stages of the disease. At the side of the litter walked Kaomouna. Her face was very sad. The parents of the little girl wondered. They spoke to an official of the Hawaiian board of health, who was busy in the task of embarking the lepers.

"Surely," they said, "she does not accompany the lepers?"

"Who — Kaomouna?" replied the health official. "Oh, yes, she does. But it is her own choice. Kaomouna, you know, has been secreting her old mother for a number of years. We always knew there was something mysterious about Kaomouna—that is, we have known it for the last five years. She had made queer visits to a palm hut far over in the Nuuanu valley. Last week we followed her. We felt there was leprosy in it. We found her mother in the hut. Kaomouna had had her in hiding, trying to save her from Molokai, ever since the disease became evident. Kaomouna is not infected in the least. She has been careful. But she elects to follow her mother to Molokai. Extraordinary? Why, not at all! You do not understand the filial devotion of Kanaka women—men, too, for that matter. Such cases are common enough."

The parents of the little girl looked at each other. There were tears in the mother's eyes.

"That is why she folded her arms and would not touch Tita!" she said. "In this world of God, civilized or uncivilized, could there be anything more noble?"

All was ready, and the Kilauea Hou, with Kaomouna and her mother on board, slowly started down the harbor, the Kanakas on the dock setting up the weird, plaintive death wail.—Washington Star

A good stove is as essential to the housewife as a watch to the business man—both must be dependable. The woman who prides herself on baking the best bread in town can't do justice to her skill if she uses a range that won't hold its heat and that doesn't warm all sides of the oven uniformly.

"BEAVER" Ranges are fine bakers because the right amount of heat reaches every part of the oven at the right time. The "BEAVER" has stood the test of time. It has baked the bread and cake for the children and for grandmother, too. The "BEAVER" is a range of quality in the fullest sense of the word. Put it to any test any range may be put to—you'll find the "BEAVER" to be all and more in quality, satisfaction and real service than we or the manufacturers claim for it. Do not cling with old fogy tenacity to an out-of-date range. Get the "BEAVER." It heats more quickly and consumes less coal than any other range on the market.

THE OLD FLINTLOCKS.

A Farmer Accomplished Some Wonderful Feats of Marksmanship With One of Them.

"These old shooting irons," said a man from Virginia, who was examining an old flintlock rifle, "always have my profound respect. Our grandfathers and great-grandfathers did their hunting with them and used them in our two victorious wars with England. They were always good weapons and are now, if they are equipped with a good stock and a good lock. They could do fine service. Any man who was any sort of a marksman could do effective work with them in their day. This fact was well illustrated in an incident that happened several years ago near Richmond. The story was printed in some of the leading newspapers in Virginia and was the cause of much interest.

"There was an old farmer residing in one of the peninsular counties who was coming on the cars to Richmond and had with him one of those old fashioned weapons. In the train he got into conversation with a small party of gentlemen, who expressed much interest in his old rifle, and the farmer told of some rather extraordinary feats of marksmanship that he had performed with it.

"Finally he was persuaded to give an exhibition of his skill with the old relic, and a trial came off at Rocketts in the presence of a few gentlemen. The old flintlock was fired seven times and only missed the mark once. At first the old man fired it at some small objects—to get his hand steady, so he said. Then the old fellow handed to his son, who had every faith in his father's skill, a large potato and stationed him at fifty yards distance, holding the potato between his thumb and forefinger.

"The rifle cracked, and the potato was split into several pieces. Another shot was made at the bowl of a pipe which the boy was smoking, and the bowl was smashed. Several other shots were made at various objects, but in trying to hit a copper cent that was tossed in the air the marksman made a miss. He was considerably mortified at this and laid the blame on a bystander who sneezed loudly at the critical moment, but made another attempt, which was successful.

"The old man then declined any further trials of his skill and when offered a sum of money to repeat his feat of shooting a potato from his son's hand refused, saying he didn't care to experiment any further unless his weapon was freshly cleaned. The boy was willing, but the old man was obdurate. The young man showed not the least anxiety during the dangerous experiment upon himself."—Washington Post.

A Necessity.

"Twenty dollars for retrimming your hat!" exclaimed Mr. Madison. "But we agreed to spend nothing except for things that were positively needed."

"Well, John, this is. You see, my best friend has just had hers retrimmed, and I have promised to go with her to the concert on Friday."

"Oh, all right. But I can't give you more than fifteen this morning, because I broke my meerschaum and must have it mended."

"Can't you smoke your old briarwood?"

"Certainly, dear. And you can wear your old hat."

"John, let's begin to economize next month after we get things all straightened out."

"All right."—New York Herald.

To Multiply by Division.

Everybody knows that learning the tens in the multiplication table is as easy as "pie" and that the fives are not much harder; but, slight as is the mental effort required in multiplying any number by five, it may be lessened still more by discarding the multiplier entirely and substituting a divisor instead. This may sound paradoxical, but by experimenting you will find that dividing by two will bring the same result as multiplying by five, provided you add a cipher to the quotient if the dividend be an even number or five if it be odd. For instance, if you multiply 2,734 by five the product is 13,670. What is still easier, divide 2,734 by two, which is done almost instantaneously; then tack on your 0 and you have 13,670.

Separate and Together.

First Seaman—I say, Bill, wot's this card?

Second Seaman—That's the saloon passengers' menu, of course.

"But wot does it mean?"

"Oh, it's a list of all the things they have for dinner—soup and fish and vegetables and meat. That's the difference between the saloon and the forecastle; they get them all separately and call it a menu. In the forecastle we get them altogether and call it Irish stew."—London Answers.

True Tale.

"My daughter gave us an awful scare the other day," said a caller last night. "She went away for a visit in New York. And she sent a telegram from Buffalo, her first stop. My wife was afraid to open it. We had visions of train wrecks, sudden illness and all sorts of things. And what do you think the message said? This:

"'I forgot to tell you—don't eat up all the strawberry jam while I'm gone.'"—Cleveland Leader.

BOROUGH ASS'N ELECTS

Alexander Milne Continues as President of North Plainfield Civic Body.

DISCUSS THE CONSOLIDATION.

Members to Attend Commerce Chamber Mass Meeting Monday Night —No Report Made on the Water Proposition.

The North Plainfield Association held its regular monthly meeting, last night, and besides transacting several matters of importance elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

President, Alex. Milne; vice-president, Meredith Dryden; secretary, B. J. Phelps; treasurer, Nelson A. Miller. All were re-elected.

Owing to the absence of Judge Isaac P. Runyon, who has been made chairman of the municipal water plant committee in place of L. B. Woolston, no full report of its work was submitted. It was stated by President Milne, however, that the committee had been active and that approval of the scheme is generally expressed. Another meeting is to be held tonight. Mr. Carney asked that the membership be increased, owing to the importance of the subject and the work to be done, and the president announced he would do so after consultation with the chairman.

A communication was received from the Plainfield Chamber of Commerce asking that the association be represented at the consolidation meeting to be held Monday night, President Milne spoke on the importance of the gathering and expressed the hope that almost the entire membership of the association be in attendance. The secretary was authorized to send out notices today urging each and everyone to make it a point to be present.

The entertainment committee, through Mr. Carney, reported that plans are underway for a smoker to be held within the near future. Professional talent will furnish a program and some surprises are promised. Tickets will be fifty cents each and may be procured from the members.

Mr. Dryden reported that he had noticed that the electric lights on Watchung avenue are all located on the west side, leaving the east side in a shadow on dark nights. He suggested that the association take up the question of having them placed more advantageously in the event of any changes in the future and the idea met with approval. A general talk on the lighting question followed and the opinion prevailed that the borough is not getting the full candle power by half what its contract calls for.

The consolidation question came in for a little consideration but was not gone into fully. One commendable suggestion was made by C. W. Krause to the effect that North Plainfield township be included to avoid having to go through the same process of addition when the natural growth in the future makes it imperative.

Several new members were added to the roll and at the succeeding meetings for the winter prominent speakers will be secured to stimulate interest in borough needs. President Milne and his officers are working hard to make this association an important factor in all municipal questions and indications point to a fulfillment of their plans.

EXPRESS RATES REDUCED

Charge Same as if One Company Carries Package to Destination.

BIG CONCERNS' AGREEMENT.

All Express Companies in United States Will Join in the New Schedule—Illustrations of Its Workings.

By an agreement completed yesterday in New York, express companies which operate on different lines of Railroads will reduce their rates so as to make the old charges of top rates for each company handling an express package reduced to an average rate making practically a reduction of twenty-five per cent. The principal companies in the United States agreed to the arangement and it is expected that before long an adjustment in rates will be made by the Canadian companies which will be satisfactory to the public at large.

Heretofore the gross rate charged where two or more companies handled the package has been the sum total of their local rates. Hereafter the charge will be the same as though but one company handled it. The new rule will effect a radical change in express charges on all shipments to and from what are known as exclusive offices, that is to say city or town where but one express office is represented. A shipment from this city and Boston, for instance, is handled by the United States Express Company between this city and New York and by the either the Adams, American or National Express companies between New York and Boston. The present rate on an express package weighing ten pounds between Boston and Plainfield is 75 cents. Under the new rule it will be 55 cents or a reduction of 20 cents.

The new rate is made as follows: the 100 pound rate betwen Plainfield and New York is 50 cents that between New York and Boston $1, the combined rate being $1.50. Under the graduated scale for ten pound packages the rate is 55 cents from Plainfield to Boston thus making a saving of twenty cents on the package.

The companies are not yet ready to announce full details of their plans, but matters have progressed far enough to insure a speedy conclusion.

Following the book party there were shadow pictures and a musical game and druing the evening everybody had a chance to take part in the fun. Refreshments furnished and served by the losers under the supervision of Miss Lulu Fuller were heartily appreciated.

The machine in which he was riding with Judge William A. Coddington ran into an unguarded trench and both men were badly jarred.

BOYS PUT IN CHARGE OF PROBATION OFFICER

Patrick Finnerty, James Traynor and George Boland boys about twelve years old, were put in charge of Probation Officer Irwin this morning, which will probably keep them out of mischief for some time. All three were accused of breaking into the bakery of W. W. Warnock, on West Front street on the night of January 7 and stealing cake. Finnerty said that Boland and James Lyons were the ones who got in and stole the cake while the other two watched outside in the approved fashion. ## IDENTIFY IRA PANGBORN AS BAD CHECK PASSER

In the capture of Ira Pangborn, of North Plainfield, Chief of Police O'Niell, of Westfield, believes that he has the fellow who has been fleecing merchants in several towns. Yesterday the chief was informed by Captain Carroll, of Newark, that Pangborn is propably the fellow who is wanted in that city for passing bad checks.

Sergeant Reilly, of Montclair, who went to Westfield to look over Pangborn declared that the latter passed a spurious check on Mr. Conroy, a shoe dealer of that town on August 21 for $21. Chiefs Johnson, of Madison, and Brown, of Summit, also believe that Pangborn is the fellow who operated successfully in their towns during the past year.

Pangborn was arrested in Westfield Monday while trying to pass a worthless check in Town Clerk Clark's store.

Pangborn is twenty-three years old, and is the son of Constable William N. Pangborn, of North Plainfield. Before being taken to the county jail at Elizabeth Thursday Pangborn is said to have made a confession to his father and Chief O'Neill.

Representatives of two local clothing houses visited the Union county jail in Elizabeth yesterday morning and identified Ira Pangborn, arrested in Westfield, Wednesday, as a man who passed worthless checks on them. Pangborn was arrested under the name of "E. C. Langhorn" for similar offenses.

J. W. Preyer, manager of Singer & Co.'s store, and Joseph Gumpel, of J. Gumpel Sons & Co., made complaints. Preyer alleged that January 9, Pangborn purchased an overcoat from him and tendered a check for $17.44 in payment.

Pangborn wanted to purchase a suit of clothes at the same time, but declared that he did not see any thing that suited him. He then went to the Gumpel store and gave a check for $22.18 for a suit. Both checks were declared to be worthless.

According to Detective Cordano, whoha d the Westfield warrants for Pangborn's arrest, the prisoner passed two worthless checks in Westfield and two in Elizabeth. He is also wanted in Montclair. Chief of Police Gallagher, of the latter place, declares that the prisoner in August last went into the shoe store of Frank Conroy, 219 Glen Ridge avenue, Montclair, and after purchasing a pair of shoes gave Conroy a check for $21, which turned out to be worthless.

Funeral of John Peters.

Funeral services for John Peters were held at 8 o'clock this morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John Hill, on Arlington avenue, Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, officiating. The burial was at Clover Hill, where Mr. Peters resided before coming to this city two years ago.

Alleged Incendiary Released.

After spending three months in the Somerset county jail accused of arson by William Bradley, of Somerville, J. N. Evans, a horse trainer, of Brooklyn, was released yesterday by Judge Case with the concurrence of Prosecutor Pope as there was no evidence on which to hold Evans. The latter threatens to sue Bradley for damages for false imprisonment.

APPEAL FOR HOSPITAL

Governors Statement Shows Institution is Sorely in Need of Funds.

BIG DEFICIT EVERY YEAR.

All Citizens Are Asked to Contribute to the Support of Plainfield's Charity—One Dollar a Year is Acceptable.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital through its finance committee issued a circular today showing concisely the financial condition of the institution and asking for an increase in voluntary contributions for its support. One circular has been addressed to the present contributers which number only about 400 persons in the entire community, asking for an increase in their annual gifts. Another leaflet has been distributed among 2,000 residents requesting that they give something each year to the worthy and much needed charity. It should be clearly understood it is stated, that there is nothing continuous in this promise. One agreeing that his name should be put on the list of annual contributors has the privilege of withdrawing from the obligation any year.

The demands upon the citizens of Plainfield for charitable purposes are constant, it is asserted, but it is certainly to be regretted, it is added, that the managers of this institution should have difficulty in obtaining sufficiene means to meet the necessary expenses. The work is expanding each year and throughout the length and breadth of the city every one, the statement says, should try and give something. From those who cannot give more, one dollar each year will be much appreciated. Following are extracts from the circular which has just been sent out:

"Last year this deficit of $15,906 was partially met as follows:—Deficit, $15,906; received from Sunday collections, $901; received from charity ball, $1,800; received from Patrolmen's association, $560; received from individual yearly subscribers, $6,782; total $10,043; net deficit, $5,863.

"It will be seen that Muhlenberg needs at least $6,000 more in individual yearly donations to enable it to carry on its present work.

"The expenses for the year ending June 1, 1910, amounted to $37,916; the regular income from pay patients, investments, etc., amounted to $15,260; to which can be added the following items of regular income: from City of Plainfield, $1,500; from Union county, $5,250; total $22,010; leaving a deficit for the year of $15,906.

"In other words, the total cost of carrying on the work of the hospital last year was $37,916, and the income from regular sources was $22,010; leaving $15,906 to be raised outside—which represents about 42 per cent. of the yearly cost of carrying on the hospital work. That is, 42 per cent. of the work done is purely charitable.

"Even when $1.00 per day is received from the ward patients, the actual cost of caring for such patients is in excess of this amount.

"It has always been a matter of pride to Plainfield that it can maintain a hospital from which no one has ever been turned away because he cannot afford to pay for treatment. Muhlenberg is not a private hospital operated for profit. It is open to everybody and it is, in the largest sense, a charitable institution."

There are probably many in Plainfield, it is stated, who unintentionally have not received the circular referred to, and such persons who desire to contribute can communicate with Julius E. Erickson, treasurer, 826 Hillside avenue, who will acknowledge any sum sent to him. The treasurer or any governor of the hospital will welcome any inquiry, it is announced, from one desirious of any particulars regarding the institution. "The situation is serious," said a governor today, "and it is earnestly hoped that the condition will be appreciated and the income of the hospital enlarged sufficiently to meet all requirements."

CORNISH AND PRICE ARE NOW FOR MARTINE

Senator Jacob C. Price, of Sussex county, has yielded to the overwhelming sentiment of his county and now declares that he will vote for James E. Martine for United States Senator. He and Senator Cornish were in conference with James Smith, Jr., yesterday at Shanley's restaurant, Times Square, New York City. Their ultimatum was that they would vote for Martine on every ballot.

Senator Price, until a few days ago was classed as one of the most stalwart supports of James Smith, Jr. Friends of Governor Wilson feared that Senator Price would be one of the legislators who could not be influenced to desert Smith, but the tremendous display of public opinion in favor of upholding the direct primary principle has had its effect upon the Sussex Senator. It is expected that Assemblyman Meyer, of Sussex, will soon follow the action of Senator Price.

According to reports received from Warren county today, Senator Johnston Cornish is preparing a formal statement which, if necessary, he will issue before the end of the week declaring himself for Martine. Mr. Cornish has been a close political friend of former Senator Smith for many years and he is using his influence in an effort to induce the latter to withdraw, in the hope that it will not be necessary to add to his humiliation by openly deserting him in the Senatorial fight.

Assemblyman George Cole, of Warren, who lives in Phillipsburg, finds his neighbors thoroughly aroused over the possibility of his vote being given to Smith. Petitions are being circulated and signed by hundreds of Democrats urging him to vote for Martine, who has for many years been popular in Warren, which is part of the Congressional district in which he has been a candidate for Representative in two campaigns. Assemblyman Cole admits that it would be political suicide for him to vote for Smith.

There is no evidence from Mr. Smith himself that he purposes doing anything but remaining in the fight to the end. He has engaged Room 100 in the Trenton House, from which many notable political battles in New Jersey have been directed, and plans to be in Trenton next Monday and to remain until a Senator is elected. His closest political friends now admit that he has not a chance of being chosen Senator.

COMMUNITIES URGENT FOR MARTINE'S ELECTION

In order to show the true sentiment of the Democratic voters of Warren county in regard to the United States Senatorial fight, petitions are being circulated and are being numerously signed. These petitions will be presented to Senator Johnston Cornish and Assemblyman G. B. Cole next Monday.

The petitions read as follows:

"We, the undersigned, residents and voters of the county of Warren, State of New Jersey, do hereby express our approval of the action of Hon. Woodrow Wilson, our new Governor, in the stand he has taken in keeping the pledges of the Democratic party upon the direct primary question, and in advocating the election of the Hon. James E. Martine for the office of United States Senator, he having received the majority vote for said office at the recent primary election, and we do hereby respectfully petition you to cast your vote at the coming election for United States Senator in favor of Hon. James E. Martine."

It is expected that these petitions will be circulated in every part of the county. The movement started in Phillipsburg, where Mayor J. H. Firth, a former Assemblyman and leader of the party in that city, is an enthusiastic admirer of Mr. Martine. Efforts will be made to get the names of the majority of the Democratic voters of that city on the petition.

With a view to presenting to the Legislature a petition urging the election of James E. Martine for United States Senator, former Mayor Isaac D. Gabel, of Bordentown, called upon Joseph P. Tumulty, the Governor's private secretary, yesterday. Mr. Tumulty suggested that the petition be given to one of the Burlington members in the Legislature, but Mr. Gabel said he new so much of political tricks that he had grave doubts as to whether the petition would reach its destination through those channels.

The petition was signed by 226 voters of Bordentown. Mr. Gabel's name headed the list. He declared that the people of his community were strongly opposed to sending James Smith, Jr., to the United States Senate.

Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, will conduct the Christian Endeavor meeting at the church at 6:45 o'clock tomorrow evening. The subject will be: "The Law of Prevailing Prayer."

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The Bucket and Engine company, of Scotch Plains, is considered second to none among the volunteer fire departments of the State. About four years ago there was some talk of disbanding the organization it not having the active membership strength required by the township fire ordinance. Today there is a waitng list of nearly a dozen men, who are unable to join on account of the ordinance which limits the membership of each company to fifty. New life put into the company, together with the work of Chief Charles Meyers and a few others, brought about the change and it is now one of the best in the State.

William Ward, who was arrested Thursday night by Marshal George Rabig for being drunk, was given a hearing yesterday morning before Judge Clark. William was very penitent and the court decided it would only cost $5.70 for William's first sight of city life. The fine was paid and Ward left for his home at Mount Horeb last night, a sadder but wiser man.

FOR BIG SHIP CANAL ACROSS THE STATE.

A ship canal across New Jersey, free for commerce of the world, is the proposition contained in a Senate joint resolution which has been prepared for introduction next Monday night. The plan is that the State shall acquire the necessary right of way from the Raritan to the Delaware River at Bordentown and that the Federal Government shall undertake the construction and maintenance of the canal.

The resolution would limit to half a million dollars the amount to be expended by the State, authorizing the right of way to be procured through either purchase or condemnation. The State would then cede the property to the government, thereby giving it entire control of the canal. The resolution was prepared by Assistant Attorney-General Nelson B. Gaskill at the request of the Ship Canal Committee, which met at the State house yesterday. The committee was appointed by the Governor at the request of the Philadelphia-Trenton-New York Deeper Waterways Association. It consists of David Baird, Peter Campbell, Samuel Heilner, Benjamin F. S. Brown and Frederick W. Donnelly.

News and Notes

BASEBALL.

Philadelphia baseball fans will view the Phillies in home and traveling suits next season which will be a complete change from the appearance of the team last season. The specifications were agreed upon yesterday, and William Gray was instructed to make up the pennant-chasing clothing. The home attire will be white with a scarlet band on the stockings and the visor of the cap, instead of the usual green. The sweater will be gray, with red trimmings. The traveling suit will be of a blue-gray material, with a fine blue stripe with a "P" on shirt and cap. The stockings will be gray, with a scarlet band.

Another member of the Philadelphia Nationals has sent in his signed contract to President Fogel. The latest addition is "Runt" Walsh, the all-around player, who did effective work whenever called upon last season. Walsh played in both the infield and outfield. He lives in Lima, O., and was purchased by the Phillies from the South Bend club of the Central League. He is only twenty-one year old, stands five feet ten inches and weighs 175 pounds.

Manager McCreedy of the Portland Pacific coast team, has made an offer to Manager Jennings, of Detroit, for the services of Jay Kirke, the sensational young second baseman of last year's Scranton team. Jennings says, however, that he intends to hold on to Kirke and give him a good tryout.

Manager Harry Lumley, of the Binghamton New York State League team, has signed Eddie Collins, the star twirler, who was the mainstay of the Utica club during the season of 1909. Collins played in the Pacific Coast League last year. Catcher Chic Raymond, of last year's local team, has informed Manager Lumley that he intends quitting the game.

The New York National League Club yesterday signed Outfielder John Murray, who has been a member of the club for two years. The New York American League club has received the signed contracts of Infielder Otis Johnson, last season with Jersey City, and Infielder Louis Litschi, last season with Lancaster, Pa.

GOLF.

According to Mr. Watson, secretary of the national governing body, most of the reports of the annual meeting relative to the putter resolution, were misleading. In some cases he says, only part of the resolution was published, while in others it was worded incorrectly. What Mr. Watson regards as important is the following note, or interpretation, which appears at the bottom of the resolution, and which was worded by the executive committee:

The shaft of a putter may be fixed at the heel or at any other point in the head. The term "mallet-headed," as above, when applied to putters, does not embrace putters of the so-called Schenectady type.

The word "above" in the note refers to that part of the resolution which reads: A golf club of the mallet-headed type is a club which is so constructed that the length of head from the back of the heel to the toe shall be less than the breadth from the face to the back of the head. The shaft may be fixed at the heel or at any other point in the head.

The Forest Hill Field Club has engaged Dave Honeyman as its professional for next season. Honeyman, who will report for duty on March 1, has arranged to make a brief visit to relatives at St. Andrews, Scotland. He will sail on Saturday. Jack Campbell, the present Forest Hill "pro," will remain there until the end of February. Honeyman was for several years connected with the defunct Arsdale Golf Club, but for the last two seasons he has had charge of the Sound Beach greens.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held at the First M. E. church Wednesday evening, January 25.

Rev. Dr. R. H. Campbell, of the borough, will preach at the West End Tabernacle tomorrow evening.

HIGH COST OF LIVING

Partly Explained by Greater Expense Incurred in Farm Productions.

VALUE OF PRODUCE $63,000,000.

New Jersey State Board of Agriculture Heras Reports of Officers —Parcel Post is Advocated.

Wonderful progress in farming in New Jersey and an incidental discussion concerning the high cost of living were among the important incidents of the annual session of the New Jersey State Board of Agriculture. Secretary Franklin Dye reported that the value of fram products during the past year was estimated at $63,000,000, an increase of $3,000,000 over last year. He said that this rate of increase has prevailed for the past ten years.

Mr. Dye referred to the high cost of living, and said that the increased cost of production is responsible for it in so far as it relates to the retail market values of farm products.

He showed that farm labor commands from $18 to $25 with board and from $32 to $36 without board per month.

The secretary said that in this State there is an excellent opportunity for turkey raising and advocated the establishment of a chair in turkey husbandry in connection with the State agricultural college at New Brunswick.

Discussing the price of beef in the retail market, Mr. Dye said it was due in some measure to the fact that home raised beef is almost a thing of the past in this section. He suggested that the farmers of New Jersy would find profit in the raising of beef in New Jersey. Mr. Dye presented statistics showing that the poultry raisers of New Jersey estimate that the annual value of chickens produced in this State is $10,000,000.

He also showed that the hog raising business is going back in this State and said there are 9,000 less head of swine today than there were fifteen years ago.

With the officers of president and vice-president of the board made temporarily vacant by the illness of Dr. E. B. Voorhees, of New Brunswick, and J. T. Cox, of Whitehouse, the annual meeting of the board was opened. Secretary Franklin Dye presided at the opening and officially notified the board of the illness of Dr. Voorhees, and Mr. Cox suggested that a presiding officer pre tem. be selected. State Senator George W. S. Gaunt, of Mullica Hill, was unanimously chosen.

The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. Dr. George B. Wright, State commissioner of charities and correction. In assuming the chair, Senator Gaunt said that through the illness of President Voorhees and vice-president Cox, the hand of affliction rests heavily upon the agriculturalists of New Jersey and asked that resolutions be passed expressing regret at their illness. This was done when the board adopted the report of the executive committee, which contained the resolutions. Sessions of the board will continue until Friday afternoon.

E. R. Collins, chairman of the transportation and freight rate committee of the board, advocated a parcel post law for the benefit of the farmers who now, he said, have trouble in securing satisfactory delivery of small packages from the cities.

Mr. Collins scored the express companies, saying "they deliver about as they see fit, and if you don't care for the kind of service they give, you have to take it any way." He said that the income to the government by parcel post would materially decrease the annual postal deficit and would result in increased pay for the rural mail carriers.

The report also dealt with freight rates and showed that they had been generally increased during the past year, though farmers of New Jersey have been seriously affected.

Mr. Collins said that in some instances the railroads seemed willing to co-operate with the farmers, and in this connection he named the Central Railroad of New Jersey, which has arranged a special tariff for agricultural lime shipped form points in this State and in Pennsylvania to New Jersey farmers. Secretary Dye advocated that steps be taken by the board to secure greater financial support from the State for the advancement of agriculturals. He showed that now the State appropriated $8,000 a year for agriculture, while it gives much more money for causes far less productive of revenue. He suggested that the annual appropriation should be at least $16,000.

A. J. Rider, one of the best known cranberry growers in the United States, made a short address, in which he showed that New Jersey was rapidly returning to her place as the greatest cranberry raising State in the United States. He gave statistics which showed that the production of this fruit in this State last year amouned to 115,000 barrels. He predicted that in the future New Jersey will again lead in cranberry production, as she led until about 1890.

PRINCETON FEDERATION'S FIRST ANNUAL DINNER

For the purpose of furthering the interests of Princeton University in the State, one hundred picked men, members of the Federation of Princeton Clubs of New Jersey, met last night at Iliand's, in Market street, Newark. They dined, talked business and sang songs. The occasion was the first annual dinner of the federation, though from the character of the speeches it was evident that business, not pleasure was the main concern of those gathered together.

Henry J. Cochran, of the Plainfield Princeton Club, is vice-president of the Federation, and in addition to him, others present from Plainfield last night were DeWitt C. Ivins, James P. Murray, Albert D. Beers, Owen H. Fleming, Dr. B. Van-D. Hedges, C. Ames Brooks and Lawrence Tweedy.

Wilson Farrand, of Newark, is president of the Federation, and Edward J. Patterson and C. Ames Brooks are members of the board of governors.

Ready for Baseball Season.

Clifford Randolph, the baseball pitcher, has entirely recovered from a severe attack of typhoid fever, and is as well and strong as ever. He has been retained this season by the Providence Eastern League club and expects to report for work during the latter part of February or first of March. Randolph pitched six games for Providence last season, and did good work, so much so that the manager feels sure that he will make good. The club will train in Providence this season, instead of going south.

Firemen Put Out Tree Blaze.

An old tree, standing on Elm place near the brook, was set on fire by boys some time ago and continued to smolder. It began blazing up early last evening and people in the neighborhood notified fire headquarters. A hose wagon was sent out and the men extinguished the blaze with chemicals.

H. W. Herrman will occupy the pulpit at the First Presbyterian church, tomorrow. In the morning he will speak on "Man in the Image of God," and in the evening on "Forgetting the things that are behind."

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

New York went wild over the "Terzette Buffo," the brilliant musical travesty on the famous concerted numbers of grand opera, which is one of the many bright spots in the score provided for "Madame Sherry" by Karl Hoschna. Accepted seriously this number would not be much unlike the sextette in "Lucia" or the quartette in "Rigoletto:" but following the amusing situation in "Madame Sherry" and rendered by the cleverly drawn comedy characters in the piece, it becomes as hilariously funny as it is fascinating musically. The sextette which renders the "Terzette Buffo," is composed of Edward M. Favor, Tessa Kosta, Edith Sinclair, R. Emmet Lennon, Emilie Hayward and Joe Smith Marba. "Madame Sherry is to be given at The Plainfield Theatre, Monday, January 23.

One of the most interesting events of the season will be the engagement at the Plainfield Theatre on Saturday, January 28, matinee and night, of Miss Ruth St. Dennis in the new series of dances which she has constructed on such records as are extant of the religion and cusoms of ancient Egypt.

Miss Ruth St. Denis.

FINDS A MARKET FOR "THIRTY-CENT" STOCK.

The chance purchase of 346 shares of the Cranberry Lake Amusement Company for thirty cents for the block, by Walter D. Wild, at the bankruptcy sale of securities of William D. Ackerman, on December 30 last, will net him a big advance on what he paid for the stock, if he cares to dispose of it.

Thursday James French, of Byram Township, a well-known landowner, of that country, came here to buy the stock, stating that the land on which the buildings of the amusement company stood belonged to him and was occupied by the company by virtue of a lease. He wants the stock in order to get possession of the land.

Mr. French had a conference with Mr. Wild, the outcome of which cannot be learned. Mr. Wild purchased the stock as a joke. It represented a par value of $34,600. He fared better than Deputy Surrogate S. S. Martin, who purchased a large block of the W. D. Ackerman Market Company stock for $1. When Martin went to pay for the stock and get the paper he found that it had been pledged as collateral at one of the Cranbery banks.

THE PART PLAYED BY THE TELEPHONE OPERATOR

How She Is Trained for Her Position, Which is More Difficult Than the Public Supposes, and What She Does to Facilitate Communication.

The telephone operator is one of the most important elements in our daily lives. Though unseen, how much she has to do with the smooth running of the day's business and social activity! If a person's telephone calls go through without friction, his day seems a success; conversely, if he is delayed in his telephone connections, or if he gets wrong numbers on his calls, he feels that the day's work has been dismally unsuccessful. In fact, he is in the wrong attitude to transact his business over the wire if he has had a lot of seemingly needless delays in obtaining connection. It is well known that the absence of irritation is essential to successful business conversation. Successful business men never show anger. Irritation, as the rssult of course work by the telephone operator, might result in serious injury to a man's business interests.

Doubtless a man whose business deal fell through for this reason would not realize that this was the reason for the failure; but it is a fact, nevertheless, and for that reason the training of operators and the resultant excellence of service is a primary consideration to the Telephone company. It is peculiar that a half billion dollars, country-wide corporation should be conducting a business of such a nature that these farfetched considerations have to be studied and borne in mind. It illustrates the endless details of the telephone business.

Moreover, the thorough training of operators is only one of the abstruse subjects to which the successful telephone company has to give minute study.

To have the irritation of the subscriber, the New York Telephone company has actually made elaborate studies of the "don't answer" situation. We would naturally think that if a calling subscriber obtains the reply, "don't answer" from the operator, that reply would close the incident for the time being, because it would mean that the called subscriber was out; but that is not always the case. Telephone engineers have reduced the "don't answer" percentage to a considerable degree by finding the various reasons for the condition. There are many other minute studies being made by the Telephone company which result in the betterment of its service; and the benefit of this close application to the details of its business is rectified in the accompanying chart which appears in connection with this article, showing two curves for the New Jersey division of the company: First, the increase in number of telephones during the period of January 1, 1907 to December 1, 1910; second the decrease in number of written complaints of service over the same period. Probably nowhere in the world is telephone service being rendered more smoothly than in New Jersey and this accounts largely for the popularity of the service of the New York Telephone company.

It has been a relief among many telephone subscribers that the operators were trained on the company's switchboard, starting with no qualifications except, perhaps, a pleasant voice. This is farthest from the truth. A thoroughly equipped school is maintained by the company in Newark with a lecture room and experienced teachers, with charts and everything with which the student should become familiar in order to take up her duties at the subscriber's switchboard. In addition there is a practice switchboard with room for 18 students. For days and days they practice so as to become expert at the purely mechanical part of the work as well as with the knowledge of operating, the set phrases used in answering subscribers, etc., etc. On account of the large territory covered by the Newark school department, it has been found advantageous to establish branch schools in the following districts:

Paterson—Where students are trained for Passaic, Hackensack, Englewood, Ridgewood, etc.

Elizabeth—Where students are trained for Cranford, Staten Island offices, etc.

Plainfield—Where students are trained for New Brunswick, Somerville, South River, etc.

Morristown—Where students are trained for Summit, Dover and Madison.

In addition to these branch schools, there is another very important one at Asbury Park, the Monmouth county school, which is established annually and kept going very briskly during the months of March, April, May and June, during which brief time on an average of about one hundred students are engaged and trained for the shore offices, which have a very busy, but short-lived season of three summer months, (middle of June, July, August to about middle of September).

The Telephone company figures its average time of making a connection both the local and the toll, down to fractions of seconds, and the motions of a trained operator in making these connections are more like flashes than movements.

Telephone operating is one of the most exact sciences. The operator is trained to know precisely what to do in all circumstances. Out of one hundred thoroughly educated operators, everyone would say the same thing to a subscriber and do the same thing, if in the same situation. There is no conceivable situation for a telephone operator which she and the organization behind her cannot handle without hesitation. The public does not realize what this means. The caring for local calls is easy but as soon as a call is made for outside points, even the most distant, or unheard of, say Four Corners, N. Y., (which contains three Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say goodbye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids or ankles; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K-1239 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

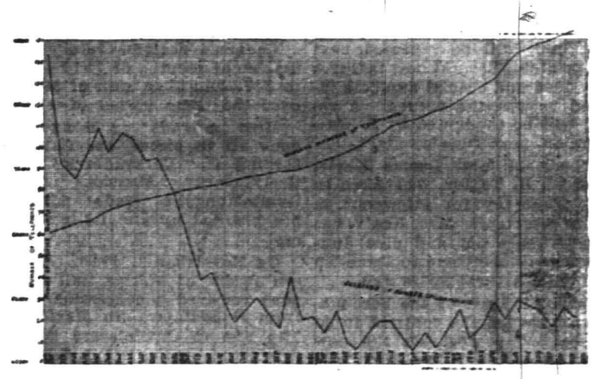
telephones and is located somewhere in the hills of Staten Island) she must know two routings for this call, preferable and secondary, so that the connection may be started without delay. She knows whether the preferable routing is via Perth Amboy, via Newark or via the "Jersey Toll Board" in the Cortlandt street building of the company in New York city. By the time the operator knows the location of and the routings to every "Four Corners" within fifty miles of New York, she knows some local geography.

But geography is the least of the operator's knowledge. The technical knowledge of the switchboard itself, the knowledge of what to do in this situation and that situation, how to handle long disance calls, etc., make a volume of studies to be pursued. It is indeed well that the Telephone Company maintains a school. Pictures of the interiors of this school in operation will give some idea of it.

There are instructors employed who are graduates from the practical work and know the business itself and its routine to the last word. "You see," said a telephone man, when talking to The Daily Press reporter about it, "we have to educate operators not only to care for the growth in our subscribers' lists, but to take the place of operators who get married. In order to be prepared for any emergency the Telephone company maintains an ample force of experienced operators who are at all times in readiness to be called into service. If we could only invent some means to prevent them from getting married! Some times in a big office we have an epidemic of marriages and it looks as if all our chairs would be emptied. It is a serious situation. The average working period of an operator is three years because usually it is marriage that severs her connection with us. After they get used to the exhilaration of our work, it is hard to tempt them with any oher but house work."

"The successful applicants for positions are given preliminary instruction in their own locality but are asked to attend the school at Newark for certain parts of their education which are not available where there is no school, such as the actual practice on the switchboard, etc."

In the school lectures are given on operating methods and on the routing of the calls mentioned above. These lectures are supplemented by recitations on the subjects studied and by actual work at practice switchboards. The student operators are taught: (1), the various parts of the operating equipment; (2), the telephone geography of New York and vicinity; (3), the proper method of completing any call; (4), the necessity of being courteous in all relations with the public. No operator is graduated from the school until she has satisfied the principal that she is qualified to do work in a central office and to handle calls of any character. The public suffers no inconvenience from amateurish efforts of employes unfamiliar with their work. The school course is four weeks or more and the students are paid while learning.



An interesting chart showing the results of 3 11-12 years of effort to render good telephone service in New Jersey. The downward curve shows a decrease in the number of complaints from the public from 143 per month to 21 per month. During the same period the upward curve shows an increase in the number of telephones from 64,000 to 101,773.

N. Y AMUSEMENTS.

At the New York Hippodrome the triple spectacular show made up of "The International Cup" "The Ballet of Niagara" and "The Earthquake" continues its prosperous season. Among the specialties are the Curzon Sisters, otherwise known as the flying butterifles in their aerial specialty; Victoria Codona, queen of the slack wire; Bradna and Derrick in their charming and graceful equistrian act; the Jos. De Kos Troupe of equilibrists including their novelty little acrobatic "Bouncing Buttons," Sim Nederwald's Darwinian Jockey act; the Patty Bros. head balancers; the four Nightons as picturesque poseurs and several others of equal merit. The performing animals including the baby bears and elephants delight the little folks. The dazzling "Ballet of Niagara" with the great Niagara Falls scene; the Flight of the aeroplane; the Yacht Race, the thrilling Shipwreck; the Earthquake scene and Tidal Wave, as well as the beautiful aquatic finale with its hundreds of gaily clad men and women, its flying Ballet and Diving mermaids, all these make up what is in the aggregate undoubtedly the biggest entertainment of its kind in existence.

Henry Miller's new play, "The Havoc," by H. S. Sheldon, has proved an instant success at the Bijou theatre in New York. The representative New York critic not only praises the play in almost extravagant terms, but declare that in it Henry Miller does the finest acting of his brilliant career. "For Henry Miller as actor," says the New York Telegram, "a new play called 'The Havoc' was selected by Henry Miller as manager with such skill that again the actor-manager scored an immediate hit which is likely to rival 'The Great Divide' in popularity and to create as much animated discussion as did that earlier success." The New York Times says: "The public which patronizes the theatres in this city is once again debtor to Henry Miller. For in offering H. S. Sheldon's play, 'The Havoc,' at the Bijou theatre, Mr. Miller has introduced an author who combines a very fresh and timely inspiration with exceptional power of dramatic expression. It is in short an exceptionally fine play, and one which if it bore the name of a Continental dramatist of known distinction would be at once and unhesitatingly accepted as a real work of art."

GIVES VICTORY TO SOMERVILLE

An opinion has been handed down by Vice-Chancellor Walker which, besides denying the Somerville Water Company a preliminary injunction to restrain the borough of Somerville from preventing the company from laying a thirty-six-inch main through Cliff street, raises grave questions as to the legality of the company's incorporation and its power to operate under its charter. The vice-chancellor took the view that in any event it was the duty of the company to satisfy the inhabitants of Somerville why it proposed to lay a huge main when a pipe only a fraction of the size would supply all the likely needs of the community for a period of at least fifty years to come.

From the general trend of his opinion the vice-chancellor left no doubt that in his mind there was something more in the scheme of the company than merely to supply Somerville and one or two additional municipalities with water. In any event, he said, the company must demonstrate its full legal right to lay the pipes before any injunction would lie against the municipality.

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

The Great Conservation Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

By this time every person in the room was tense with interest. They all knew Gregg and his imperious methods. Some of the cattlemen in the room had suffered from his greed, and, while they were not partisans of the supervisor, they were glad to see him face his opponent fearlessly.

Lize delivered a parting blow: "Bullfrog, you and me are old timers. We're on the losing side. We belong to the 'good old days' when the Fork was a 'man's town' and to be 'shot up' once a week kept us in news. But them times are past. You can't run the range that way any more. Why, man, you'll have to buy and fence your own pasture in a few years more or else pay rent same as I do. You stockmen kick like steers over paying a few old cents a head for five months' range; you'll be mighty glad to pay a dollar one of these days. Take your medicine—that's my advice." And she went back to her cash drawer.

Redfield's voice was cuttingly contemptuous as he said quite calmly: "You're all kinds of asses, you sheepmen. You ought to pay the fee for your cattle with secret joy. So long as you can get your stock pastured (and in effect guarded) by the government from June to November for 20 cents or even 50 cents per head you're in luck. Mrs. Wetherford is right. We've all been educated in a bad school. Uncle Sam has been too lazy to keep any supervision over his public lands. He's permitted us grass pirates to fight and lynch and burn one another on the high range (to which neither of us had any right), holding back the real user of the land—the farmer.

Gregg was silenced, but not convinced. "It's a long lane that has no turn," he burst out. "You think you're the whole United States army! Who gives you all the authority?"

"Congress and the president."

"There's nothing in that bill to warrant these petty tyrannies of yours."

"What you call tryannies I call defending the public domain," replied Redfield. "If I had my way I'd give my rangers the power of the Canadian mounted police. Is there any other state in this nation where the roping of sheep herders and the wholesale butchery of sheep would be permitted? From the very first the public lands of this state have been a refuge for the criminal, a lawless no man's land, but now, thanks to Roosevelt and the chief forester, we at least have a force of men on the spot to see that some semblance of law and order is maintained. You fellows may protest and run to Washington, and you may send your paid representatives there, but you're sure to lose. As free range monopolists you are cumberers of the earth, and all you represent must pass before this state can be anything but the by-word it now is."

The whole dining room was still as he finished, and Lee Virginia, with a girl's vague comprehension of the man's world, apprehended in Redfield's speech a large and daring purpose.

Gregg sneered. "Perhaps you intend to run for congress on that line of talk."

Redfield's voice was placid. "At any rate, I intend to represent the policy that will change this state from the sparsely settled battleground of a lot of mounted hoboes to a state with an honorable place among the other commonwealths. If this be treason make the most of it."

Cavanagh was disturbed, for, while he felt the truth of his chief's words, he was in doubt as to the policy of uttering them. He rose. "I must be going," he said, with a smile.

Again the pang of loss touched her heart. "When will you come again?" she asked in a low voice.

"It is hard to say. A ranger's place is in the forest. I am very seldom in town. Just now the danger of fires is great, and I am very uneasy. I may not be down again for a month."

The table was empty now, and they were standing in comparative isolation, looking into each other's eyes in silence. At last she murmured: "You've helped me. I'm going to stay a little while anyway and do what I can."

"I'm sorry I can't be of actual service, but I am a soldier with a work to do. Even if I were here I could not help you as regards the townspeople. They all hate me quite cordially, but Redfield, and especially Mrs. Redfield can be of greater aid and comfort. He's quite often here, and when you are lonely and discouraged let him take you up to Elk Lodge."

He extended his hand, and as she took it he thrilled to the soft strength of it. "Till next time," he said, "good luck."

CHAPTER V.

VIRGINIA TAKES ANOTHER MOTOR RIDE.

LEE VIRGINIA'S efforts to refine the little hotel produced an amazing change in Eliza Wetherford's officers. The dining room swarmed with those seeking food, and as the news of the girl's beauty went out upon the range the cowboys sought excuse to ride in and get a square meal and a glimpse of the "queen" whose hand had witched "the old shack" into a marvel of cleanliness. Generally they failed of so much as a glance at her, for she kept away from the dining room at mealtime.

Lee Virginia was fully aware of this male curiosity and vaguely conscious of the light which shone in the eyes of some of them (men like Gregg). She had begun to understand, too, that her mother's reputation was a barrier between the better class of folk and herself. But as they came now and again to take a meal they permitted themselves a word in her praise, which she resented. "I don't want their friendship now," she declared bitterly.

As she gained courage to look about her she began to be interested in some of her boarders.

So far as the younger men were concerned, she saw little to admire and much to hate. They were crude and uninteresting rowdies for the most part. She was put upon her defense by their glances, and she came to dread walking along the street, so open and coarse were their words of praise.

Few of these loafers had the courage to stand on their feet and court her favor, but there was one who speedily became her chief persecutor. This was Neill Ballard, celebrated (and made impudent) by two years' travel with a wild west show. He was tall, lean, angular and freckled, but his horsemanship was marvelous and his skill with the rope magical.

He had lost his engagement by reason of a drunken brawl, and he was now living with his sister, the wife of a small rancher near by. Virginia despised the other men, but she feared this one, and quite justly.

The Greggs, father and son, were in open rivalry for Lee also, but in different ways. The older man, who had already been married several times, was disposed to buy her hand in what he called "honorable wedlock," but the son, at heart a libertine, approached her as one who despised the west and who, being kept in the beastly country by duty to a parent, was ready to amuse himself at any one's expense. He had no purpose in life but to feed his body and escape toil.

The chivalry of the plains, of which Lee had read so much and which she supposed she remembered, was gone. She doubted if it had ever existed among these centaurs. Why should it inhere in ignorant, brutal plainsmen any more than in ignorant, brutal factory hands?

There came to her now and again gentle old ranchers—"grangers," they would be called—and shy boys from the farms, but for the most part the men she saw imbittered her, and she kept out of their sight as much as possible. Her keenest pleasures, almost her only pleasures, lay in the occasional brief visits of Cavanagh as he rode in for his mail.

Lize perceived all these attacks on her daughter and was infuriated by them. Her brows were knotted with care as well as with pain, and she incessantly urged Virginia to go back to Sulphur. "I'll send you money to pay your board till you strike a job." But to this the girl would not agree, and the business by reason of her presence went on increasing from day to day.

To Redfield Lize one day confessed her pain. "I ought to send for that doctor up there, but the plain truth is I'm afraid of him. I don't want to know what's the matter with me. It's his job to tell me I'm sick, and I'm scared of his verdict."

"Nonsense!" he replied. "You can't afford to put off getting him much longer. I'm going back tonight, but I'll be over again tomorrow. Why don't you let me bring him down? It will save you $12. And, by the way, suppose you let me take Lee Virginia home with me. She looks a bit depressed. An outing will do her good. She's taken hold here wonderfully."

"Hasn't she? But I should have sent her away the very first night. I'm getting to depend on her. I'm plumb foolish about her now—can't let her out of my sight, and yet I'm off my feed worrying over her. Gregg is getting dangerous. You can't fool me when it comes to men. Curse 'em! They're all alike, every one of them. I won't have my girl mistreated, I tell you that. I'm not fit to be her mother. Now, that's the truth, Reddy, and this rotten little back country cow town is no place for her. But what can I do? She won't leave me so long as I'm sick, and every day ties her closer to me. I don't know what I'd do without her. If I'm going to die I want her by me when I take my drop, so you see just how I'm placed."

She looked yellow and drawn as she ended, and Redfield was moved by her unwonted tenderness.

"Now, let me advise," he began after a moment's pause. "We mustn't let the girl get homesick. I'll take her home with me this afternoon and bring her back along with a doctor tomorrow."

"All right, but before you go I want to have a private talk. I want to tell you something."

He warned her away from what promised to be a confession. "Now, now, Eliza, don't tell me anything that requires that tone of voice. I'm a bad person to keep a secret, and you might be sorry for it. I don't want to know anything more about your business than I can guess."

WANTS BUSINESS MEN TO GET INTO POLITICS

Governor Woodrow Wilson was one of the speakers at the dinner of the Jersey City Board of Trade at the Jersey City Club, Thursday. President Jacob Gould Schurman, of Cornell, had just spoken of tariff experts.

"There is no such thing as experts in human relations," Governor Wilson said, "in friendship, pity, sympathy and appreciation of responsibilities to one another, in respect to humanity and common happiness. What the politicians are dealing with is human relationship. Are you men projecting your thoughts beyond the areas of business? The great mass of people in Jersey City never have a look in on a company like this, and never enter into the councils that you enter into. When planning in connection with your business how much community are you thinking of? Do you suppose you ought to leave the emancipation of the commonwealth of New Jersey to your legislators? Do you not know that we are all parties in this thing? No community is greater than the heart and conscience of the people who constitute it.

"It has been truly said that business standards have been improving, and that the kind of corruption we have complained of is decreasing. No business can possibly prosper which has been touched by corruption. The rarest thing in the world is moral courage, and the best asset a man can have is moral courage. Every community is kept on its feet by the men who are afraid of nobody. What we all admire is the man who insists on saying what he believes to be true. It is the duty of every American to serve all Americans. It is the duty of every man to be a public man."

Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey had this to say about those who may collect graft from his corporation:

"I serve notice on grafters all over the state that we are strong, the Public Service is, and our horns are out."

GOVERNOR HOLDS NON-PARTISAN TALK

Governor Wilson held a conference in New York on Monday with men of varying shades of political opinion, but all aligned with him as to his policy on State issues. The gathering, it was learned yesterday, was at the Hotel Martinique, and those who attended included legislators politicians and editors.

The Governor has issued from Trenton this statement.

"There was absolutely nothing secret about the conference held in the Hotel Martinique, New York. It was simply a continuation of the policy I have followed ever since my election of consulting every one who was interested in the reforms which concern the whole State. The conference was held for the convenience of consulting a large number of persons at the same time and getting their various points of view with regard to matters which ought not to be decided from any one point of view. It was not a conference to fix upon a program or determine anything, but merely to compare views from as wide a variety of sources as possible and to discuss the real demands of the public opinion of the State, as well as the best and most straightforward and thorough means of meeting those demands.

"Those present were Senators Gebhardt, Fielder and Osborne; John J. Matthews, the leader of the majority in the House; Matthew Ely, James Kerney, Walter and Joseph Dear, Mr. Tumulty, Mr. Rider, John J. Tracey and George L. Record.

"Speaker Kenny was prevented by illness from attending. Senator Silzer and Judge Mark A. Sullivan were prevented from attending by reason of engagements in court, and Wallace M. Scudder, of the Newark Evening News, also found it impossible to attend.

"Mr. Record is well known to be one of the best informed men in this State with regard to the details involved in most of the reforms proposed. He is particularly versed in legislation elsewhere as well as in New Jersey, with regard to ballot reform and corrupt practices, as well as with regard to the regulation of primaries. He generously consented to put him unusual store of information at the service of the conference, which was non-partisan in its purpose and meant in the public interest."

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., will meet Tuesday night, when the newly-elected officers will be in their stations for the first time.

The Women's Relief Corps, auxiliary to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., will meet Friday night, January 27. The new officers will be in charge.

Plainfield Council, No. 294, Jr. O. U. A. M., will meet Monday evening and complete arrangements for the entertainment of the G. A. R. veterans on January 30.

If the Knights had captured three straight games last night, they would have won the tourney, but by taking two out of three games, they tied the Moose for first place. The tie will be rolled off on Johnny Campbell's alleys Saturday, February 4. The Somerville Elks finished third in the tourney and the Red Men were fourth. Last night's scores:

ANTI-SALOON SPEAKERS HEARD BY LOCAL FLOCKS

John G. Woolley, J. Frank Burke and Others Tell of the Progress of the Local Option Campaign in New Jersey.

Hope in the attitude of Governor Woodrow Wilson toward the aims of the Anti-Saloon Leaguers is responsible in a measure for the claims made yesterday by some of the speakers in the local churches that local option would become a fact within the next two or three years. Among the ardent admirers of Governor Wilson is John G. Woolley who spoke in the First M. E. church in the afternoon. Mr. Woolley declared that while Prohibition in the abstract was all right he had become convinced that the Anti-Saloon League had struck the right and happy medium for brining the majority rule into vogue as it now is in forty-five of the States in the Union.

Speakers on the anti-saloon movement were heard in the Congregational, First Baptist, Crescent Avenue Presbyterian and Trinity Reformed churches and in Warren chapel. All the churches were well attended and the accumulations of funds for the furtherance of the work made a considerable amount, Preceding Mr. Woolley's address, Rev. T. Alex. Cairns spoke briefly on the necessity of concerted action of the people through their representatives in the legislature in securing for New Jersey the distinction of being lined up with the other States which have adopted local option laws.

"I am speaking now to the leaders, masters, moulders of sentiment in this community, and I can do no better than quote St. Paul, who says 'I beseech you, therefore brethren, that ye present your selves a living sacrifice,' I therefore speak to you as brethren and beseech you to give heed to the cry of the people in this cause.

"The Republican party and the Democratic as well have criticised the Prohibition party, but let us leave criticism. I beseech you to get more of the attitude of the apostle. This is the day of agitation and the work of the Anti-Saloon League is a part of it. It ought to be agitated until not a single dram shop remains in the country to tempt our youths to paths of unrighteousness and our women to shame.

"The drunkard is the victim of the liquor men, whose interests you are upholding. Physicians who prescribe alcohol, ministers who do not say absolute abstinence and the merchant who takes an occasional drink all are setting the drunkard the example. They will all have a tremendous account to settle at judgment day. The drinkers needs help more than criticism. If the Christian in this country cannot be stirred up to help along the movement to stop the indiscriminate selling of liquor. The Salvation Army and the W. C. T. U. are helping in their way but where they manage to save one the saloon is sending twelve men on the road to perdition.

"The Anti-Saloon League is doing the right thing in the right way and has stiuck the only medium to put the liquor traffic out of existence. The liquor dealer is as good as the man who sells him a license and the licenser is as good as the legislator who permits the law to be made which allows the traffic, but the real responsibility rests with the Christians of New Jersey."

At Trinity Reformed in the morning, G. R. Munroe, counsel for the league, declared that new chapters were being added to the old story of the fight against the liquor interests and that the sooner or later the strong voice of the majority of the people would be heard across the length and breath of New Jersey, which alone with Pennsylvania as a companion in the eastern States was out of the fold of the Local Option hosts.

He said that the church of God is now aroused and is united against the saloon. "More than two thirds of our area," he said, "is without a dram shop; thirty-two of the forty-eight States are now more than fifty per cent. dry, while poor old Jersey is less than two per cent. dry. Only three-tenths of one per cent. of the State of New Jersey is free of the saloon evil as against the 71 per cent. of the other States in the Union. Why this should be so I cannot conceive. We are no different in our make up than the people of other parts of the country. But we are progressing. Last year we held upward of 1,200 public meetings and we have aroused public sentiment against the saloon and that is a good beginning. What is needed to defeat the foe is publicity. Let us swamp the State with literature. Let us print it in foreign languages where needed and the result so eagerly looked for will become a fact.

"Pennsylvania, Nevada and New Jersey are the only three States in the Union who deny to their inhabitants the right to vote as they would like on the local option question. How long are you going to stand for it here?"

Joseph H. Collier, editor of the Issue, the Anti-Saloon League publication, spoke in Warren chapel yesterday morning in connection with the Anti-Saloon League Field Day. His talk for the most part was devoted to tracing the growth of the local option movement and explained where the difficulties were met in the attempt to bring about in this State, Pennsylvania and Nevada. He declared that New Jersey each year granted more liquor licenses than all the Southern States combined where local option prevails. He also showed how state after state has gone "dry" and by what means the "wet" territory is gradually decreasing in extent. He gave many interesting figures relating to the consumption of liquor in this state.

An Anti-Saloon League meeting was also held in Grace M. E. church, last night. E. G. Randall, superintendent of the Men's Industrial home at Newark, was the speaker. He explained the local option law in detail and outlined the policy of the league for the benefit of all not acquainted with it. His statements relative to the liquor business in New Jersey made a decided impression.

Rev. W. C. Kinsey, formerly pastor of the M. E. church, Dunellen, and now identified with the Anti-Saloon League, occupied the pulpit at the Monroe avenue M. E. church, last night. His talk was in the nature of a sermon and at the same time he gave a lucid explanation of the extensive work being carried on by the league, not only in this State but throughout the country. He gave a number of statistics to show the progress of the work and he said that he felt sure that local option would soon be a reality in New Jersey if the people were united in their demands for such restriction of the saloon.

In the absence of G. R. Munroe, who was unable to be present, Samuel Wilson, of Jersey City, financial secretary of the Anti-Saloon League of New Jersey, spoke at the Temple Baptist church, last night, addressing a good sized congregation. His topic was "The Church vs. the Saloon." The speaker showed plainly what each stood for, explaining what the league has accamplished and what it aims to do in the near future. He spoke hopefully of the prospects of securing the enactment of a local option law in this State and made a strong appeal for support along that line.

The speaker at the First Baptist church, yesterday morning, was Rev. T. Alex. Cairns, assistant State superintendent, and one who is thoroughly conversant with the work in New Jersey. Like the other speakers, Mr. Cairns told of what had been accomplished in the State during the past year, and especially of the movement to secure favorable Legislative action this winter. He expressed the opinion that the representatives of the league have that Governor Woodrow Wilson is in sympathy with the work of the league and it is the belief that with a new legislature the chances for a local option bill going through both the upper and lower branches, is promising. Mr. Cairns also spoke at the Mt. Olive Baptist church, last night, talking along the same lines and urging the support of the people in the movement.

J. Frank Burke, the State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, spoke in the Crescent Avenue church yesterday monirg, in favor of the temperance movement. He told the congregation how he had made his first fight for local option at Peoria, Ill., keeping it up until the state legislature passed a favorable vote. He afterward came to New Jersey but found that the "hammer and tong" method so successful in Illinois were not taken kindly here, in fact, as Mr. Burke expresed it, the legislature took him by the shoulders and showed him the door. Since then he has been carrying on the camqaign in a quieter but more powerful way. Mr. Burke concluded by quoting saloon statistics in this and other states.

WATER PROBLEM QUERIES

Charles H. Hand Propounds Some Pertinent Questions on Subject

LAWYER'S SERVICES NEEDED.

He Sees a Debt of Two and a Half Millions if Various Things Are Undertaken by the City.

Charles H. Hand, one of the largest taxpayers in the city who has not been invited to any of the various conferences, through The Daily Press today asks some relevant questions concerning the water problem and its solution. His letter follows:

"Editor, The Daily Press:—

"That the municipal ownership proposition, when applied to the water situation here in Plainfield, is a larger problem than most of us consider when it was first broached, has been made manifest by the informal hearings and conferences conducted by the councilmanic committee and by the public discussion held in the council chamber recently. Complex and perplexing questions are presented as the various phases of the scheme are considered, and it is safe to say that many who have studied the subject with some care have arrived at no conclusion satisfactory to themselves.

"What the people of Plainfield, and particularly the larger taxpayers want to get are reliable answers to the following questions:

"If the city should acquire, either by purchase or condemnation, the water pipes in the streets, could the water company lay a new system of mains and continue to supply water in the city as at present?

"If the city should obtain a supply through municipal works from some river and the company is permitted to continue in business in the city, would the taxpeyers who prefer to use Netherwood water obtained from the company be compelled to pay taxes to support the municipal plant?

"I do not see how a tax could be levied to support the municipal water-works only on those who use water supplied by the city, and yet it would seem to be very unjust to force others to pay taxes for that purpose.

Another question that ought to be answered is this:

"Suppose the city should endeavor to get a supply of water for a municipal plant from the ground within the territory of Plainfield, is there anything to prevent the water company from building a pumping station near the city's pumping station and pumping all the water it could get there, without regard to its effect on the city's supply? If the company could be prevented from pumping water within the city limits ond conveying it to outside towns, what could prevent the company from constructing a pumping station just over the city line, either in Fanwood, North Plainfield, or any other point just outside of the city line, and pumping all the water it could get to other towns?

"There is still another question that troubles people who undertake to discuss the matter, and that is, would the fact that the charter of the water company antedate the charter of the city have any effect on the rights that the company or the city have, as expressed in their charters?

"These are questions mostly of a legal character, and as we have at present no corporation counsel it would seem to me that the first thing to do is to get the very best advice on these questions that can be obtained. Our local lawyers are very quiet about the matter.

I was criticised some years ago for saying that a municipal plant would cost in the neighborhood of a million and a half dollars; but now we find that the estimates amount to nearly that much, and the actual cost no doubt would be a great deal more.

"Our city debt at present is over $600,000, and we must shortly spend several hundred thousand dollars more to enlarge our sewage disposal plant or build another. The advocates of municipal water-works should explain how this town can stand a debt of about two and a half million dollars and at the same time compete for business with the water company, which now has all the business in the city and a large business outside, and can supply better water than the city is likely to get from any of the rivers or brooks in Morris and Somerset counties."

CHARLES H. HAND.

To Harvest More Ice.

A large force of men is engaged today clearing the snow off of the lake at Watchung, controlled by the Natural Ice Company, and tomorrow the company will commence the work of finishing the filling of its icehouses at Watchung with fine ten inch ice.

MERGER MASS MEETING WILL BE HELD TONIGHT

All who are interested in the proposed merger of North Plainfield and Plainfield are invited to attend the Chamber of Commerce mass meeting tonight. An opportunity will be given anyone who desires to speak on the subject to express his views. There will be no formal speeches, the idea being to make the rally a popular one in every sense of the word.

Former Mayor W. L. Saunders has consented to act as chairman. The meeting will be called to order promptly at 8 o'clock at the chamber's headquarters in the Frost building.

If the sentiment warrants it, a bill will be presented in the Legislature at the present session to authorize such a consolidation.

POSTMASTER BIRD NOT A MATRIMONIAL AGENT

If Miss Lillian Ward, of 61 West 125th street, New York, wants to discover an anonymous writer and advertiser for a wife she will have to apply to some one besides Postmaster Bird, as he is "not running a matrimonial bureau."

Miss Ward applied to the postmaster for information of a supposed resident of this city who advertised for a wife or housekeeper, but failed to identify himself either by address or name. It is evident that the woman is in earnest and in her own esimation fills the requirements of the advertiser's demands, but as he is not known it is altogether likely that she will have to remain single, for the present anyway.

MARTINE CONFIDENT HE'LL BE SENATOR

Sanguine that he will be acclaimed United States Senator on Wednesday when the Legislature ballots in joint session at Trenton, James E. Martine is resting comfortably at his home here. He is as full of fight as ever and laughts at the report that a dark horse will be trotted out at the eleventh hour.

"My physician, Dr. Endicott, tells me," said Mr. Martine today "that I must stay in the house for ten days at least. As you see I am well as ever again but I have been through a seige with that grip and the doctor doesn't want me to get sick again.

"As to the assertion of Assemblyman Cole, of Warren county, that I insulted him by not asking him to ride in an automobile in which I am alleged to have been seated during the firemen's parade in Elizabeth, well that is all bosh. I never owned an automobile and as for that parade I went on foot.

"This fight is one of principle, it is bigger than men. It is a battle of Democracy against special interests. I got a letter this morning from Thortin Tait, of Metuchen, that pretty well illustrates how hard pressed is my opponent. Mr. Smith's morning paper claimed Mr. Tait for him. Here's a letter from Tait which shows that he resents the imputation and is loyal to me."

Some facts about the contest:

To elect a successor to Senator John Kean. New Senator's term begins March 4, 1911. Length of term, six years. First ballot on Senatorship will be taken Tuesday noon at which time the houses will vote separately. Next ballot will be taken Wednesday in joint session. Number of the Legislature, 81. Number of Democrats in Legislature, 51. Number of votes required to elect, 41, or majority of those present and voting. Number of Republicans in Legislature, 30.

Reiterates Martine Pledge.

The largest political entertainment and smoker in Westfield was held under the auspices of the Westfield Democratic Club, Friday night. The speakers were James C. Connolly, city attorney of Elizabeth; General Dennis F. Collins, member of the State Democratic committee; Assemblyman Calvin Brodhead and Hugh McLaughlin, Congressman Tuttle and local officers. Both of the Assemblymen reiterate their pledges to vote for Martine for United States Senator. James E. Martine sent regrets that he was unable to be present.

POLICE COURT BLOTTER

Liquor Responsible for Appearance of Many Before the City Judge.

VIOLATIONS OF ORDINANCES.

Zapaloupos Arraigned for Keeping Store Open on Sunday—Alleged Incorrigable Youth in the Toils.

The police court presented a lively appearance this morning for the first time since Judge DeMeza has been on the bench. Most of the cases were of the drunk and disorderly class, but there were others of greater import. Tryfos Zapaloupos was arraigned for selling on Sunday contrary to the city ordinances. He was allowed to go with a warning. Patrolman Mssler caught him selling soda water to three boys.

Andrew Bedford who was arrested on Saturday for being intoxicated was allowed to go when he promised to take the pledge for a year. The same thing happened with John Hogan. Frank Briggs and his brother Charles were given suspended sentences for being intoxicated and resisting an officer. They had apologized to Sergeant Overbaugh whom they had resisted and the judge was lenient with them as it was their first offense.

Frederick Waldron, of Bound Brook, frightened Mrs. Gray at the corner of Monroe avenue and Fourth treet on Saturday noght necessitating the attention of a physician Waldron was drunk. He was banished from town.

For fighting in the street Angelo Senecola, Ernest Delgado and Dominick Pasecola were arraigned by Patrolman McCarthy. All three denied the charge, but Judge DeMeza believed McCarthy and fined them $10 each with the alternative of spending thirty days in the county jail.

A charge brought against Edward Hamilton, a thirteen-year-old boy of the special school class, for indecent conduct was dismissed by the court. It was Miss Ball's intention to have the boy held for the juvenile court in Elizabeth, but enough evidence of incorrigibility was not produced and the case dismissed after the boy had been lectured. The boy will go back to school in spite of the fact that it was said there was no room for him.

A charge of conspiracy was brought by Max Schwartzman against Abraham Schwartzman and Charles Kurtzman. The case will be heard next Friday morning. Judge William Newcorn appeared for the accused men while Robert Newton Crane appeared for Max Schwartzman.

MAJOR DAISY ADDRESSES TWO LARGE MEETINGS HERE.

Major George W. Davis, of the Salvation Army Training College, New York, conducted two interesting services in this city, yesterday. In the morning he occupied the pulpit at Hope chapel and delivered a strong sermon, taking for his subject the woman at the well of Samaria and basing his remarks on the text John 4:10: "If thou newest the gift of God and who it is that saith to thee, give me to drink, thou wouldst have asked him and he would have given the living water."

In the evening Major Davis spoke at the Army hall, where after some hearty singing and several testimonials, he delivered a strong Salvation discourse on the parable of the house holder, taking his text from Matthew 20:6: "And about the eleventh hour he went out and found others standing idle and saith unto them, Why stand ye here all the day idle?" The speaker described the different calls of God to man from youth to old age or the eleventh hour of their life and showed the goodness of God to a procrastinating people.

Robbed in a Sleeper.

A slick thief, supposedly a Frenchman, robbed a sleeping passenger on a Lehigh Valley train at South Plainfield on Saturday night, getting away with $75. He slipped off the train after securing the money and is alleged to have come toward this city. He is described as being slender, about 5 feet 8 inches tall, wearing a light suit of clothes and a light overcoat. He has not been seen here.

Don't Forget Turkey Supper.

Don't forget the annual turkey supper to be held at Trinity Reformed church, Thursday and Friday evenings of this week, under the auspices of the Ladies' Christian Work Society. The committee has planned for a good time and will serve a fine turkey supper with all the trimmings.

FOOTPAD SNATCHED WOMAN'S HAND BAG

A footpad snatched a hand bag from Miss Ida Angleman, of 540 West Front street, on Saturday evening just after dark near the corner of Elmwood place and got away with it. The thief was chased by Miss Angleman who pursued him so closely that he was forced to jump a fence and in the darkness disappeared.

The bag contained besides 75 cents in money a commutation ticket and some valuable papers. No trace of the fugitive could be found by the police who were quickly on the spot. Miss Angleman is a sister of W. S. Angleman.

FIREMAN INJURED BY DISCHARGED TANK TOP

James Fitzpatrick, a fireman attached to Hose company No. 3, met with a painful accident while at work on the combination chemical engine at a slight fire in the West End, Saturday night. He was about to refill a discharged tank and was unscrewing the top when an accumulation of gas beneath suddenly forced it up. The heavy piece of metal weighing about fifteen pounds struck him squarely on the forehead.

The force of the blow stunned Fitzpatrick and also inflicted a bad gash over the left eye. He was taken in Chief Doane's auto to the office of Dr. Lufburrow where several stitches were taken in the wound. He was reported off duty today.

The fire was in a house at 229 Morris street occupied by Lawrence Peterson.

A slight blaze originated in the attic in some way and an alarm was turned in from box 86. It was put out with chemicals before any great damage had occurred. The property is owned by Welch brothers, of German Valley, and is fully covered by insurance. An investigation has failed to disclose the cause of the blaze.

TWO PLAYS PRESENTED BY HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS

A capacity audience witnessed the presentation of two plays in the High School auditorium on Saturday evening and laughed and applauded the youthful thespians to the echo. The medium of bringing to public notice the histronic ability of the junior class of the school was a pair of playlets just suited to their ability. That "Chums" and "My Lord in Livery" pleased everybody goes without saying.

Burnet Doane, in the title role of "My Lord in Livery," acted as to the manner born. Ease and self command were his He was ably supported by Miss Helen Woolley, who also showed marked dramatic ability. Nothing could have been better than Edward Hanrahan's handling of the English cockney dialect. Bruce Conlin also did some very amusing work.

These were in the cast: "Chums"—Roy E. Titsworth, James Lindsey, Elmer L. Hunting, Miss Helen L. Ryder, Miss Helen E. Platt; "My Lord in Livery"—Burnett O. Doane, Bruce Conlin, Edward Hanrahan, Theodore Champlain, Miss Helen L. Wooley, Miss Laura B. Bristol, Miss Mildred Brownlee.

The plays were given under the management of Frank P. Cullen, Dixon T. Philips, Schuyler W. Line, Edward Parker, Miss D. T. Day, S. B. Howe, Jr.

Pearson Kennedy.

Isaac W. Kennedy, sexton of the First M. E. church, received word this morning of the death of his only brother, Pearson Kennedy, which occurred at his home in Belfast, Ireland, about two weeks ago. Mr. Kennedy was about seventy years of age and had been in failing health. His death was not wholly unexpected. Mr. Kennedy visited his brother in Ireland last summer, it being the first time they had seen each other for a great many years, and both enjoyed the visit greatly. Mr. Kennedy is now the only one living out of eleven children. The dead brother is survived by a wife, three married sons and one daughter.

Past Chief's Banquet.

The past chiefs of the Knights of the Golden Eagle, of this district, will hold a district meeting and banquet at the Waldorf Hotel, Friday night. The Past Chiefs' Asssociation has a membership of about seventy, fifty of which will probably come to Plainfield.

MAYOR MOY ON THE JOB

He Enforces Ordinances on Sunday Closing and Public Hacks.

AFTER THE LUNCH WAGON.

Puts a Stop to Vehicle Blocking a Public Thoroughfare—No Smoking at Police Headquarters.

Mayor Moy is determined that the city ordinances shall be obeyed to the letter and has begun a crusade against the stores in which the habit has been maintained to open for business on Sundays. One Greek storekeeper, Tryfos Zapaloupos, of West Front street, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza this morning and warned. Another offense for him will mean a fine or imprisonment or both.

There are some forty stores of which the mayor has a record which are kept open for business on the Sabbath, all of which will receive a special notice to not offend again. It is true that some of these stores are owned and managed by those whose religion demands that they close their places of business on Friday at sundown and not reopen until Saturday at the same hour, but Mr. Moy believes that a strict interpretation of the law means that they shall not open on Saturday at all, and it is intended therefore, to have them remain closed all day on that day.

Another matter to which the attention of the Mayor has been called received his attention on Saturday night. Some of the hackmen at the North avenue station it is said have neglected to put the printed rate cards in their cabs and have attempted to overcharge their fares. Some also were accused of not wearing their badges on which the number of their licenses appear. Several were caught with these deficiencies and received a warning that will probably have a salutary effect.

Another thing which his Honor discovered and stopped was the smoking at police headquarters. This morning as he entered he noticed that the features of several of the court attendants were disfigured with cigars; and the outer room was filled with smoke. Immediately Sergeant Overbaugh was reminded that there was a police rule against the practice and thereafter smoking ceased.

The lunch wagon operated by Nathan Meyers on East Second street near the corner of Park avenue was ordered off the street by Mr. Moy on Saturday night, his Honor declaring that it had no right to obstruct the street at that point. A year ago objecions were raised to the presense of this wagon near the Marsh building, but the Common Council issued it a license. In event of fire and the necessity for the apparatus passing that point at night there is always the danger of collision. It is the general opinion that the wagon should be removed, especially as there is no power in the authorities to grant such a license.

BESLER A SPEAKER AT THE BIG BANQUET.

As chairman of the speakers' committee, William L. Saunders announced today that W. G. Besler, vice-president and general manager of the Jersey Central, would respond to a toast at the first annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce to be held at Truell Hall Monday night, February 13. Another speaker will be William J. Moran, a New York lawyer, who is prominent in the New York Civic Federation. He will take the Place of P. Tecumseh Sherman, his law partner, who will be unable to attend.

The other speakers probably will be Governor Wilson and John W. Mitchell.

MARTINE SURE.

Trenton, Jan. 23.—This afternoon Governor Wilson gave out the following statement: "There isn't any doubt about the result in the Senatorial contest; the Democratic Legislators mean to keep the parties' faith and Mr. Martine will be elected."

Mrs. William Manning.

William Manning, an aged and respected colored citizen of this city, died this morning at his home on West Fourth street, following an illness from a complication of disease. At various times Mr. Manning has conducted a small restaurant in the West End and he was also well known as a kalsominer throughout the city. He was a member of the Mt. Olive Baptist church and an attendant there. He is survived by a wife. Notice of funeral will be given later.

This Cat Has Nine Lives.

Twelve days without food and water, exposed to rain, snow and freezing cold and held fast by one foreleg in a trap on a wind-swept field, is the experience of a white kitten, the family pet in the family of W. J. Beam, near Denville. The somewhat emaciated feline, however, was able to walk when liberated Thursday, and does not seem ill.

FIREMEN CENSURED FOR NEWARK DISASTER.

Both the fire department and the State Department of Labor are censurable for the High street, Newark, factory disaster, in which twenty-five lives were sacrificed November 28.

Such is the gist of the findings of the grand jury for the first part of the December term, contained in a presentment handed up to Chief Justice Gummere at the courthouse Saturday.

The rebuke of the fire department is aimed at certain members rather than at the department as a whole. No names are mentioned, but those held liable are indicated.

Captain van Volkenburg, of Engine No. 4, which is directly opposite the burned plant, is taken to task for delaying in sending in an alarm.

The part played by Fireman Oscar Brown, of the same company, in rushing into the building at the outset and subsequently leaving while women employes ran about seeking aid on the fourth floor, is scored. The inquest questions the fitness of Brown to be a member of the department.

A Slight Mistake.

The big machine had gone over several thank-you-ma'ams, when the stout lady in the back seat leaned over and said to the chauffeur:

"Jenkins, I wish you'd be careful and pick out thin people to run over. Those last two bumped me awfully!"

WONDERFUL POSTAGE SYSTEM

At the Stamp Window.
Cast.

A stamp clerk.

A citizen who is not conversant with the postal laws.

The Citizen—A package for Dunellen. It weighs a pound. How much?

The Clerk—Sixteen cents.

"Whew, so much. I guess I'd better not send this other noe. It's the same thing going to a friend of mine in London. How much would that be?—weighs a pound."

"Twelve cents."

"How 's that?"

"You're mixed, arn't you? Sixteen cents to Dunellen and twelve cents to London, it that right?"

"Right you are."

"Can't quite figure it out as a business proposition why the U. S. can afford to send to England for twelve cents what it charges sixteen cents to carry to Dunellen, but I'll take your word for it. Here are two more packages; each one weighs five pounds. How much for one of them to Tokio, Japan?"

"Twelve cents a pound, 60 cents in all."

"Sure no one would kick on that—3,000 miles across America to San Francisco and then across the Pacific ocean for 60 cents. Great thing this U. S. postal service. Now here's the same thing for Scotch Plains, a five-pound package. How much?"

"Can't take it."

"Can't take it?"

"Limit on packages for transmission by mail four pounds. You'll have to send it by express."

"But you just took a five-pound package to ga to San Francisco and thence to Japan, and you won't take one to Scotch Plains at any price."

"That's right."

"Why?"

"Postal regulations."

"By Jove, but Uncle Sam is a corking business man, isn't he?"

WORLD ALMANAC HAS IT ALL.

In New Volume for 1911 Every New Fact Has Been Added.

All the phenomnenal growth and developement that have marked the progress of events throughout the wordl in 1910 are reflected and recorded in The World Almanac for 1911. To enumerate its new features would be to enumerate everything new and important that has taken place in the last year. Its great mass of statistical information on every subject in which any one would be likely to be interested has been revised and brought down to the last moment of the closing year, and so many new facts and figures have been added that apparently no information of value or importance has been omitted, while for accuracy The World Almanac has never been excelled.

At the Card Club.

"Is your husband an engineer?" asked Miss Cayenne, innocently.

"Certainly not," replied Mrs. Flimgilt. "Why do ypu ask?"

"I have several times heard him talking very earnestly about 'bridge' and 'dam' and things like that."—Exchange.

A Mid-Winter Sale of Shoes

This is the time that we get ready to average up our stocks, and so just before inventory we mark down all broken lots and many surplus lines, in order to insure their speedy dispersal.

As we never do anything by halves, we make these pre-inventory prices decidedly tempting. At the prices quoted below you can't resist buying if you'll take the time to look at the goods, even if not immediately in need of shoes. That's why we cut prices—that's why we suffer such a loss—to tempt you to buy now for future use. Read carefully about each lot—but better still, come in and look them over. This is how we maintain our reputation for brightness, freshness and newness of our goods.

News and Notes

BASEBALL.

Manager John McGraw will not go to Marlin until a few days before the first recruits arrive. He will leave New York about February 10, and will stop off at San Antonio, Tex., for a short visit to President John T. Brush. McGraw says that he has abandoned the idea of building a clubhouse on the Giants' training grounds this spring. There is difficulty in having the hot waters of the new mineral spring piped to the grounds. This spring is owned by a private corporation and not by the city, as McGraw was previously informed. The corporation tried to hold up the Giants for a fancy sum for the benefit of the waters. McGraw says that the old scheme of running to and from the bathhouse quarters is much better than having a clubhouse.

George W. Heckert, manager of the Trenton Tristate Baseball Club, who is trying to engineer the deal relative to the transfer here of the Williamsport club to Wilmington, is having troubles of his own. Heckert was given the assurance that the $2,400 would be forthcoming but it appears that some of the Delaware City people who had promised to put up the money have not been forthcoming, and are said to have wanted Heckert to promote a stock company and raise the money in that manner. Another hitch has occurred over the grounds. Eugene Stirlith, owner of the South Side grounds, offered the park for $1,000, and was to have met Heckert for a conference on the offer, but Heckert did not appear.

Robert Lee Hedges, owner of the St. Louis Browns, hasn't been able as yet to make any deals that will strengthen his club. He has heard from six club owners and has received several offers for Roy Hartzell. One of these offers came from the New York American League Club, it is said, but the Highlanders have slight chance of getting the Browns' handy man, as Manager Wallace considers Hartzell one of the few real ball players that he has.

The New York National League club Friday traded Infielder Arthur Shafer to the Boston Nationals for David Shean, a second baseman. Shafer has been with the New Yorks two seasons, while Shean, who is a graduate of Fordham University, played with the Philadelphia Americans and Nationals before joining Boston.

Robert Couchman, pitcher for the Rock Island team of the Three I League last year, signed a contract Friday with the Pittsburg National League team for the season of 1911. Eagle, the California pitcher, also signed a contract with the Pittsburg team. Eight pitchers have now signed for the Pittsburg staff.

PERSONAL.

Miss Louise Demarest, of the borough, has been visiting Miss Kathryn Reed, of Warrenville.

J. A. Powlison, of the firm of Powlison & Jones, has returned from a trip to Grand Rapids, Mich.

George Schmidt, of Watchung, who has been spending several days with friends in New York city, has returned home.

Mrs. J. Russell Coutts and daughter, of Cleveland, O., have been visiting Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Charles A. Eaton, of Watchung. They are now guests of friends at Litchfield, Conn.

Arthur Humble, of the borough, has recovered from slight injuries received a few days ago while trying to catch a train at the North Avenue station. He stumbled and fell on the ground, scratching and bruising his legs and hands.

David Rogers, formerly treasurer of the Plainfield theatre, and more recently holding a similar position at W. J. Counihan's theatre at Schenectady, N. Y., recently took a position with an advertising concern at the latter place and has been traveling through the New England States. He is now visiting friends in town.

Highest Manhattan Tower.
Manhattan Island, which already has the two tallest masonry buildings in the world, is to have a third, taller than either the Singer building or the Metropolitan tower. F. W. Woolworth, the merchant who is building it, announced a change of plans yesterday, by which the building gains sixty feet additional height.

The new structure will stand on lower Broadway between Barclay street and Park place, overlooking City Hall square, and occupying an entire block at the base. The extreme height is to be 750 feet, and the cost will be appoximately $12,000,000. The height of the Metropolitan tower is 700 feet 3 inches, and of the Singer building 612 feet 1 inch.

PLAINFIELD FIVES NO MATCH FOR MONTCLAIR

Both the first and second basketball teams of the Montclair Y. M. C. A., had an easy time of it with the local association teams at the Y. M. C. A., taking both games by large scores. The visitors, in charge of Physical Director George L. Listman, formerly of the Plainfield association, carried off all the honors, much to the disappointment of the supporters of the local five.

The first team from Montclair defeated the locals by a score of 55 to 22, while the second team won from the locals by the overwhelming score of 81 to 25. The visiting players showed their superiority in all departments of the game, throwing field goals with a deadly accuracy that was painful to watch from a local standpoint. The Montclair boys have not lost a game this season and they sustained their reputation here of being one of the strongest teams in the State. There were flashes of good work on the part of Plainfield, but it was nothing more than a flash. The visitors played a fast snappy, game, their passing and defensive work being noteworthy. Physisal Director Whittaker was the referee for the game between the second teams and G. M. C. Smith acted in the position in the game between the first teams. The lineups and scores:

Montclair—first—forwards, Rohn, Findlay; centre, Reasley; guards, Partridge, Calder.

Plainfield—first — forwards, Rickett, Naylor; centre, Cahoon, Manley; guards, Gavett, Fritts.

Field goals—Rohn 4, Findlay 6, Partridge 5, Calder 7, Rickett 3, Manley 2, Gavett 2, Fritts 2. Goals from foul—Findlay 2, Calder 2, Manley 2.

Montclair—second — forwards, Sigler, Wessenstein; centre, Saurez, Rishardson; guards, Truesdale Saulstein.

Plainfield—second — forwards, Peacock, Dunning, Thompson; centre, Newell, Jeffery; guards, Bryiniasky Newmiller.

Field goals—Sigler 11, Wessenstein 11, Saurez 14, Truesdale 3, Saulstein, Peacock 2, Dunning 4, Richardson 3, Bryiniasky, Newmiller.

For Two Big Battleships.

Uncle Sam may be in possession of the two biggest battleships in the world if Congress enacts into law an amendment incorporated in the naval bill Friday by the House Committee on Naval Affairs. The naval building program involves a total expenditure of $36,000,000. Of this amount $12,800,000 is made available for two battleships "of not less than 27,000 tons each." According to the information received by the committee, it is the purpose of the Secretary of the Navy under this authorization to let contracts for two battleships of approximately 30,000 tons each. Other items in the program include two colliers to cost $1,000,000 each, eight torpedo boat destroyers, $825,000 each, and four submarines, $500,000 each.

Airing the Dog.

"Are you going to take the children out in the automobile today, ma'am?" asked the nurse.

"Oh, no, not today," replied the fashionable woman; "I think Fido needs some air today."

UNITED STATES OFFERS TO LEASE LANDS FOR 99 YEARS.

President-elect Estrada, of Ecuador, called together the more prominent citizens of Guayaquil yesterday and discussed with them an invitation from the United Staaes that the Calapagos Islands might be leased for a term of ninety-nine years for the sum of $15,000,000.

Those present were unanimous in the feeling that such a proposal should be rejected, as the acceptance of it would be unpatriotic.

President Alfaro is here. During his absence from the capital, Carlos Freile Zuldumbide is performing the duties of the Chief Magistrate.

The Galapagos Islands, fifteen in number, are situated on the equator, extending ninety miles on each side of it, and are about 600 miles from the coast of Ecuador, to which they belong. They provide several good anchorages and may be dsirable as a naval base.

The possession of Galapagos Islands, because of their strategical position near the Panama Canal, has been a matter of diplomatic discussion for some years. Great Britain and France have both been reported as coveting a foothold there. Washington has not heretofore publicly figured in the matter, but the importance of a naval base so near the canal is understood readily, especially now that the question of fortifying the Panama Canal is underconsideration.

In February, 1905, Dr. Rendon, then the Minister of Ecuador at Paris, protested against the frequent reports thot his government proposed to sell the islands. He said that while the islands were eagerly sought by other governments no offer for them had been definately made.

The islands formerly were frequented by many vessels, which went there for guano. Of late years, however, the guano beds have become exhausted, and ships do not ordinarily stop there unless driven to seek a refuge. They are practically uninhabited.

The Brute.

"I suppose, Jennie, you wouldn't want to go to the concert Wednesday in your old hat?"

"You dear thing—I couldn't possibly think of showing myself in it?"

"That's what I thought, so I—

"What?"

"Bought only one ticket to the concert!"—Meggendorf Blaetter.

And a man will scratch, oh, my!
I mean, of course, he will scratch his vote,
But he'll never scratch pumpkin pie.

The Individualist.

"What is Biggins's grievanec against the railroad company?"

"He has two grievances; one is that some of the trains don't stop at his station, and the other that after he gets on board the train loses time by stopping at other stations."—Washington Star.

Oh, for a Dungeon!

Mrs. Naggins—Why don't you speak? I suppose you want to play the martyr and make believe that you suffer in silence.

Mr. Naggins—In silence! No, indeed, Maria! Why, a little silence would be a positive relief.

WOMAN'S READY WIT PREVENTS A BAD FIRE

Presence of mind on the part of Mrs. George Glover, of 226 East Ninth street, undoubtedly saved the house from serious damage by fire at noon today. A wooden mantle in the study of Rev. J. Y. Broek, who occupies rooms in the residence, became ignited from an open grate and started a brisk blaze. It was discovered by Mrs. Glover, who was alone at the time, and she acted in a manner worthy of commendation. She first closed all the windows and doors of the room to shut off the draught beside pulling what furniture she could out of the way and then telephoned fire headquarters.

Mrs. Glover's message gave the exact condition of the blaze and all the apparatus in the building was sent out. Because of the closed draught, the flames made slow progress, enabling the firemen to put them out quickly. Only one tank of the chemical engine was used. The damage will probably amount to about $100.

Acting Chief Jennings said later that Mrs. Glover had acted exactly as should have been done under the circumstances, otherwise a bad fire would have been the result. The house is owned by Mrs. C. T. Bull.

TOWNSHIP LINE TO BE SETTLED BY SURVEY

The Township Committees of North Plainfield and Warren Townships, met Saturday afternoon in the law offices of Codington & Swackhamer, who represent both townships, to arrange the settlement as to the dividing line getween the two districts. It was finally decided to authorize Alfred Binz, of Warren, and W. deLaR. Anderson, of North Plainfield, to engage F. A. Dunham, civil engineer, to establish the line.

The line in question is about seven miles in extent and runs near the farm of Henry Rogers at Dugway Hill. Both townships claim additional territory, but their rights will not be determined until the survey is made. It has been said that when the matter is settled it will show that North Plainfield township is entitled to about $70,000 additional in valuation.

Mr. Dunham will ascertain where the New Providence line starts and establish it. A report will be made at the next meeting of the committee, the date of which will be announced later.

There will be a mass meeting at Mt. Bethel Hall, tomorrow night, at 7:30 o'clock, to discuss the advisability of granting the telephone company a franchise to set poles and string wires throughout Warren township. The meeting promises to be a lively one.

EAST AFRICAN POLICE

An Inspector Visits New York and Tells of Their Methods.

Had to Go Hunting For Ivory In Order to Get Money With Which to Pay His Vacation Expenses.

New York.—When you have been promised a vacation by the boss, if you have a boss, or if you have decided to take one, being yourself the boss, what do you do?

Most likely you will begin to save up your dollars until the day you pack your suit case and put on that new vacation suit you bought in which you think you look so swell that none of the girls will be able to resist you. They do, though, don't they?

If, however, you were living in East Africa and again if you were a police inspector in that faroff corner of the earth you would prepare for your vacation in an entirely different manner. There saving up is almost unknown, and the financial means for the vacation trip are secured by going out into the jungle and killing something, says Inspector William J. Reilly of British East Africa, who returned recently to his post after visiting relatives here and inspecting the police system of New York.

Reilly didn't have the funds for the trip, but he did have the leave of absence, and so in the same territory where Colonel Roosevelt did some shooting at a dollar a word this police inspector went out and in two days bagged two elephants that netted him £134.

For several days Inspector Reilly was with the Roosevelt camp and is very proud of having gone on a number of shooting expeditions with the ex-president. He highly praised Colonel Roosevelt's accuracy with the gun.

Inspector Reilly has a little territory about 127 miles long to cover, and his assistants are four whites and between thirty and forty natives of the various tribes. His duties call for tracking a man perhaps a hundred miles through the jungles. Murders and robberies are naturally the chief crimes there, yet, he says, although he has under him perhaps a dozen different tribes of natives who are hostile to one another, he has but little trouble. Crimes are punished, rarely does a murderer escape, and punishment follows speedily.

Inspector William J. Reilly.

In East Africa the thumb prints of criminals are all taken, and it means more there than here, for without some such means of identification the officers could not know their man, for "they all look alike to us," he says. New York's system of lining up the crooks each morning for inspection by the detectives Inspector Reilly praises highly.

Transferred from the Dublin force to East Africa and having visited many of the great cities of the world and inspected their systems, Inspector Reilly says that for all the hard work and apparent isolation he would not wish to do duty anywhere except in East Africa. Through the strength of the British rule serious crime has ebbed to a minimum. The natives have learned that punishment is certain. They fear the "long arm" that catches them, no matter where they go, and the tribes have learned their lesson, too, and there is neither now nor is there likely to be any tribal war against the whites, although the latter are outnumbered a thousand to one.

The "bom-bom," as they term the Gatling gun, has put the fear of God and the whites in their hearts.

Of the opportunities for white settlers Inspector Reilly cannot speak too highly. The government will give any white settler of reputation, regardless of his nationality, 5,000 acres of agricultural land for the mere payment of the surveying fees and an annual payment of a penny an acre. On this land a man may become independent within two or three years. Rubber shows a profitable yield within a year, and two crops of wheat a year are obtainable and in some sections three crops. Ostriches, too, have proved a profitable venture.

Illustrating the possibilitits of trade with the natives, Inspector Reilly told of a brother officer who on his six months' leave went into the interior with $500 worth of trade goods, consisting of beads, brass wire, trinkets and cheap jewelry, and returned with $25,000 worth of ivory.

THE PLAIN OF GUISNES.

A Brilliant Spectacle. It Was When Transformed Into the "Field of the Cloth of Gold."

It was a magnificent display when Henry VIII. of England and Philip I. of France met in good fellowship on the plain of Guisnes.

The king's retinue had been selected from the noblest of the kingdom. Wolsey, with his 300 followers, headed the escort and was followed by dukes, earls, barons, bishops and knights, with their retainers. The escort numbered 4,000 horsemen, not including the queen's escort, numbering nearly 2,000 persons and 800 horses. The French king had an equally splendid retinue. King Henry and his great cavalcade were taken, on arrival at Guisnes, to the magnificent palace provided by Wolsey. There was an old palace there, and Wolsey had established himself in that and erected one for his king. The palace was the most beautiful place imaginable. It had so many glazed windows that it looked as though built of crystal, and much of the woodwork, both inside and out, was covered with gold. All the way from the gate to the door were rows of silver statues. Inside the walls of the chambers and halls were hung with magnificent tapestry embroidered in gold, and the ceilings were draped with white silk.

But Henry was not to spend all of his time in his fine palace, for tents had been erected on the plain, and in these the two kings and their suits were to lodge. The tents of the French king were pitched just outside the walls of the town of Ardres and extended almost to the tents of King Henry.

The tents in which the two queens were lodged were covered with cloth of gold, as were also the tents of the ladies in attendance upon them and of all members of the royal families. The effect was dazzling. Beautiful pavilions, hung with cloth of gold, dotted the plain; banners floated everywhere; fountains of wine spouted in the bright June sunshine; horses, decorated with fluttering ribbons, pranced about gayly. So gorgeous had the dreary plain been made that it has become known in history as the "Field of the Cloth of Gold."

BROWNING'S "SORDELLO."

The Critics Had Lots of Fun With the Famous Poem.

When Robert Browning was twenty-eight years old and after he had written "Paracelsus" and his tragedy of "Strafford," he wrote "Sordello," about which there has always been such a variety of opinion. Dante in his "Purgatory" wrote of Sardello, who was a poet of Provence.

"When "Sordello" appeared it made a sensation. Punch said it had offered £100 to any person who would reasonably explain one single line and that after a year no one had claimed this reward. Burlesques were written on it, and in one of these it was claimed that the funniest lines were some of the exact original ones.

A story is told of witty Douglas Jerrold, who met a friend one day and asked, "Have you read 'Sordello?' Does it mean anything?"

The friend replied that it meant nothing whatever. "Thank heaven!" said Jerrold. "Then I am not mad! I read it yesterday and feared I had lost my wits. It is only Browning who has lost his."

Another story was that criminals at Newgate prison who were condemned to death were offered full pardon if they would listen to the reading of "Sordello," but in every instance they hastened with glee to the gallows. Browning once said that he blamed nobody but himself for the work and that it had many faults of expression; that he meant to lay stress on incidents in the development of a soul and that little else is worth study. This estimate of his work was given twenty-five years after it was written, when he had revised it and dedicated it to a friend. He rewrote very little of it, and his followers have a belief that he considered "Sordello" his best literary work. It certainly has many beautiful lines, and in particular there is a word picture as striking as anything in our language:

That autumn eve was stilled.
A last remains of sunset dimly burned
O'er the far forests like a torch flame turned
By the wind back upon the bearer's hand
In one long flame of crimson; as a brand
The woods beneath lay black.

—Boston Globe.

The Boss Got Ahead.

"I came mighty near resigning my job this morning," said Ardup, ordering coffee and sinkers. "I'd made up my mind that the boss and I couldn't get along any more."

"Well, why didn't you resign?" asked the man sitting on the next stool.

"He beat me to it by just one second."—Chicago Tribune.

Smart Boy.

Mamma—Edgar, didn't I tell you not to take any more preserves from the jar? Small Edgar—Yes, ma'am. Mamma—Then, if you wanted some, why didn't you ask me for them? Small Edgar—'Cause I wanted some.—Chicago News.

How He Manages Her.

"How is it that your wife is so tractable?"

"Why, I told her when we were married that she could do just exactly as she pleased, and of course she finds no pleasure in doing it."—Chicago Post.

ELEPHANT SAVED THOUSANDS

With Ropes Attached to His Body He Swam Repeatedly Out to Drowning Hindu Worshipers.

Calcutta.—The Ganges, that ancient river from time immemorial worshiped by all Hindus, has literally risen in its wrath and has engulfed hundreds of the faithful.

As far back as man can think these have come at least once annually to bathe themselves in its holy waters, after which they would sit and sun themselves on a strip of land which protruded like a cape from the shore.

It so happened that in the latter part of October there was a feast day, upon which occasion there were more than the usual number of worshipers present.

Thousands of pilgrims had camped on the strip of land, which had never before been flooded within memory of the oldest residents. There was a sudden rise in the tide of the Ganges, and the pilgrims were stranded on the spot where they were encamped, which immediately became an island surrounded by deep water. The pilgrims who had the presence of mind to link arms and stand up, though immersed chest deep in water, were saved, but those who ran panic stricken to regain terra firma fell into the deepest stream and were lost.

Rescue parties, headed by the deputy collector of the locality and the police, arrived on the scene as soon as possible and with the aid of boats and an elephant rescued the stranded pilgrims.

An account given of the work done by an elephant named Jung Bahadur is most interesting. Jung Bahadur belongs to a rais named Koer Jaswant Singh, who was on a visit to the fair, and his presence was providential. With ropes attached to his trappings, the elephant repeatedly swam out to the distressed pilgrims, who would cling to the ropes and be landed in safe places. It is estimated that this noble animal saved at least 1,000 lives.

The number drowned is put down at about 200, but as the pilgrims had thronged from all parts of India it is impossible to say how many were really drowned. The collector of Etah and his officers did all they possibly could to help the pilgrims in their misfortune.

WRECK OF THE PREUSSEN.

The Largest Sailing Vessel In the World Met Her End Off the Coast of England.

London.—A terrible scene was witnessed recently when the Preussen, the largest sailing vessel in the world, was wrecked off the coast of England.

The Preussen had just left Hamburg, her home port, and was on her way to South America. While passing through the English channel she collided with a steamship. The damage to the sailing vessel would not have proved fatal if a storm had not sprung up shortly after the collision.

Gradually the Preussen, a huge five masted affair, drifted toward the coast. Heroic efforts were made to prevent this, as it meant the vessel's doom.

Wreck of the Preussen.

The storm increased and added to the ship's peril, huge waves sweeping her to the rocky coast.

At length a number of tugs were sent out to her assistance, straining every effort to haul her out into the open sea. It was useless. The furious sea battered the helpless vessel, and when it was seen that nothing could save her an effort was made to rescue her crew. This could easily have been done, but the heroic men refused to leave the ship until they were satisfied that everything possible had been done to save it.

The next day, when they saw that their case was hopeless, they consented to be taken off. There were twenty-seven men in all on board, and when nineteen of them had been taken off the ship broke in two. The remaining eight men were picked up out of the sea, and all were sent to their home port after two days of battle with the elements which all of them will remember for the rest of their lives.

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

"I don't mean the whisky trade," she explained. "I've cut that all out anyway. It's something more important—it's about Ed and me."

"I don't want to hear that either," he declared. "Let bygones be bygones. What you did then is outlawed anyway. Those were fierce times, and I want to forget them." He looked about. "Let me see Miss Virginia and convey to her Mrs. Redfield's invitation."

"She's in the kitchen, I reckon. Go right out."

He was rather glad of a chance to see the young reformer in action and smiled as he came upon her surrounded by waiters and cooks, busily superintending the preparations for the noon meal, which amounted to a tumult each day.

She saw Redfield, nodded and a few moments later came toward him, flushed and beaming with welcome. "I'm glad to see you again, Mr. Supervisor."

He bowed profoundly. "Mrs. Redfield sends by me a formal invitation to you to visit Elk Lodge. She is not quite able to take the long ride, else she'd come to you." Here he handed her a note. "I suggest that you go up with me this afternoon, and tomorrow we'll fetch the doctor down to see your mother. What do you say to that?"

Her eyes were dewy with grateful appreciation of his kindness as she answered, "That would be a great pleasure, Mr. Redfield, if mother feels able to spare me."

"I've talked with her. She is anxious to have you go."

Virginia was indeed greatly pleased and pleasantly excited by this message, for she had heard much of Mrs. Redfield's exclusiveness and also of the splendor of her establishment. She hurried away to dress with such a flutter of joyous anticipation that Redfield felt quite repaid for the pressure he had put upon his wife to induce her to write that note. "You may leave Lize Wetherford out of the count, my dear," he had said. "There is nothing of her discernible in the girl. Virginia is a lady. I don't know where she got it, but she's a gentlewoman by nature."

It was hot and still in town, but no sooner was the car in motion than both heat and dust were forgotten. Redfield's machine was not large, and, as he was content to go at moderate speed, conversation was possible.

He was of that sunny, optimistic, ever youthful nature which finds delight in human companionship under any conditions whatsoever. He accepted this girl for what she seemed—a fresh, unspoiled child. He saw nothing cheap or commonplace in her and was not disposed to impose any of her father's wild doings upon her calendar. He had his misgivings as to her future. That was the main reason why he had said to Mrs. Redfield, "The girl must be helped." Afterward he had said "sustained."

It was inevitable that the girl should soon refer to the ranger, and Redfield was as complimentary of him as she could wish. "Ross hasn't a fault but one, and that's a negative one—he doesn't care a hang about getting on, as they say over in England. He's content just to do the duty of the moment. He made a good cowpuncher and a good soldier, but as for promotion—he laughs when I mention it."

"He told me that he hoped to be chief forester," protested Virginia.

"Oh, yes, he says that, but do you know he'd rather be where he is, riding over the hills, than live in London. You should see his cabin some time. It's most wonderful, really. His walls are covered with bookshelves of his own manufacture and chairs of his own design. Where the boy got the skill I don't see. Heaven knows, his sisters are conventional enough! He's capable of being supervisor, but he won't live in town and work in an office. He's like an Indian in his love of the open."

CHAPTER VI.

IN THE VIOLENT PAST.

TALKING about Cavanagh was quite too absorbingly interesting to both Lee and Redfield to permit of any study of the landscape, which went by as if dismissed by the chariot wheels of some contemptuous magician. Redfield's eyes were mostly on the road (in the manner of the careful auto driver), but when he did look up it was to admire the color and poise of his seat mate, who made the landscape of small account.

She kept the conversation to the desired point. "Mr. Cavanagh's work interests me very much. It seems very important, and it must be new, for I never heard of a forest ranger when I was a child."

"The forester is new, at least in America," he answered. "My dear young lady, you are returned just in the most momentous period in the history of the west. The old dominion—the cattle range—is passing. The supremacy of the cowboy is ended. The cow boss is raising oats. The cowboy is pitching alfalfa and swearing horribly as he blisters his hands. Some of the rangers at the moment are men of western training, like Ross, but whose allegiance is now to Uncle Sam. With others that transfer of allegiance is not quite complete; hence the insolence of men like Gregg, who think they can bribe or intimidate these forest guards and so obtain favors. The newer men are college bred, real foresters. But you can't know what it all means till you see Ross or some other ranger on his own heath. We'll make up a little party some day and drop down upon him and have him show us about. It's a lonely life, and so the ranger keeps open house. Would you like to go?"

"Oh, yes, indeed. I'm eager to get into the mountains. Every night as I see the sun go down over them I wonder what the world is like up there."

Then he began very delicately to inquire about her eastern experience. There was not much to tell. In a lovely old town not far from Philadelphia, where her aunt lived, she had spent ten years of happy exile. "I was horribly lonely and homesick at first," she said. "Mother wrote only short letters, and my father never wrote at all. I didn't know he was dead then. He was always good to me. He wasn't a bad man, was he?"

"No," responded Redfield without hesitation. "He was very like the rest of us, only a little more reckless and a little more partisan, that's all. He was a dashing horseman and a dead shot, and so naturally a leader of these daredevils. He was popular with both sides of the controversy up to the very moment when he went south to lead the invaders against the rustlers."

"What was it all about? I never understood it. What were they fighting about?"

"In a sense it was all very simple. You see, Uncle Sam in his careless, do nothing way has always left his range to the man who got there first. That was the cattleman. At first there was grass enough for us all, but as we built sheds and corrals about watering places we came to claim rights on the range. We usually secured by fraud homesteads in the sections containing water and so, gun in hand, 'stood off' the man who came after. Gradually, after much shooting and lawing, we parceled out the range and settled down, covering practically the whole state. Our adjustments were not perfect, but our system was working smoothly for us who controlled the range. We had convinced ourselves and pretty nearly everybody else that the state was only fit for cattle grazing and that we were the most competent grazers; furthermore, we were in possession, and no man could come in without our consent.

"However, a very curious law of our own making was our undoing. Of course the 'nester' or 'punkin roller,' as we contemptuously called the small farmer, began sifting in here and there in spite of our guns, but he was only a mosquito bite in comparison with the trouble which our cowpunchers stirred up. Perhaps you remember enough about the business to know that an unbranded yearling calf without its mother is called a maverick?"

"Yes; I remember that. It belongs to the man who finds him and brands him."

"Precisely. Now, that law worked very nicely so long as the poor cowboy was willing to catch and brand him for his employer, but it proved a 'joker' when he woke up and said to his fellows, 'Why brand these mavericks at $5 per head for this or that outfit when the law says they belong to the man who finds them?'"

Lee Virginia looked up brightly. "That seems right to me."

"Ah, yes, but wait! We cattlemen had large herds, and the probabilities were that the calf belonged to some one of us, whereas the cowboy, having no herd at all, knew the maverick belonged to some one's herd. True, the law said it was his, but the law did not mean to reward the freebooter. Yet that is exactly what it did. At first only a few outlaws took advantage of it, but hard years came on, the cattle business became less and less profitable, we were forced to lay off our men, and so at last the range swarmed with idle cowpunchers. Then came the breakdown in our scheme. The cowboys took to 'mavericking' on their own account. Some of them had the grace to go into partnership with some farmer and so claim a small bunch of cows, but others suddenly and miraculously acquired herds of their own. From keeping within the law they passed to violent methods and cut the tongues of calves for the purpose of separating them from their mothers. Finding he could not suck, bossy would at last wander away from his dam and so become a maverick. In short, anarchy reigned on the range."

"But surely my father had nothing to do with this?"

"No; your father up to this time had been on good terms with everybody. He had a small herd of cattle down the river, which he owned in common with a man named Hart."

"I remember him."

"He was well thought of by all the big outfits, and when the situation became intolerable and we got together to weed out 'the rustlers,' as these cattle thieves were called, your father was approached and converted to a belief in drastic measures. He had suffered less than the rest of us because of his small herd and the fact that he was very popular among the cowboys. So far as I was concerned, the use of violent methods revolted me. My training in the east had made me a respecter of the law. 'Change the law,' I said. 'The law is all right,' they replied; 'the trouble is with these rustlers. We'll hang a few of 'em, and that will break up the business.'"

Parts of this story came back to the girl's mind, producing momentary flashes of perfect recollection. She heard again the voices of excited men arguing over and over the question of "mavericking," and she saw her father as he rode up to the house that last day before he went south.

Redfield went on. "The whole plan as developed was silly, and I wonder still that Ed Wetherford, who knew the 'nester' and the cowboy so well, should have lent his aid to it. The cattlemen, some from Cheyenne, some from Denver and a few from New York and Chicago, agreed to finance a a sort of vigilante corps composed of men from the outside on the understanding that this policing body should be commanded by one of their own number. Your father was chosen second in command and was to guide the party, for he knew almost every one of the rustlers and could ride directly to their doors."

"I wish he hadn't done that," murmured the girl.

"I must be frank with you, Virginia. I can't excuse that in him. It was a kind of treachery. He must have been warped by his associates. They convinced him by some means that it was his duty, and one fine day the Fork was startled by a messenger who rode in to say that the cattle barons were coming with a hundred Texas bad men 'to clean out the town' and to put their own men into office. This last was silly rot to me, but the people believed it."

The girl was tingling now. "I remember! I remember the men who rode into the town to give the alarm. I was scared almost breathless."

"I was in Sulphur City and did not hear of it till it was nearly all over." Redfield resumed, his speech showing a little of the excitement which thrilled through the girl's voice. "Well, the first act of vengeance was so ill considered that it practically ended the whole campaign. The invaders fell upon and killed two ranchers, one of whom was probably not a rustler at all, but a peaceable settler, and the other one they most barbarously hanged. More than this, they attacked and vainly tried to kill two settlers whom they met on the road—German farmers, with no connection, so far as known, with the thieves. These men escaped and gave the alarm. In a few hours the whole range was aflame with vengeful fire. The Forks, as you may recall, was like a swarm of bumblebees. Every man and boy was armed and mounted. The storekeepers distributed guns and ammunition, leaders developed, and the embattled 'punkin rollers,' rustlers and townsmen rode out to meet the invaders."

The girl paled with memory of it. "It was terrible. I went all day without eating, and for two nights we were all too excited to sleep. It seemed as if the world were coming to an end. Mother cried because they wouldn't let her go with them. She didn't know father was leading the other army."

"She must have known soon, for it was reported that your father was among them. She certainly knew when they were driven to earth in that log fort, for they were obliged to restrain her by force from going to your father. As I run over those furious days it all seems incredible, like a sudden reversion to barbarism."

"How did it all end? The soldiers came, didn't they?"

"Yes; the long arm of Uncle Sam reached out and took hold upon the necks of both parties. I guess your father and his band would have died right there had not the regular army interfered. It only required a sergeant wearing Uncle Sam's uniform to come among those armed and furious cowboys and remove their prisoners."

"I saw that. It was very strange—that sergeant was so young and so brave."

He turned and smiled at her. "Do you know who that was?"

Her eyes flashed. She drew her breath with a gasp. "Was it Mr. Cavanagh?"

"Yes, it was Ross. He was serving in the regular army at the time. He has told me since that he felt no fear whatever. 'Uncle Sam's blue coat was like Siegfried's magic armor,' he said. 'It was the kind of thing the mounted police of Canada had been called upon to do many a time, and I went in and got my men.' That ended the war, so far as violent measures went, and it really ended the sovereignty of the cattleman. The power of the 'nester' was steadily increased from that moment."

"But my father—what became of him? They took him away to the east, and that is all I ever knew. What do you think became of him?"

"I could never make up my mind. All sorts of rumors come to us concerning him. As a matter of fact, the state authorities sympathized with the cattle barons, and my own opinion is that your father was permitted to escape. He was afterward seen in Texas, and later it was reported that he had been killed there."

The girl sat still, listening to the tireless whir of the machine and looking out at the purpling range with tear mist eyes. At last she said, "I shall never think of my father as a bad man—he was always so gentle to me."

"You need not condemn him, my dear young lady. The people of the Forks—some of them, at least—consider him a traitor and regard you as the daughter of a renegade, but what does it matter? Each year sees the old west diminish, and already, in the work of the forest service, law and order advance. Notwithstanding all the shouting of herders and the beating to death of sheep, no hostile shot has ever been fired within the bounds of a national forest. In the work of the forest rangers lies the hope of ultimate peace and order over all the public lands.

The girl fell silent again, her mind filled with larger conceptions of life than her judgment had hitherto been called upon to meet. She knew that Redfield was right, and yet that world of the past—the world of the swift herdsman and his trampling, long horned, half wild kine—still appealed to her imagination. The west of her girlhood seemed heroic in memory. Even the quiet account of it to which she had just listened could not conceal its epic largeness of movement. The part which troubled her most was her father's treachery to his neighbors. That he should fight, that he should kill men in honorable warfare, she could understand, but not his recreancy, his desertion of her mother and herself.

She came back to dwell at last on the action of that slim young soldier who had calmly ridden through the infuriated mob. She remembered that she had thrilled even then at the vague and impersonal power which he represented. To her childish mind he seemed to bear a charm, like the heroes of her story books—something which made him invulnerable.

After a long pause Redfield spoke again. "The memory of your father will make life for a time a bit hard for you in Roaring Fork. Perhaps your mother's advice is sound. Why not come to Sulphur City, which is almost entirely of the new spirit?"

"If I can get my mother to come, too, I will be glad to do so, for I hate the Fork. But I will not leave her there, sick and alone."

"Much depends upon the doctor's examination tomorrow."

They had topped the divide now between the Fork and Sulphur creek basin, and the green fields, the alfalfa meadows and the painted farmhouses thickened beneath them. Strange how significant all these signs were now! A few days ago they had appeared doubtful improvements; now they represented the oncoming dominion of the east. They meant cleanliness and decent speech, good bread and sweet butter.

Redfield swept through the town, then turned up the stream directly toward the high wall of the range, which was ragged and abrupt at this point. They passed several charming farmhouses, and the western sky grew ever more glorious with its plum color and saffron, and the range reasserted its mastery over the girl. At last they came to the very jaws of the canyon, and there, in a deep natural grove of lofty cottonwood trees, Redfield passed before a high rustic gate which marked the beginning of his estate. The driveway was of gravel, and the intermingling of transplanted shrubs and pine trees showed the care of the professional gardener.

The house was far from being a castle. Indeed, it was very like a house in Bryn Mawr, except that it was built entirely of half hewn logs, with a wide projecting roof. Giant hydrangeas and other flowering shrubs bordered the drive, and on the rustic terrace a lady in white was waiting.

Redfield slowed down and scrambled ungracefully out. But his voice was charming as he said: "Eleanor, this is Miss Wetherford. She was on the point of getting the blues, so I brought her away," he explained.

Made insane from pain, after being hit in the eye with a snowball thrown by a small boy, Herbert C. Porter, editor of a weekly newspaper, has been committed to the State Hospital there. Mr. Porter was walking near a crowd of school children engaged in a snowball fight, when one snowball, packed hard, hit him squarely in the eye. He was unconscious for some time, and later suffered excruciating pain in the head and neck. He lost the sight of his eye completely, and a month later was adjudged insane. Specialists say there is little chance of a cure being effected.

SALMON C. BAKER DEAD

Former Plainfielder Passes Away at South Yarmouth, Mass.

AGED SIXTY-SEVEN YEARS.

Established Printing House in New York After Retiring from Dry Goods Business—Funeral Tomorrow Afternoon.

Salomon C. Baker, one of the best known residents of this city for nearly forty years, died Sunday night at his home in South Yarmouth, Mass., where he had been living for the past two years. His death was due to a complication of troubles. Just prior to leaving Plainfield, Mr. Baker had a severe illness and when he improved he and his wife decided to remove to South Yarmouth, the climate apparently agreeing with him.

Mr. Baker was formerly in the dry goods business in New York city, and later he went into the printing business establishing a large and compete plant on West Fifth street. His son, Albert Baker was associated with him in the business.

Mr. Baker was a charter member of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, being on the charter roll. He was also a past regent. Mr. Baker was also a member of the Loyal Association, a branch of the Royal Arcanum, but withdrew from both organizations two years ago, when he reached the age of sixty-five years. Mr. Baker was a member of Columbia Lodge, A. O. U. W., for many years, and was a Civil War veteran, having served the entire time during the Rebellion. He was a member of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., of this city.

Mr. Baker was a member and regular attendant at Trinity Reformed church during his residence here, his wife being especially active in the work of the church. He is survived by a wife, one son, Albert Baker, of this city, and a married daughter, residing in Chicago. The funeral will be held from the late home in South Yarmouth, at 1:30 tomorrow.

AN ORIENTAL TRAVELOGUE

Illustrated Lecture on China and India Given by John M. Whiton.

CUSTOMS OF THE PEOPLE.

Scenes in Burmah, Calcutta and Bombay Particularly Interesting—To Repeat His Lecture Tonight.

Preceding a delightful informal talk, in which he described his travels in China and India, John M. Whiton, of this city, displayed more than one hundred fine views at the Congregational church last night, giving the large audience a clear conception of the people of those countries, their customs and peculiarities. The lecture was given for the benefit of the Sunday school and was a success.

The talk by Mr. Whiton was of such a character that it pleased everyone. He got away from the beaten path of the professional lecturer, and found time to relate numerous interesting incidents about his travels in such an informal way that he held the close attention of everyone.

The speaker referred to the many climates to be found in the countries described, explaining that one could find the most intense heat or cold, excessive dry or rainy districts and the individual taste could always be met. He said that if the people of India were assembled together one would find about seventy different languages and about a dozen different religions. Mr. Whiton referred to the many castes to be found in India, touching briefly on the most important ones. He said that in India it is the opinion that all persons not Hindus are outcasts, but many of the prejudices are passing away. This he said is due largely to the presence of the railroad, soda water, ice, umbrellas and kerosene. Mr. Whiton said that the people find considerable comfort in these conveniences and they are rapidly breaking down the feeling the natives have against foreigners.

Speaking of an effort to introduce our plows in India, Mr. Whiton said that the natives did not take kindly to them because the bullock is so far away from the plow that they cannot twist his tail. While the natives are very anxious to cover their faces they are not all particular about their legs and Mr. Whiton added, "they don't care who sees

MARTINE LACKS BUT ONE VOTE

He Receives 40 Votes in House and Senate for United States Senator, 41 Votes Being Necessary for Choice—Smith Gets 10 Votes in House; None in Senate—Hudson Man Likely to Swing to Martine at Joint Session Tomorrow.

James E. Martine lacked but one vote when the ballot for United States Senator was cast separately by the House and Senate at noon today, at Trenton, of the number necessary to elect.

His total was 40, James Smith, Jr., of Newark received but 10 votes all of which were cast in the House.

Martine received 31 votes in the House and 9 in the Senate. Smith got ten votes in the House and none in the Senate. The Democratic senators voted solidly for Martine. Forty-one votes are necessary to elect.

Tomorrow at noon, the Senate and House will meet in joint session for the purpose of electing a United States Senator to succeed John Kean. This afternoon it was announced in Trenton that one Democratic assemblyman would swing from Smith to Martine tomorrow, thereby insuring Martine's election on the first ballot.

In the House former Governor Edward C. Stokes, the primary choice of the Republicans, received 13 votes. In the Senate he got 9 more. Former Governor John W. Griggs, Republican, was given 5 votes in the House. In the Senate former Governor J. Franklin Fort got one vote and so did United States Senator John Kean.

Following is the vote cast today:

House.

Martine—Agnew, Alyea, Ballentine, Boettner, Booream, Brodhead, Burke, Bunn, Cole, Davidson, Donnelly, Egan, Ford, Geraw, Guffin, Hendrickson, McGrath, Matthews, Ramsay, Kenney, Lafferty, LaMonte, cLoughlin, Myers, Mylod, Newman, Simpson, Strietwolf, Taylor, Walsh, Hinners—31. Smith—Backus, Brown, Bracken, Christie, Leveen, Macksey, Martin, McGowan, Phillips, Chalvoy—10.

Senate.

Martine—Cornish, Fielder, Fitzherbert, Gebhardt, Johnson, Lowe, Osborne, Crite, Silzer—9. Smith—0.

The Republican vote:

House.

Stokes—Adams, Bacharach, Hand, Jacksson, Layden, Mather, McCran, Pikaart, Pine, Radcliffe, Richmond, Thompson, White—13. Griggs—Coles, DeYounger, Turner, Whitecar, Whyte—5.

Senate.

Stokes—Ackerman, Brown, Edge, Frelinghuysen, Gaunt, Leavitt, Lewis, Plummer, Prince—9. Fort—Nichols—1. Kean—Hand—1.

In the House Ford first voted for Congressman Hughes and then changed it to Martine.

In the Senate Hand first voted for Stokes and then changed his vote to Kean, saying that he had been deceived by a report that Kean was not a candidate.

After the vote was taken in each house, the Assembly and Senate adjourned until tomorrow when they will meet in joint session at noon.

There are eighty votes in joint session. Forty-one is necessary for election.

When Mr. Martine's name was presented by Assemblyman Calvin Brodhead, of this city, as a nominee for the United States senatorship, there was a tremendous demonstration, the like of which, it is said, has

HOW UNITED STATES SENATORS ARE CHOSEN; BALLOTING NOW FOR ONE IN ELMER SERIES

The election of a senator is a Federal function performed by the Legislature of the State. Today each house suspended other business and proceed to take a vote for senator of the United States. Nominations were made, but they are not necessary, for each member has the right to vote for any man when the roll is called. The record of the vote in each house is entered in its own journal.

The two houses tomorrow assemble in joint ballot meeting in the assembly chamber, and choose officers, the president of the senate invariably being chosen for presiding officer. The journal of the senate in regard to the vote for senator the day before is then read, and then the journal of the assembly. They will show, of course, that the senate gave a majority for one man, and the assembly gave a majority for another; or, at least, did not prefer the same man who had the senate majority.

The presiding officer will then announce that no one person having received a majority of each house voting separately, the joint meeting will proceed to vote for senator. The roll of all the senators and assemblymen will be called alpabetically, and each member will reply with the name of the man he prefers. The secretary will hand the result to the president, who will announce it. If no man has received a majority of all those present and voting, a new ballot will be taken.

If there is no choice after two or three ballots, there will be an adjournment until the next day, when the balloting will be resumed. This will continue every day until a choice has been made. By agreement, an adjournment can be taken at the end of the week. In New Jersey the contest has been prolonged a number of times, and other states have the same experience.

The proceedings are conducted with much dignity. The only time there was anything approaching disorder was when Governor Abbott was defeated by Rufus Blodgett, and in this case the good sense of a majority prevented any serious outbreak.

Line of Senators.

There has ben two lines of Senators, of course, in the history of the State. One is composed of successors of William Paterson and the other of those who followed Jonathan Elmer. Paterson and Elmer were the first Senators chosen after the adoption of the Federal Constitution by the united colonies after the country freed itself from British rule.

The term to be filled by the present Legislature will be in continuance of the Elmer series of Senators. James Smith, Jr., during his previous service in the Senate filled a place in the Elmer line, Senator Frank O. Briggs follows the Paterson line.

Paterson and Elmer were both

COMMERCE CHAMBER ADVOCATES MERGER

Resolutions Passed Unanimously for Consolidation and Bill to be Presented in Legislature.

Not a dissenting voice was heard at the mass meeting held under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce last night when the resolution introduced by L. B. Woolston favoring the consolidation of this city with North Plainfield was read. More than a dozen citizens spoke in favor of the measure and a final vote showed unanimity for it.

About 100 men listened to a short introductory speech by former Mayor William L. Saunders and after Mr. Woolston had read his preamble and resolution a general discussion was opened. Mr. Saunders said that he earnestly hoped that some one would speak against the proposition merely for the sake of finding out if there really was any possible objection to the contemplated union of the two municipalities. He read from the report of the bi-municipal committee made in 1907 the reasons why the change was desirable and said he never knew of any law which permitted a city to own its water works and sell to other cities. "If we are to have ownership of any public utility," he said, "North Plainfield ought to be in it with you. This movement started fourteen years ago, but the matter has drifted along without any final action. I had an annexation bill drawn at my own expense, but because it was not a consolidation measure was defeated by 161 votes. Afterwards it was generally said that if we had voted on consolidation instead of annexation the latter would have won."

The introduction of the resolution by Mr. Woolston opened the way for discussion. Communications were read from C. W. McCutchen, H. K. Carroll, Henry A. McGee and former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, all of whom wrote in favor of the move excepting Mr. McGee who said that he thought the time to be inopportune.

Those who spoke in favor of the scheme were L. B. Woolston, former Mayor Samuel Townsend, H. Rosenbaum, J. W. Harrison, Meredith Dryden for the Hyde Estate, Peter McDonough, Jacob Voehl, Jr., Mayor N. B. Smalley, J. V. E. Vanderhoef, Herman Schwed, Rev. Ora J. Shoop and Rev. J. O. McKelvey. Rev. G. R. Maguire was called upon for remarks but declined explaining that he was not yet a voter in this city.

The speech prepared by J. W. Harrison was applauded for its many homely but well taken points. He wanted to know where the economy was in making one family live in two houses and why should two separate furnaces be kept alive for one household. "We are living extravagantly," he said, "and until the two municipalities are brought together under one government and one common ideal we are as far away from an economical administration of public affairs as though we were separated by an ocean."

Former Mayor Townsend declared that the apprehension regarding the assumption of debts and what might appear to be obstacles from an economic viewpoint would adjust themselves in time after the merger was effected.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley spoke strongly in favor of the merger telling how hard it was for the borough to get what it wants from the county and what it contributes to the support of it. Plainfield could solve its water problem without any trouble if the borough was a part of Union county and merged with Plainfield. We have not only the water, but a territory which Plainfield needs and needs badly. Part of another county as well as Somerset county ought to be annexed at the same time and then we would have a community worth while. If we can change the county lines as indicated consolidation will easily take care of itself.

The sentiment among the entire audience was favorable to the proposition and procrastination will have no place in the actions of the committee of the Chamber of Commerce into whose hands the drawing up of the bill is to be placed. The resolution follows:

Whereas, Green brook, the county line which separates Plainfield and North Plainfield, is the old, original line which divided Somerset county from Essex county, established some two hundred years ago and maintained after the creation of Union county because it furnished a convenient boundary line requiring neither survey nor monument to

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The many friends of James Martine, both Democrats and Republicans, are rooting for "Jim," in the Senatorial election which comes up tomorrow at Trenton.

The Young People's Choral Union, of the Baptist church, will give an entertainment during the early Spring, no date having as yet been announced.

The snow spoiled the excellent skating which had been enjoyed for a week or ten days.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The Middlesex County Board for the Equalization of Taxes, sitting at New Brunswick today, is considering the appeal of the Equator Park Land Company against the assessment of John H. L. Peters, the borough's assessor. The concern claims that the property is listed as lots when it should be considered as farm land. The assessment when it was known as the Sandford farm was $10,000, while the new figure is $36,000. The borough's interests are being looked after by its counsel, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr. The appeal is the first to be made against Mr. Peters' assessments since the county board was organized.

The residents of New Market are agitating for some sort of regulation fire alarm in place of the present method of ringing the Baptist church bell. The latter is done under considerable difficulty, especially at night, and it is pointed out that if a suitable bell tower is erected in a central spot the alarms can be given better and quicker. The fire department has the matter in hand and will probably secure the improvement.

The first reeharsal of "Madame Jarley's Wax Works," for the second presentation will be held in the borough hall tonight. One of the new features to be introduced is a laughable representation of Peary and Cook discovering the North Pole. The presentation will be made in the Presbyterian chapel Thursday night.

George Rinehart has returned to work with the Central's bridge gang after several weeks enforced idleness by an injured hand.

Assessor John H. L. Peters and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Peters visited relatives at Cranford Sunday.

Dr. and Mrs. P. W. Brakeley have returned home after a ten days' stay at Atlantic City.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Some mischievious boys set fire to Justice Smith's hay field which burned furiously for several hours, creeping close to the residences near by, damaging a row of young trees and necessitating the hiring of men to beat it out.

Thomas Saverd, who sold his farm on the Woods road recently, has bought a piece of property next to the Catholic church and is building a barn. The house will be erected as soon as the barn is finished.

Several sportsmen from here went to New Market to try their luck at fishing, since the dam broke, and succeeded in getting a number of suckers.

Mrs. Sandherr is ill with typhoid fever at Muhlenberg Hospital. Her husband is recovering from the same disease but is not yet able to be out.

William M. Bowers is now in the house recently vacated by Mr. Adams, of Road Ending.

Charles Blackford has taken the position of sexton at the Middlesex Hillside cemetery.

Special Meeting of Classis.

O. T. Trousdale, and the transaction of such other business as may come before the body.

Will Stop Ships Quickly.

George Westinghouse has completed an invention by which it is said that danger to ships from collision at sea will be greatly minimized. Through the invention the officer on watch can by a turn of the wrist in case of emergency reverse all engines though running at full speed, and set them racing backward. The invention is designed especially for use in vessels equipped with turbine engines as are most of the ships building now. A small lever within easy reach of the man in charge will be the only evidence in view of his increased powers.

News and Notes

GOLF.

American golfers, especially those in this part of the country, will be greatly disappointed if the report to the effect that the projected visit of the American team to America next summer has fallen through proves to be true. Among those who had been named as likely to come here was Michael Scott, several times winner of both the open and amateur championship torunaments of Australia.

The course of the Columbia Golf Club at Washington has been abandoned. In fact, this well known organization has undergone decided changes during the last year, even to the altering of its name to the Columbia Country Club. Henceforth the Columbia golfers will travel out in the direction of Chevy Chase, where a new home has been found and where it is expected to have a fine course.

It is possible that the next open championship tournament of the Western Golf Association will be held over the links of the Kent Country Club, of Grand Rapids, Mich. This organization has applied for the attraction. The last competition of importance decided there was the Western open in 1904, when the late Willie Anderson won with a seventy-two hole score of 304. The same year Anderson won the national open at Glen View with 303.

The topic of the mid-week meeting at the Crescent Avenue church, tomorrow night will be "For the Church," and the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, will make an address upon that theme as discussed in an important and widely read article by Sir Robertson Nicholl.

An "Out-of-Town" class has been organized by the enterprising workers of the Home department of Trinity Reformed church, for friends of the church, living out of the city, who are not members of any Sunday-school. Request is made that names and addresses of such persons known be handed to Mrs. Harry C. VanEmburgh, who is in charge of this new department.

mark its location, and

Whereas, Since this line was established Plainfield has grown to such an extent as to overflow across the brook into North Plainfield, and

Whereas, This line runs almost parallel with Front street, the main thoroughfare of Plainfield, and is only a stone's throw away, and because of the Watchung mountains running in the same general direction, the growth of North Plainfield follows the line of this brook and Front street, because nature so directs it, and

Whereas, The interests of city and borough are one in every respect except in law, what benefits one benefits the other, and conversely, what injures and retards the growth of one injures and retards the growth of the other, and

Whereas, It cannot be disputed that one set of municipal departments conserves the interests of the taxpayers and the people better than two, and furthermore that the burden of expense chargeable to each taxpayer should decrease as the number of taxpayers increases, and

Whereas, The expense of providing and running one sewer system for the combined places ought to be very much less than if each municipality equipped and ran its own separate system, and

Whereas, If municipal ownership of water works and other public utilities is a good thing, it is obvious that a united effort will bring results quicker, better and cheaper, and

Whereas, In fire and police protection; in enlarged and stronger schools; in questions of public health and economy of government; in the extension and maintenance of streets and sewers; in the control of all public utilities; and in the influence of Plainfield in the State and nation; in the interest of business and in the value of property; in helping to keep down taxes; for the maintainance of the library and the hospital; in the protection of the people against extortion; in the encouragement of civic pride, public welfare and progress, it is better that these communities should be united and not divided, and

Whereas, A Bi-Municipal Consolidation commission was appointed by the governing bodies of the city and borough at the suggestion of the Board of Trade, such commission having been made up of men of high standing in the community, namely, Alexander Gilbert, Floyd T. Woodhull, Mason W. Tyler, Charles W. McCutchen, Elston M. French, men of all parties, three from Plainfield and two from North Plainfield, and having held regular, weekly meetings for a long period of time, endeavoring in a careful and painstaking manner to consider every question that could have any possible bearing on the subject, such commission having reported officially on May the 6, 1907, concluding with the following recommendation:

"The recommendation of the commission, therefore, is that your honorable bodies cause to be prepared a bill for submission to the next session of the Legislature which shall provide for both consolidation and annexation, to take effect only after a majority of the legally authorized voters of both municipalities shall have voted in favor of the same at a regular or special election held for that purpose."

Therefore, Resolved, That this chamber in the exercise of its duty as a civic body, organized for the purpose of benefiting these two communities, does hereby declare that consolidation is desirable, and it further resolves that a committee, consisting of the officers of the Chamber of Commerce, be appointed to prepare and introduce in the Legislature a suitable bill to effect consolidation and annexation on the lines of the report of the Bi-Municipal Consolidation commission.

them." Mr. Whiton also spoke of the value of the "silver persuader" while traveling in those countries. Everyone has a body servant and they are most useful.

Mr. Whiton first displayed a number of interesting views taken in China by himself, and then a large number of views taken in India, touching Burmah, Calcutta, Bombay and the country districts. Mr. Whiton was accompanied by Mrs. Whiton on the trip. Mr. Whiton will give another illustrated lecture this evening on the above topic at the Seventh-Day Baptist church under the auspices of the Men's Club.

MARTINE LACKS ONE VOTE

never been seen in the House. It was a marked contrast to the reception given Smith's name when offered by Asssemblyman Macksey, of Essex.

Senator Harry V. Osborne, of Essex, nominated Mr. Martine in the Upper House, where there was also an ovation. Mr. Smith's name was not mentioned there.

In the House, Assemblyman Mather nominated Mr. Stokes, while in the Senate Senator Leavitt made the speech.

While the balloting was going on, there was a mad rush about the State House caused by friends of Martine attempting to get in. The corridors were packed with humanity and there was a wild scene of joy when the result was announced.

In the conference of the Democratic Senators and Asemblymen last night, James E. Martine received 33 votes; James Smith, Jr., 14; Congressman William Hughes, of Paterson, 2, and F. S. Katzenbach, of Trenton, 1.

The conference was attended by all the Democratic members of the Legislature except Assemblyman George B. Cole, of Warren county.

After wrangling for nearly an hour over the question of who should be the Democratic choice for State Comptroller to succeed Harry J. West, whose successor will be chosen February 21, the successful candidate finally being Edward I. Edwards, of Jersey City, the Senatorial question was taken up and disposed of in a few minutes.

The name of Mr. Martine was presented by Assemblyman Brodhead; Mr. Smith's by Assemblyman McGowan, of Essex; Mr. Hughes' by Assemblyman Ford, of Hudson; and Mr. Katzenbach's by Assemblyman Taylor, of Monmouth. Very brief remarks were made in offering the name of each candidate.

The name of Congressman Hughes was brought into the affair as a surprise by Mr. Ford. The presentation of Mr. Katzenbach's name was not an entire surprise, as Mr. Taylor had frequently expressed himself as being very favorably disposed to the former as a possible successor to Senator Kean.

On roll-call the result was as follows:

For Martine—Senators Johnson, Osborne, Fielder, Gebhardt, Silzer, Fitzherbert, Low, Price and Cornish; Assemblymen Alyea, Hinners, Mylod, Boettner, Ballentine, Lafferty, Kenny, Davidson, James Agnew, Simpson, Donnolly, Egan, Griffin, Walsh, Strietwold, Geran, Hendrickson, Bunn, Burke, LaMonte, Newman, Brodhead and MsLaughlin.

For Smith—Assemblymen Backus, Bracken, Brown, Phillips, Leveen, McGowan, Chalvoy, Machsey, Martin, Christie, McGrath, Mathews, Booraen and Ramsay.

For Hughes—Assemblymen Ford and Meyer.

For Katzenbach — Assemblyman Taylor.

Absent—Assemblyman Cole.

As forecasted Mr. Martine received the solid support of the Democratic members of the Senate. During the roll-call, Senator Osborne, minority leader announced that there had been a conference of the Democratic Senators early in the evening and he had been authorized to say to the conference that they were all in favor of Mr. Martine.

The conference considered two candidates for the comptrollership—Mr. Edwards and William N. Williams, Mayor of High Bridge. The former's name was presented by Senator Fielder and the latter's by Assemblyman Mathews. Mr. Edwards received 40 votes and Mr. Williams 10, following which the former was accorded the unanimous vote of the conference.

GRIP STILL EPIDEMIC IN CITY AND BOROUGH.

There is a mild epidemic of the grip in the city and borough and the local physicians are kept unusually busy fighting the dread disease. Among the numerous cases of grip are these: Thomas Davis Judson, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. John Judson, of John street; F. Rollin Williams, of 811 West Fourth street; Mrs. Nellie Baldwin, of Spooner avenue; Earl Cooke, young son of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Cooke, of the borough; Hugh B. Sweeny, of Liberty street; Charles Graves, of South Second street; Mrs. Edward O. Clark, of 981 West Fourth street; Mrs. C. G. August, of 935 West Fourth street, and Mrs. George O. Stevens, of 931 West Sixth street.

There are scores of other victims.

Miss Grace Vail, of Elmwood place, who has been quite ill with typhoid fever, is slightly improved.

MOST boys are like jack rabbits anyway— continually on the jump. If it isn't coasting down hill and steering with his toes, it's skating, or what is worse, sliding on a half iced sidewalk. ### THINK NEWARK MAN IS WESTFIELD "TURPIN."

Pending action by the Union County authorities, Frank J. Yeomans, alias Frank E. Oliver, arrested in Millburn Friday and who is believed to be the highwayman who figured as a "Dick Turpin" in hold-ups in Westfield and Springfield townships, is in custody at the Newark courthouse.

Yeomans will be turned over to the Union County police, as there is an indictment there against him charging highway robbery. There is a charge of carrying concealed weapons against him in Newark, but this will be dropped .It was made after a loaded weapon had been found upon him when arrested.

The indictment against Yeomans charges the robbery of Peter Koenig, an aged man of Westfield. Koenig was robbed of $3.50, which he had in his pockets. He was compelled to walk two miles at the point of a revolver and collect $15 due him for wages.

This money the highwayman also appropriated after Koenig left the house of his employer. Enoch Miller. Threats to shoot if there was trouble so frightened Koenig that he obeyed the thief's behest without revealing his danger, and did not tell about it for some time afterwards.

The man was arrested by Police Chief Thomas Hurley on suspicion of knowing something about the robbery of the F. L. Minton home in Chatham turnpike. The Millburn authorities were unable to connect him with the Minton robbery. The charge of carying concealed weapons was then made against him.

Vaccination is Urged.

The presence of small-pox in the southern part of the State, namely Salem county, where there are reported eighteen cases and two deaths, has given rise to the importance of vaccination in this vicinity. Some people maintain that as there is no cases of the disease here there is no necessity for vaccination. In the opinion of some people Plainfield may not escape the dread disease since it has found its way into the State, and are advising persons who have not been recently vaccinated to allow their family physician to vaccinate them. Recently five deaths from small-pox were reported in Philadelphia.

Funreal of Mrs. J. D. Runyon.

The funeral services of Mrs. John D. Runyon were held at the late home, Park avenue and West Fifth street, at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and were largely attended. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, conducted the services, and was assisted by Rev. Dr. Edward Judson, pastor of the Judson Memorial church, New York city, who was a friend of the family for many years. Both made remarks of eulogy concerning Mrs. Runyon. There were many beautiful floral tributes. The burial was in Hillside cemetery.

"Cole 30-1911" in Town.

Roy Woodhull, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Woodhull, of West Front street, appeared in town yesterday with a "Cole 30-1911," which he was demonstrating among his friends. The car is graceful in its lines of construction and is thoroughly equipped with all the latest appliances. Mr. Woodhull was formerly with A. C. Thompson, the automobile dealer on Park avenue. ### MADAM SHERRY PLEASES BIG PLAINFIELD CROWD.

Lena Abarbanell will have to look to her laurels. As Yvonne Sherry, a convent girl in Madame Sherry, that captivating little leading woman, Tessa Costa, is ideal in the role. Yes, she plays the part even better than Miss Abarbanell. Blessed with the freshness of youth, a charming voice, pretty face and pleasing manner, Miss Costa made a big hit in Woods, Frazee and Lederer's production at The Plainfield theatre last night.

Miss Emilie Hayward as Lulu, an actress and dancer, demonstrated amply that she was particularly fitted for the part as did Edward M. Favor as Theophilus Sherry. The stage settings were particularly elaborate.

Burglar Scare in East End.

An investigation by Roundsman Higgins and Patrolmen Kelly and O'Keefe showed nothing in the house disturbed. The light which was in the cellar was evidently left burning by the furnace tender. The family is away just now.

PROBLEM'S LEGAL PHASE

W. S. Angleman Quotes the Law Bearing on the Water Question.

SOME STATISTICS OVERLOOKED.

Brief Prepared by Counsellor at Request of the Public Affairs Committee of Special Interest.

At a meeting of the public affairs committee of the Common Council in the Mayor's office on Wednesday evening, Counsellor W. S. Angleman called the committee's attention to certain recent changes in the law of New Jersey relating to water as affecting the proposed municipal supply for Plainfield and also called the attention of the committee to the fact that in estimating the proposed expense for a supply taken from the Lamington river these changes had not been taken into account.

There were present at the committee meeting, Councilmen Mygatt, Holt, Clay, Tolles, Montgomery and Gloak. At the committee's request, Mr. Angleman has submitted the matter in printed form, which by courtesy of the committee this paper herewith presents as an interesting contribution to the present discussion:

In the discussion of a proposed municipal supply of water for Plainfield and the consideration of a report on such supply by Mr. Fuertes, certain changes, or rather certain legislative and judicial pronouncements, of the law relating to water have seemingly been overlooked. Both the report and the discussion appear to be based on the law at it was supposed to exist in 1905.

Prior to that year the State control of water was generally accepted as being limited to water in running streams except where the tide ebbs and flows, and in such navigable streams as would be classed as public highways.

In that year, however, an effort was made by a water company to convey water from a point on the Passaic river in this state to Staten Island for domestic and public use, to fulfill a contract that had been made with the city of New York, the island being then and still part of that city. The New Jersey legislature passed an act forbidding any corporation or individual to transport water out of the state (Pamphlet Laws of 1905, p. 461), and as the water company persisted in its effort to do so, the attorney general filed a bill in the court of chancery on behalf of the state for an injunction. An injunction was granted by Vice Chancellor Bergen, now Justice Bergen, on the ground that the state is the paramount owner of the water in all running streams, except what is required by riparian owners for reasonable and customary uses on their land, such as watering cattle and irrigating gardens and farms. It was held that all the rest of the water in any stream must be allowed to take its natural course. This injunction was unanimously sustained by the Court of Errors and Appeals, the highest court in our state, Justice Pitney, now Chancellor Pitney, writing the opinion. This case is McCarter, Attorney General vs. Hudson County Water Company, and the decision of the court of chancery is reported in 70 New Jersey Enquiry Reports, at page 525, and the decision of the Court of Errors and Appeals in the same volume, at page 695. The case was subsequently taken to the Supreme Court of the United States, and the decision of the courts of this state was affirmed, (209 United States Supreme Court Reports, page 349). That related only to water running in streams, and not to water found beneath the surface of the ground.

That decision has already had far-reaching consequences. In the year 1907, and shortly after the decision of that case, the legislature passed an act asserting control over all water running in streams, and created a commission to take charge of it; and provided in the same act that no municipality or water company could take water from any stream for public use without the consent of the commission and on terms to be prescribed by it. The act also provided that whenever an application for a supply of water should be made a public hearing must be had on notice, and all municipalities and other parties interested in the proposed source of supply might present their objections, and the interests of all parties must be respected and safeguarded in case permission should be given to the applicant to take any water at all from a running stream. The act may be found in the pamphlet laws of 1907, at page 633, and distinctly says that after the hearing referred to the commission shall decide whether the plans proposed by the applicant for permission to divert water "are justified by public necessity or reasonably anticipated public use, and whether such plans interfere unduly with the opportunity of other municipalities to obtain a water-supply by the taking of waters necessary for their use, or whether the reduction of the dry-season flow of any stream will be caused to an amount likely to produce unsanitary conditions or otherwise unduly injure public or private interests." The foregoing quotation from the 1907 act is of special importance.

The bearing of this decision and statute on the question of a water supply now under discussion in Plainfield will appear clearly if we suppose that an effort should be made to obtain a supply from the Passaic river at Berkeley Heights, one of the sources of a supply for Plainfield proposed by Mr. Fuertes in his report. He says it is not possible to build a reservoir at Berkeley Heights, and, therefore, the required supply must be pumped daily from the river, and then filtered and otherwise treated to make it clear and fit to drink. He also says that the dry weather flow of the river at that point is nine million gallons a day, and he proposes a plant to take eight million gallons a day, which is considered not too large in view of the rapid growth of our city.

The following cities and towns are now being, or have been, ssupplied exclusively from the Passaic river below Berkeley Heights, namely: Paterson, Passaic, Montclair, Nutley, Glen Ridge, West Orange, Orange, Bayonne, Harrison and Kearney, and they are all increasing in population. What possible chance can there be to get a supply of water for Plainfield from Berkeley Heights against the objections of those towns?

It may be said that Plainfield need not go to the Passaic river for a supply, but may go to Hacklebarney on the Lamington or Black river, where these objections would not apply. This is largely, although not entirely true. But there is a difficulty quite as serious to be confronted at Hacklebarney which also grows out of recent changes in the law of this State relating to waters and water rights.

Until recently it was supposed to be the law of this State that the Legislature could authorize a municipality or a water company to take water from a running stream for public use without making compensation to any of the owners of property below the point of diversion except those who had developed water powers, or had sites where water power might be developed. It was upon this view of the law that the report of Mr. Fuertes seems to have been compiled. In estimating the costs of obtaining a supply of water from the Lamington river at Hacklebarney he estimates the cost of acquiring water powers and sites for water powers between Hacklebarney and New Brunswick, by purchase or condemnation, at $180,000, but makes no estimate of the amount to be paid to other owners of land along the river. (See Mr. Fuertes' report, pages 23 and 156).

In the case of Paterson vs. East Jersey Water Company, decided by Vice Chancellor Emery in May, 1908, it was held, for the first time in this State, that the Legislature can not authorize a municipality or a water company to take water from a running stream without making compensation to all the owners of land along the stream below the point of diversion, whether they own water powers or sites where water power may be developed or not. That case is reported in 73 New Jersey Equity Report, page 49, and goes into the matter thoroughly, being fifty-four pages in length. That case was taken to the Court of Errors and Appeals, and the decision of the Court of Chancery was unanimously affirmed last November, for the reasons given by Vice Chancellor Emery in the able opinion above noted.

If, therefore, an effort should be made by Plainfield to obtain a supply of water from the Lamington river at Hacklebarney, it would be necessary to pay not only $180,000 estimated by Mr. Fuertes as the damage to water power and sites for water power, but compensation must be made to the owners of every foot of land along the stream from Hacklebarney to tide water. The Lamington River rises several miles northeast of Hacklebarney and empties into the North Branch of the Raritan river about eighteen miles south of Hacklebarney; that is, on both sides of the stream between Hacklebarney and the North Branch of the Raritan River there are about thirty-six miles of riparian land. The rule of damages to riparian land for diversion of water that naturally runs along or through the land, is the difference in the market value of the land before the diversion and afterwards.

Mr. Fuertes states in his report, page 34: "If a dam be built at the site mentioned (Hacklebarney) for the purpose of supplying Plainfield with 8,000,000 gallons of water daily some years hence, there will be some months each year when the natural stream flow at the site being less than 8,000,000 gallons daily, water would be drawn from the reservoir and none would flow down stream from the 26.85 square miles of watershed above the dam." That is, for some months of each year the stream would be dry. The territory through which the Lamington River runs is just west of Bernardsville, where the price of land is already high and is rapidly increasing in value. It is, therefore, manifestly impossible for any one to foretell what juries in Morris and Somerset counties would award to their friends and neighbors as compensation for abstracting practically all the water in the river during the summer months.

But the right of riparian owners to compensation does not stop at the point where the Lamington river empties into the North branch of the Raritan. It extends to tide water at New Brunswick, a further distance along the North Branch of the Raritan, and along the Raritan itself, of more than twenty miles. Damages, however, between the point where the Lamington empties into the North Branch and tidewater at New Brunswick would not be so great as the damages along the Lamington itself, because Plainfield at no time would take the entire flow between the point where the Lamington empties into the North Branch an tide-water.

There was a supplement passed last year to the 1907 act above noted, extending the jurisdiction and supervision of the State Water Supply Commission over well, sub surface or percolating water supplies. (See Pamphlet Laws of 1910, p. 551).

In view of the above noted statute laws and decisions would it not be well, before expending a cool million or so of the taxpayers' money, to find out just where the present water company stands legally, it being claimed by some that the water company's charter is not good legally, and just where the city stands in relation to the water company's claimed rights to take Plainfield's water?

RECORDS BROKEN IN RUN TO WASHINGTON

It was the design of the New Jersey Central Railway, who were running The Daily Mail special train, to achieve for the benefit of your special correspondent, Mr. W. R. Holt, a record journey from Jersey City to Washington, a distance of 227 miles.

Ever since the Pennsylvania Railway opened its river tunnels and magnificent station in New York city the rivalry of the two systems has been intense, and the New Jersey Central, handicapped by the necessity of conveying passengers by ferry across the Hudson River, has treated the public to a regular riot of speed. Between Philadelphia and New York they have sent two trains hourly throughout the day which traverse the ninety-two miles in ninety-six minutes, according to the time-table, but as a matter of fact these trains frequently land their passengers ten minutes ahead of time.

It was 4:04 a. m. when our special train, consisting of a Pullman car, a combination day coach, and an Atlantic type engine, started. The temperature was a dozen degrees above zero, while a tempestuous wind opposed our progress. Alarming news had just been telegraphed to the train-despatcher's office. "Two freight cars," shouted an official, have been unroofed sixty miles ahead of us.' We subsequently learned that the flying mass of broken timber was whirled against an express train as it was passing the goods train, smashing the headlights of the express locomotive, battering the smokestack and handrails, and crippling the engine-driver, who was picked up unconscious and bleeding beside the track.

Despite the wind we accomplished the first eighty-four miles to Wayne Junction in eighty-four minutes.

Here a curios incident delayed us six minutes. The engines were about to be changed when it was discovered that our engine was frozen fast to the tender by the condensed steam and the water picked up from the track-tanks. The ice had formed an armored casing over the coupling gear. With pickaxes and buckets of boiling water workmen attacked the impediment and secured the engine's release.

The Daily Mail special train then proceeded to Baltimore, ninety-four miles further on. In stretches here we made our fastest time. Fifteen consecutive mile posts flew past us at intervals of 50 seconds or less. One mile was completed in 44 seconds—at a speed of practically eighty-two miles an hour.

Again and again, however, we were forced to slow down for various reasons. Once a frozen signal refusing to work caused us to stop for five minutes.

Baltimore was reached at 7 hours 23 minutes 30 second, and the remaining forty-four miles were covered in 44 minutes. The train rolled into Union Station at Washington at 8:11 a. m., having accomplished the journey of 227 miles, in the teeth of a gale, in 4 hours 7 minutes, or 247 miles.

"A record!" triumphantly shouted Mr. Charles H. English, the "passenger trainmaster" of the company who accompanied us. "We have finished the journey in seven minutes less than the best previous performance."—London Daily Mail.

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

The Great Conservation Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

Mrs. Redfield, quite as urban as the house, was a slim little woman of delicate habit, very far from the ordinary conception of a rancher's wife. Her manner was politely considerate, but not heatedly cordial (the visitor was not precisely hers), and, though she warmed a little after looking into Virginia's face, she could not by any stretch of phrase be called cordial.

"Are you tired? Would you like to lie down before dinner?" she asked.

"Oh, no, indeed. Nothing ever tires me," Virginia responded, with a smile.

"You look like one in perfect health," continued her hostess in the envious tone of one who knew all too well what ill health meant. "Let me show you to your room."

The house was not precisely the palace the cowboy had reported it to be, but it was charmingly decorated, and the furnishings were tasteful. To the girl it was as if she had been transported with instant magic from the horrible little cow town back to the

"ELEANOR, THIS IS MISS WETHERFORD," home of one of her dearest friends in Chester. She was at once exalted and humbly grateful.

"We dine at 7," Mrs. Redfield was saying, "so you can take a cup of tea without spoiling your dinner. Will you venture it?"

"If you please."

"Very well, come down soon and I'll have it ready. Mr. Redfield, I'm sure, will want some."

Virginia's heart was dancing with delight of this home as she came down the stairs a little later. As they talked Mrs. Redfield studied the girl with increasing interest and favor and soon got at her point of view. She even secured a little more of her story which matched fairly well with the account her husband had given. Her prejudices were swept away, and she treated her young guest as one well born and well educated woman treats another.

At last she said: "We dress for dinner, but any frock you have will do. We are not ironclad in our rules. There will be some neighbors in, but it isn't in any sense a 'party.'"

Lee Virginia went to her room borne high upon a new conception of the possibilities of the west. It was glorious to think that one could enjoy the refinement, the comfort, of the east at the same time that one dwelt within the inspiring shadow of the range. Her hands were a-tremble as she put on the bright muslin gown which was all she had for evening wear. She felt very much like the schoolgirl again, and after she had done her best to look nice she took a seat in the little rocker with intent to compose herself for her meeting with strangers. "I wish we were dining without visitors," she said as she heard a carriage drive up. A little later a galloping horse entered the yard and stopped at the door.

She heard voices in the hall and among them one with a very English accent, one that sounded precisely like those she had heard on the stage.

At last she dared wait no longer and, taking courage from necessity, descended the stairs, a pleasant picture of vigorous yet somewhat subdued maidenhood.

CHAPTER VII.

TWO ON THE VERANDA.

REDFIELD met his young guest in dinner coat, looking extremely urban, and presented his "friend and neighbor, Mr. Enderby."

Enderby turned out to be the owner of the voice with the English accent which Lee Virginia had heard in the hall, but he was very nice, and a moment later Mrs. Redfield entered with Mrs. Enderby, a large lady with a smiling face. Then a voice she knew spoke from behind her: "I don't need a presentation. Miss Wetherford and I have already met."

She turned to meet Ross Cavanagh, the young ranger.

"How did you get here?" she asked in wonder.

"I rode across the hills. It's not

He, too, was in evening dress, and as she stared at him in surprise he laughingly protested. "Please don't scrutinize this coat too closely. It's the only one I've owned for ten years, and this is the only house in which I'd dare to wear it."

One of the guests was State Senator Bridges, a farmerlike elderly man wearing a badly fitting serge suit. He was markedly western. So was his wife, who looked rather uneasy and hot.

Virginia and Ross, being the only young folk at the table, were seated together, and Enderby remarked privately, "Ross, you're in luck."

"I know I am," he replied heartily.

He was, as Redfield had said, highly susceptible, made so by his solitary life in the mountains, and to be seated close beside this maid of the valley stirred his blood to the danger point. It was only by an effort of the will that he kept in touch with the conversation.

"I hadn't the least thought of seeing you here," said Virginia. "How did you happen to come?"

"Redfield telephoned me at the mill, and I came at once. I haven't been here since May, and I just thought I'd take a half day off. Luckily my understudy was with me. I left him 'on the job.'"

He did not tell her that she was the principal reason for this sudden descent upon Elk Lodge, and no one but Redfield knew the killing ride he had taken in order to be in at the beginning of the dinner. The girl's face and voice, especially her voice, had been with him night and day as he went about his solitary duties. Her life problem had come to fill his mind to a disturbing degree, and he was eager to know more of her and of her struggle against the vice and vulgarity of the Forks.

"How is your mother?" he asked a few minutes later.

"Not at all well. Mr. Redfield is to take the doctor back with us tomorrow." The ecstasy died out of her face, and the flexible lips drooped with troubled musing. "I am afraid she suffers more than she will admit."

"She needs a rest and change. She should get away from her seat at that cash register and return to the open air. A touch of camp life would help her. She sticks too close to her work."

"I know she does, but she won't let me relieve her, even for an hour. It isn't because she doesn't trust me; she says it's because she doesn't want me sitting there—so—publicly. She doesn't oppose my housekeeping any more"—

"You certainly have made the old hotel into a place of miraculous neatness."

She flushed with pleasure. "I have done something, but not as I'd like to do. I really think if mother wishes to sell she could do so now to much better advantage."

"I've no doubt of it. Really, I'm not being funny, Miss Wetherford, when I say you've done something heroic. It's no easy thing to go into a place like that and make it habitable. It shows immense courage and self reliance on your part. It's precisely the kind of work this whole country needs."

His praise, sincere and generous, repaid her for all she had gone through. It was a great pleasure to hear her small self praised for courage and self reliance by one whose daily work was heroic. All things conspired to make a conquest of her heart, for the ranger bore himself with grace and dealt with his silver deftly. His face, seen from the side, was older and sterner than she had thought it, but it was very attractive in line.

Redfield appealed to the ranger. "Ross, you're all sorts of a reactionary. What do you say to this? Senator Bridges is opposed to all federal interference with state forests and state game."

The forester's eyes lit up. "But are they state forests and state game? What makes them so? They are lands which the whole people purchased and which the whole people defended."

"Heah, heah!" cheered Enderby.

Bridges bristled with anger and went off into a long harangue on state rights and the dangers of centralization, to which Enderby replied: "Bosh! The whole trouble with your bally government is its lack of cohesion. If I had my way I'd wipe out the senate. You're such blooming asses over here. You don't know enough to keep a really big man in your presidential chair. This fussing about every four years is plain rot. Here's Roosevelt gets in the midst of a lot of the finest kind of reforms, you know, and directly you go and turn him out. Then if you get a bad man you've to wait four years till you can fetch him a whack. Why not arrange it so you can pitch your president out the minute he goes wrong? I say your old rag of a constitution is a ball and chain on your national leg. England is immeasurably better off so far as that goes."

Ross turned to Virginia, leaving the political discussion to go on over his head. "I was back in the old island a couple of years ago, and you've no idea how small it seemed to me. It surely is a right little, tight little island.' I couldn't help wondering whether the men in parliament were as important as they seemed to think they were and whether England is not really an empty shell of empire, a memory of what it once was. I couldn't settle down there some way. I was homesick for the mountains in a month. But what scared me most was the pauper population of the old place—one in every thirty-seven must be helped. I came back to the States gladly. 'I guess I'm an American,' I said to my sisters."

SOME TIMELY TOPICS OF BORO'S SCHOOLS

The cold weather having made outdoor fire-drills inadvisable in the borough schools, a system of indoor drills has been established. This consists of all the elements of the outdoor kind except that the lines are halted at the doors just as they are ready to pass out. All classes stop as soon as the fire-gong ceases to ring. Thus the indoor drills gives practice in quick and orderly formation in lines, the monitors open the doors and unlock the gates, the teachers assume their positions at the head of the line, and in fact every detail is accomplished except the march outside of the building.

Drills are given at least twice a month, in accordance with a standing resolution of the Board of Education. A report of these drills is made to the board at each regular meeting in writing, filed and a record made on the minutes of the secretary. The drills are given under various conditions, so as to give exercises to the pupils in any emergency. For instance, last week a drill was given just when all the high school pupils were passing through the halls to their various classrooms. At such time the pupils halt where they may happen to be until the teachers are at their stations, and then the pupils follow in lines. A few weeks ago a drill was given while the primary pupils were marching through various rooms. Exercises of this character train pupils to act systemacically in every situation that may arise, and the danger from fire is reduced to a minimum.

The regular time required to send the 800 pupils of the Somerset school out of the building in perfect order is one minute and forty seconds.

A class in manual training has been organized in the primary grades of the borough schools to consist of all pupils who are above the age of eleven. The proper age for fourth grade pupils is ten or eleven. Pupils older than eleven have for some reason been retarded in their progress. Manual training is often more interesting and beneficial to such pupils than the other class lessons. A class of this kind organized last year proved to be very successful. When an interest has been aroused in one subject, it often leads to interest in other subjects.

One of the drawbacks to the efficiency of medical inspection in the borough schools consists of the fact that there is no legal authority to compel the attention of parents to the defects reported by the school physician. Cases sometimes arise, for example, in which a serious defect of the eyes is noted, and the examiner sends a letter to the parents recommending that the family physician be consulted; but nothing is done about it by the parents. Indeed not infrequently the medical inspector draws upon himself the wrath of parents for reporting the defects he has found. Thus the children suffer, sometimes throughout life, because of this indifference and neglect. Sometimes, too, parents do not know how to treat the children for the defects reported. It would seem that a trained nurse, who would follow up the reports of the medical examiner, could be of very material service in securing proper treatment for the children, and insuring their speedy return to school, with faculties improved.

Some time ago a pupil was examined in a certain school by the physician, who found that the sight of one eye was entirely gone, and that of the other was rapidly deteriorating. For at least three preceding years the examiner had found the same defects, and had sent notices home in regards thereto. But nothing had been done. A very vigorous effort was then made to induce parental action, resulting in a half-hearted course of treatment that may or may not do some good. But there was grave danger of this child becoming entirely blind ere maturity was reached, thus causing lifelong misfortune to him and much expense to his people.

Some children who are thus neglected become public charges in time, and the people are taxed to support them in various institutions. On this basis it would often be economy to use public moneys to cure disorders during their early stages rather than incur the greatly increased expense of prolonged maintenance later in public institutions.

REAL BASEBALL GAME PLAYED ON LAKE ERIE.

The novel experience of witnessing a baseball game on the frozen surface of Lake Erie, off the south shore of Kelly's Island, was the pleasure of nearly 2,000 islanders Sunday afternoon.

A regulation diamond was marked off on the ice and the rules of the national game were followed.

The teams playing were dubbed the Elfers and the Porters. The Elfers won by the score of 22 to 20.

Residents of Middle Bass, Put-in-Bay, Lakeside and Marble Head attended the game, going to Kelly's island on ice boats. The idea of playing winter baseball has made a hit with the islanders, and hereafter this will be the winter sport. Another game will be played next Sunday.

NEWARK'S ELKS TAKE THREE STRAIGHT GAMES

The Newark Elks' bowling team came to Plainfield last night, and carried off all three games the in the match with the local Elks on Johnny Campbell's alleys. The match was not a spirited one from a local standpoint, for the Plainfielders were not up to their usual form. There was only one double century, Johnny Campbell putting up a score of 211 in the second game. Chauncey Stout was next high man with a score of 194 in the first game.

The Newarkers took the first game by a score of 874 to 837, the second by a score of 907 to 853 and the third by a score of 836 to 792. Ohler was high man for the visitors, rolling a 221 in the second game. Sell put up a 192 in the first game and then duplicated the figures in the third game. The scores:

PASTOR AND WIFE GIVEN A BIRTHDAY SURPRISE.

The officers and members of the Bible class of the Temple Baptist church, tendered a surprise to Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Musson, at their home last night, in honor of the latter's birthday. The coming of the self-invited guests, thirty in all, was entirely unexpected by the victims but they quickly made everyone at home.

A general social time was enjoyed during which Mrs. Musson was presented with a handsome silver tray in honor of the natal event. Refreshments were served at a late hour.

Koch's Tuberculin Cure.

After three years' experimentation Professor Wagner von Jauregg, of the University of Vienna, claims to have cured twenty-three per cent. of cases of progressive paralysis out of 1,500 patients by injection of Koch's tuberculin. The disease heretofore has been considered incurable.

WESTFIELD NO MATCH FOR LOCAL HIGH TEAM

Plainfield High School walked away from Westfield High in a basketball game played on the local's court, the final score being 49 to 23. Poor shooting and guarding contributed largely to the defeat of the visitors although they passed well and developed some fast team work. They could not connect with the basket. The first half ended with the score at 21 to 5.

Both teams played raggedly in the second half, little judgment and poor passing marked the play. Only the Plainfielders' good shooting enabled them to add to their score. Manley, Clarke, Ricketts and Woodhull all contributed to the big score by their safe shooting, while Bristol and Karr played a good defensive game. Underwood, Elliot and Sissenson did the best work for Westfield High.

PUBLIC RECEPTION FOR SENATOR-ELECT

Citizens to Hold a Demonstration in Honor of James E. Martine.

W. L. SAUNDERS CHAIRMAN.

Irrespective of Party Prominent Men Consent to Serve on a Committee for the Celebration.

To show the esteem in which he is held by his fellow townsmen, irrespective of party, plans are being made on the initiative of this paper for a public demonstration for United States Senator-elect James E. Martine. What form the affair will take, of course, cannot be said at this time, but in all probability there will be a public reception in some large hall.

United States Senator-elect James E. Martine.

It is distinctly understood that there is no politics in the proposed demonstration, the sole idea being to pay tribute of respect to the Senator-elect. The community is proud of the fact that for the first time in history the exalted office of Senator from New Jersey comes to a Plainfielder. And the people generally are proud of the fact that James E. Martine has at last been signally rewarded for his years of steadfast loyalty to the political principles he represents. He lived here far more than two decades and as a citizen he is held in the highest esteem. These are the reasons that prompt those who have consented to serve on a committee to arrange an appropriate celebration.

Former Mayor William L. Saunders, a warm personal friend and admirer of Mr. Martine, has consented to serve as chairman. The mayor of the city, George W. V. Moy, likewise has stated that he will be a member. So has Assemblyman Calvin E. Brodhead, Republican County Chairman Frank E. Smith, A. H. Atterbury, David J. Carney, Harry W. Marshall and Councilmanic President, R. I. Tolles and Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss. Others will be added to the committee.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF ERNEST BURDICK HELD.

The funeral service of Ernest Burdick, the infant son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles M. Burdick, of Central Islip, L. I., was held yesterday afternoon at the residence of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Smith, on Madison avenue, there being a number of relatives and friends present. The little fellow rested in a beautiful full length casket, which was almost completely covered with floral tributes.

Rev. Edward Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, conducted the services and after reading a number of selections from the Bible, spoke in an impressive manner, offering words of consolation to the bereaved parents. He made a touching reference to the death of King David's child; also calling to mind texts of Scripture pertaining to children of the Bible times.

During the service, Mrs. John B. Cottrell, an intimate friend of the family sang one selection impressively. The remains were placed in the receiving vault at Hillside cemetery and will be interred later.

Sesame Club to Meet.

The Sesame Club will meet tomorrow morning at the residence of Mrs. Lewis Ross, 403 East Seventh street.

SILVER JUBILEE IN MAY

Extempt Firemen's Association Plan Monster Celebration in Newark.

ORGANIZED IN MAY, 1886.

Parade of 150 Companies of Paid Department and 60 Locals.—Silver Souvenirs for All Delegates.

What, it is believed, will be the largest and most imposing firemen's parade ever held in the State will mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of the State Exempt Firemen's Association on May 24 next in Newark. There will be at least 150 companies representing the paid departments and every exempt organization in the State will be on hand to make the occasion a memorable one.

Preparations have been going on ever since last September, to perfect the arrangements for the monster celebration, which will cover two days, and nothing that can be devised for the comfort of delegates to the convention will be left undone.

The object of the coming convention is to adopt amendments to the exempt firemen's constitution and by laws which have been prepared by Horace Adams, of this city, and approved by the executive committee, and to consider legislation in connection with the protection of the exempts in the matter of relief which the State now provides for the Firemen's Relief Association. The matter of this legislation is in the hands of James J. Manning, of Elizabeth, president of the exempts; Elias Leslie, of Trenton; Charles E. McGrath, of Newark; and J. B. Stevens, of Morristown. Others who have the interests of the exempts at heart and who are working with the end in view of establishing an entente cordiale between them and the relief association are Edgar T. Humphrey, chief of the Nutley fire department, and secretary of the State association, and Patrick Walsh, chairman of the executive committee.

In the parade in May there will be volunteers from all over the State representing the sixty-three locals. There is one congressional district which has not yet had its member appointed on the executive committee, Camden, Gloucester and Salem counties, but this vacancy will probably be filled at the convention.

The question of expenses of delegates which up to last September the relief association refused to pay the exempts has always been a bone of contention and a suit is now pending in the District court to be tried in February in which one of the exempts seeks to recover expenses for visiting conventions previous to September, 1910. A previous trial of this suit resulted in a verdict for the defendants.

A committee comprising all the members of the executive committee has been delegated to design and secure a suitable souvenir for the silver jubilee in May. These souvenirs will be distributed among the delegates at the convention. The executive committee consists of the following: George Kinkle, Bridgeton; John A. Danner, Perth Amboy; Horace G. Adams, Plainfield; P. W. Walsh, Phillipsburg; Frank Hoffman, Rutherford; Aaron Blum, Nutley; E. Doremus, East Orange; James McDonald, Harrison; and J. H. Fitzpatrick, Hoboken. The organization was formed May 22, 1886.

Entertains Social Twelve.

Games were played and George Poling won first prize and Joseph Kirch, second. Refreshments were served. It will consist of a description to the audience of the five armless and legless prophets. Their experiences, dispositions and character will be vividly described and will be beneficial to all. This is the first time this service has been given at the local corps.

EXPOUNDED X - SCIENCE

William D. McCrackan Delivers a Lecture on the Creed.

AT HARTRIDGE AUDITORIUM.

Miss Susan Corey Introduces the Speaker Whose Address is Heard by a Large Audience.

William D. McCrackan, a member of the Board of Lectureship of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Boston, Mass., delivered a lecture on Christian Science last night at the Hartridge auditorium. He was introduced by Miss Susan Corey, first reader of the local church. Miss Corey said in part:

"In inviting you to a lecture on Christian Science, we are inviting you to share our best possession, namely: Our point of view of Christianity as an exact science, progressively unfolded to us as we understand spiritual law.

"We hope that you believe with us that spiritual law did not disappear with Christ and his disciples, but belongs to the eternal order of things. That it exists now, as it did when Jesus fed the multitudes or when Peter and John healed the lame man at the gate of the temple. We know that the principle is unchanging; it must be, then, the human consciousness which changes, and when it rises high enough, perceives the healing truth.

"In speaking of the unchanging order of whatever is based on principle, I am reminded of a little girl I knew who was beginning the study of arithmetic: 'Well, Mary,' said her aunt, 'how much do two and two make?' 'Two and two make five,' said Mary promptly. 'Why, no,' said her aunt, 'two and two don't make five, Mary, two and two make four!' 'Maybe they did, when you were a little girl, aunt,' said Mary, 'but times have changed.'

"There are some of us who believe that in the mathematics of Christianity two and two still make four, and therefore we believe that whenever spiritual understanding is applied to human need the product is now as in Christ's time, a healed and comforted human being.

"I know of none better fitted through demonstration and experience to point out to us the way of scientific progress along these lines than the speaker we have with us this evening and I feel it a great privilege as well as a great pleasure to be able to present to you William D. McCracken, member of the Board of Lectureship of First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Boston, Mass.

Mr. McCracken said in part:

"It is not a new Bible which Christian Science contemplates, but one and the same Bible, explained in a spiritually progressive manner. It is not a new God which it proclaims, but the only true God, our Father which is in heaven. It makes no attempt at an improved Christ, for there is but one Christ, who is in the bosom of the Father, perfect, eternal and indestructible. Christian Science is progressive, and marks an advance in religion because it throws the strong light of Science upon the nature and attributes of Deity, upon the teachings and works of the Christ, and because it picks out from the Bible's make-up the essential imperishable import of its spiritual message.

"Christian Science calls upon mankind for a frank and fearless revision of its own beliefs about the unchanging God, His man and His universe. This age, which is not afraid to fly in the face of the sun on filmy wings, is asked to display the necessary courage to pass in review the things which pertain to its own salvation from false gods. Why should not right and just views concerning God and His universe be capable of more precise statement? Why should it be thought a thing unreasonable with any one that God can become better understood by the average man than has been the case in the past? Why should not the understanding of how to grow in grace, how to deepen and broaden one's spiritual concepts, progress according to law. And why should not this knowledge concerning the fountain-head of all knowledge, the Giver of all good gifts, the absolute eternal Principle of all Life, in whom we live, and move, and have our being—why should not this knowledge constitute demonstrable Science?

"Christian Scientists believe that it does; that Jesus pointed out the only true, final and real knowledge when he said, 'And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent.

"Christian Science teaches that mortal man is a false version of the true man, a counterfeit attempting to resemble the true, but, nevertheless

JUMPED TO HIS DEATH

Elliott W. Heaton Ended His Own Life While Despondent.

TRAGEDY IN NEW YORK.

He Sprang From Manhattan Bridge—Leaves a Wife and One Little Daughter—Lived on West Fifth Street.

Papers found in his pocket showing that he had made over his salary for the next four weeks to a loan company appeared to the police to indicate the motive yesterday for the suicide of Edward W. Heaton, of 214 West Fifth street, this city, who threw himself into the East River from the Manhattan Bridge, New York, before the eyes of hundreds of persons hurrying home from work late in the afternoon.

The young man was employed as a collector by the Blythbourne Water Company, of Brooklyn. He was well dressed and had well kept hands. There was no money in his pockets.

The man leaped to his death at half-past five o'clock, while the bridge was crowded with foot passengers. Their screams as he dived from among them could be heard at the Manhattan entrance to the bridge. The cries attracted the attention of Captain J. P. Grace, of the United States patrol Vigilant, and he recovered the body.

Crew Watches Plunge.

The Vigilant was proceeding up the river near the Manhattan shore when her crew were thrilled by shouts on the bridge over their heads. They looked up and in the failing light saw a man leap from the lower ironwork of the span a short distance from the Manhattan pier. As Captain Grace telephoned his engine room for a full stop the falling man struck the water a few yards from the patrol boat and sank. As he reappeared, William Strong, mate of the Vigilant, lunged with a boathook, which caught in the man's overcoat, but only tore away the collar. The body was recovered only after it had come up a second time.

Efforts were made to restore the man to consciousness while the Vigilant was sent full speed for Pier No. 52, at the foot of Gouverneur street. By the time the Vigilant had covered the distance to the pier a policeman who had seen the man jump had summoned an ambulance from Gouverneur Hospital. The surgeon in charge saw at once that the man was dead. The body was taken to Pier A in a police launch.

Papers found on the body indicated that it was that of E. W. Heaton. The man had been between twenty-five and thirty years old, five feet and a half tall and was well dressed. He wore a gray suit and overcoat and good linen and shoes. His hands and teeth were immaculate.

There was no money in the man's pocket, but there were a number of memoranda showing that E. W. Heaton had had dealings with a loan company in William street. The last loan had apparently been made on January 9. There was also a card directed to Hoyt Browne Evans, which read:—"Have started for the South. Sorry I cannot see you before leaving. Will telephone on arrival."

Other papers were blank billheads informing persons in Brooklyn that they owed money for water rent to the Blythebourne Water Company and a commutation ticket issued by the New Jersey Central Railroad to E. W. Heaton, of Plainfield. The man's clothing was initialed E. W. H. in various places.

Persons who saw the man leap from the bridge told the police that there could be no doubt that his death was intentional. They said he was first noticed standing peering down into the river and that he then suddenly climbed over the rail guarding the foot walk, crawled down among the ironwork and threw himself off.

Mr Heaton was thirty-nine years old. His wife left with their only child, a little daughter, for New York, when she heard the sad news. Until a year ago, Heaton was employed by the Public Service Corporation at its electric light plant here.

Dr. Harrison Transferred.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, has received a letter from the church missionary, Dr. Paul W. Harrison, who is now in Arabia, in which he states that the mission board has transferred him from Bushra to Muskat, where, it is believed, that there is a greater need for his services. Dr. Harrison says that he is enjoying the best of health and that he is progressing well with his work.

Parade for Martine.

The Democratic club has planned to hold a parade tonight at 8 o'clock, in honor of James E. Martine's election to the United States Senate. A drum corps has been engaged. All citizens are invited to participate.

MARTINE IS ELECTED UNITED STATES SENATOR

UNITED STATES SENATOR-ELECT JAMES E. MARTINE.

Plainfielder Chosen by the Legislature in Joint Session on First Ballot—Gets 48 Votes, 7 More Than Necessary.

James E. Martine, of this city, was elected United States Senator at noon today by the Legislature in joint session in the State Senate chamber at Trenton. He will succeed John Kean. Mr. Martine received 48 votes, 9 in the Senate and 39 in the House.

Forty-one votes were necessary for election, there being 80 members in the Legislature, all of whom were present.

Former United States Senator James Smith, Jr., of Newark, who withdrew from the fight last night after issuing a statement, got three votes. Three Essex Assemblymen, at the behest of Smith's political manager, Democratic State Chairman Nugent, voted for the Newark publisher.

Former Governor Edward C. Stokes, of Mercer, the primary choice of the Republicans, received 21 votes. Former Governor John W. Griggs, of Passaic, got 5 votes. One vote each was cast for United States Senator John Kean, of Union county; former Governor J. Franklin Fort, of Essex county, and Justice Mahlon Pitney, of Morris county.

Martine—Assemblymen Agnew, Alyea, Ballentine, Boettner, Booream, Brodhead, Burke, Bunn, Cole, Christie, Davidson, Donnelly, Egan, Ford, Geran, Griffin, Henrdickson, James, McGrath, Matthews, Ramsay, Kenney, Lafferty, LaMonte, McLoughlin, Myers, Mylod, Newman, Simpson, Strietwolf, Taylor, Walsh, Hinners, Backus, Brown, Bracken, Leveen, Macksey, Martin—39.

Martine—Senate—Cornish, Fielder, Fitzherbert, Gebhardt, Johnson, Lowe, Osborne, Crite, Silzer—9. Total—48.

Smith—Assemblymen Chalvoy, Phillips and McGowan—3.

Stokes—Assembly—Adams, Bacharach, Jackson, Layden, Mather, McCann, Pickaart, Pine, Radcliffe, Richmond, Thompson, White—12. Senate—Ackerman, Brown, Frelinghuysen, Gaunt, Edge, Leavitt, Lewis, Plummer, Prince—9.

Griggs—Assembly—Whyte, Whitcar, Turner, Coles, DeUnger.

Fort—Assemblyman Nicholls.

Pitney—Assemblyman Bradley.

Kean—Assemblyman Hand.

As president of the State Senate, Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, acted as presiding officers at the joint session. After the journals of the Senate and House were read and compared, Assemblyman Calvin E. Brodhead, of this city, gave way to Essex county to nominate Mr. Martine. Assemblyman Egan, of Essex, performed that duty; Assemblyman Macksey, of Essex, seconded the nomination.

In turn, Smith was nominated by an Essex county man, and the nominations of Stokes, Kean, Fort and Pitney followed. There was intense excitement as the balloting proceeded. Despite the efforts of the chairman, there was deafening applause when Martine was declared elected.

Immediately after the announcement in the Senate of the result of the vote Senator Ernest R. Ackerman as chairman of the joint Assembly made this declaration:

"In accordance with an act of Congress approved on July 25, 1866, James E. Martine having received a majority of votes in the State Assembly, I therefore declare the said James E. Martine duly elected to the United States Senate for the full term of six years from March 4, 1911."

INTERVIEW INSERT .... ....

Mr. Martine issued this statement today: "I am deeply conscious of the great honor I have received through my election as United States Senator. I thoroughly appreciate the responsibility that the obligation incurs. I shall represent the whole people. This contest has been for a principle, one vital to future self-government. The victory is not that of an individual, but of the people. The significance of the result obtained in the Legislature today under the impulse of an honest application of a system of direct primary voting is that the people will welcome, in fact, demand, the privilege, the right of choosing members of the United States Senate by popular vote.

"I need scarcely add that I shall enter upon my duties in Congress determined to do my utmost to bring about constitutional reforms for the direct election of Senators.

"I fully appreciate the important

BOUND BROOK PROTESTS

Delegation of Citizens Remonstrates Against Proposed Sewage Plant.

TO STATE HEALTH BOARD.

Bill Introduced in Legislature by Senator Frelinghuysen to Block North Plainfield.

A delegation of about fifty citizens of Bound Brook appeared before the State Board of Health, yesterday, to protest against the proposed action of North Plainfield borough to locate sewage disposai beds in the western end of North Plainfield township on land more or less adjacent to Bound Brook. Leon DuFour, as president of the Council, acted as spokesman for the Bound Brook delegation, entering a strong protest against the borough's proposed plans.

William J. Buttfield, together with a representative from the office of Lindabery, Depue & Faulks and one from the office of Hering & Fuller, engineers, were present to represent the borough's interests. The State Board of Health reserved its decision. According to the State law only persons residing within the municipality where such action is intended have the right to protest, which was pointed out as unfair especially in this case.

A bill was presented by State Senator Frelinghuysen, yesterday, making it necessary for municipalities to get the approval of the State Board of Health to the location and method of operating plants for the treatment and disposal of sewage.

WARREN TOWNSHIP BOARD OF HEALTH REORGANIZES.

The Warren township committee, which with the township assessor comprise the Board of Health, met at Mount Bethel, last night, and reorganized the latter body. John C. Cooper was made chairman and the other members are Alfred Binz, William Mernaugh and George Bowers. Mr. Mernaugh takes the place of Adam Sacks, resigned.

The township committee afterward met and decided to hold a public meeting the first week in February to discuss the application of the New York Telephone to erect poles and string wires on any road in the corporation limits without compensation. At the present time the company has a franchise to use certain roads. All the citizens in the township are invited.

New Real Estate Firm.

J. C. Field, Jr., of Park avenue, and Harry Kenyon, of this city, have formed a partnership under the firm name of Field & Kenyon, for doing a general real estate business. The firm will have its office at the present place of business of Mr. Field, on Park avenue.

Miss Lillian A. Force, of Duer street, is ill at home with an attack of the grip.

SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAS. E. MARTINE

James Edgar Martine was born in New York city. He is 61 years of age. His father, Daniel Martine was a prosperous New York merchant. The family removed to this city when James was sixteen years old. The father purchased Cedar brook farm, which has since been the Martine homestead.

When but eighteen years of age, Mr. Martine attended the State convention which nominated Governor Randolph. He made a speech there that attracted the Governor's attention. From that day day until the present time he has been preaching Democracy in season and out of season. He has led many forlorn a hope as a candidate. Never seeking the office he has considered it his duty to be the standard bearer when no available candidate was in sight.

Spending his own money and never accepting any pecuniary or other payment for his services than the mere knowledge that he was doing what he should to promote his party's principles, Mr. Martine has spent his life in the political cause which he has often said is a religion to him.

There is hardly any office in the gift of the people, except the Presidency and Vice-Presidency of the United States that Mr. Martine has not been a candidate for. Several times he has run for the Assembly, twice for State senator, once for sheriff, twice for Congress, once for mayor of Plainfield. Three years ago he was the unanimous choice of his party for United States senator and was beaten by Senator Briggs by but six votes.

Mr. Martine has always run away ahead of his ticket and although always running in a Republican district he has made a close fight for the office for which he was running. When pitted against Charles N. Fowler for Congress six years ago he came within 500 votes of being elected although the district is normally Republican by 6,000. In the present campaign he was the primary choice for United States Senator. He was supported for election by the majority of Democratic legislators, the governor and almost without exception the public press.

Rewarded With Roses.

Thirty-five young women of the Y. W. C. A. enjoyed themselves last evening guessing the titles of books from costumes worn by their fellow members in the association. Prizes of pink roses were awarded to Miss Marjory Burtis, Miss Ella Ramsey and Miss Conover for guessing in the order named the largest number of volumes represented by the costumes. The affair was in charge of Miss Mead. Games were played and refreshments served after the guessing contest.

Will Take Pledge.

Lawrence Wallace, of the West End, got drunk again yesterday, his excuse being that he had an attack of the grip and that the only remedy he knew of was whiskey. He filled up on that and lost himself until found by Patrolman McGinley. He was allowed to go after promising to take the pledge.

CURED TO STAY CURED.

How a Plainfield Citizen Found Complete Freedom From Kidney Troubles.

If you suffer from backache—
From any disease of the kidneys,
Be cured to stay cured.
Doan's Kidney Pills make lasting cures.
Plainfield people testify.
Here's one case of it:

Mrs. J. Mottley, 546 West Sixth street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of kidney trouble three years ago and I have never had a return of it since. I am glad to confirm the public statement I gave in favor of this remedy at that time."

The endorsement to which Mrs. Mottley refers was given on August 26, 1905, and was substantially as follows: "About wo months ago I was seized by a severe backache and dull pains in the top and back part of my head. I could not rest well and had no strength or energy to do my housework. Doan's Kidney Pills which I procured at Randolph's drug store, gave me prompt relief and I am convinced that they are a first-class remedy."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sol agents for the United States.

News and Notes

BASEBALL.

Susquehanna League members, in session yesterday at Wilkes-Barre, re-elected William McCollum, of that city, president, secretary and treasurer and decided against national protection, although favoring a modified form that would leave the players free agents at the close of the season, but would enable the league to prevent organized ball from making inroads on their teams, if such can be secured. It was also decided that the playing season should consist of forty-two games, same as last year, but that the season should begin a week earlier, May 13, and close a week later, September 16, with only one game a week played during the first two weeks.

The executive committee of the Boston Nationals met in the Hub City yesterday afternoon and issued an "official denial" of any deal whereby Shean was to be transferred to the New York Giants in exchange for Shafer. As the executive committee consists of President Russell and Vice-President Page, it is very evident that the latter gentleman has succeeded in having his veto of the proposition go through. As far as the club is concerned, this ends the matter. Fred Tenney, the manager, has virtually received notice that he is the fifth wheel, and that what he says decidedly does not go. Whether McGraw will try to press his claim to Shean is another matter.

Eugene Elliott sent his signed contract to Secretary Davis, of the Yankees, yesterday. Elliott is a third baseman and comes from the McKeesport club of the Ohio and Pennsylvania League. He has been making the baseball fans in his vicinity sit up and take notice for several years now. Elliott's work attracted the attention of Scout Arthur Irwin. Having seen the youngster in action, Irwin believes him to be a coming third baseman. The Highlanders' scout thinks the McKeesport lad is a better man on the third sack than Austin.

George W. Heckert, manager of the Trenton Tri-State Club, left his home in York for Wilmington, where he says, the deal will be closed for the sale of the Williamsport franchise. Wilmington is certain of being a member of the league, despite rumors to the contrary, says Heckert. The difficulty over the selection of a ground will be adjusted this week, is the Trenton manager's prediction. Heckert has ignored the charges made by Manager Welgand, and when asked to make reply, said that one was not necessary.

Manager "Al" Selbach was yesterday afternoon re-elected to take charge of the Harrisburg Tri-State team for next season and will report within the next ten days for instructions. This year he will be a bench manager only, and in the event of the Harrisburg franchise going to a stock company he will be a free agent and the new company will have the selection of its own manager.

Joe Raidy, the former fast little shortstop of the Albany New York State League team, has signed to manage the Zanesville team of the Central League next season. Raidy's home is in Adams, Mass. He was a member of the Jersey City Club for a few weeks about three years ago. He managed the Grand Rapids team the last two seasons.

Manager Connie Mack, of the world's champions, and his bride are passengers on the Mauretania, which left Liverpool, England, last Saturday. The liner is due in New York on Thursday. The Athletics' leader and his wife have been abroad since October 20.

GOLF.

The annual meeting of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association will be held at the home of Mrs. M. D. Paterson, No. 51 West Eighty-seventh street, at eleven o'clock on the morning of January 31. The Nominating Committee has placed the following ticket in the field: President, Mrs. M. D. Paterson, Baltusrol G. C.; vice-president, Mrs. Howard Whitney, Nassau C. C.; secretary, Mrs. E. F. Sanford, Essex County C. C.; treasurer, Mrs. H. M. Stockton, Plainfield C. C.; fifth member, Mrs. F. E. Donohue, Montclair G. C.

Report has it that the Country Club of Atlantic City will have a new professional next season in place of William Robinson, who has had charge there eight years. J. J. McDermott, the Merchantville homebred, is also looking for another green.

A tract of 130 acres of land has been purchased by the Merion Cricket Club, on which the organization hopes to lay out one of the best courses in the East. Two women's national championship tournaments have been held over the old Merion links.

A NEW CONTRACT.

It may be assumed that the Common Council is not favorably inclined to the scheme of obtaining a water supply from the Lamington or Raritan river. This is largely due to the necessarily large issue of bonds for estimated "first cost" and the unknown damages for water power rights and the like under recent court decisions and also because of knowledge of the fact that the water from such a source for drinking purposes would be most unsatisfactory. Thus the problem is narrowed to a question of organizing a municipal water plant by Plainfield to supply its own inhabitants or a water contract with the private corporations which now furnishes the supply.

It is debatable whether Plainfield can issue bonds to cover the cost of laying pipes and supplying water beyond its corporate limits. According to the opinion of the late corporation counsel, Plainfield can condemn the pipes of the water company as now laid in the streets of our city, but it certainly cannot condemn the company's pipes in North Plainfield. Probably it could not condemn the pipes in the city limits through which Westfield and other towns are now supplied by the company for such a course would mean big losses and consequent damages since the existing contracts with various municipalities would be broken.

Unless North Plainfield, in some way, joins with Plainfield assuming a fair proportion of the cost of the plant, it does not appear that that municipal government or its inhabitants has, or should have, any voice in the matter. Regardless of this fact it is noticeable that much of the discussion, particularly at the private conferences of a few select citizens is being furnished by non-residents of the city.

There is another point to be made, among the many, and that is that the subterrenean source and to what extent is may be relied upon for future needs cannot be determined. Assuming, however, that it has a limit the risk of exhaustion becomes more serious if two companies, the one public, and the other private, are drawing on it. Plainfield, it is believed, can make a fair and reasonable contract by which it can have a prior claim on this underground supply. On the other hand, the company itself will have no difficulty in securing other customers in place of this city should be contractual relations between it and the private company be ended.

The condemnation of the water company's plant in the Netherwood section is impracticable even if possible. The concern is in business to find water for its customers and it will go where it must to find the source of supply. Does it not seem reasonable and business-like to make a contract with the company rather than to launch forth into a costly venture, which would be an experiment to say the least?

Our thanks go to Mayor Moy for his courageous and summary action regarding the lunch wagon which has been allowed to use a public thoroughfare as a place to do business. As we pointed out a year ago the Common Council had no right whatever to issue a permit for such a purpose. Mr. Fisk, at that time took that view of the matter. Unmindful of the law, however, the city fathers granted the license on the absurd excuse of "custom."

Plainfield congratulates Governor Wilson and the Legislature of New Jersey. The election of James E. Martine to the United States Senate is al fitting tribute to an honest man who has devoted his life to the political cause he represents. Fearless, able and aggressive, he will reflect credit on the State which has so signally honored him.

EXPOUNDED X-SCIENCE

less, easily detected because of his unlikeness to God, who is Spirit. God is not the author of mortal, material man, nor of mortal man's failures, limitations, and losses, of his final breakdown and his death sentence. God is not responsible for evil in any of its forms. He did not create it, since it could never lodge in His thought for an instant, else He were not wholly good and the Principle governing the universe were not wholly reliable.

"Evil has no origin in Spirit, no entity nor reality of God's making, and no eternity, but is always a false concept, assailing the mind of mortal man until such time as its lying nature is laid bare and its futile, transitory pretenses cease to frighten. Evil has no standing before God Those who dwell 'in the secret place of the most High' need not fear its empty threats, but, asserting their divine rights, may rise, in the words of the apostle Paul, 'in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ.'

"Thus it is that the two statements of the Bible, namely, that God is Love, and God is Spirit, find their reconciliation in Science. The doubts which have ever assailed suffering humanity concerning the goodness of God are dissipated. Though physical sense, left to its own devices, rises in opposition to the most High, and tries to give the impression that God is cruel and willingly afflicts His defenseless children, Christian Science, elucidating the Scriptures, proves that evil is not of God's creation or permission. Good and good only proceeds from the Giver of every good gift, and all assertions to the contrary are due to ignorance or blindness of heart. John's statement that God is Love lives on foreved side by side with Jesus' profound explanation that God is Spirit.

NOTED SPEAKER FOR THE CHAMBER'S DINNER.

William J. Moran, who it was announced in the Daily Press would be among the speakers at the banquet of the Chamber of Commerce on February 13 was born in Rochester, about forty years ago. He was counsel for Ex-Mayor Grace in establishing the Grace Institute. He was also counsel for the American Museum of Safety and is a member of the legal committee of the National Civic Federation. He was also secretary to Mayor Low, and is considered a very brilliant, witty and able speaker and he is also an interesting and able man.

There is no doubt but that the Chamber of Commerce will have at its banquet some of the ablest talent in the country and the affair promises to be the greatest of its kind ever held in the city. Those who have not been so fortunate as yet in securing tickets had better do so soon provided they want to make sure of a seat. They may be had on application at the Secretary's office of the chamber in the Frost building or from any of the members of the chamber.

Camp 30, P. O. S. of A. Install.

White and staff, of Elizabeth, accompanied by the uniformed rank of camp 78, visited Washington camp, No. 30, of this city, last night and installed the following officers: Past President, George H. Couch; president, E. J. Smith; vice-prseident, Clifford Nestor; master of forms, John Ayers; recording secretary, I. N. Wyckoff; financial secretary, W. D. Williams; treasurer, Theodore Van Pelt; chaplain, E. D. GaNun; conductor, Walter J. Ulmer; inspector, Wilford Nestor; guard, Edward J. Ayers; trustee, I. N. Wyckoff.

Funeral of Isaac Compton.

The funeral of Isaac Compton was held this afternoon at his late home on Grandview avenue. It was largely attended by relatives and friends including a delegation from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., of which he was a member. In the absence of Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of which Mr. Compton was a member, Rev. Lewis Bond, conducted the service. Burial was made in Hillside cemetery. Members of Winfield Scott Post acting as pall bearers.

Plans Winter's Program.

MISLEADING RAILROAD SIGNS.

Grade crossings are death traps, whereever located. Putting gates at such crossings and operating them carefully, intelligently and cautiously, day and night, all the year round, unquestionably reduces the dangers of such crossings, but never actually removes them entirely. There is no adequate remedy for a grade crossing but its absolute abolition.

It seems almost incredibable that any railroad company would deliberately make grade crossings more dangerous than they naturally are, by placing misleading signs near them, yet this is exactly what has been done, as discovered by the Board of Public Utilities Commissioners.

On several lines the commissioners found that gates erected at dangerous crossings were operated in summer and left locked in an upright position during the rest of the year, with no one to lower then on the approach of trains. It is easy to see how persons approaching such crossings might be misled. Seeing the gates raised, which is a signal of safety, they would naturally suppose that the way was clear, when at that very moment an unseen train might be dashing toward the crossing at a rapid rate.

How many accidents may have resulted from these misleading signs, or how many narrow escapes have been experienced because raised gates invited the use of thes crossings is not known, bpt the commissioners, appreciating the peril to public safety in these and other mis leading railroad signs, have ordered that they be dismantled when not in use.

Fall Due to Drink.

Thomas Brown, a silk weaver, no home and seventy-one years old, was picked up by Patrolman Kelly, last night at 10 o'clock helplessly drunk at the corner of Elm place and East Front street. The old man would have frozen to death had not he been discovered in time. Judge DeMeza suspended sentence on the old man and advised him not to drink any more. Brown had fallen where he was found, cutting the back of his head. He was given first aid at Police headquarters.

F. H. Firstbrook to Move.

F. H. Firstbrook, the Liberty street grocer, has leased the store on West Front street now occupied by Daly Brothers, grocers and will remove there about April 1. Mr. Firstbrook has been located on Liberty street for fourteen years. It is not known where Daly Brothers will go. The store is in the buidling recently purchased by George J. Finger.

Rogers Plant Sold.

Clark T. Rogers & Co., of New Market, have sold their plant and business along with valuable real estate to H. C. Scandell and Samuel Sietsma, both of Midland Park. It is the intention of the purchasers to make some extensive improvements in the business plant. The sale was made through the agency of I. E. Giles, of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Bugden, of Randolph road, have removed to Carbondale, Pa.

BILLS INTRODUCED IN THE LEGISLATURE

Monday night's Assembly session at Trenton was short and was devoted almost exclusively to the introduction of bills. Speaker Kenny objected to the crowding in of visitors who he claimed were hampering the work of representatives and insisted that the sergeant at arms clear the floor of intruders.

These bills were introduced: No. 67, by Mr. Simpson. Authorizes counties of the first class to provide for rapid transit railways therein. A county rapid transit commission consisting of three members, to be appointed by the Supreme Court justice sitting in the circuit in each first class county, and the director of the Board of Chosen Freeholders shall constitute such rapid transit commission.

No. 76, by Mr. Bracken, amends the automobile law by fixing a speed limit of twenty-five miles an hour anywhere in the State, provided that no one shall drive a motor vehicle at any speed greater than is reasonable. Having regard to the traffic and use of the highways.

No. 81, Mr. Hinners amend the act of 1904 establishing the office of registrar of deeds by increasing the population so that only counties having 140,000 population may have such office.

No. 90, Mr. Richmond; Makes the standard of any milk to be such as shall contain not less than 11½ per cent. of milk solids and not more than 88 per cent. of watery fluid and not less than 3 per cent. of milk fat.

No. 92, Mr. Newman; Provides that the county collector, instead of the board of chosen freeholders, shall pay all necessary expenses incurred by prosecutors for the detention, arrest etc, of offenders.

No. 92, Mr. Pine; Makes it a misdemeanor for a person under the age of 21 to represent himself to be 21 years or over, so as to procure beer or other intoxicating drinks.

No. 98, Mr. Meyer; Provides that no milk be sold that contains less than 11½ percentum of milk solids or more than 88½ percentum of watery fluids or less than 3 per cent. of milk fats.

A joint resolution was introduced by Mr. Layden authorizing the appointment of three Senators and three Assemblymen to draft a bill to protect the further destruction of historical landmarks of this State.

The Senate session was brief, also, and the following important bills were introduced:

No. 30, by Mr. Osborne. To creat a new board of public utilities commissioners, consisting of three persons, beginning May 1, 1911 (term to expire in two, four and six years, respectively, and each two years thereafter) to be appointed by the Governor. Salary, $700 each and traveling expenses. Having power on its own initiative to investigate values of property and fix rates for public service.

No. 33, by Mr. Osborne; To prevent the employment of minors as messengers for telegraph and telephone companies or for distributing or delivering goods or any other service befor 5 o'clock in the morning or after 10 o'clock in the evening of any day.

S. No. 38, by Mr. Fielder; To provide that in event of the death of the Mayor of any city, the president of the Board of Aldermen or Common Council shall act as Mayor until the next general election, to be known as Acting-Mayor, and receive same salary as Mayor.

S. No. 40, by Mr. Leavitt; To prevent the admission of children under 16 years of age to any dance house, concert saloon, theatre or place of acrobatic or vaudeville performances or moving picture shows, without concent of parent or gaurdian, or unaccompanied by parent, guardian or an adult. Violators to be guilty of misdemeanor. Penalty, fine or imprisonment.

Enjoy Illustrated Lecture.

John M. Whiton, of this city, gave his illustrated lecture on "India and Burmah," at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, last night, under the auspices of the Men's Club. There was a large attendance of members and friends, all thoroughly enjoying the talk by Mr. Whiton; also his fine collection of pictures which were taken by himself on his travels. The lecture was practically the same as given at the Congregational church, Monday night, for the benefit of the Sunday-school.

Mrs. Edith Ann Binn.

Mrs. Edith Ann Binn, widow of Richard Binn, colored, died this morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Angeline Gates, of East Third street. The funeral will be private.

MRS. STEWART'S TEA A DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR

The second and last of the teas and receptions given by Mrs. Percy H. Stewart at her home on West Eighth street, yesterday afternoon, was one of the most charming social functions of the winter season. During the afternoon about two hundred society women of the city and borough were present to enjoy the delightful entertainment provided by Mrs. Stewart.

The beautiful home was tastefully decorated with a quantity of roses, including pink carnations, the arrangement of the table in the dining-room being especially attractive in its decorations of pink with candles of the same identical shade. Maresi furnished the refreshments.

Those who assisted Mrs. Stewart in receiving and in the dining-room were her sister, Mrs. Thomas Ewing, of Yonkers, N. Y.; Mrs. W. F. Taliaferro, Mrs. Alfred Streuli, Mrs. Edward H. Ladd, Jr., Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman, Mrs. Annie Stewart, Mrs. Elliot T. Barrows and Mrs. James R. Joy.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Certain stories that have been circulated in the borough relative to Charles E. Tinnsman were emphatically denied yesterday by Mrs. Tinsman. She told a Daily Press reporter that her husband had not disappeared, as gossip has it, neither has he gone away with anyone. She said that Mr. Tinsman was sent west on business about December 22 by the real estate firm of Park, Blackwell and Davis, of New York and has since been traveling for them. He was in Dunellen, she said, a week ago. When asked why her husband did not make it a point to return and put an end to the rumors, Mrs. Tinsman declared he would when the proper time came. She asserted that all the stories were started by a borough man who had been befriended by Mr. Tinsman on several occasions.

The Board of Trade illustrated Dunellen booklet has been distributed and has met with unstinted praise. The present edition of 2,000 has been almost entirely exhausted and it is probable that another issue will have to be made.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian church will hold a cake sale in the Gray building at North and Washington avenues, Saturday afternoon from 2 until 5.

Mrs. Boyle, of North avenue, has been seriously ill for the past week. Her son, Bernard Boyle, has come on from Indiana because of her condition.

Former Mayor William Wyckoff is able to be out after his long illness.

Leo Logan is able to be about after an illness with the grip.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

On Friday, February twenty-fourth, the ydunger members of the Catholic church will give a play in Washington hall, entitled "Home Trio". The proceeds will be for the benefit of the church.

Several families in the village have had their wash stolen off the lines, by being left out all night. Constable Reilly has been notified and will be on the lookout.

John Lindabury is nursing a broken ankle, the result of a fall upon the ice, on Spring Lake, while enjoying a moonlight skate.

Fire alarms have just been issued by Fire Chief William Hamilton and can be had on application.

William M. Ross is now settled in his new home, which was once a part of the old Valentine farm.

Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Cronkite, of Plainfield avenue, called upon friends in the village yesterday.

Mrs. Edward Hall, who has been visiting here has returned to her home in Raritan.

David M. Kellogg was robbed one day last week, of about fifty bushels of corn.

Philip Smith has returned from a week end house party in New York city.

J. C. Crater Seriously Ill.

John C. Crater, formerly of this city, but now of 121 New street, Newark, is very low at his home, following a stroke of paralysis on December 31. He is now also suffering with a severe attack of the grip. He is the father of Mrs. John Tier, Jr., and is a member of Trinity Reformed church, being a faithful attendant there when he resided in this city.

CHILD LABOR DISCUSSED BY WOMEN'S ALLIANCE

A largely attended meeting of the Women's Alliance of All Souls' church was held at the residence of Mrs. Warren B. Travell, of Third place, yesterday afternoon, at which an interesting paper was read by Mrs. George Greene, former factory inspector. A light luncheon was served after the meeting, Mrs. Travell pouring tea.

Mrs. Greene's paper, an interesting story of her experiences as factory inspector, a position to which she was appointed while carrying on the work of Whittier House, held the attention of the women present for nearly an hour and led to a discussion on child labor which brought out many facts hitherto unknown to many.

Miss Mabelle Phillips, explained that the new law regarding child labor which was passed at the last session of the legislature becomes effective on July 4 of this year. This law provides that no minor child under the age of 16 years may be employed in any factory at night and was aimed at the glass manufacturing plants in South Jersey. Women work in factories and other places where crowding was the habit, was also discussed after the formal reading.

MARTINE U. S. SENATOR

position which the New Jersey occupies in the industrial world and want to make it emphatically plain that neither honest capital or labor need have any apprehension about adverse action on my part at Washington. The Democratic party may be relied upon to legislate fairly with reference to the tariff question and to that end give assurance that my best judgment shall be exercised.

"I think it worthy of mention at this moment to say that I have not expended one dollar in seeking the election as Senator nor have I solicitied either directly or indirectly votes of members of the legislature. My candidacy was base upon eternal truth in government which public opinion vitalizes."

Senator Smith last night issued the following statement:

"In view of the preponderance of legislature favor for Governor Wilson's candidate for the United States Senate, I feel that I should not longer stay the consummation of the Executive's purpose.

"In reaching this conclusion I am influenced by two reasons—my regard for the feelings of the loyal men who still give me their support in spite of the indignities to which they are being subjected, and my unwillingness to stand longer in the way of plans which the new friends of my old party are so industriously formulating.

"I have been a long time in the ranks of Democracy. It has always had my loyalty and best wishes. It will continue to have them in the future, however far from the front I may be battling. I would like to believe that under the guidance of recently assumed ambitious leadership the old party may not depart from its former standards, nor repel the allegiance of the faithful ones who have shown the same loyalty in adversity and success, but my mind is not free from foreboding.

"As I lay aside my candidacy for Senatorial honor, releasing those who have been faithful to me and pledging them my life-long gratitude, my sincere wish is that the Democratic party may retain the confidence of the people, that it may hold to its close union with the masses and that greater triumph in the State and nation await it."

P. H. S. NOTES.

The meetings of the Science club have been suspended until after the mid-year examinations, but the officers of the club are arranging for some interesting meetings later. Allen Fulmer who has invented on improved engine for aeroplanes is expected to lecture on "Aviation" at the next session of the club.

The next inter-scholastic basketball game will be played on Friday afternoon between the P. H. S. team and North Plainfield High. A spirited contest is looked for.

Miss Grace Gray recited "The Man of the Crisis" before the assembly this morning. Miss Gray is a sophomore.

Spoke Better Than He Knew.

The seventh grade was having an oral "test" in Stories from English History and William Hume was called upon to tell the story of King John and the Magna Charta.

"They made him come to Runnymede as' he was awful mad, an' he looked around at the barons an' he said, 'Am I your prisoner?' An' they didn't want to make him any madder for fear he wouldn't sign it after all, so they all shouted out real lond, 'No, you are not our prisoner, you are our souvenir."—Harper's Magazine.

A Practical Girl.

"She accepted me on one condition."

"And that is?"

"That she doesn't get a better offer between now and spring."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Thirty-five new houses are booked to be built in Glassboro the coming spring and summer.

Rena Sutton, of Collingswood, has been invited to participate in a world's championship typewriting contest.

Such an epidemic of measles is spreading in the little village of Bridgeboro that school attendance is cut down to eight scholars and three teachers.

Millville glass bottle factories are now working more steadily than for years, and there is a rumor that two more large furnaces will be placed in operation.

Holly Beach has all the other resorts of Five-Mile Beach beaten this winter in the number of cottages going up at one time. Thirty-eight are now in the course of construction.

The Government Lighthouse Board has sought permission from the Board of Island Managers to erect a lighthouse station on the upper end of Burlington Island, in the Delaware River.

By the accidental discharge of a revolver he was examining, William Gurber, twelve years old, of 7 Park place, Camden, was shot in the left leg Monday. The bullet lodged above the knee and was removed.

Woodbury Board of Education Monday night held a special meeting to consider a change of site in rebuilding its burned High School. It is considered possible to sell the old site to the government for a public building site.

Samuel Summer Marcy, durggist, of Cape May, was found dead in his store Monday by his son, Samuel, Jr., who dropped in to see him. The clerk was absent and had left Marcy in apparently his usual health only a few minutes before death.

Because members of her family are too poor to defray the expenses of a funeral residents of the Italian colony of the resort will pay for the burial of Miss Santa Elie, who was found dead in a gas-filled apartment in Atlantic City last Friday. The family of the girl live at Johnstown, Pa.

A child of Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Ritter, of Philadelphia, was buried in Bridgeton Monday. The father, who is a professor at Medico-Chirurgical College, was unable to accompany the casket because of the critical condition of the mother. Afterward word came that she, too, had passed away.

John De Vorico, aged fourteen years, of Rutherford, is in the General Hospital, Paterson, suffering from a gunshot wound. Having a revolver and no cartridges, he attempted to fill an empty shell. He had the powder in the shell and was about to ram down a load of buckshot. He hammered this so hard that it exploded and sent the shot and powder into his face. The wound is said to be serieus.

A fund for the relief of thirty families made homeless by a fire that destroyed six frame tenement-houses in Avenue C, between Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets, Bayonne, was started Monday. Many of the families are being sheltered by neighbors. They lost almost all their possessions. Bayonne Lodge of Elks and the Democratic Club started the work of relief.

Refusing to be "fired," Assistant Building Inspector Simon Wescott, of Atlantic City, an old soldier, who held the office for many years and claims he came under the protection of the veterans' tenure of office act, reports for duty every day. He is refused assignment, and thereupon maps out his own work and keeps doing labor that he performed before he was "dropped" from the pay roll without notice on the first of the year. The legality of his removal is now in court.

That Charles Kurth kept his word with Vice-Chancellor Leaming was made evident Monday in Camden when final arguments were heard on a rule to make permanent an order for alimony. Several weeks ago Kurth said he could not pay alimony because he was unable to get work. The vice-chancellor had him before him for contempt, but he gave Kurth another chance. He told the man, a roofer, he must go to every place in the city and apply and make a report in the event of his failure to secure employment. Yesterday, when the case was ready, Kurth telephoned the vice-chancellor that he could not attend because he was too busy mending roofs. Kurth escaped contempt proceedings but he must pay his wife Caroline $4 a week alimony.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 29, 1911.

Topic.—A missionary journey around the world.—I. Missions in the United States (north and east). Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The locations north and east in the United States are rather indefinite, and the topic should have included boundary lines. Does the north extend from the Atlantic to the Pacific or to the lakes, or to what limit does it extend from the coast? And what is included in the east—the entire eastern boundary, including the southern states on the coast? And if so where does the south begin when that section is studied or the west when it alone is the topic? No information having been given, each one will be compelled to make his own boundaries. The author of these topics will take the Mississippi river, the center between the east and west; that between the north and south the Mason and Dixon's line, including the entire country below that line as south, and the entire section west of the Mississippi and north of the Mason and Dixon's line as west, including Alaska. This leaves the north and east to include the section from the Atlantic to the Mississippi and from the northern boundary east of the Mississippi as far south as the Mason and Dixon's line. These seem to be the only sensible divisions of north and east, the south alone and the west alone.

In this section north and east so defined it may seem to many that there is no missionary work to be done, but the opposite is the case. One would think that all people in this section were Christianized or had Christian opportunities, but when we look over the field from three standpoints we shall find that there is much need of missionary work. These three viewpoints are (1) the support of old and weak churches, (2) the organization of churches in sections recently builded and (3) the work among the foreign population.

1. The support of weak churches, many of which are old. In these old churches the young people have left the country for the city, and many historic churches with only a few old people left to support them have died or are about dead. It is said that in New England the farms in some sections have been almost deserted, and the few people remaining, being no longer able to support the churches, have allowed them to die. The buildings are in a deplorable condition, and the people are even worse spiritually. The Sabbath day is practically forgotten, and work is done on that day just as on other days. New England, the former settlement of the pilgrims and Puritans! Does not such a condition demand the missionary to revive the old time religion? One denomination alone in Pennsylvania aids 193 churches. The same denomination assists in paying 137 ordained ministers in the same great state. Besides, it has many evangelists in the state, going from place to place, and the 137 ministers in many cases have two, three and even four churches under their care.

Considering the origin of New England, the case there is the saddest of all. Some one recently said (and it was not meant facetiously), "The little brown men of Korea had better come to New England and do missionary work among the descendants of the Puritans!"

The missionary work is required for the organization of churches in new towns and villages. This section has especial demands upon it along this line. Railroads cover it as a network. What is even more, the trolley cars have gone almost everywhere. As a result new settlements are springing up on all sides. Towns of 500, 1,000, 1,200 and 1,500 dot the country otherwise not inhabited. Here is where we need organized church union. The first church organized should have the field, or a religious census of the towns should be taken, and the denomination having the largest number of adherents should have the only church. But, alas, how long it takes us to learn from experience!

When will we get over such a foolish system? One church in a town will be strong, be able to select one of the finest of ministers, pay him a living salary regardless of hard times or high prices, and also to keep him if it likes him, for where another church wants him so much as to pay him a higher salary or other allurements the one church will be able to step up and say, "We can and will do for you as much as any other church, and, besides, we love you, and the Lord is blessing you in your work here." That will end the matter, and he will stay. Thousands of ministers in city and country are living on dying salaries, but never murmur, and largely because of the existence of too many churches, located too closely together. When will the Protestant church learn the lesson that the Catholic church is daily flaunting before them? Think of six churches in a town of 1,200 population! What does it mean? Six starved ministers' families—many people dodging corners when they see certain persons for fear of having tickets of some kind about the church pushed before them.

2. Missionary work among the foreign population in the north and east. In this section, as defined, there is a larger number of foreigners than in all the rest of the country combined.

The Great Conservation Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

To Lee Virginia the talk of "the curse of democracy" and "the decay of empire" was unexciting, but when Cavanagh told of the sheepmen's advance across the dead line on Deer creek and of the threats of the cattle owners she was better able to follow the discussion. Bridges was heartily on the side of law and order, for he wished to boom the state (being a heavy owner in a town site), but he objected to Redfield's ideas of "bottling up the resources of the state."

"But we're not," retorted Redfield; "we're merely defending them against those who would monopolize them. We believe in their fullest use, but we see no reason for giving away the resources when the country needs the revenue."

Mrs. Redfield rose as soon as the coffee came on. "You gentlemen seem bent upon discussing matters of no interest to us," she said, "so we'll leave you to fight it out alone. I'm sure you'll all agree with Hugh in the end. Like General Grant, he's a very obstinate man."

No sooner were they seated in the big living room than Mrs. Enderby began to relate comical stories of her household. Her cats had fits and ran up the wall. Her dogs were forever getting quilled by reason of foolish attacks upon porcupines, or else they came home so reminiscent of skunks that they all but smothered the cook. "Invariably they return from encounters of this kind just as we are sitting at dinner," she explained. "Furthermore, Enderby's ditches are habitually getting clogged and overflowing the lawn and filling the cellar, and he stands in terror of his cowboys. When I think of all these irruptions and distractions England's order and routine seem heavenly. But Charley finds all this amusing, more's the pity, and leaves me to set things in order. Most ludicrous of all to me is his habitual claim that the ranch is paying. I tell him there's an error in his bookkeeping somewhere, but he assures me that his receipts exceeded his expenditures last year, which is quite too incredible. You've no idea how high wages are and how little we raise."

"Oh, yes, I have," laughed Mrs. Redfield. "And my cat had a fit too. Hugh says it's the high altitude. I tell him it's melancholia."

Cavanagh showed himself. "I hear so much laughter I'm coming in. We're all so insufferably political out here, and, besides, I came to see the ladies, and I can stay only a few minutes longer."

"You're not going back tonight?" exclaimed his hostess.

"I must be on my own precinct by daylight," he replied. "The supervisor has an eye on me."

Mrs. Redfield explained to Lee Virginia, "He rode fifty miles over the mountains"—

"Thirty," corrected Ross. "But what does that matter when I'm in the company of such charming ladies?" he added gallantly.

"And now he's going to ride all the way back tonight."

"Think of that!" gasped Mrs. Enderby. "And no moon!"

"How can you find your way?" asked Mrs. Bridges, to whom this was a mortally dangerous journey.

"Oh, it's quite simple! If you don't bump against a tree or fall into the creek you may be quite sure you're on the trail," laughed Ross.

Mrs. Redfield knew the true reason for his coming and was not at all pleased, "for with all Lee's personal charm," she said to her husband, "she is socially beneath Ross Cavanagh even in a state where social barriers are few."

"Come out on the veranda," suggested Cavanagh, "and I'll show you the hills I must climb."

Lee accepted innocently, but as the young people left the room Mrs. Enderby looked at her hostess with significant glance. "There's the lady Ross rode down to meet. Who is she?"

"Her mother is that dreadful old creature that keeps the Wetherford hotel in Roaring Fork."

"No!" exclaimed Mrs. Enderby.

"Yes; Lee Virginia is Lize Wetherford's daughter."

"But the girl is charming."

"I cannot understand it. Hugh came home a week or so ago full of her praise"— And at this point her voice dropped lower, and the other drew closer.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE CASE OF LEE VIRGINIA AND ROSS.

LEE and Ross stood in silence on the Redfield veranda. There was no moon, and the mountains rose darkly, a sheer wall at the end of the garden, their tops cutting into the starry sky with a dull edge, over which a dim white cone peered.

"That snow peak is Wolftooth and thirty miles from here and at the head of my 'beat,'" said the ranger after a pause as they leaned against the railing and looked away to the south. "I go up that ridge which you see faintly at the left of the main canyon and through that deep notch which is above timber line."

The girl's eyes widened with awe of the big, silent, dark world he indicated. "Aren't you afraid to start out on such a trip alone—I mean, don't you dread it?"

"I'll be sorry to start back, yes, but not because of the dark. I've enjoyed my visit here so much it will be hard to say good night."

"It seems strange to me that you should prefer this wild country to England."

"Do you like the east better than the west?"

"In some ways; but, then, you see, I was born out here."

"So was I—I mean to say I was regenerated out here. The truth is I was a good deal of a scapegrace when I left England. I was always for hunting and horses, and naturally I came directly to the wild west country, and here I've been ever since. I've had my turn at each phase of it—cowpuncher, soldier, rough rider and finally forest ranger. I reckon I've found my job at last."

"Do you like it so much?"

"At the present time I am perfectly contented. I'm associated now with a country that will never yield to the plow. Yes, I like my work. I love the forests and the streams. I wish I might show them to you. You don't know how beautiful they are. The most beautiful parks in the world are commonplace to what I can show you. My only sorrow is to think of them given over to the sawmill. Perhaps you and your mother will come up some time and let me show you my lakes and streams. There are waters so lovely they make the heart ache. Hugh is planning to come up soon; perhaps you and Mrs. Redfield will come with him."

"I'd like it above everything," she responded fervently. Then her voice changed. "But all depends on my mother's health."

It hurt him to hear her call Eliza Wetherford mother. He wanted to forget her origin for the moment. He was not in love with her—far from it! But she was so alluring, and the proprietress of the Wetherford House was not nice, and that made one doubt the daughter.

She broke the silence. "It seems dreadfully dark and mysterious up there." She indicated his path.

"It isn't as bad as it looks. There is a good trail, and my pony knows it as well as I do. I enjoy riding by night."

"But there are bears and other wild things, are there not?"

"Not as much as I wish there were."

"Why do you say that?"

"I hate to see all the wild life killed off. Some day all these forests will have game refuges like the Yellowstone National park. They are coming each year to have greater and greater value to the people of the plains. They are playgrounds, like the Alps. If I should ever settle down to a home it would be in a canyon like this, with a great peak at my front door."

"It is beautiful," the girl said in the tone of sadness with which we confront the perfect night, the perfect flower, the flawless landscape. "It is both grand and peaceful."

This tone of sadness pleased him. It showed her depth of perception, and he reflected that she had not uttered a vacuous or silly phrase since their first meeting. "She is capable of great development," he thought. Aloud he said: "You are a strange mingling of east and west. Do you realize it?"

"In what way?" she asked, feeling something ardent in his tone.

"You typify to me at this moment this whole state. You fill me with enthusiasm for its future. Here you are, derived from the lawless west, yet taking on the culture and restraint of the east so readily that you seem not in the least related to"—

He checked himself at this point, and she said, "My mother is not as rough as she seems, Mr. Cavanagh."

"She must be more of the woman than appears or she could not have borne such a daughter. But do you feel your relationship to her? Tell me honestly, for you interest me."

"I didn't at first, but I do now. I begin to understand her, and, besides, I feel in myself certain things that are in her, though I think I am more like the Wetherfords. My father's family home was in Maryland."

Ross could have talked on all night, so alluring was the girl's dimly seen yet warmly felt figure at his side, but a sense of danger and a knowledge that he should be riding led him at last to say: "It is getting chill. We must go in, but before we do so let me say how much I've enjoyed seeing you again. I hope the doctor will make favorable report on your mother's case. You'll write me the result of the examination, won't you?"

"If you wish me to."

"I shall be most anxious to know."

They were standing very near to each other at the moment, and the ranger, made very sensitive to woman's charm by his lonely life, shook with newly created love of her. A suspicion, a hope, that beneath her cultivated manner lay the passionate nature of her mother gave an added force to his desire. He was sorely tempted to touch her, to test her, but her sweet voice, a little sad and perfectly unconscious of evil, calmed him. She said:

"I hope to persuade my mother to leave the Forks. All the best people there are against us. Some of them have been very cruel to her and to me, and, besides, I despise and fear the men who come to our home.

"You must not exchange words with them," he all but commanded. "Beware of Gregg; he is a vile lot. Do not trust him for an instant. Do not permit any of those loafers to talk with you, for if you do they will go away to defame you. I know them. They are unspeakably vile. It makes me angry to think that Gregg and his like have the right to speak to you every day, while I can see you only at long intervals. I wish my station were not so far away. But I'll ride down as often as my duties will permit, and you must let me know how things go. And if any of those fellows persecute you you'll tell me, won't you? I wish you'd look upon me as your big brother. Will you do that?" His voice entreated, and as she remained silent he continued: "Roaring Fork is one of the worst towns in the state, and a girl like you needs some one as a protector. I don't know just how to put it so that you will not misunderstand me, but, you see, I protect the forest, the streams and the game, I help the settler in time of trouble, I am a kind of all round big brother to everybody who needs help in the forest. In fact, I'm paid for protecting things that can't protect themselves, and so"—here he tried to lend his voice the accent of humor—"why shouldn't I be the protector of a girl like you, alone—worse than alone—in this little cow town?"

She remained dumb at one or two points where he clearly hoped for a word, and she was unable to thank him when he had finished. In this silence a curious constriction came into his throat. It was almost as if he had put his passion into definite words, and as the light fell upon her he perceived that her bosom was heaving with deep emotion.

"I am lonely," she faltered out at last—"horribly lonely. And I know now how people feel toward my mother, and it hurts me—it all hurts me. But I'm going to stay and help her"—She paused to recover her voice. "And you do seem different. I—I trust you!"

"I'm glad you understand me, and you will let me know if I can help you, won't you?"

"Yes," she answered simply.

"Good night," he said, extending his hand.

She placed her palm to his quite frankly, but the touch of it made further speech at the moment impossible.

They went in with such telltale faces that even Redfield wondered what had passed between them.

Excusing himself almost at once, Cavanagh left the room, and when he looked in a few moments later he was clothed in the ranger's dusty green uniform, booted and spurred for his long, hard ride. Mrs. Redfield followed him into the hall and out on the doorstone to say: "Ross, you must be careful. This girl is very alluring in herself, but her mother, you know, is impossible."

"You're needlessly alarmed, as usual," he smilingly replied. "She interests me, that's patent. But beyond that, why, nonsense! Good night."

Nevertheless, despite his protestations, he went away up the trail with his mind so filled with Lee Virginia's appealing face and form that he would certainly have ridden over a precipice had it not been for his experienced pony, which had fortunately but one aim, and that was to cross the range safely and to reach the home pasture at the earliest moment.

Left alone, Lee Virginia thought over her past. She was not entirely without experience as regards respectful courtship. Her life in the east had brought her to know a number of attractive lads and a few men, but none of these had become more than a good companion or friend, and, though she wrote to one or two of these youths letters of the utmost friendliness, there was no passion in them, and she felt as yet the sting of nothing more intense in her liking for Cavanagh. But he meant more to her now that she was lonely and beleaguered.

That he had ridden all that long, rough way merely to see her she was not vain enough to believe, but she had nevertheless something of every woman's secret belief in her individual charm. Cavanagh had shown a flattering interest in her, and his wish to be her protector filled her with joy and confidence.

She heard a good deal more about this particular forest ranger next morning at breakfast. "He is throwing himself away," Mrs. Redfield passionately declared. "Think of a man of Ross' refinement living in a mountain shack miles from anybody, watching poachers, marking trees and cooking his own food! It's a shameful waste of genius."

"That's as you look at it, my dear," responded Redfield. "Ross is the guardian of an immense treasure chest which belongs to the nation. Furthermore, he is quite certain, as I am, that this forest service is the policy of the future and that it offers fine chances for promotion, and then, finally, he likes it."

"That is all well enough for a young man, but Ross is at least thirty-five and should be thinking of settling down. I can't understand his point of view."

"My dear, you have never seen the procession of the seasons from such a point of view as that which he enjoys."

"No, and I do not care to. It is quite lonely enough for me right here."

Redfield looked at Lee with comic blankness. "Mrs. Redfield is hopelessly urban. As the wife of a forest supervisor she cares more for pavements and tramcars than for the most splendid mountain park."

"I most certainly do," his wife vigorously agreed, "and if I had my way we should be living in London."

"Listen to that! She's ten times more English than Mrs. Enderby."

"I'm not, but I long for the civilized instead of the wild. I like comfort and society."

"So do I," returned he.

"Yes; the comfort of an easy chair on the porch and the society of your forest rangers. This ranch life is all very well for a summer outing, but to be tied down here all the year round is to be denied one's birthright as a modern."

All this more or less cheerful complaint expressed the minds of many others who live amid these superb scenes. When autumn comes, when the sky is gray and the peaks are hid in mist, they long for the music, the lights, the comfort of the city. But when the April sun begins to go down in a smother of crimson and flame and the mountains loom with epic dignity, or when at dawn the air is like some divine flood descending from the unstained mysterious heights, then the dweller in the foothills cries out: "How fortunate we are! Here are health and happiness! Here poverty is unknown!"

Mrs. Redfield was becoming more and more interested in Virginia, who had not merely the malodorous reputation of her mother to contend with, but the memory of a traitorous sire to live down, and when the girl went to her room to pack her bag the wife turned to her husband and said:

"Ross is terribly smitten with her."

Redfield coughed uneasily. "I hope not. Of course he admires her, as any man must. She's physically attractive, very attractive, and, besides, Ross is as susceptible as a cowpuncher. He was deeply impressed the first time he saw her; I could see that."

"I didn't like his going out on the veranda with her last night," continued Mrs. Redfield, "and when they came in her eyes and color indicated that he'd been saying something exciting to her. Hugh, Ross Cavanagh must not get involved with that girl. It's your duty as his superior to warn him."

"He's fully grown, my dear, and a bit dictatorial on his own part. I'm a trifle timid about cutting in on his private affairs."

"Then I'll do it. Marriage with a girl like that is out of the question. Think what his sisters would say!"

Redfield smiled a bit satirically. "To the outsider a forest ranger at $900 a year and find himself and horses is not what you may call a brilliant catch."

"Oh, well, the outsider is no judge! Ross Cavanagh is a gentleman, and, besides, he's sure to be promoted. I acknowledge the girl's charms, and I don't understand it. When I think of her objectively as Lize Wetherford's girl I wonder at her being in my house. When I see her I want her to stay with me. I want to hug her."

"Perhaps we've been unjust to Lize all along," suggested Redfield. "She has remained faithful to Ed Wetherford's memory all these years—that is conceded. Doesn't that argue some unusual quality? How many women do we know who are capable of such loyalty? Come, now! Lize is a rough piece of goods, I'll admit, and her lunch counter was a public nuisance, but she had the courage to send her girl away to be educated, denying herself the joy of seeing her develop by her side. We mustn't permit our prejudices to run away with us."

The girl's return put a stop to the discussion, which could end in nothing but confusion anyway.

THE HALLET & DAVIS PLAYER-PIANO

Here is something WORTH WHILE. A piano which anyone in the family can play.

Music lovers are fast beginning to realize that the Hallet & Davis Player-Piano has made them independent of the professional artist. Now, you, just yourself, with only a few instructions, can play any music—popular, operatic, classical—anything you like.

Maybe there is someone in the family who can play: if so, this instrument is used for hand playing, as an ordinary piano. But you don't want to listen to someone play, as nine times out of ten they don't play what you want. Play yourself.

It's more fun to play baseball than to watch. It's more fun to play the Hallet & Davis Player-Piano yourself than to listen to someone else. Try it and see.

The price of our player-pianos is moderate. The new style Hallet & Davis, 88-note (patented), is only $750, and no amount of money can buy a better player. Then, we have the Conway—a splendid player—at $600, and other good players at lower prices. We will make liberal allowance for uprights taken in exchange, and convenient terms of purchase may be arranged, if desired.

Come in. Try the player yourself. You'll be delighted. If you can't call, let us send you interesting catalogs.

REMEMBER BOBBY BURNS

Clan Mackenzie, O. S. C. Commemorates Birth of Scottish Bard.

REFORM HALL WAS CROWDED.

Songs, Poems and Speeches by Clansmen—Bagpipes, Reels and Jigs Make Merry Evening.

One could almost smell the heather and see the bobbing heads of the red and white thistles last night on Reform Hall, when Clan Mackenzie, No.

Chief Robert Murray.

204, Order of Scottish Clans celebrated the birth of the Scottish national bard, Robert Burns. A program of music both instrumental and vocal, come fine dancing of the kind that recalls to the audience which was composed of Scotchmen and their wives and daughters, the olden time in the Highlands.

Addresses were given by Robert Murray, chief of the local clan; David King, royal treasurer of the order; Grover P. Hinman, who called himself a "near Scotchman;" Rev. Thomas B. Ironside, of Morristown, who recited "The Accident to Johnny Patterson;" Edmund L. Mackenzie, in Highland costume; and Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, who recited an unpublished poem of Burns entitled "Fellowship with God."

Edmund L. Mackenzie spoke briefly of the clan of Mackenzie its origin, history and a complishments, mentioning causally that they were fond of kidnapping the women of other clans for which they were not to be blamed owing to the beauty of the kidnapped.

Among the artists who contributed to the evening's entertainment were: Alexander Knox, baritone soloist; J. D. Mitchell, violinist; Miss Edith Bryson, the Scottish Nightingale; Aleck MacGowan, tenor of the First Presbyterian church, who was accompanied by Clifford A. Braider and Mitchell's orchestra furnished some splendid instrumental music.

The features of the evening, however, were the dancing by the Crawford sisters, of Newark; the bagpipe playing by James McIntoch and his brother and the singing of Miss Bryson. The first named young women ranged in age from seven to seventeen. There were four of them and they gladdened the hearts of the clansmen as they pirouetted about the stage in graceful gyrations and figure dancing. The MacIntosh brothers led the procession into the hall at the opening of the program followed by several of the brethren attired in Highland costume.

Miss Bryson comes by her name of the Scottish Ninghtingale honestly for she captivated the audience with her sweetly sung poems of the immortal Burns as few can render them. She was greeted with applause on her first appearance and won the hearts of all. She graciously responded to several encores.

The introductory remarks by Chief Murray too the form of a welcome to the big audience. The hall was filled to the doors and standing room was at a premium when the welcome was extended and promises of greater things in the future were given. David King gave a vivid word picture of Scotland with its braks and braes and thrilled his hearers with accounts of the deeds of the ancient Chieftains Wallace, Bruce and others.

Rev. Thomas B. Ironsides, who is superintendent of the Market street mission in Morristown, pleased the audience with his recitation in the brogue and was loudly applauded.

TWENTY PRETTY GIRLS WITH RUTH ST. DENIS

In her new dances founded on the religion and customs of ancient Egypt, Miss Ruth St. Denis will appear at the Plainfield theatre, Saturday afternoon and night. The curtain will rise at 2:15 and 8:15 o'clock promptly. The new dances are the second in a cycle of Oriental numbers which Miss St. Denis has in preparation and are much more elaborate than were the Hindu numbers in which she appeared last season. She is assisted by a company of some fifty people including a score of pretty girls, and Walter Meyrowitz has written a special score which an augmented orchestra will be engaged to interpret.

No expense has been spared by Henry B. Harris, under whose management Miss St. Denis appears, in giving the dances an adequate production. The four elaborate scenes are made from drawings made from pictures and descriptions in the great museums and libraries of the world and are as authentic as those records permit. There are four scenes showing the banks of the Nile near the Temple of Hapi, a banquet hall in a palace of the Pharoahs, the sanctuary of the Temple of Isis and the sacred plains of Ra.

X-SCIENCE FROM INDIA SAYS REV. MR. PERRINE

Rev. A. S. Perrine, of Newark, who has spent seven years among the savage tribes of Assam, spoke at the Park Avenue Baptist church last evening on "Under the Roof of the World.' Rev. Mr. Perrine exhibited a number of curios collected in that country which interested his hearers immensely. He told of the 25,000,000 child widows in India and what the Christian religion is doing toward ameliorating their pitiable condition.

Among the other things of interest touched upon by the speaker was the inception of Christian. Science which he declared originated in India. Mrs. Walter Besapt was mentioned as one of those who had studied the occult sciences as practiced by the natives for centuries and it was from these psychological practises that the present cult took their fundamental ideas. He mentioned the fakirs who at will could banish bodily pain and sensations and who exercised the wonderful control of mind over matter.

During the evening Chester Chamberlain, the boy soprano, sang solos accompanied by William S. O'Brien, organist of the Church of the Holy Cross.

Former Assemblyman Swackhamer issued this statement today on the Martine triumph:

Regenerated Democracy has been vindicated; the first act of the administration glows with a print that can never fade; a vital principle of popular government has been set in adamant; the star of the people's hope is in the zenith; and the names of Woodrow Wilson and Jas. E. Martine are forever identified with one of the greatest reform movements of modern times."

STATE LICENSES FOR BARBERS ARE URGED

The State Barbers' Union favoring the plan to have all barbers in the State licensed and put under the supervision of the State Board of Health, is arranging to have a bill drafted with that end in view and have it made a law at this session of the Legislature. A meeting of representative barbers from all parts of the State has been called for Sunday, February 5, at Hoboken, when the committee appointed for the purpose of drafting a bill will report.

The barbers who favor the bill believe that it will have a tendency to make every shop in the State sanitary and will also bring the trade up to a higher standard efficiency. Donato DiLonardo, of 1219 West Front street, is the chairman of the general committee from the State association and will present the report at Hoboken. It is understood that a majority of the barbers favor the bill.

GOV. WILSON SPEAKS AT NEWARK BANQUET

Aabout 600 members and friends attended the annual dinner of the Newark Board of Trade in the Krueger Auditorium, Newark, last night. Among the latter were Governor Woodrow Wilson, United States Senator Heyburn, of Idaho, and Congressman Julius Kahn, of San Francisco. The Governor discussed "The State of New Jersey," the Senator, "The Legislative Problems of the Day," and the Congressman "The Relations of the Panama Canal to the Trade of the Two Oceans."

Henry S. Emery, who recently was appointed president of the Tariff Board of President Taft, who was to speak on "Tariff Problems," was not present. Secretary of War Dickinson also was unable to be present owing to the recent death of his son.

GOVERNOR WILSON ON THE U. S. SENATORSHIP

Governor Wilson, when asked whether he had any further statement to make on the choice of Senator-elect James E. Martine, spoke as follows:

"It would appear that all you have to do is to let the people know what is going on and they will respond. I feel confident that it is the sincere purpose and desire of the Democratic members of the Legislature to carry out the program of the platform, and it is a matter for sincere congratulations that the Senatorial matter is happily settled and the legislators free to address themselves to the business of the session.

"The whole State must admire the way in which the members of the Senate and Assembly have acted in this important matter."

Senator Osborne had the following comment to make on the election of Mr. Martine:

"Regardless of the personality of the men in the contest for the United States Senate, the result will have the effect of firmly establishing the direct primaries and will insure to the people a voice in the election of their representatives in the House in Congress.

" It means that the day has gone by when a seat in the United States Senate can be purchased by the highest bidder, and that there will be an end to the scandals which have so frequently occurred in the past.

"I believe that Mr. Martine will measure up to his responsibilities and that his course in the Senate will justify the anticipations of his friends and the confidence the people have placed in him, despite the detractions to which he has been subjected."

FLIES FLAG FOR MARTINE.

John McGowan, of Park street, Orange, was so elated by the victory of the direct primary principle in the election of Martine as United States Senator that he bought an American flag, ran it up on the staff on top of his house and declared it should stay there until worn out.

TO APPEAL ASSESSMENT

Levering & Garrigues to Carry County Discision Higher up.

TAXING CONCERN'S STOCK.

Company Objects to a Rate on Parts Assembled at Plant's Yard—County Board Refuses to Cancel It.

W. A. Garrigues, of this city, a member of Levering & Garrigues, whose large assembling plant at West Dunellen, furnishes employment for 250 men, and who have a weekly pay roll of more than $3,000 told the members of the Middlesex County Board of Taxation yesterday that the firm is considering giving up its plant because of the heavy taxes imposed. The company has paid taxes on a $65,000 assessment levied on plant and equipment, but protests a $50,000 assessment levied on stock in yards.

Attorney Carlos Gallup represented the appellants and called Mr. Garrigues to prove that large quantities of iron and steel, received at the West Dunellen plant, are really in transit through the State and not subject to taxation here. In many particulars the case resembled that of the Susquehanna Coal Co., which was decided by Judge Rellstab in favor of the taxing municipalities last week.

"Our company comes into direct competition with the great Steel Corporation," declared Mr. Garrigues. "When we receive an order for structural iron work we must get various parts rolled in the big mills of the Steel Corporation, keeping in touch with all the large mills to see what sizes of steel are being rolled at certain times. We have no mill of our own.

"It thus frequently happens that several mills will get orders to each roll some parts of the iron or steel required to fill one of our contracts. These mills as they finish milling our work, will place the shipment on cars consigned to our New York wharf. The way bill, however, will be marked to allow us stop-over privileges on the shipment at West Dunellen.

"Sometimes a lot of steel will come to our plant in the morning and will be moved on again the same day. At other times it may remain longer while we wait for other needed parts. All that is done at West Dunellen is to assemble the various parts, sometimes drilling a few holes necessary to the fitting of certain angles, and then send the goods forward to New York for delivery."

Both Mr. Garrigues and his attorney declared that the product thus spoken of is not on the market at any time in this State, and absolutely no profit is derived by the concern on the material itself, the profit being made in the work of constructing the buildings called for by the firm's contracts.

Judge W. A. Coddington, of this city, speaking on behalf of the taxing authorities of Piscataway township, declared his conviction that the assessment should be confirmed in full. He said that the moment the iron and steel pieces were unloaded from the cars at West Dunellen, the "in transit" theory of the appellants was destroyed, and the property became taxable. The County Board, by unanimous vote, decided to confirm the assessment. Levering & Garrigues have given notice of an appeal to the State Board of Taxation.

P. H. S. GIRLS DEFEAT EAST ORANGE TEAM.

East Orange High's girls' basketball team went down to defeat yesterday afternoon when they met the P. H. S. girls' team. The score was 17 to 4. The first half was evenly contested the score at its end being 5 to 4 in favor of the local girls, but after that the strong and accurate throwing and excellent team work of the Plainfield girls proved too good for the Misses from Orange and they could not score another point.

Miss Jessie Stewart was the star for P. H. S., making 12 of the 17 points scored.

Col. C. W. Fuller to Speak.

Colonel Charles W. Fuller, of Jersey City, has accepted an invitation to speak at the first annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce on February 12. Col. Fuller is reported to be a witty after-dinner speaker. He was at one time a member of the State Assembly and a former superintendent of public instruction and is now one of the counsel for the Standard Oil Company. Judging from present indications there will be a fine array of talent at the banquet.

THOMAS O'GORMAN OUT OF POLICE DEPARTMENT

Establishing a precedent, the Police Board last night, decided that Mayor Moy and City Judge William G. DeMeza be provided with keys to Police Chief Kiely's private office at police headquarters. Most of the evening was spent in considering the budget for that department for the coming year. It is expected that there will be no increase in this item of the budget.

Mayor Moy notified the board that he had not re-appointed Thomas O'Gorman as a special and therefore the latter was no longer connected with the department. On the eve of the mayor taking office, an unsuccessful effort was made in the Common Council to have O'Gorman advanced from a special to a regular. He had been serving in the capacity of driver of the patrol wagon. His appointment as a special expired on December 31. A reference was made to a roundsman vacancy but the matter was not considered. Some minor matters was touched upon but no definate action taken.

WM. A. CODDINGTON WINS APPEAL FOR CIRCUS MAN

At the morning sesion of the Middlesex County Tax Board yesterday, a reduction of $3,000 was given Leon Washburn proprietor of Washburn's Road Show, who had been assessed $4,000 on the ponies, elephants and other live stock kept by the circus man in winter quarters on the River road, in Piscataway township.

W. A. Coddington, of this city, appeared to argue against the reduction but when he was informed that the animals were all removed from their winter quarters prior to May 20, the taxing date, he withdrew his objections. The only animals on the farm at present are a team of horses and a team of ponies.

MILLION DOLLAR CONCERN ORGANIZED IN MIDDLESEX

Amendments to the articles of incorporation of the Hudson and Middlesex Telephone and Telegraph Company, filed with Secretary of State on June 4 1901, were filed yesterday with Middlesex County Clerk Gannon, following a resolution adopted by the stockholders on Jan. 31, 1910. The Board of Directors advised the amendments at a meeting held Jan. 8, 1910.

The amendments were filed to obliterate errors appearing in the original articles,and also because the stockholders had decided to increase the capital stock from $250,000 to $1,000,000. The stock was formerly divided into 2,500 shares of preferred stock, at $10 per share, and 2,250 shares of common stock at $100 per share.

The new division is: 2,500 shares of preferred stock, at $10 a share and 9,750 share of common stock at $100 per share. The corporation, under the revised articles, has 1,305 shares of preferred stock and 1,284½ shares of common stock outstanding.

The purpose of the company, as is generally known, is to erect and operate telephone and telegraph wires in the following counties of New Jersey: Hudson, Essex, Union, Middlesex, Mercer, Ocean, Burlington, Gloucester, Salem and Camden: The principal office is at 185 New Brunswick avenue, Perth Amboy, with William J. Lansley named as agent.

PLAINFIELD COUNCIL HOLDS INSTALLATION.

The first public installation of officers of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, will be held this evening at 8 o'clock. Grand Regent Theodore S. Class, of the State of New Jersey, will be the guest of honor and the principal speaker. The installation ceremonies will be highly interesting and impressive, not merely to the members of the order, but to all their friends, who have been invited to be present.

The committee of arrangement has also prepared a fine musical program and have invited the women friends of the members. The committee in charge comprises George M. Christian, chairman; Howard W. Satterfield, R. G. Hudson, Robert H. Lowry, A. I. Littell, William T. Carr, Theodore J. Shirley, Marion L. Bullock and L. V. P. Wilson.

BASEBALL PITCHER'S FINGERS AMPUTATED

Charles A. Frederickson, of Spooner avenue, son of Police Captain Christian Frederickson, met with a painful accident at the Scott Press Works yesterday morning, which badly mangled his right hand and almost cost him his arm. He was testing out a four-deck press being prepared for shipment to a firm in Dallas, Texas, and had placed the machinery in motion on slow speed. A revolving roller caught his hand, crushing it badly before he could draw back.

Fredrickson was hurried to the office of Dr. Pittis, where it was found necessary to amputate two fingers, while two others were lacerated to the bone. In the event of the press having been on high speed it is a certainty that the entire arm would have been mangled. The victim has been prominent as a baseball pitcher and the accident will put him out of the box as the two fingers removed are the most essential in twirling.

The accident seems doubly unfortunate at this time as Fredrickson returned to work only a month ago, after a two weeks wedding trip to Binghamton, N. Y. He married Miss Marie Thomas, of Spooner avenue, on New Year's eve.

FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF LOCAL DAY NURSERY

The fifth birthday anniversary tea and reception of the Day Nursery was held at the nursery, yesterday afternoon, and was the most successful in the history of the institution. The rooms were thronged throughout the afternoon with friends and well-wishers of the work, including many who are not identified with the King's Daughters, under whose auspices the nursery is maintained. The donations this year were also greater than ever before, the store house being filled with just the things needed for the nursery, for which the King's Daughters are grateful.

Tea was served by the Silver Cross Circle of The King's Daughters of which Mrs. H. C. White is the president. She was assisted by these members: Mrs. F. O. Ball; Mrs. E. T. Wilson; Mrs. A. L. Williams, Jr.; Mrs Francis E. DuBois; Miss Elsie Suffren; Miss Helen Phillips, and Mrs. H. L. McGee.

In addition to the donations of dry groceries, etc., a considerable sum of money was left at the door. The King's Daughters are working earnestly for a new building, the present one far outgrowing the present needs. Mrs. M. E. Edgerton left $5,000 for the Day Nursery and $5,000 for the camp work, and in the near future it is hoped that these bequests together with other means available will go a long way toward securing adequate quarters for the carrying on of the work. Mrs. Frank W. Jones, as president of the City Union of The King's Daughters, with others received the guests yesterday.

CHIEF MACDUFF ENTERTAINS IN HONOR OF BURNS' BIRTHDAY

A number of the admirers of Scotland's peasant bard assembled at the home of Chief MacDuff, last night, to celebrate the 152nd year of the poet's birth. There was no need of the "lion rampant" or of thistles or other national decorations to tell that it was a Scottish celebration.

After satisfying the inner man with haggis and athol brose, the rest of the evening was spent in singing Burns' songs and reciting his poems. At 11 o'clock the company joined in singing "Auld lang Syne," with the greatest enthusiasm.

Charged with Desertion.

Stelle Randolph, of New Market, was arrested yesterday on West Fourth street, on a warrant issued by Justice Clark Rogers, on a chrage of desertion. The complaint was made by Randolph's wife. A hearing will be given Randolph on February 3, in New Market. W. A. Codington will appear for Piscataway township at request of Mahlon Dayton and Justice Von Minden will defend Randolph.

Hearing on Assessment.

A hearing before the county Board of Taxation, of Middlesex county was held on Tuesday in Dunellen, to hear the appeal of the Equator Realty company against the assessment of the property known as Equator Park on Bound Brook road. ## CONGRATULATE MARTINE

James Smith Jr., Gov. Wilson and Bryan Send Senator Messages.

SCORES OF TELEGRAMS ARRIVE

Farmer-Orator Will Not Be Out for Two Weeks—W. W. St. John Started Boom for the Plainfielder.

Scores of telegrams continue to pour in on United States Senator-elect James E. Martine. From every State in the Union and from men prominent in all walks of life and of many shades of political belief, messages of congratulation have been received. Despite his illness, the senator insists on reading them as fast as they arrive.

One telegram that particularly pleased him was from William Jennings Bryan, who sent his heartiest congratulations. He was equally delighted to hear from his opponent, former United States Senator James Smith, Jr., who withdrew from the contest when his fight became hopeless. Mr. Smith wired: "Congratulations. Hope your health will soon be restored so as to enable you to enjoy your high office:"

Allan Benny sent this sentiment: "God reigns. Democratic Jersey is back on the map and good old Jim has at last come into his reward. Hurrah for today." State Senator Gebhardt, of Hunterdon, put this message on the wire as soon as the result was announced: "I congratulate our State and yourself heartily." Then the bosom friend of the farmer-orator boarded a train for Plainfield and in an hour was closeted with Martine reviewing the fight. It was the Hunterdon county man who boomed Martine three years ago and succeeded in getting for him the solid Democratic vote when Frank O. Briggs, Republican, was elected to the United States Senate.

Among the first to congratulate the senator was his strongest supporter, Governor Woodrow Wilson. The Governor telephoned his congratulations and made an appointment to confer with him as soon as the senator is well enough to go to Trenton. From Assemblyman Calvin E. Brohead, of this city, who nominated Martine in the House, this message was received: "Hearty congratulations on your great victory."

Republican County Chairman Frank H. Smith sent the following message to Mr. Martine today: "Congratulations and best wishes for a succeseful administration."

Job H. Lippincott, of Jersey City, sent the following message to the Senator-elect: "Allow me to congratulate you. It was a just victory."

Telegrams were also received from John A. Smith, Haddon Heights; Captain James Parker, Perth Amboy; Louis H. Brown, Trenton; Thomas J. Peterson, Elizabeth; Eugene Burke, Trenton; Benjamin W. Hughes, Rahway; J. T. Hague, Springfield; Bernard McLean, New York; Lloyd A. Treadway, Morristown; Charles Stillwell, Morristown; Assemblyman McLoughlin, Elizabeth; R. D. Gibby, Trenton; Mayor Alfred A. Stein, Elizabeth; John J. McGowan, Newark; Edward Nugent, Elizabeth; J. P. MacMasters, Elizabeth; Thomas J. Prickett, Trenton; A. Moore, Philadelphia; the Weeks family, Montclair; M. T. Cronin, Bayonne; the New York World; M. L. Mann, New York; former Mayor Dunham, Middletown, N. Y.; George Baldwin, Summit; W. J. Curtis, New York; E. H. Wright, Newark; M. L. Scudder, Newark; Herman B. Walker, Washington, D. C.; J. J. Bergen, Trenton; W. G. Malsch, Elizabeth; Frederick G. Hyer, Rahway; J. C. Conover, Freehold; George C. Clay, New York; G. T. Weber, Morristown; George W. Driver, Washington, D. C. Twenty-two residents of Madison joined in one telegram of congratulation.

Mr. Martine is somewhat fagged out today as the result of the excitement of yesterday but he is mending slowly and it is expected that he will be able to leave the house in a fortnight. Many of his townsmen called to pay their respects yesterday, but few were allowed to see him.

Former Mayor William L. Saunders stated today that the plans for the public reception in Mr. Martine's honor would be deferred until the Senator fully recovers. His first public utterance of a political nature will be made on the occasion of the Chamber of Commerce dinner at Truell Hall, Monday night, February 13. He will be given the position of honor at the right of the toastmaster by virtue of his office and it is believed that he will give his views on the current political problems.

The election of Martine, and the events leading up to it, must be

WESTFIELD.

In order to settle the question as to whether there has been any wrongdoing by members of the Council in furnishing supplies to the town while members of the Council, Mayor John A. Dennis has appointed a special committee of the Council to investigate any charges that any citizens may make in this respect. The committee is composed of R. S. Middleditch, E. H. Oswald and H. W. Evans. There have been rumors that it has been the practise of several men on the Council to furnish supplies for the various departments in which they are interested. To either quiet these rumors or to show whether they are grounded on fact the Mayor has appointed this committee.

Westfield Retail Merchants' Association expect to make the annual dinner of the association, which is to be held on February 21, one of the most notable of the year. As planned, members from similar associations all over the State are to be invited as well as prominent speakers whose interests are with the retail merchants. It is also probable that at this dinner a move will be inaugurated to form a league of the Retail Merchants' Associations of the State.

"Rat Circus" Act at Proctor's Theatre.

Professor Robert's and his famous "Rat Circus," playing Proctor's the last three days of this week, will amuse both the big and little patrons. Trained rats are something new for this city, and we are all familiar with the vagabond variety. "Mr. and Mrs. Robinson," a lively farce sketch, four characters, provides twenty minutes of good clean fun. Mildred Flora will be remembered for her clever comedy singing act playing here last spring. Victor, a clever boy ventriloquist, concludes this excellent bill.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Measles are epidemic at Delanco.

Millville physicians are confident that Sheriff Payne will recover.

Thieves entered the home of Peter Verga, 122 Pearl street, Camden, Tuesday and carried away jewelry to the value of about $130.

Falling through a hatchway at the New York Shipyard in Camden, Tuesday, Frank Alich, fifty-two years old, of Mt. Ephraim avenue and Liberty street, sustained a fracutre of several ribs. He was taken to Cooper Hospital.

Arrested while in bed, Horace Driver, nineteen years old, of 221 Senate street, admitted robbing the home of Edward Rowan, 1731 South Fourth street, Camden. Among the stolen articles were two gold watches, a gold cross, with three rubies; one bracelet and an overcoat.

Vice-Chancellor Leaming Tuesday, granted the application of Mrs. Sarah Dilk, of Hartford, for a divorce from Frang Dilk, a baker, of Moorestown, and she was also allowed $7 a week alimony. The suit was brought on the ground that Dilk had been guilty of misdemeanor.

Miss Nellie Peoples, the nineteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Peoples, living on a farm near Bordentown, was taken to the Jefferson Hospital at Philadelphia, Tuesday, to be treated for an injury to her spine, caused by a collision between two carriages last October.

Suit has been commenced in Camden against the Philadelphia Caramel Company by former Judge Howard Carrow and William J. Kraft to recover $10,000 damages for John H. Fisher. The plaintiff, a boy of fourteen, had the thumb of his right hand torn off in the cog-wheel of a machine at which he was working.

While sitting in a side window of a caboose of a Philadelphia and Reading Railroad train Tuesday, the head of Arthur V. Hayes, a brakeman twenty-five years old, of Conshohoken, Pa., came in contact with the side girder on the bridge at Forty-ninth street, Bayonne, and he was rendered unconscious. Hayes was taken to the City Hospital.

Three hundred dollars damages for injuries received in alighting from a Shore Fast Line trolley car at Atlantic City, in July last, was awarded in Mays Landing Tuesday, to Mrs. Rebecca Beard, in the Circuit Court. She had asked for $5,000, claiming that she had suffered lasting injuries from the fall, caused, she asserted, by the conductor starting the car before she had alighted.

Frederick Sigman, of Moorestown, applied in Camden for a divorce. He alleged cruel and barbarous treatment by his wife. In the bill Sigman declares that his angry spouse chased him out of the house with a red-hot poker, then tore a board from a pigsty and struck him. Other domestic infelicities included throwing dinner plates and that she went through his pockets for small change.

While running before the wind off Hereford Inlet early Tuesday morning, a large pound boat, loaded with fish net, ran aground on the shoals, and, listing dangerously, lay exposed to the heavy sea. The Tatum's station life-saving crew, after the hardest kind of work, managed to float the boat, which had been but slightly damaged. The craft was bound from Long Branch to Chincoteague, and the journey was resumed soon after the boat had been floated.

About to direct a crew in repair work on the Delaware River bridge of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Delair, Tuesday, Robert M. Lister, a foreman, found the body of a man who had probably fallen from a train and been killed. The body was removed to the Camden morgue. A looking-glass with a picture of Reading, Pa., firemen on the back was found in the pocket of the man's trousers, and in the sweat-band of the hat was found the initials "M. J. McG." The man had red hair, with a stubby mustache, was about forty years old and weighed about 140 pounds.

BASEBALL.

Johnny ("Dots") Miller, of Kearny, yesterday signed a contract to play with Pittsburg next season. The Keystone sack artist, who has been with Pittsburg for two seasons, was given a big boost in his salary by Barney Dreyfuss. Miller had the contract for several days before returning it to the Pittsburg club. When he signed up with the Pirates a year ago it was with the understanding that he was to get an increase this year if his work was satisfactory. When the contract came along this part was entirely satisfactory. The player said yesterday that his injured leg had responded to treatment, and that it was as strong as ever once more. He expects to get back into his batting stride this season. Miller is preparing to go to Hot Springs, Ark., where the Pirates will do their spring training.

Charley Herzog has filed a claim with the National Commission for $350 against the Boston club. The third baseman declares he was suspended last season without cause, and wants his salary for the time he was laid off. At the time of Herzog's suspension it was said that he had the managerial bug and wanted to depose Fred Lake as boss of the Doves. Lake says that Herzog came into the dressing-room at the Boston grounds one day last season before a double-header, and, in the presence of Dovey and Lake said: "I am done playing ball." He took off his uniform, threw down his glove, and left for home. Lake said Herzog often made requests for his salary during the time of his suspension, but the manager would not agree to give him money that he did not earn.

The New York Nationals have fourteen pitchers, seven of them new ones. Mathewson, Crandall and Drucke of the veterans are considered O. K., but there is doubt about the chances of Ames, Raymond and Wiltse. Marquard is uncertain. Manager McGraw believes that the $11,000 will yet make good. The new pitchers are Rudolph, of Toronto; Hendricks, of Vreeland, Mich.; Tesreau, of Shreveport; Shonts, of Dallas, Texas; Nagle, of Elmira; Rustenhaven, of Cheyenne, and Jenkins, of Pekin, Ill. Hendricks is a husky left-hander, who is said to have great control.

It is not believed by the officials of the Giants that Vice-President Page's objection to the Shean-Shafer trade will have any effect on the transaction. President Russell approved Tenney's action in the matter. Page says he will fight the deal when the board of directors of the Boston club meets. He says: "I look on Shean as a player with a bright future, a local man, and a favorite, while the chances are that it would be hard to get Shafer back from Japan."

Stanley Robison, owner of the St. Louis Nationals, has offered St. Louis fandom a rich prize. If Manager Roger Bresnahan lands his Rajahs in the first division and keeps them there the coming season, Robison stands ready to expend more than $100,000 to erect concrete stands just as soon as Roger fulfils his part of the arrangement.

GOLF.

At the annual meeting of the New Jersey State Golf Association held in New York, F. H. Thomas, of Morris county, was elected president, to succeed H. V. Keep, who retired after two years of service. Seven of the twenty-six organizations holding membership in the association were represented as follows:

Morris County Golf Club, F. H. Thomas; Baltusrol Golf Club, J. H. Woodward, 2d; Englewood Country Club, John Munroe; Essex County Country Club, W. J. Kingsland; Montclair Golf Club, Jason Rogers; Yountakah Country Club, George B. Martin; Forest Hill Field Club, W. T. Chisholm.

In the absence of W. C. Shoup, the report of the secretary-treasurer was read by Mr. Munroe. This showed a balance on hand of $468.30, within a few dollars of last year's figures.

The Morris County Golf Club made a provisional offer of its course for the annual championship tournament. It was explained by Mr. Thomas that work on the projected trolley line might occasion some inconveniences, but he did not believe that work on the road would be in evidence by the first week in June, the usual time set for the New Jersey state fixture. It was voted to leave the question to the new executive committee. In accordance with New Jersey State Golf Association custom the president has the power of appointing the secretary-treasurer and other committeemen. A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Keep for his efficient service during the two years he acted as the association's chief executive.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

No offering for the current season gives promise of more delightful entertainment than Ruth St. Denis in her new dances of ancient Egypt which Henry B. Harris will present at the Plainfield theatre, Saturday matinee and night, January 28. The new dances reflecting the religion and customs of ancient Egypt in which Miss St. Denis will appear are more elaborate than her other offerings and require the services of some fifty persons, in addition a special orchestra is required to interpret the incidental music written by Walter Meyrowitz. There are four elaborate scenes which Henry B. Harris has spared no expense to make pictorial of the period.

Robert Dumont, of the borough, is detained at home by illness.

Mr. and Mrs. George Endicott, of Prince George county, Va., are visiting relatives in this city.

Mrs. O. T. Waring, of Park avenue, is seriously ill at her home, having suffered a relapse of a former trouble.

CONGRATULATE MARTINE

classed as one of the most curious pages in political history. The direct cause of it was a newspaper man, W. W. St. John, an old-time friend of the Plainfield "Farmer-Orator." Mr. St. John was at one time city editor of The Daily Press and is an ardent Democrat. He is engaged at present as a newspaper correspondent at Trenton for this and other papers. This is the story:

The direct primaries law was brought about by a determined Democratic minority who forced it on a reluctant Republican majority. One of the men who had advocated such a measure up and down the State for a score of years was Martine. He had become the champion of the direct primaries when it was looked upon as a socialistic idea and when its adherents were the subjects of bitterest denunciatian. But Martine, who has the courage of his convictions always, never faltered.

When the bill became law and the time for closing nominations on Sept. 13 last drew near not a Democrat had filed his petition to be placed on the ballots for United States Senator. Less than a week before Sept. 13 St. John said to some fellow newspaper men: "It's a shame that there is no Democrat taking advantage of an opportunity created by Democrats." There was silence for a few moments, then St. John said: "I have it; we'll get 'Jim' Martine to make the race."

REMEMBER BOBBY BURNS

Rev. G. R. Maguire was humorous in his speech on "Scots the World Over," and received an ovation at the end of his rendition of the poem by Burns.

The affair was a success both financially and artistically and it is likely that the next entertainment of the clan will have to be given in a larger auditorium, judging by the attendance last night. A supper followed the entertainment.

Following the entertainment and supper of Clan Mackenzie last night, the pipers and about thirty of their friends adjourned to the home of Chief Robert Murray where they serenaded the popular Scotchman and kept up the fesivities of Burns' birthday until early this morning.

It figures out about like this, as a series will run out in twelve years: If $2,000.00 is borrowed (other amounts in same proportion),

| He pays $10.00 a month dues for 144 months | $1,440 00 |

| Total amount paid | $2,905 00 |
| He has the use of | 2,000 00 |

Which is actual net interest of only 3¾ per cent. per annum.

This is on a basis of 6 per cent. When no money is on hand, the Association will provide money for the borrower at a very slight premium.

The regular meetings of the association are held at its rooms, 109 Park Avenue, on the third Monday evening of each month. New series are opened at each regular meeting. SENATOR-ELECT MARTINE WAS SERENADED.

About thirty-five friends of Senator-elect James E. Martine celebrated the victory of the popular Plainfielder last night, by using a drum and fife corps as a means of expressing their joy at his election to the United States Senate. The men and a hundred boys marched about the centre of the city burning red fire and finally wended their way to Mr. Martine's residence on Kensington avenue, where after playing a military march thy gave "Jim" three hearty cheers and returned to North avenue where they disbanded.

The noise did not cause Mr. Martine any convenience, in fact, he rather enjoyed the fun although he could not take part in it.

P. H. S. NOTES.

The sophomores practically cinched their chances for the interclass championship yesterday by again defeating the seniors in a one-sided game. The score ended at 28 to 18. Good and Rosinson starred for the sophs, while Busse and Shrager played best for the seniors.

At a meeting of the Boys' Athletic League of the Plainfield High School today it was decided to have a track team to represent the school in competition during the coming season with other high schools and preparatory establishments in the nearby cities. The local school has not had a track team for several years, but it is believed that now there is enough good material to form a fine team. Active preparations will not be begun until the mid-year examinations are over. James Lindsey is acting Captain and Edward Jenkins is manager. The latter has already received invitations to enter his team at games.

Following the basketball game between the P. H. S. team and the Alumni on Saturday evening there will be an informal reception and dance for all the members of the High School and their friends. An admission will be charged.

Rutgers Preparatory team will be the opponents of the P. H. S. team on Saturday afternoon in the local court. The game begins at 3:30.

In the District Court.

Several minor suits between landlord ond tenant were decided by Judge William Newcorn in the district court this morning, as well as contract suits brought by the New York Telephone Company. Judgments were rendered in favor of the plaintiffs in these cases on proof.

The Men's Berean Bible study class of the Sunday school of Warren chapel will hold its annual business meeting in the chapel this evening. Officers will be elected for the coming year. After the business meeting there will be a social time.

FEDERATION OF CHURCHES AT TRENTON TOWORROM

Plans for the organization of the Inter-church Federation of New Jersey have been practically completed and the delegates from the various state denominational church bodies such as the Methodist conference, the Presbyterian synod, the Baptist Convention and similar organizations, will meet at Trenton tomorrow in the First M. E. church at 10:30 a. m., to form the new federation.

Rev. Hugh B. MacCauley, D. D., pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church, Trenton, and secretary of the Eastern district of the Federal council, which is the central congress of the National Inter-church Federation, has sent out notices to all delegates who are to convene.

Bishop Lines, of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Newark, has been invited to preside.

The organization will be considered, and when decided, bylaws will be adopted, officers elected and committees appointed.

The object of the federation is to manifest the essential oneness of the Christian churchees of the state in Jesus Christ as their divine lord and Saviour, and to promote the spirit of fellowship, service and co-operation among them.

More particularly the object is to prevent overlapping in church work, to promote civic righteousness and put up a united front, against the evils that threaten the church.

In the afternoon there will be a conference on work of the Inter-church Federation, beginning at 2 o'clock. Governor Wilson has agreed to address the conference.

There are 1,800 pastors in the state, and each has received an invitation to attend the conference. Following the addresses there will be an hour for discussion in "The Work of the Inter-church Federation of New Jersey."

A Correction.

On Monday an item was published relating to Miss Lillian Ward's search for the anonymous writer of a letter and her letter to Postmaster Bird requesting information. It now appears that Miss Ward was seeking a position as a secretary which she states the man offered, and was not looking for a husband. The Daily Press cheerfully makes this statement in justice to Miss Ward. Postmaster Bird disclaims any responsibility for the first report.

Watchung Engine Company Dance.

The Watchung Chemical Engine Company conducted a social dance in the North Plainfield Township Association Hall at Watchung, last night. It was attended by about 100 young people. The committee in charge of the affair was headed by Chief Titus and John Mobus.

VEILING JEWELS.

The fashion of veiling has been extended to the veiling of jewels. It it the fad in London to wear all the pendants and brooches of precious stones that one can muster and then hide their glittering under a veil of chiffon so they appear as a glowing part of the underdress.

The Oriental embroideries and garnitures which are used in the early spring have reappeared also with this veiled effect and they are very beautiful when their Eastern vividness of color in partly obscured by veiling of dark or definite mole or gray.

Gowns of gold or silver tissue or trimmed with broad gold or silver embroideries are veiled with chiffon and voiles. Even valuable old lace trimmings or evening gowns are only suggested for they, too, are partly covered by thin veiling.

Gave Benefit Euchre.

Mrs. David T. Kenney, of West Eighth street, gave a euchre at her home yesterday afternoon, for the benefit of St. Mary's convent. Forty friends were in attendance and enjoyed the play. Prizes were awarded Mrs. Calvin E. Brodhead and Mrs. George H. Mehl. Refreshments were served in conclusion.

N. P. A. A. to Present Play.

The North Plainfield Athletic Association has arrangned to give a dramatic production early in March. The play selected fro presentation is the popular comedy, "What Hapuened to Jones." The parts were received yesterday and the cast is now being selected.

Rev. Thomas Francis, of Jersey City, will give a Bible reading in the church at Duer street and Craig place tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock. The subject will be "The second chapter of John." All interested are invited. There will also be service in the evening at 7:45.

Get the Hook.

"Where are you going my pretty maid?"

"I'm going to Fishhook, sir," she said.

"And where may that be, my pretty maid?"

"At the end of the line, you jay!" she said.—Boston Transcript.

Ginger Before Breakfast.

If you are inclined to feel heavy and bad tempered in the morning when you rise, says a well-known physician, try taking a piece or two of preserved ginger. For some reason it seems to sweeten the temper with the digestion and makes a healthful as well as palatable before-breakfast dainty.

The Young Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church is planning to give a supper and entertainment in the church in the near future.

AT THE PLAY.

She took a seat in front of me;
Alas, I gave a sigh,
For looming up I saw a hat
At least twelve inches high.

I could not see the stage at all,
So gave a little cough;
It was enough—she took the hint,
Also her bonnet off.

I gave a smile, one little smile,
And then dumbfounded sat,
For coiled upon her head the hair
Was higher than the hat!
—Yonkers Statesman.

HOPE ON.

Be of good cheer. In six months we will again be thinking of starting on our vacations.

Welcome.

Hail to the oyster!
Give him his due;
Fine when he's broiled, but
Lost in a stew.

Engaged.

"I was never so surprised in my life!"

"Why should you be?"

"Why, you used to hate and despise him."

"I guess you haven't heard all the news, have you?"

"What haven't I heard?"

"Have you heard that he has a touring car?"

Recollections.

"Sweet were the days of childhood, John."

"Indeed they were, Bill."

"I will never forget the day I gave you a thrashing, John."

"Now, look here, William Jonesby; you know quite well I would have licked you in a jiffy if I hadn't had a sore thumb on my right hand, where I got hit with a baseball!"

The Practical Maid.

They had been engaged for exactly 47 seconds by the cuckoo clock.

"Clara, dear," queried the happy youth, who had a streak of romance running up and down his person, "will you promise to love me forever?"

"I'd like to, George," replied the practical maid, "but I really don't expect to live so long."

Hence His Embarrassment.

"T'anks, mum," said Wandering Will. "It's kind uv yer to gimme yer husband's Prince Albert, but I don't wear dem garments no more."

"Why not? Is a Prince Albert coat too formal?"

"'Tain't dat, mum. Dem long tails is er invitation to every dog what sees me to take holt."

Explaining to Jones.

"I say, Jones, dine with me at the house to-night, will you?"

"Certainly, with pleasure. Will your wife expect me?"

"No; that's the beauty of it. We had a quarrel this morning and I want to make her mad."—Peekskill Palladium.

PLENTY OF COMPANY.

"I married because I was lonely."

"Well, don't kick. You have four children."

Still Picking.

He tried to pick the winner
Among the racing nags;
To-day he'll earn his dinner—
For he is picking rags.

Too True.

Yeast—I see an average orange tree produces 20,000 oranges and an average lemon tree 8,000 lemons.

Crimsonbeak—And yet the average man gets handed more "lemons" than oranges.—Yonker's Statesman.

Croak Instead of Cackle.

Bacon—I see the toad deposits about 12,000 eggs each year, but we only hear from 1,000 of them.

Egbert—Those are the ones they croak about, I suppose.—Yonkers Statesman.

A MIGHTY FORTRESS.

The Famous Rock of Gibraltar and Its Armament.

A GUN IN EVERY CREVICE.

The Place Stored With Food and Munitions of War to Stand a Siege of Seven Years—An English View of the Cannon Studded Stronghold.

"An enemy's fleet could be sent to the bottom in ten minutes before getting within five miles of Gibraltar. Not even a torpedo boat could succeed in entering the bay unobserved on the blackest night." That sums up the opinions of the most eminent naval experts as to the impregnability of the world's greatest fortress.

But disappointment awaits the sight-seeing visitor. The rock, though barren, is covered with luxuriant vegetation—not a fort prominent, not a gun to be seen even with the most powerful glasses, no discernible ammunition magazines, no strongholds, only a peaceful, prosperous harbor and a sleepy, straggling town.

It is night, and the maneuvers are on. Swift playing searchlights transform the bay into a sheet of shimmering silver upon which are seen majestic British warships and elongated flying shadows, the torpedoes. Guns answer guns out of every conceivable crevice and corner, blending in one deafening uproar, while scores of shells plow the water for miles around.

Sentries are everywhere; infantry parties crouch in the shadows; hundreds of gunners stand ready behind hundreds of guns in these mysterious labyrinths hewn out of the solid rock—"the galleries." The vicious barking of Maxim guns gives contrast to the deep toned baying of these mammoth pieces of ordnance, the mere report of which cracks stone roofs and bursts doors and whole windows. Could any fleet live through the murderous hail of gigantic shells?

Gibraltar never sleeps. By day and night two perfectly equipped signal stations, proudly flaunting Britain's flag of ownership, unceasingly sweep the seas around to a distance of fifteen miles on a clear day, instantly reporting the coming and going of each vessel. Sentries guard all the prominent forts, magazines and gateways; gunners sleep beside their guns; engineers are ever ready beside the powerful searchlights.

Modern "needle" guns, the finest in Europe, are installed on all the most prominent points. They are unreachable from the sea, even as they are undiscernible, owing to the skill with which they are painted and draped to match the surrounding vegetation, while huge screens drop automatically before them as each shell is fired. They have a range of fifteen miles and could drop shells on Ceuta, in Africa, opposite, quite comfortably. One gun weighs 110 tons and is capable of throwing a shell weighing three-quarters of a ton. In that marvel of engineering under great difficulties, the galleries, are concealed guns for every day in the year.

These galleries are divided into three sections, entry to which is guarded, while one is closed even to high officers, containing preserved stores, munitions of war, rainwater (for Gibraltar has no springs) and a complete condensing plant—all calculated to outlast a siege of seven years.

The firing is the most mathematically perfect imaginable. The surrounding waters are mapped out into squares, upon which certain guns are kept ready trained, so that it is almost impossible to miss. During practice targets are towed across the bay, the object being to hit the water a few yards in advance of them.

Although the sentries have now been reduced, a few years ago 158 were needed daily, the most important point being the north front, where English sentries face Spanish sentries. But the mere pressure of an electric button by the officer of the guard would cause a miniature earthquake on the neutral ground.—Cassell's Saturday Journal.

Haggis as the Scotch Make It.

To make haggis take the heart, tongue and small liver of the sheep, one pound of bacon, four ounces of crumbs of bread, the rind of one lemon, two eggs, two anchovies (sardines may be used), a quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper and two teaspoonfuls of salt. Chop the heart, tongue, liver and bacon, mix thoroughly, add the breadcrumbs, the anchovies, chopped fine; the lemon rind, grated; then the pepper and salt. Beat the eggs and pour them over. Pack this into a kettle or mold, cover and boil or steam continuously for two hours. Turn it on a dish and serve very hot.

A Clever Cook.

Mrs. Nurich was in the jewelry store.

"Here are some new souvenir spoons we have just got in," said the clerk, placing a tray for her inspection.

"Oh, ain't those lovely?" she exclaimed. "I must have some of those! Our cook makes such lovely souvenirs!"—Argonaut.

Well Posted.

"What was that musty old explorer talking about?" inquired the languid lady.

"Progressive Patagonia."

"And how do you play it?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

It is not the quantity of the meat, but the cheerfulness of the guests, that makes the feast.—Clarendon.

Sacrifices For the Service.

Hundreds of men in England stint themselves in order to enable their sons to keep a position in one of the services. I know of a particular case in which a father manages to keep a son in the navy on an income of barely £300 a year. The sailor boy takes £100 of this, and the rest of the family—I believe there are five—manage to squeeze through without getting into debt on the other £200.—London Sun.

Tenants in Persia.

In Persia the tenant is absolutely at the mercy of his landlord, who can even seize upon the persons of himself and his family and reduce them to a sort of slavery till arrears of rent and interest are worked off, and this is true of most countries under despotic rule. Tenants are generally tenants at will and can be dispossessed on most frivolous pretexts.

Looking Forward.

When Kaiser William II. was a small boy he was discovered by one of his tutors drawing a map of Africa. When he had finished he wrote the word "Germany" across the paper.

"What are you doing?" asked the teacher. "That is not German territory."

"That is all right," retorted William. "When I am kaiser it will be."—London Mail.

The Word "Rajah."

Literally the word rajah means king, and maharajah the great king or ruler over several kings, but generally speaking the titles rajah, maharajah and nawab have no greater significance than the words feudal lords as used in mediaeval times in Europe. Many of them have been made by the will of the reigning chief, many bestowed for meritorious acts and deeds.

Her Mistake.

There is a frigid coldness between a young man and his best girl for which her absentmindedness is not altogether blameless.

"So you've come at last!" said he the other night.

"Why, I'm early," she replied. "It's only 7, and I promised to be here at 8."

"H'm, but you've mistaken the day. I've been waiting here since yesterday."

He Had Had Enough.

A stage carpenter one day approached his manager for an increase in wages. "Why," said the manager, "I don't quite see my way to giving you a rise. You have nothing much to do. Half the time you are merely standing in the wings listening to the play." "Yes, sir," replied the carpenter, with a wry face as he turned to move away, "that's just it!"—London Mail.

The Word "Doll."

The word "doll" may be taken as meaning the same thing as "idol"—that is, an image—generally speaking, an image of the human form. The French word "poupee" and the German "poupa" were derived from the Latin "pupa," the word used for a chrysalis (insect stage), the earlier kinds of dolls being remarkably like the pupae of insects. Our word puppet is derived also from the same root.

How He Gained Prominence.

"This Mr. Muggins is one of your prominent men, I suppose?"

"Oh, yes."

"What did he ever do?"

"Nothing at all. You see, he has always kept in the background when anything was to be done, so that he could criticise those that do it. That's what's made him so prominent as a citizen."—Chicago Post.

Easily Fixed.

"I see where a scientific feller says there's a dark planet goin' to hit the sun an' end the world," says the man on the cracker barrel.

"Huh!" observes the man with his heels on the stove. "I reckon we needn't bother much about that. I spoke to our congressman about it this mornin' an' he'll interduce a bill makin' such acts a vi'lation of interplannytary commerce."—Chicago Post.

Why They Were Fresh.

Once, when taking breakfast at a hotel in Richmond, John Randolph complained that the eggs were not fresh. "If you want fresh eggs, waiter, always buy them in Chesterfield" (a county just across the James).

"How come Chest'field eggs better'n Henrico eggs, sah?"

"Because, you rascal, the Chesterfield people are too poor to keep theirs long."—Argonaut.

When She Made Cake.

"This lovely angel food," said she, tasting the cake at the high tea. "Did you make it? Wonderful. I never tried to make angel food but once. I took all day to make it, walking very lightly while it was in the oven, hardly daring to breathe. Then when it was done I put it in the sideboard. The next morning they had to use a derrick to move the sideboard in order to sweep under it. That is, that's the story my husband tells about it. You know how husbands are."—New York Press.

Up Against It.

The suffragette leader was addressing a meeting of the Cook Ladies and Chambermaids' Union.

"You women should all have a voice in the affairs of the nation," she exclaimed. "You should assert yourselves. You should be entitled to a vote."

Hereupon a seeker after information arose and in a voice of conviction said, "That would mean that we should have to live in one place for at least six months, wouldn't it?"

It was not until then that the suffragette leader fully realized what she was up against.—New York Times.

A HAUNTED ROOM.

The Mysterious Light That George Cary Eggleston Defied.

There was and perhaps still is a room in a certain house in Virginia which was supposed to be haunted. Every time a person slept there he would be sure to wake after a while to find the whole room pervaded by a dim yellowish gray or grayish yellow light. It was very dim at first, but it increased steadily till the occupant of the chamber fled from the nameless terror in panic. Mr. George Cary Eggleston was not to be daunted by these tales and accordingly decided to try a night there. In "Recollections of a Varied Life" he tells what happened:

It was about midnight when I entered the room. It was raining heavily, and the wind was rattling the stout shutters of the eight great windows of the room.

I went to each of those windows and minutely examined it. They were hung with heavy curtains of deep red.

Having completed my examination, explored the closets and bolted the door, I went to bed. The great four poster was inexpressibly comfortable, and the splash and patter of the rain as it beat upon the window blinds was as soothing as a lullaby. I forgot all about the experiment in which I was engaged, all about ghosts and their ways, and went to sleep.

After a time I suddenly waked to find the room dimly pervaded by that yellowish gray or grayish yellow light which had so disturbed the slumbers of others in that chamber. My awakening was so complete that all my faculties were alert at once. I felt under my pillow and found the pistol still where I had placed it.

Instead of springing hastily from bed, I lay there for a time, watching the weird light as it slowly, almost imperceptibly, increased in intensity. I decided that the gray distinctly predominated, but in the meantime the steady increase in the light and its pervasiveness warned me, and I slipped out of bed.

The rain was still beating heavily against the window blinds, and the strange yellowish gray light was still slowly but steadily increasing. I was resolute, however, in my determination not to be disturbed or hurried by any manifestation. In response to that determination I glanced at the mirror and decided that the mysterious light was sufficient for the purpose, and I resolved I would shave.

Having done so, I bathed in the rapidly increasing light. I was deliberate, however, in donning my clothing, and not till I was fully dressed did I turn to leave the room.

I turned the key. A second later I was out of that chamber, and the oaken door of it was securely shut behind me. I went down the great stairway, slowly, deliberately, in pursuance of my resolution. I entered the large hallway below and thence passed to the oak wainscoted dining room, where I sat down to breakfast with the rest of the company.

It was 9 o'clock of a dark, rainy morning. The grayish yellow light was daylight.

A Woman's Sacrifice.

Three years ago a startling tale came to light concerning a prominent business man in Austria. He found himself on the brink of ruin, and his wife came to his rescue at the cost of her own life. Leaving an overheated room one night, she walked up and down a stone flagged passage, barefoot and with nothing on but a nightdress, till she caught a chill which she aggravated by a series of reckless acts. Inflammation of the lungs set in, and she died shortly afterward. Her husband obtained the large sum of money for which her life was insured, and with this he was able to pull through the crisis successfully. He married for a second time within three months of his first wife's death. This husband did not get off scot free, however. A servant in his employ had overheard the conversation in which the heroic young wife had told her husband her intention to die for his sake. The servant informed the police. Then the insurance companies contended it was a case of suicide and sued successfully for the return of the money. The husband was prosecuted for being an accessory to his wife's death and received the punishment he well merited.

A Great Dog Town.

The greatest dog town in Great Britain, if not in the world, is Haverfordwest. There are a great many men in the town who live wholly and make a good living by breeding, buying and selling dogs. Although the population is only 6,000, at least 6,000 dog licenses are issued annually, and there are also a large number of exemptions. Almost daily there are more dogs than people in the public streets, though valuable animals are never allowed to run loose. Haverfordwest dog breeders are known for their working terriers, show terriers, pointers, setters and spaniels, which are daily traded for big sums through the fanciers' journals and go everywhere. It is the home of the Sealyham breed of terriers, the origin of which has puzzled the keenest sportsmen. One fancier's kennel recently sold by auction realized £200, but £25 is not an unusual price for a single dog, while £60, £70 and £80 are almost common. The quaint old town, with its mixed Welsh, English and Flemish population, is almost the hub of the dogs' universe.—Fur News.

CHAPTER IX.

THE DOCTOR SEES LIZE.

LEE VIRGINIA said goodby to Mrs. Redfield with grateful appreciation of her kindness, and especially of her invitation to come again, and the tears in her eyes profoundly affected the older woman, who, with a friendliness which was something more than politeness, invited her to come again. "Whenever Roaring Fork gets on your nerves we'll be very glad to rescue you," she said in parting.

Hugh Redfield the girl thoroughly understood and loved, he was so simple hearted and so loyal. On the way to the office he said to Lee, "I will talk to the doctor if you like."

"I wish you would," she responded fervently.

She remained in the machine while he went in, and as she sat there a train passed on its downward eastward run, and a feeling of loneliness, of helplessness, filled her heart. Now that she was within sight of the railway the call of the east, the temptation to escape all her discomforts, was almost great enough to carry her away, but into her mind came the thought of the ranger riding his solitary way, and she turned her face to her own duties once more, comforted by the words of praise he had spoken and by the blaze of admiration in his eyes.

Redfield came out, followed by a small man carrying a neat bag.

"You'd better sit behind, doctor," said Redfield. "I shall be very busy on this trip."

"Very well," replied the other, "if Miss Wetherford remains beside me; otherwise I shall rebel."

He began by asking a few questions about her mother's way of life, but as Lee was not very explicit he became impersonal and talked of whatsoever came into his mind—motorcars, irrigation, hunting, flowers, anything at all—and the girl had nothing to do but to utter an occasional phrase to show that she was listening. It was all rather depressing to her, for she could not understand how a man so garrulous could be a good physician. She was quite sure her mother would not treat him with the slightest respect.

After all, he talked well. His stream of conversation shortened the way for her. Soon they were rolling quietly up the street to the door of the Wetherford House.

They found Lize on duty behind the counter, as usual. Her face was dejected, her eyes dull, but as she caught sight of the strange little man she cried out, "Why didn't you bring me a man, Reddy?"

"Hush, mother!" cautioned Lee. "This is the famous eastern physician."

"You can't be famous for your beauty; you must be brainy," she remarked to herself in the stranger's hearing.

Redfield presented "Dr. Fessenden of Omaha."

She started again on contemptuous ways, but was stopped by the little man. "Get down out of that chair!" he commanded. "My time is money!"

Lize flushed with surprise and anger, but obeyed, and Lee Virginia, secretly delighted with the physician's imperative manner, led the way into the lodging house. "I'll look after the cash, mother," she said. "Don't worry."

"I'm not worrying," she replied. "But what does that little whelp mean by talking to me like that? I'll swat him one if he isn't careful!"

"It's his way. Please don't anger him. You need his help."

The doctor interfered. "Now, madam, strip and let's see what's the matter with you," whereupon he laid off his coat and opened his box of instruments.

Lee fled, and Redfield, who had remained standing beside the counter, could not repress a smile. "She's caught a tartar this time."

"Poor mother! How dreadfully ill she looks today! I hope the doctor will order her to rest."

"But will she obey? I've argued that with her. She keeps saying she will, but she won't."

It was nearly 1, but the customers were coming in, and the girl, laying aside her hat and veil, took her seat at the cash register, while Redfield went out to put his machine in order for the return trip. She realized that she was now at close hand grapple with life.

Her glowing cheeks, her pretty dress made her a shining mark, and the men began at once to improve their opportunity by asking, "Where's Lize?" And this embarrassed her, for the reason that she did not care to go into the cause of her mother's temporary absence.

Perceiving her nervousness, Neill Ballard raised loud outcry over a mistake she made in returning change, and this so confused and angered her that her eyes misted with tears, and she blundered sadly with the next customer. His delight in her discomfiture, his words, his grin, became unendurable, and in a flush of rage and despair she sprang to her feet and left them to make triumphant exit. "I got her rattled," he roared as he went out. "She'll remember me."

The diners were all smiling, and Gregg took a malicious satisfaction in her defeat. She had held herself haughtily apart from him, and he was glad to see her humbled.

Leaving her place behind the counter, she walked through the room with uplifted head and burning eyes, her heart filled with bitterness and fire. She hated the whole town, the whole state at the moment. Were these "the chivalrous short grass knights" she had heard so much about—these the large souled "western founders of empire?" At the moment she was in the belief that all the heroes of her childhood had been of the stamp of Neill Ballard.

In the hall her pride, her sense of duty, came back to her, and she halted her fleeing feet. "I will not be beaten," she declared, and her lips straightened. "I will not let these dreadful creatures make a fool of me in that way."

Thereupon she turned and went back, pale now, but resolved to prove herself the mistress of the situation. Fortunately Redfield had returned, and his serene presence helped her to recover complete control of herself. She remained coldly blank to every compliment, and by this means she subdued them.

The doctor, appearing suddenly in the door, beckoned to her, and, leaving her place, she crossed to where he stood. "Your mother needs you," he said curtly. "Go to her and keep her quiet for an hour or two if you can."

"What is the matter, doctor?"

"I can't tell you precisely, but you must get her on a diet and keep her there. I will write out some lists for you after my luncheon."

Lee found her mother sitting in such dejection as she had never known her to display, though she fired up sufficiently to say: "That cussed little thimblerigger has been throwing a great big scare into me. He says I've got to get outdoors, live on raw meat and weak tea and walk five miles a day. That's what he says," she added in renewed astonishment at the man's audacity. "Who's at the cash?"

"Mr. Redfield," replied Lee. "I'll go right back."

"No, you won't. I'm no dead horse yet." She struggled to her feet and started for the cash register. "I won't let no little Omaha doughie like that put me out of business."

Despite all warnings she walked out into the dining room and took her accustomed seat with set and stern face, while her daughter went to the table where the doctor sat and explained her inability to manage her mother.

"That's your problem," he replied coolly. Then rapidly, succinctly and clearly he went over the case and laid out a course of treatment. Out of it all Lee deduced that her mother was very ill indeed, though not in danger of sudden death.

"She's on the chute," said Fessenden, "and everything depends upon her own action whether she takes the plunge this winter or twenty years from now. She's a strong woman, or has been, but she has presumed upon her strength. She used to live out of doors, she tells me, during all her early life, and now, shut in by these walls, working sixteen hours a day, she is killing herself. Get her out if you can and cut out stimulants."

As he rose and approached the counter Lize shoved a couple of gold pieces across the board. "That wipes you off my map," she grimly declared. "I hope you enjoyed your ride."

"It's up to you, madam," he replied, pocketing the gold. "Good day!"

"I'll be down again in a day or two," called Redfield.

The machine began to pur and spit and the wheels to spin, and Lee Virginia was left to face her mother's obstinate resistance alone. She felt suddenly very desolate, very weak and very poor. "What if mother should die?" she asked herself.

Gregg was standing before the counter talking with Lize as Lee returned, and he said, with a broad smile, "I've just been saying I'd take this hotel off your mother's hands provided you went with it."

In the mouths of some men these words would have been harmless enough, but coming from the tongue of one whose life could only be obscurely hinted at the jest was an insult. The girl shuddered with repulsion, and Lize spoke out:

"Now, see here, Bullfrog, I'm dead on the hoof and all that, but neither you nor any other citizen like you can be funny with my girl. She's not for you. Now, that's final! She ain't your kind."

She turned to Lee. "I'm hungry. Where's that grub chart of mine?"

Lee brought the doctor's page of notes and read it through, while her mother snorted at intervals: "Hah! Dry toast, weak tea, no coffee, no alcohol. Huh! I might as well starve! Eggs—fish—milk! Why didn't he say boiled live lobsters and champagne? I tell you right now I'm not going to go into that kind of a game. If I die I'm going to die eating what I blame please!"

The struggle had begun. With desperate courage Lee fought, standing squarely in the rut of her mother's daily habit. "You must not hive up here any longer," she insisted. "You must get out and walk and ride. I can take care of the house, at least till we can sell it."

NEW COLLEGE BLDGS. TO BE FINISHED IN 1912

The settlement of details of the erection of the Graduate school, at Princeton, has been submitted to a sub-committee composed of H. B. Thompson, of Wilmington, Del., chairman for the committee of grounds and buildings of the trustee; Moses Taylor Pyne, chairman of the committee on the Graduate school and Dean Andrew F. West, of the Graduate school. It is now expected that work will be commenced in the early spring and the contracts will call for the completion of the buildings, including Thomson Graduate school, the Proctor memorial tower dining hall and the Cleveland memorial tower, by September, 1912.

The buildings, which are already staked out, will be erected on the golf links, about 100 yard northwest of the golf culb house, and the plans will cause the relocation of the present Pennsylvania railroad station, which will be situated near where the freight station now stands. A broad avenue will be laid out leading from the new Graduation school to the central campus by crossing below the gymnasium and running eastward to the vicinity of the Palmer physical laboratory. The plans of the buildings proper call for a dormitory of square proportions, two or three stories in height, and constructed about a quadrangle. This will be known as Thomson college and will provide accomodations for ninety to one hundred men. A part of the ground floor will be given up to general commons. To the west wing of this dormitory will be added a smaller courtyard, flanked by the Proctor memorial dining hall. A splendid architectual feature of the building will be the Cleveland memorial tower which will be constructed at the southwest corner of the large quadrangle.

The new Graduate school will be purely residential, and while it will not be compulsory that graduate students should reside in Thomson college, it will be found very attractive to do so. Contrary to the theory which Dean West has advocated for a number of years, there will be no separation of the graduate students from the undergraduates of the university. The former is in no sense independent of the latter, but an integral part of it, and, in fact, the crown and completion of the university's swstem of liberal studies, in which the four-year undergraduates course is, and always will be, the indispensable foundation.

TO PROBE CHARGES AGAINST OFFICIALS

Councilmen Middledith, Floyd and Evans, appointed by Mayor John A. Dennis, of Westfield, to investigate the charges of Councilman Hohenstein that other members of the council besides himself had sold their goods to the town, have agreed to serve and the much-looked-for investigation may begin in real earnest early next week. Before officially accepting their appointments the committeemen will have a conference with Attorney Oliver.

From what can be learned the investigation committee intends to get busy next Monday night, when the first public meeting will be held at the Town Hall. The first thing the committee will do will be to summon Councilman Hohenstein before them and ask him who the parties are that sold goods to the town while members of the council.

Councilman Middledith said last night that the investigating committee was not going to be a joke, but a committee which means business, and if the charges are true the practise will be stopped in Westfield.

HERE AND THERE.

Among the relics owned by Plainfielders, perhaps none is prized more highly than one possessed by William H. Shotwell, of Fairview avenue. It is a hammer which was made by Squire Runyon, of Greenbrook, for his father, Freeman Shotwell. The latter gave him the hammer about forty years ago and he has had it ever since. Squire Runyon was the father of Judge Nelson Runyon and grandfather of Former City Judge William N. Runyon. Mr. Shotwell presented the hammer to William N. Runyon today, believing that he will appreciate and value it as he has for so many years.

MAY FIND LAW TO TAX COLD STORAGE FOODS.

If it is lawful to tax coal supplies stored within the State, why is it not lawful to tax the contents of cold storage plants within our borders? This is a question now being investigated by the tax officials of Hudson county.

Tuesday Mark Fagan and Joseph McLean, members of the Hudson County Tax Board, paid a visit to the State house, Trenton, for the purpose of securing a copy of the decision handed down by Judge Rellstab in the United States Court a few days ago upholding the right of the municipalities of the State to tax the great supplies of coal stored up here for transportation to other States.

They announced that it was their intention to use the decision as a guide to assist them in their investigation of the legality of taxing the great quantities of food supplies for months and years at a time in the storage warehouses in their county. They were of the opinion that an enormous new revenue might be derived by making such assessments. They intimated also that they might turn their attention to the Standard Oil Company's supply of oils stored at Bayonne.

FORT LEAVES SATURDAY FOR A TRIP ABROAD.

Former Governor John Franklin Fort will leave Saturday morning for Europe as the first stage of a trip that will take him practically around the world before he returns to his home.

Mr. Fort will go to Lisbon, Portugal, on the Cleveland, which leaves Hoboken at 11 o'clock Saturday morning. His trip will include a tour of the principle cities of Europe. It is expected that he will be away until the latter part of August.

S. P. C. A. IS IN FAVOR OF STATE CONVENTION

With the idea in view of holding a convention of all State societies of the S. P. C. A., it was decided at a meeting of the Elizabeth district of the society to communicate with all the branches of the association in New Jersey and get their views on the matter.

The society feels that it has done extremely well during the past year and hopes that with the co-operation of the people of Elizabeth more good than ever before can be accomplished.

A report was read at the meeting last night from the American Humane Association, with which the society has become affiliated, stating that the year 1910 has been "red letter" one for the association. The number of anti-cruelty societies in the country had increased from 364 to 415, with a corresponding increase in the work accomplished, 1,347,185 animals having been cared for in the United States during the past year. Humane education has been introduced into all the public schools of Porto Rico and a good beginning has been made in the same direction in the Philippines and Hawaii. A campaign has been carried on in Congress for the more humane transportation of live stock and great work has been done for the reformation of slaughter-house conditions and the fur seal abuse.

BUNN OPPOSES "BUNS."

Introduces Anti-treating Bill to Make All Drink Alone.

If the measure introduced by Assemblyman Bunn, of Morris County, becomes a law it will be unlawful to ask a friend whom you meet in a thirst cure establishment "what will you have?" The bill introduced by Mr. Bunn is a direct blow at treating in saloons. It is in favor of what is known at the "Dutch treat," that is, every man pay for what he wants and what he gets. Mr. Bunn believes that in this way the number of "buns" carreid home will be greatly reduced.

Other bills introduced yesterday were as follows:

Mr. Boettner—Gives George W. Stevens, who was injured at an encampment January 28, 1908 a pension of $50 per month.

Mr. Meyer—Repeals the act of April 21, 1909, requiring the issuance of personal licenses to hunt game.

Mr. Thompson—Authorizes town councils by ordinance to establish the office of comptroller therein, who shall be elected by the voters of the twon for three-years' term.

Mr. Thompson—Gives Mayors of twons veto powers to be exercised over ordinances when in five days after passage; a two-thirds vote to be necessary to pass over veto.

Mr. Lafferty—Forbids net fishing in the Delaware River below Trenton Falls between sunset Saturday night and midnight Sunday night.

Mr. B. H. White—Amends the act relative to attachment proceedings and the effect as supersedeas of writs issued out of the Supreme and Circuit Court over district and justices' courts.

MAY REDUCE LICENSE FEE IN CITY OF ELIZABETH.

The Elizabeth Board of Excise at its meeting on February 7 will probably take steps to reduce, it is said, the license fee from $500 to $300, which it was formerly.

The saloon-keepers say that the present fee is too high and that many of them cannot make a living if it is kept up.

The board last night, at the request of Rev. Joseph B. Ferguson, pastor of the Greystone Presbyterian church, refused to grant a license transfer from Foley & Middleton, of 32 First street, Elizabethport, to John M. Miller, 60 Caspian street. Foley & Middleton were closed by the Peter Breidt Brewing Company, which holds a lease on it. Miller had the store in his building rented to a grocer, but forced the latter out, intending to run a saloon in the place himself.

Last night's action of the board leaves him with an empty store on his hands. Mr. Ferguson's objection was that no saloon was needed in the neighborhood.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Fericks, of Tottenville, S. I., have been entertaining Mrs. Lena Cole, of Westfield.

Miss Gladys Peek, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Peck, of Myrtle avenue, is planning a world-round trip in company with friends.

IT WAS NOT REFERRED.

An Instance In Which Abraham Lincoln's Words Were Turned Back Upon Himself.

General Robert Avery, who was wounded almost fatally at Chancellorsville and recovered just in time to lose his right leg at the hip on Lookout mountain, told an anecdote of Lincoln which shows the great president's appreciation of the fitness of things and his unfailing fund of humor.

"When I had recovered from the effects of the amputation," said General Avery, "a very dear friend of mine who had served long and faithfully as a regimental quartermaster was an applicant for a position as brigade quartermaster. He filed it with me, and after it had been properly briefed and indorsed I made it my business to put it before the president. There was a long line of people waiting to see Mr. Lincoln when I arrived at the White House; but, seeing I was a wounded man, he came over to me. 'I'll take my turn, Mr. President,' I said, and he turned to receive his visitors.

"The man ahead of me also had a request for an appointment—a letter which Governor Bramlett of Kentucky had indorsed 'Respectfully referred to President Lincoln.'

"'Governor Bramlett requests that I be appointed,' said the man from Kentucky. President Lincoln took the letter. 'Why,' exclaimed Mr. Lincoln, 'this doesn't show that Governor Bramlett requests anything. It says simply "Respectfully referred." That means he just passed it along. If you can get Governor Bramlett to request me I'll do it. "Respectfully referred" is only a polite way of getting rid of a person.'

"He was sitting at his desk at the time, settling lower and lower down in his chair until only his head seemed to show. I presented the papers of my friend. He read them and said, 'Why, yes.' Then he wrote on a card, 'Respectfully referred to Mr. Stanton,' the secretary of war.

"'This won't do, Mr. President,' I said to him. 'Why not?' he asked. 'Because you have just said to that man from Kentucky that "Respectfully referred" is a polite way of getting rid of a person.'

"The president slowly rose out of his deep seated chair until he looked seven feet tall to me, and then he began to laugh. 'You've got me,' said he, and then he wrote on a card, 'Appoint this man.'"—New York World.

THE BURYING BEETLE.

Dead Mice and Birds Secreted as Food For Its Young.

People often wonder what becomes of the dead mice and dead birds, for, though birds and mice are constantly dying in large numbers, hardly one is ever to be seen. The fact is that they are buried by beetles. Buchner gives a brief account of them as follows:

"Several of them unite together to bury under the ground, as food and shelter for their young, some dead animal, such as a mouse, a toad, a mole, a bird, etc. The burial is performed because the corpse, if left above ground, would either dry up or grow rotten or be eaten by other animals. In all these cases the young would perish, whereas the dead body lying in the earth and withdrawn from the outer air lasts very well.

"The burying beetles go to work in a very well considered fashion, for they scrape away the earth lying under the body so that it sinks of itself deeper and deeper. When it is deep enough it is covered over from above. If the situation is stony, the beetles, with united forces and great efforts, drag the corpse to some place more suitable for burying. They work so diligently that a mouse, for instance, is buried within three hours. But they often work on for days, so as to bury the body as deeply as possible. From large carcasses, such as those of horses, sheep, etc., they only bury pieces as large as they can manage."

There can be no doubt of the intelligence of these strange insects, as a gentleman discovered in a rather curious way. He desired to dry a dead toad, and for that purpose he fastened it upon the top of an upright stick. The burying beetles, however, were soon attracted by the smell, and, finding that they could not reach the toad, they undermined the stick, causing it to fall with the toad, which was then duly buried.—Our Animal Friends.

A Comforting Word.

A woman whose colored maid was assisting her in trying on a handsome new gown the other day got a shock when, after looking in the pier glass and admiring her really handsome figure as displayed in the new garment, she remarked to the girl:

"Julia, all I need now is a new face."

"'Deed, Mrs. Dyer," replied the colored girl, "I wouldn't worry if I was you. I saw a lady the other day no better lookin' than you are."—New York Press.

Time to Do Something.

Mrs. Mimms—Mary, it was 1 o'clock this morning when you got in. I heard you. Mary—Well, ma'am, if I was you I'd take something to make me sleep better. I took my shoes off down in the kitchen and didn't make no more noise than a cat would. I've been kind of worried about you for a good while."

Satisfied.

Mrs. Skowler—You will have to go, Mary. I can't put up with your impertinence any longer. I'm sorry I can't give you a recommendation. Mary—It's all right, mem. My leaving alive will be all the recommend I need.—Boston Transcript.

TRINITY'S TURKEY TREAT

Three Hundred and Forty People Enjoy Annual Supper.

TO BE REPEATED TONIGHT.

Chinese Laundry, Fancy, Cake and Other Tables Largely Patronized—Mrs. E. T. VanWinkle General Chairman.

No weather however bad can keep the people away from Trinity Reformed church when their annual turkey supper is announced to take place. Last night was no exception to the rule and the supper room in the lecture room of the church was filled with a hungry and anxious assemblage whose appetites were soon assuaged with the best supper yet arranged by the indefatigable women workers of the church.

No less than 340 suppers were served last night and the big hum of conversation which one heard was nothing but the praise being bestowed upon the excellent cooking and splendid service. The supper was served under the supervision of Mrs. E. T. VanWinkle and under the auspices of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of the church.

The supper was not the only thing to attract the diners. Side attractions which included a Chinese laundry, cake, candy, apron and fancy tables, all had their patrons and turned in comfortable sums to the treasury of the society. Particularly was this true of the laundry in charge of Miss Etta Raybert, assisted by Mrs. H. C. Van Emburgh and Mrs. C. M. Dolliver. The scheme was novel and brought results hardly anticipated by the women. Imitation laundry checks were freely distributed among the diners who were instructed to obtain their laundry at the booth for a nominal sum. The packages were worth all that was charged for them and every body including the "laundrymen" was pleased.

Assisting Mrs. Van Winkle, general chairman, were: Reception committee, Mrs. Eliza A. Parse, Mrs. William A. Woodruff, Mrs. Bergen D. Newell and Mrs. Henry VanName; supper room, Mrs. Anna E. Gillem, Mrs. Virginia Chickering, Mrs. Joseph Angerbauer, Mrs. Norman Sears, Mrs. P. K. Dilts, Mrs. Jesse Miller, Mrs. George W. Coles, Mrs. Frank E. Sowden, Mrs. C. W. Higgins, Mrs. Abram Van Cleef, Mrs. John L. Dolliver, Mrs. Van Nest, Mrs. John Ross, Mrs. G. Q. Dolliver and Mrs. Louis Neuman.

The cake table was attended by Mrs. Lafayette Rosenstiehl, Mrs. B. Frank Coriell, Mrs. William Addis, Mrs. J. C. VanDyke and Mrs. Philip Vroom; candy, Miss Minnie Williams, Miss Lillian A. Force, Mrs. Emma Smith and Mrs. James T. MacMurray; aprons, Mrs. William VanDeventer, Mrs. Edward J. Cooley, Mrs. Winifred Schomp; fancy table, Mrs. James C. Field and Mrs. Anna Daggett; cake and pie room, Mrs. R. N. Layton, Mrs. R. Stevens, Mrs. Helen Huff, Mrs. R. V. Kinney and Miss Isabelle Haff.

PUBLIC INSTALLATION OF ARCANUM OFFICERS

The first public installation of officers of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, was held last night, when the council entertained in addition to Grand Regent Theodore S. Class, of Westfield, and several other State officers, its women friends. During the evening, following the impressive installation ceremonies, there were excellent addresses by Grand Regent Class, Grand Deputy Anderson, Hugh A. Todd, George M. Christian and D. W. Littell.

A feature was the rendition* of selections on a phonograph by Mr. Glover, of this city.

The committee in charge of the affair comprised George M. Christian, chairman; Howard W. Satterfield, R. G. Hudson, Robert H. Lowry, A. I. Littell, William T. Carr, Theodore J. Shirley, Marion L. Bullock and L. V. P. Wilson.

MAYOR PUTS A STOP TO STREET LOITERING

Acting on the complaint of citizens, Mayor Moy this morning instructed the police to stop lointering on public thoroughfores. At certain points on Front street and Second street loafing has been allowed to exist for some time and it is to put an end to the practice that the mayor has taken prompt action. Some disappointment has been expressed by members of the force over the fact that it is improbable that the police board will act favorably on their petition for higher wages.

Setting at rest any doubts as to the Mayor's official relation to the police department, Mr. Moy explained today that by provision of the law he is executive head of the city and is therefore head of all departments including the police. In such capacitis he intends to conduct his administration. The Police Committee, of which Councilman Randolph is chairman, has only such authority in police matters as it exercises through its membership on the police board. The police board consists of the Mayor, President of the Common Council and the Councilmanic police committeemen. By virtue of his office, the Mayor is head of the Police Board.

THEY GET DAMAGES FROM AUTO OWNERS.

In the suit of Mrs. Philomena Vielberg and Louis Roeder against Mrs. Bertha Briggs and William Briggs, of Murray Hill, tried yesterday in the District Court before William Newcorn the complainants were awarded damages. Mrs. Vielberg received $100 and Roeder $25.

The suit was the outcome of an automobile accident in September last on the road between here and Scotch Plains. Mrs. Briggs' defense was that the steering gear of her car broke and she lost control.

Clever Show at Proctor's

"Mr. and Mrs. Robinson," is the title of a clever sketch offered at Proctor's theatre by a company of four. There are many clever and amusing situations. Robert's rat circus is one of the best novely animal acts presented in a long time. Miss Mildred Flora, a clever singing comedienne, and Victor, the boy ventriloquist, complete a fine bill.

Harry Feinberg Sells Out.

DEATH OF B. F. KRAFFERT

Passed Away Alone in His Room at Mt. Clemens, Mich., Sanitarium.

PNEUMONIA PROVED FATAL.

Retired Iron Merchant Had Gone West for Treatment for Rheumatism—He Leaves Two Children.

Benjamin F. Kraffert, aged about fifty-three years, who resided at Woodland avenue and Seventh street, for the past wto years, died on Wednesday in a sanitarium at Mt. Clemens, Mich., where he had gone for treatment for rheumatism with which he suffered a recent attack. He had been ill with a heavy cold, resembling grip, when rheumatism developed. Deciding to go to Mt. Clemens he got up from his sick bed a week ago today to make the trip.

Mr. Kraffert arrived at Mt. Clemens on Saturday. Friends here received a letter from him early in the week, stating that the trip had greatly tired him, but he thought he would improve. It is the opinion among friends here that Mr. Kraffert's death was due to pneumonia, which may have developed after exposing himself on the trip. He was found dead in his bed by one of the attaches of the institution.

Mr. Kraffert was an iron merchant for a great many years. He removed here from Titusville, Pa., two years ago, where he lived the greater part of his life. He was a personal and warm friend of Louis K. Hyde and Charles L. Hyde, both of whom resided at Titusville. He possessed a great many excellent qualities and was admired by those who knew him. After coming to Plainfield his wife, who had been an invalid for years, died, leaving him and a daughter, and a son, Franklin, aged about twelve years, who is a student at the Montclair Military Academy.

A year ago the daughter was married to George Heny, of Titusville, and she and her husband are now living in Ohio. While a resident here Mr. Kraffert attended St. Stephen's church. No particulars have been received regarding the funeral, but it it the belief that the remains will be taken to Titusville for burial.

SYSTEMATIC "KICKS" WIN, SAYS GOVERNOR

At a wefare conference in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium at Trenton last night, held in connection with the "Know Your City Week," now being conducted in Trenton, Governor Wilson made a brief address. In part he said:

"If people systematically kick they will get something.

"You are just as big as the things you do and as small as the things that you leave undone. The size of your life is the scale of your thinking. You should not be content with merely knowing your city, but should act upon this knowledge. Excellent as is Trenton, there is doubtless much room for improvement. I am honored to be called upon to take part in such a campaign as this, and I shall be glad to do my part, if not as a citizen, at least as a denizen of Trenton."

Ex-Judge Crane Very Ill.

Former Judge John William Crane is seriously ill at his residence in Union Township, just outside of Elizabeth. He has been confined to his bed for five days. He is seventy-six years old. Judge Crane is one of the best known men in Union county, where he was born and his father before him. He was appointed a Union county judge by the late Governor Werts and for years has been treasurer of the Union County Democratic executive committee. He runs a large farm in Union township and is engaged in the real estate business in Elizabeth.

Dr. Gesswein's Auto Damaged.

While Dr. C. A. Gesswein's automobile was standing in front of his office on Central avenue yesterday afternoon at 12:30, a car driven by a chauffeur for Mrs. E. Marsh, of West Seventh street, dashed around the corner and ran into the Doctor's car smashing the hood and one of the wheels. The accident was caused by the Marsh car skidding against the curb owing to wet pavement.

Mrs. Binn's Funeral.

The funeral of Mrs. Edith Ann Binn, who died Wednesday morning, will be held tonight at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Gates, of East Third street. Rev. F. D. Tildon will officiate and the service will be private. The body will be sent to Bordentown tomorrow for interment.

ANOTHER PLAYGROUND AT THE IRVING SCHOOL

At the meeting of the Playground Commission yesterday afternoon in the office of Mayor George W. V. Moy, it was decided to furnish the Irving school ground with apparatus for the children and it will be ready in all probability when the summer season sets in. It was also determined to open another ground as soon as a suitable one can be found.

The Mayor said in commenting upon the playground scheme that he is heartily in favor of it, and will do all in his power to aid in the establishment of ground. Stillman Field will probably be ready for the use of the city by May 30. Every effort is being made to have it ready for the opening on that date.

LOCAL MEN PURCHASE THE BEATON PROPERTY

*The former George A. Beaton pro*perty at Watchung and Hillside avenues, has been purchased by Clifford D. Manning and Watler F. Manning. They propose to make two dwellings of the present partially completed structure on the premises and divide the ground into lots. The place has a frontage of 600 feet on Hillside avenue and 265 feet on Watchung.

The property was originally bought several years ago by George A. Beaton, who resided at the time on West Seventh street. It was his intention to erect one of the handsomest residences in that part of the city and work was well underway when he met with business reverses. All operations were suspended and the place has since remained incomplete. The house was all but completed outside of the interior finishing. It is said that the deal resulted in a loss to Mr. Beaton of $20,000.

COMMITTEE DECIDES TO OIL THE STREETS

The Councilmanic street committee held its first meeting of the year, last night, to discuss plans for street and sewer work. Reports of progress were received regarding the present sewer work underway in the west end, and that the work on the pumping station being erected at West Fourth street and Monroe avenue, was being pushed. It is reported that the station will be completed within two months, especially because the contractor is not meeting with as much trouble from water conditions as was expected on Randolph road. Contractor Christie, of Newark, is in charge of the work.

There was also a discussion at to macadamizing work this summer. It is the purpose of the committee to repair a number of streets and put them in first-class condition. No doubt the plan of oiling the streets as a dust preventative, will be continued, it having given general satisfaction. During the meeting, Mayor Moy dropped in for a few minutes, but did not take any part in the matters under discussion. The budget will be taken up at another meeting.

BEREAN STUDY CLASS ELECTS NEW OFFICERS.

HIGHWAYMEN ON TROLLEY

Hold up Conductor Holland at Revolver Point and Get Day's Receipts.

WHILE CAR SPEEDS ALONG.

Robbers Make Off in Woods Near Roselle and Leave no Trace—Only Meagre Description is Obtained.

Two highwaymen held up a trolley car conductor at the point of their revolvers on Westfield avenue, Roselle, last night, securing the days receipts, $25 from the conductor James P. Holland and nearly frightening him to death. After securing the money they jumped from the car and disappeared in the bushes. The holdup occurred while the car was in motion and motorman James J. Reilly knew nothing of the occurrence until Holland pulled the bell and stopped the car.

This is the first case of the kind occurring in Union county in twenty years and was so successful that but meagre descriptions of the two robbers were obtained by the conductor. One, he declared, wore a light overcoat and light soft hat and was about five feet and a half tall, while his companion was dressed in dark clothing and wore a derby hat. Neither was over 25 years old, but both appeared to be adept hands at the business.

The men took seats in the car at Aldene just as ordinary passengers would, and there was nothing about their appearance to indicate that they were desperadoes. After passing the line between Roselle and Aldene, the two men went to the rear platform presumably to smoke, but after closing the door behind them they pulled revolvers and holding them at Holland's head demanded all the money he had. Holland had no alternative but to hand over the day's receipts.

The holdup was reported to the Elizabeth police and immediate search was begun along the line for the two men, but up to this afternoon no trace of them had been discovered.

ALLEGED PICKPOCKETS TAKEN INTO CUSTODY

James Murray, twenty-eight years old, who says he lives in Binghamton, N. Y., and Joseph Kerr, of New York city, were taken from the 1:30 eastbound trolley at Park avenue and Front street today on complaint of James Patterson, of this city, who accuses the men of being implicated in robbing him of his pocketbook containing between twenty-five and thirty dollars.

Patrolman Messler took both men to police headquarters, where they were thoroughly searched. Neither the money nor the pocketbook was found, but the pair were locked up for a hearing tomorrow morning. It is believed by the police that there were other confederates of Murray and Kerr on the car and that the pocketbook was passed along until the one getting it jumped to the street and made a safe getaway.

THE WEATHER.

Rain tonight or Saturday.

Eckert; vice-president, Charles Rice; treasurer, Harry Anderson; secretary, Harry Shiley. Calendars can be had upon application to Charles G. August, 935 West Fourth street.

Before adjournment last night refreshments were served and a smoker enjoyed.

MOVING PICTURE ACTOR TOOK IMPROMPTU PLUNGE

"Sammie" Rothenberg, Plainfield's well known diminutive actor, returned to the city, yesterday after a three months' engagement with the Gnome Motion Picture Company at Nepara Park, N. Y., near Syracuse. With forty other people he posed for moving picture films, acting various parts for the screen comedies and dramas. The Plainfielder participated mostly in Lilliputian roles, being but four feet five inches in height. His partner as a rule was Miss Addie Franck, a tiny actress of thirty-two inches stature. The two will probably go into vaudeville as soon as their contract with the picture company expires as the present rest is only due to bad weather, making outdoor work impossible.

Mr. Rothenberg came home with a severe cold the result of an accident while enacting a scene. He was supposed to be a cave dweller pursued by hunters and had to run over an old tree trunk spaning a brook. in his hurry to get acress he made a misstep and fell into the stream, presenting a good scene but one not intended for the story. *Bathing in a New York State stream at this sea*son of the year is not a warm proposition and when "Sammy" was fished out his teeth chattered like castanets. He was wrapped up in blankets but the cold still serves to remind him of his icy plunge. Roth*enberg is known to the stage world* as Sam Woods.

SCHWARTZMAN WANTED TO DROP HIS COMPLAINT

When Judge William G. DeMeza took his seat this morning in the city court to hear the case of the State against Abraham Schwartzman and Charles Kurtzman who were charged by Max Schwartzman with conspiring to defraud him, the latter caused a sudden postponement of the trial by calling Counsellor William A. Coddington into the case rather abruptly after having notified his first lawyer, Robert Newton Crane, that he had determined not to prosecute the two alleged conspirators.

Judge DeMeza was rather surprised at the turn of affairs and sought an explanation. Judge Newcorn, for his clients, A Schwartzman and Kurtzman, said that Mr. Crane was not on hand because the complainant in the case had so notified him, but that he did not propose to submit to any such summary action as his clients had been publicly accused as criminals He said he thought the case should be brought up again in the regular way and his clients receive the fullest vindication and as publicly as they had been accused.

Judge DeMeza agreed with Judge Newcorn and set the case down for another hearing on Monday morning, ordering Max Schwartzman to have his lawyer in court and the case ready.

LOSES HACK LICENSE FOR SHOOTING CRAP.

For playing craps and fighting in the cellar of the North avenue station, William Bird, William Clarkson and Lemuel Donaldson, were arraigned yesterday afternoon before Judge William G. DeMeza. Clarkson and Bird were fined three dollars each and Donaldson was mulcted $5 besides having his license as cab driver revoked. Donaldson was convicted of fighting last week and warned at the time that a repetition of the offense would cost him his license.

John C. Crater.

John C. Crater, formerly of this city, whose critical illness was reported a few days ago, died last night at 5:50 at his home, 121 New street, Newark. He had been ill a long time. ## MARTINE'S CREDENTIALS

Governor's Committee to Present Certificate to Senator-Elect Today.

AN INFORMAL CEREMONY.

Escort Committee Appointed by Martine—Fowler, Haskill and Others Send Congratulations.

United States Senator-elect James E. Martine, this afternoon will receive the certificate of election as a successor to John Kean, beginning March 4. The certificate was properly engrossed in the Secretary of State's office yesterday and Governor Wilson signed it, as required by law, just before he left the State House for the day.

The parchment on which was inscribed the authority for Mr. Martine to become a member of the United *States Senator will be pre*sented to him at his bed side at his home in Kensington avenue, where he is now convalescing from a severe attack of the grippe, by a delegation of four Democrats selected by Governor Wilson.

They are Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to the Governor; Judge Mark A. Sullivan, of the Court of Errors and Appeals; Brigadier-General D. F. Collins, Democratic State Committeeman from Union county, and William W. St. John, who personally induced Mr. Martine to become a candidate for Senate in the direct primaries, and who, together with the other three Democrats has been active in aiding the campaign in favor of legislative acquiescence in the direct primary principle.

It was first intended that Senator-elect Martine should receive his certificate of election at the State House, but on account of the fact that he will not be able to be about until the latter part of next week, Governor Wilson decided to send it to him at once in the manner described.

The Governor's committee will be met at the North Avenue station on the arrival of the 5:18 train this afternoon by friends of Mr. Martine, selected by himself, who will act as an escort. They include Mayor G. W. V. Moy, A. H. Atterbury, LeRoy J. Ellis, former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, James F. Buckle, William L. Saunders, John A. Gaffney and David T. Kenney. The party will be driven at once to the Martine home.

Late yesterday afternoon, Mr. Martine sent a reply to the telegram of congratulation received from former United States Senator James Smith, Jr., "I thank You for your good wishes," wired Martine, "and am happy to say I am rapidly approaching normal health. So far as the contest just ended is concerned, it was not a struggle between individuals for the attainment of an office, but for the preservation of a principle greater than either of us."

Hundreds of letters and many telegams continue to be received by the Senator, but it will be some days before he can go through them all much less answer them. Today, Mr. Martine is considerably improved. He is much vexed that he cannot get about for staying abed wears on him.

One letter of congratulation which particularly pleased the senator was from Congressman Charles N. Fowler. There were others from former Governor Haskill, of Oklahoma; E. S. Murphine, of Lincoln, Neb.; President of the State Senate, E. R. Ackerman, of this city; Judge Collins, of Brooklyn; Rev. P. J. Smith, of Jersey City, formerly of this city; State Senator Silzer, of Middlesex county and Horace F. Drake, of Washington, D. C.

United States Senator-elect Martine will take his seat in the Upper Federal House on March 4 next. The term is for a period of six years, and the salary is $7,500 per annum, with an additional allowance of twenty cents per mile for traveling to and from Washington. To Mr. Martine it will mean an equivalent of $10,000 a year for six years, or $60,000. He is also given a liberal allowance for a secretary. Governor Wilson's term is for three years. He receives a salary of $10,000 a year, but is not allowed any fees as perquisites whatever. Senator Frank O. Briggs, the other New Jersey representative in the Upper House, was elected in 1907, and his term therefore does not expire until 1913.

GIVES $50,000 TO UNIVERSITY.

Mrs. Florence O. R. Lang, wife of Henry Lang, of 99 South Fullerton avenue, Montclair, has presented $50,000 to Cornell University for the erection of a building in which to house shops in connection with the Sibley College of Mechanical Engineering. The gift by Mrs. Lang was made in memory of her father, Jasper Raymond Rand; her uncle, Addison Crittenden Rand, and her brother, Jasper Raymond Rand, Jr. The latter was a graduate of Sibley College of the university, class of 1897. The father and uncle were the owners of the Rendrock Powder Company and the founders of the Rand Drill Works.

The Rand family located in Montclair many years ago. One of the most beautiful parks in the mountain, Rand Park, was given to the municipality by Jasper Rand. A carved stone seat in front of the First Congregational church is a testimonial of the liberality of his widow, herself since deceased. The $20,000 swimming pool at the Military Academy, with other gifts toward educational work, were made by an aunt of Mrs. Lang now residing in California.

Nearly two years ago Mrs. Lang gave $50,000, now in the hands of the Montclair Art Association, to build a combined art gallery and museum. This structure will be erected in the near future, as soon as a site for its location can be selected. It will be known as the Rand Museum and one room will be set apart as a testimonial to Mrs. Rand, Mrs. Lang's mother.

The new building at Cornell will be of reinforced concrete and will be located east of the present shops of the college. Work on its construction will be begun as soon as plans are completed. This will be the first of three buildings which the university trustees consider essential to the development of Sibley College.

SPENT $200 TRYING TO PAY DEBT OF $10.

During the past seven years the Postoffice Department has spent $200 in a fruitless attempt to pay a debt of $10. The creditor has not been located and the officials of the department have no reason to believe that he will be found in the next seven years, but they will keep the search going.

George W. Weart, postmaster of Deal, N. J., in 1903, paid the government $10 to make good the loss of a package. Two years later the package was found, and an investigation showed that it never arrived at Deal. In the meantime Mr. Weart died.

Then the long chase started. His only heir were two sons, both of whom had gone west. James T. Weart, the older son, was traced through the middle west, but all trace of him was lost at Bakersville, Cal. Another son, George S. Weart, was believed to have located in Butte, Mont., during the latter part of December, but the letter came back unopened.

John Ward, Son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ward, of Clinton avenue, is ill with an attack of scarlet fever. Dr. F. J. Hughes is in attendance.

GRADUATE SCHOOL TO BE READY SEPT. 1912.

The settlement of the details of the erection of the Graduate School at Princeton has been submitted to a sub-committee composed of H. B. Thompson, of Wilmington, Del., chairman of the committee on grounds and buildings of the trustees; Moses Taylor Pyne, chairman of the committee on the Graduate School, and Dean Andrew F. West, of the Graduate School. It is now expected that work will be commenced in the early spring and the contracts will call for the completion of the building, including Thomson Graduate School, the Proctor memorial dining hall and the Cleveland memorial tower, by September, 1912.

The new Graduate School will be purely residential, and while it will not be compulsory that graduate students should reside in Thomson College, it will be found very attractive to do so. Contrary to the theory which Dean West has advocated for a number of years, there will be no separation of the graduate students from the undergraduates of the university.

Mrs. Theodore J. Shirley, of Orchard place, has recovered from an attack of the grip.

Walter Zimmer, of Manning avenue, has returned from a visit with relatives in Brooklyn.

Louis VanZandt, of Fairview avenue, who has been on a business trip in the west, has returned home.

Jack Cannon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Cannon, of Somerset street, has recovered from a recent illness.

SPORTS
News and Notes

BASEBALL.

Charles W. Murphy, president of the Chicago Nationals, has started southward, his destination being San Antonio, where he will spend a few days with President John T. Brush, of the Giants. From San Antonio Murphy will go to New Orleans, to frame up hotel accommodations for the spring trip of the Cubs. After getting through his labors in New Orleans, the L. P. will come to New York to attend the National League meeting which probably will be held on February 14.

Ed Barrow, president of the Eastern League, has picked his umpires for next season and will make their names public at the schedule meeting to be held in Baltimore on February 6. President Lynch, of the National League, also has decided on his arbitrators for the 1911 campaign, and, like Barrow, will keep their names a secret until his organization meets.

Fred Lake, manager of the Boston Nationals last year, severed his connection with that team last night. He has accepted terms from President Hedges of the St. Louis Americans to act as scout for the Browns. Lake's contract with the Boston Nationals was satisfactorily adjusted. He had another year, under salary of $5,000, with the Boston team when Fred Tenney was chosen to succeed him a short time ago.

First Baseman Peter Noonan, of the Wilkes-Barre team, may be sold to the Lowell team. Manager Clymer, of Wilkes-Barre, having made an offer to Manager Gray, of Lowell. In case Noonan is sold it is expected that Arndt, who was recently bought from Providence, will be used on first base.

Manager Charlie Carr, of the Utica New York State League team, has a good chance for landing Joe Londrigan, the former Penn player, who was loaned to the "Utes" part of last year by Jersey City, of the Eastern League. Manager Carr is anxious to get Londrigan and has made Manager Ryan a good offer for him.

Clarke Griffith, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, will go to Boston on a personally conducted tour to secure the signature of the recalcitrant Eddie Grant, the late Phillie third sacker. Grant has steadfastly refused to sign, but Griffith believes he can argue Eddie into a contract. Eddie is a lawyer, too.

The signed contract of another recruit to the Boston Red Sox today was filed away in the archives, bringing the total number up to twenty-one. It was from Pitcher George Pierce, from Dixie land, who pitched sixteen victories, lost nineteen and tied two last year.

Morgan Evans, of Olyphant, who played professional ball in New York, State part of last season, has signed to cover third base for Lowell, of the New England League, next season.

GOLF.

Leighton Calkins, president of the Plainfield Country Club, takes exception to a recent statement by John M. Ward, relative to the much discussed question of golf, threshed out at the meeting of the United States Golf Association. He says that Mr. Ward's statements are misleading, in that he says that as a delegate from the Garden City Golf Club, he was under instructions to bring about the retention of the Schnectady putter. Mr. Calkins challenges that assertion, claiming that Mr. Ward was under instructions to oppose any amendment of Article 10 of the by-laws. He further claims that the Garden City club instructions were silent on the Schnectady putter.

"Now, what happened at the annual meeting," says Mr. Calkins. "Bylaw 10 was amended contrary to the wishes of the Garden City club and a few other clubs. Of course, Mr. Ward followed instructions and voted against this great reform, which finally, is an accomplished fact. Hereafter we do not play golf by the St. Andrews rules. If St. Andrews should amend the rules tomorrow the change would not be in force in this country. We now have our own rules—namely, the St. Andrews revision of 1908 which we approved; in fact, which we participated in making. We have now adopted that revision as our own code, and unless we amend it of our volition there will be no further change made."

Change in Billing "Foreign Messages."

FOLLOWING the suggestion of many of our subscribers, that bills for tolls, or "foreign messages," be rendered as promptly as possible, we are adopting a new method of billing for such messages. Heretofore charges for "foreign messages" sent during any month have appeared on the bill for the second month following, or, some thirty days after the "foreign messages" were sent. After a careful study of the whole accounting problem, a change has been decided upon, by which the billing of "foreign messages" will be brought up to within ten days of the end of the month during which messages were sent.

To make this change effective at once, and to bring the billing up to date, the bills to be sent out February 1st will carry charges for "foreign messages" for the month of December, under the old method, and up to and including January 20th, under the new method. Subsequent bills will cover charges for "foreign messages" from the 21st of one month up to and including the 20th of the next month. For instance, the March 1st bill will include such charges from January 21st up to and including February 20th.

In addition to bills being rendered as promptly as possible after the "foreign messages" are sent, a memorandum will accompany the bill showing the dates on which the "foreign messages" were sent. The additional data will aid the subscriber in checking his accounts.

Denver, Brooklyn, New York, Newark

A Denver woman, unable to match a certain piece of goods in her city, sent East to her sister, who lives in Brooklyn, and requested her to try and secure the material for her.

The Brooklyn woman first tried the Brooklyn stores and then the Manhattan shops. Failing in her mission she came to Newark and finally ended up at the Bamberger store.

She found an exact match for her goods, and, what is more, our price was exactly thirty cents a yard less than she expected to pay.

The fact of the Brooklyn matron finding just what she wanted here, after exhausting both the Brooklyn and the New York stores, did not impress us very strongly, because we have experiences of this kind every now and then. It was what this woman SAID that pleased us most. We'll repeat it:

"I've always done my trading in New York and Brooklyn, but I have been treated with so much courtesy here today, and I find that your values are so much better than I have been used to, that I think I shall do at least part of my buying at Bamberger's hereafter."

Grief over the death of her husband resulted in the death Wednesday of Mrs. Kate Smith at 210 Erie street, Camden. She was seventy-four years of age.

Thomas W. Sayre, son of Pilot Louis Sayre, of Cape May, has received his commission as postmaster of West Cape May and has taken charge. He was high man in the civil service examination.

Fifty residents of Midland Park Borough met Wednesday night and organized a board of trade. Forty-one signed the membership roll, officers were elected and committees were appointed.

Accused of assault and battery on his white wife, a bride of a few months, William Martin, colored, of Spruce street, was committed to jail in default of bail from the Camden Police Court Wednesday.

By a majority of thirty-three the voters of Haddon Heights Tuesday evening decided to build a thirteen-room additional to the present High School building. The election carried with it a $30,000 bond issue.

Rev. R. C. Walker, who has been preaching in the First Presbyterian church at Greenloch, has tendered his resignation, owing to ill health and a desire for more time to pursue his post-graduate course at Princeton.

Supreme Court Justice Garrison, in Camden, Wednesday, assigned lawyers Patrick H. Harding and Howard L. Miller as counsels for Clem Ridgeway, colored, who was indicted for the murder of Herbert W. Hibbs, a former city fireman.

A fall of thirty feet from a battleship at the New York Shipbuilding plant, Camden, is likely to prove fatal to Arnold Pascoe, twenty-two years old, of 434 Viola street. At the Cooper Hospital it was found he had a fractured skull, a compound fracture of an arm and internal injuries.

A trolley car of the Riverside Traction Company, going at a forty-mile-an-hour clip, jumped the tracks on a straight road at Beverly Tuesday night and ran upon the sidewalk and into the lawn of A. E. Russ, where a stout tree stopped it and demolished the front. William Parsons and a foreign passenger were slightly injured.

Relatives of Santa Elie, of Johnstown, Pa., who died from asphyxiation in an Atlantic City hotel, are grieving because they could not attend the funeral or claim the body because of their poverty. They were advised by the police that the body was again identified by residents of Hammonton, who say that it is the corpse of Leonore Capuccio, of that place.

Driving directly in front of a Reading train at Arkansas avenue, Atlantic City, late Wednesday afternoon, Morris Gots, of 2305 Baltic avenue, was hurled from his wagon as the train struck it and thrown ten feet to the side of the tracks, where he lay as if dead. The wagon was reduced to kindling wood, but Gots sustained only a few bruises, and after he had received treatment at the City Hospital he was sent to his home.

After a mysterious absence of ten days from his home and baking business in Collingswood, John Weissner was taken home Tuesday night by his wife, who went to Washington in answer to a telegram from him to meet him at the railroad station there. After waiting half an hour in suspense, Mrs. Weissner recognized her husband entering, and there was a tearful reunion. Wessner said he did not realize where he was until he came to himself at the capital.

From figures submitted from the county officers in Gloucester, under the salary system, the clerk's office alone shows a gain. The cash receipts in the sheriff's office were $2,394.31, while the salaries and other expenses were $4,623.66, showing a deficit of $2,229.35. In the surrogate's office the receipts were $464.77, as against $4,738.57 for salaries and other expenses. The cash receipts in the clerk's office were $7,927.57, and the expenses $7,419.33. As a whole, there is a deficit of only $132.93.

A report that Carl, their eight-year old son, had been killed while sledding shocked Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Thompson, of Paulsboro, Wednesday afternoon, and Mrs. Thompson was almost in collapse, when the boy, alive and well, dashed into the house. He had been tumbled off his sled and rolled down an embankment, but was not hurt. While he was at supper the family physician and an undertaker appeared at the house. Efforts are being made to locate the author of the report.

SENATE NIGHT SESSION PLAN IS ABANDONED.

An effort to start a movement to do away with night sessions of the Senate has been abandoned because of lack of support. Senator John D Prince, majority leader in the upper branch, was father of the plan and worked hard for it, but he found himself almost alone in the effort.

Opposition to the plan came chiefly from business men in the Senate who look upon the night session as just so much time saved. They say that a large amount of business can be transacted Monday nights and that without this evening session another whole day each week would probably have to be devoted to their legislative duties.

MIDDLESEX TAX BOARD MAKES $8,000 REDUCTIONS

The Middlesex County Board for the Equalization of Taxes visited Dunellen in a body, yesterday, for the purpose of viewing the property of the Equator Park land company, the assessment of which had been protested. The board went over the premises in company with assessor John H. L. Peters, Mayor William Sanford, Postmaster Henry Garretson and W. S. Frederick. They afterward held an executive session in Taylor's Hotel and voted to reduce the assessment from $36,000 to $28,000.

The property was formerly known as the Sanford farm and is understood to have been bought by the complaining company for $40,000. The member alleged that they had paid more than the place was worth and that it should not be considered as lots as had been done. The appeal was the first that has been made against Mr. Peters since the tax board was organized.

WEST END HOTEL BURNS. LOSS PLACED AT $40,000

The West End Hotel at Asbury Park, was partly destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The fire, which is believed to have been caused by a defective flue, burned the entire fifth story before it was checked. At one time the Ocean Hotel, adjoining, in Asbury avenue, appeared to be doomed, but aid was summoned from neighboring towns and the firemen by hard work were able to confine the blaze to narrow limits. The wind was light, a condition that contributed to save the Coleman House and several nearby hotels.

The West End Hotel was conducted by Mrs. F. L. TenBroeck, who had just completed arrangements to lease it to a New York man. The property is valued at $85,000 and the fire loss is estimated at $40,000.

At midnight Joseph Ten Broeck, son of the proprietor detected smoke. He aroused the family and a general alarm was sent to the Fire Department. For a time there was a constant ringing of alarms, which brought the departments of Ocean Grove, West Grove and Bradley Beach.

Streams were poured on the Ocean Hotel from the West End porch. Other streams were sent up from the courtyard in the rear, thus preventing the spread of the flames down Kingsley street. In the effort to confine the fire the entire hotel was flooded. It is believed the damage can be repaired in time to open the West End as usual for the summer season.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY

The second presentation of "Madame Jarley's Wax Works," in the Presbyterian chapel, last night, was again greeted by a capacity attendance. The performance moved off even better than when first given and the new scenes were warmly received. The closing set, a representation of Peary and Cook discovering the North pole, was very good. After the explorers had planted the national colors the drapery fell back and the Godess of Liberty was revealed. The participants then sang "America" in chorus. among the specialty numbers between scenes were mandolin and guitar duets by Mr. and Miss Frescion. The promoters of the entertainment are more than pleased with the results and now have another performance in view. The Ladies' Aid Society of the First Baptist church, have asked that the "wax works" be given there some time next month and it has been acted upon favorably. The date will be set within a week or two.

The contract case of the Dunellen Coal and Supply Company against H. C. # PACT WITH CANADA TO LOWER LIVING COST

Urging immediate ratification of the proposed tariff reciprocity treaty with Canada, President Taft late yesterday sent to Congress a draft of the document and an executive message.

The basis of the tariff treaty with Canada is in part as follows:

Reciprocal lists on leading food products such as wheat and other grains, dairy products, fresh fruits and vegetables, fish of all kinds, eggs and poultry, sheep and other live animals.

Also certain commodities now free in one country are to be made free by the other, such as cottonseed oil, by Canada, and rough lumber, by the United States. Tin and terne plates, now dutiable in both countries, are made mutually free.

Mutually reduced identical rates on secondary food products such as fresh meats, canned meats, bacon and hams, lard and lard compounds, canned vegetables, flour, cereal preparations and other foodstuffs, partly manufactured.

Mutually reduced rates on a list of manufactured commodities, which includes motor vehicles, cutlery, clocks, and watches, sanitary fixtures, satchels and similar leather goods, plate glass, brass band instruments, printing ink and miscellaneous articles. Agricultural implements, such as plows, harvesters, threshing machines and drills are reduced by Canada to the United States rates.

Governor Wilson, who was made acquainted with the fact that the baby had been given his name, yesterday, acknowledged the honor in the following letter:—

"My Dear Mr. Johnson:—I am greatly complimented by the honor you have done me in naming your son after me, and I can only express the hope that nothing will ever occur in my life which will make you regret having given him my name. I hope that I shall live to make his acquaintance. Cordially and sincerely yours,

TINY BIT OF GROUND.

What May Be Done With a Plot Twenty by Fifty Feet if Well Cared For.

A space 20 by 50 feet may under intensive culture be made to yield fresh vegetables for a small family through half the year. With 40 by 50 feet or 50 by 100 there can be a garden spelling riotous plenty.

Have the spading done as early as possible, use thoroughly rotted manure and supplement it with some good commercial fertilizer, either broadcasted and raked in or put in hills or drills.

It is a waste of seed, strength and time to plant a garden in poor soil. The seed will come up, the spindling plants will be harder to work than if they were luxuriant, and the resultant crop will be mostly conspicuous by its absence. So, if it be impossible to do more, make small rich beds, four feet wide and as long as the manure holds out, and sow them crosswise with such things as radishes, lettuce, cress, parsley, beets and onions. Make the rows a foot to eighteen inches apart or sow the radishes broadcast. Lettuce also yields more for broadcast sowing. Pull out the thriftiest as soon as edible and leave the rest to grow. Radish tops make excellent greens, something better flavored than mustard. By sowing thickly you can have dishes of greens.

Say the garden is 40 by 50 feet, this is something what the planting of it should be: Dwarf early peas, medium early and late peas, beets, early and later; beans in succession, including bush limas; carrots, radishes, tomatoes, cucumbers, peppers. Do not adventure upon corn unless it be sweet corn planted on the pea space as a second crop, to come in just before frost. Make an asparagus bed all across one end of the plot, setting two-year-old roots and fertilizing the bed heavily in early summer just after cutting ceases.

Peas are so hardy they may be planted before snow is past, provided, of course, the ground is right when they go in. Make it fine and light, cover the seed at least three inches deep, then tramp the earth over them, setting the feet so one track touches the other. A quart of seed will sow a hundred feet of drill the proper thickness. An ounce of beet seed will sow the same row length.—Circle Magazine.

A MINISTER'S STORY.

It Didn't Have the Intended Effect Upon the Congregation.

It is said that a New England minister once told the following story just before the collection was taken up:

"I have heard of a man, prosperous and well to do, who went to church one Sunday and put a cent—just a plain copper cent—in the collection box.

"On the way home he was overtaken by a sudden heavy shower and, having no umbrella, crawled into a hollow log by the roadside to keep himself dry until the downpour was over.

"Soon the log began to swell, and the wetter it got the more it swelled until the sides finally closed in on the prosperous citizen and held him in a grip like a vise.

"The rain ceased, but the unfortunate man was unable to move hand or foot. He shouted for help, but no one heard him. He was about to give up in despair when he suddenly thought of the cent he had dropped into the collection box that day, and it made him feel so mean and small that he crawled right out of the log without any further trouble.

"Now, if you expect to get caught in a shower and be obliged to take refuge in a hollow log on the way home, by all means put a cent in the contribution basket! If you don't anticipate a crisis of that sort—well, you will know what to do when the basket is passed."

The minister expected a shower of silver and bills to follow this story, but unfortunately just as the collection began a black cloud passed overhead, it suddenly began to sprinkle, and the pennies fairly rained into the contribution basket. Only one quarter, a solitary dime and a lone nickel were found among the coppers, and they got in before the shower began.

The congregation, it seems, had all left their umbrellas at home, and they were not taking any chances.—New York Times.

Got the Number.

Police Captain—You say that an automobile containing several persons sped along the street and struck down an old man? New Officer—Yis, sor. # CUPID'S PIPES

By MARION DEXTER

[Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Jan Vanderstreet was without doubt and by unanimous consent, especially his own, the leading citizen of the little painted village of Dykheld.

Therefore when he imparted to his fellow citizens the information that he had bought a large tract of land in America, where fortunes were to be made in an incredible hurry, half a hundred very substantial and phlegmatic Hollanders marshaled their families after grave deliberation and embarked with him, after selling their queer little painted houses and tulip gardens and cows with true Dutch thrift.

Jan Vanderstreet took with him his wonderful collection of pipes, famed throughout all Gelderland and even beyond that beautiful district. He also took with him what he valued almost as much as his pipes—his very buxom and still blooming wife, his blooming daughter, Ankie, and his blooming orphaned niece, Johanna de Koop.

The only member of the party of Holland adventurers who was not truly substantial, according to sound Dutch standards, was Dirk Van Pelt. Mynheer Vanderstreet had frowned on his admission as a member of the solemn exodus. But Dirk had cunningly used such un-Hollandlike haste in putting his entire patrimony of $1,000 into the speculation that he had an interest in it before the more deliberate mynheer knew it.

Jan Vanderstreet did not like this at all. The trouble was that Dirk was altogether too fond of Ankie. If the broad shouldered, sturdy, handsome youth had only exhibited enough sense to be fond of some one not in the Vanderstreet family the mynheer might have felt quite glad to have him in the party, for Dirk was not at all disagreeable to anybody, with his kind smile and his readiness to help every one who needed it.

Mynheer Vanderstreet determined to keep close watch during the voyage. But what could one do on shipboard? Could a worthy Dutchman of five and sixty be expected to go on guard over his daughter when all the men folks were smoking their pipes on deck, telling tales of the past and speculating about the future? Truly not.

The chaperonage of Ankie was therefore left to her mother. But even on shipboard that industrious Dutch housewife could not be idle, and when one has a huge stocking and a ball of yarn, also a set of knitting needles, in hand it is not always convenient to follow a will-o'-the-wisp of a girl.

Besides, Johanna was always with her cousin, and lovemaking when a third person is present is not so easy to carry on. At least so argued Mistress Vanderstreet, forgetting that there is a language of the eye which expresses as clearly as speech what is in one's heart and that a pressure of the hand may convey an assurance of love just as plainly as if one said aloud, "I love you."

Although Dirk had little opportunity of telling Ankie of his love by word of mouth, that he was her devoted slave and wished for no greater happiness than to call her his wife, Ankie knew what was in his heart, because she returned his love.

By the end of the voyage Dirk knew that her heart was in his keeping, and he determined to wrest from the soil of the prairie a living that would entitle him to old Vanderstreet's respect.

Busy days followed the arrival of the Hollanders in the little Iowa settlement. Ground was broken, teams purchased, grain sowed and houses erected.

The Vanderstreet residence was the most pretentious in the place, but the cottage built by Dirk Van Pelt was as pretty a little Dutch home as any romantic girl would wish.

Vines were planted and soon grew about the porch, a bed of tulips flaunted gayly colored blossoms in the front yard, and a kitchen garden flourished in the rear.

Things soon prospered with Dirk and after six months of anxious waiting he ventured to call on Jan Vanderstreet to ask for the hand of his daughter. The mynheer, with unusual promptness, immediately gave Dirk to understand that he wished to hear no more of the matter and very politely intimated that the doors of the Vanderstreet residence would be closed thenceforth to him.

Disappointed, but not discouraged, Dirk went slowly home, vowing to himself with genuine Holland determination that he would never give up the girl he loved.

His resolution was strengthened by the sight of Ankie standing at the window holding out a letter, which she dropped and he picked up.

The letter told him that she would be his, with or without her father's blessing, and bade him have patience.

Dirk continued to work his little place industriously, hoping to hear from Ankie. But three weeks elapsed before he had an opportunity of talking with her. He left her presence, feeling much encouraged, and fell asleep that night more hopeful. He was awakened from sweet dreams of his love by the cry of fire.

Throwing on his clothes, he rushed from the house. The town was already aroused, and down the streets the people came running in all stages of dress, the clatter of their wooden shoes making as much noise as the modern fire engine.

"It is Jan Vanderstreet's!" some one screamed. "The place is doomed!"

On hearing these words Dirk ran faster than before and outstripped the crowd. When he reached the house he found the family coming out, laden with plunder, and heard Mistress Vanderstreet exclaim: "No more must we go back! It is not safe, and it is better to lose one's goods than one's life!"

"But my pipes! My precious pipes!" cried old Jan, all his phlegmatic restfulness gone. "I must get them!"

His wife seized him firmly by the arm.

"That you shall not do. Everything is afire. I will not let you risk your life for a set of worthless pipes."

"Worthless pipes!" thundered Jan. "How dare you speak so? They are a part of my life. I have been collecting them all my life long, until now more than a hundred hang in my rack. And must I lose them all because of your hard headedness? Let me go, I say; let me go!"

He struggled wildly in her grasp, but it was in vain. Mistress Vanderstreet was a very strong and a nobly determined woman and held him in so firm a grip he could do naught but writhe and groan.

Dirk Van Pelt had a great emotion and reached a great determination with an almost American swiftness. He knew that the rafters of the blazing house would fall in soon—might tumble in crimson ruin at any moment. But not in vain did he have in his veins the blood of the wonderful race that cut the dikes and drowned their beloved land rather than yield it to the invaders.

He went to a tank of water and wet his coat. Throwing it over his head, he plunged into the burning house, not heeding the shrill cry of distress which issued from the lips of the trembling Ankie.

Five minutes of dreadful suspense followed, during which the rafters fell in and sent the sparks flying upward in a mad shower. Surely no one could live in such a place. Ankie, moaning piteously, sank to the ground, heedless of the crowd of spectators, and burst out into wild weeping.

Suddenly a shout of joy arrested her attention, and, sitting up, she saw through a mist of tears the form of Dirk issuing from the burning house. He staggered like a drunken man under the weight of a huge rack which held the precious pipes, not one of which was missing.

Straight to the man who had refused him his daughter's hand stumbled Dirk Van Pelt. Then as old Jan took the burden from him the young man fell senseless at his feet.

When he opened his eyes, Jan Vanderstreet was standing by him, tears streaming down his cheeks. He took Dirk's hand, saying brokenly: "A house one can soon acquire, but such a treasure of pipes—ah, that takes a very lifetime to acquire. Such a deed as yours, Dirk, is worthy of any reward. What can I do to repay you?"

Raising himself on his elbow, Dirk summoned Ankie, who was hovering near. Then, with a determined glance, he signified to her father what reward he wished.

"So," said Jan slowly, "you still want Ankie? I have already told you she was not for you, but—take her, Dirk Van Pelt. She is yours. Ah, what a collection of pipes! What coloring! What noble bowls and what grand stems!"

"Ankie is worth all the pipes that ever were made or ever will be made," protested the happy lover, holding her hand tightly in his own and gazing adoringly into her tender blue eyes.

"Perhaps so, perhaps so," muttered Jan absently, "but such pipes as mine"— He turned and summoned a man to help him carry the rack of matchless pipes to a place of safety and left the lovers still looking happily into each other's eyes.

Arbitrated.

Conversation among travelers is frequently absurdly trivial. After several days together, as on shipboard, every one is idle and talks about the most unimportant matters with the deepest interest. R. H. Milligan in a book entitled "The Jungle Folk of Africa" recounts with what complacency the conclusion was reached that the thirteen colonies should never have rebelled and that the blame was all on the side of England.

One man, moreover, disclosed the fact that he always wore safety pins instead of garters and descanted upon his preference with such enthusiasm that he made at least one convert.

One night we put in practice the principle of arbitration, of which we were all adherents. An argument had arisen among us as to which was the more simple of the two currency systems, dollars and cents or pounds, shillings and pence. At last, the captain arriving, we decided to refer the matter to him and to surrender our judgment to his arbitration.

The captain, an Englishman of the very stolid sort, after a period of reflection replied very slowly and with all the gravity of a judge:

"Pounds, shillings and pence is the simpler system, for don't you know that when you are told the price of a thing in dollars and cents you always have to convert it into pounds, shillings and pence."

There was a little objection to this theory, but in general it was perfectly satisfactory so long as the voyage lasted.

In Practice.

"What kind of an auto are you going to buy?"

"A secondhand one."

"Good as new, I suppose."

"It ought to be. It has killed three men."

One Would Do It.

"You know what I'm going to do?" whispered the girl as she looked around at the crowd that was beginning to be so sleepy and that still stayed on. "I'm going to give a party and start the Chinese fashion of telling them when to go. I'm going to get up as they do and say: 'I'm sorry, but it's time for you to go home. Here's your hat.' I think it will be a mighty fine thing. So few people know when to go home. Don't you think so?"

"Mighty fine," he answered, "but you don't intend ever to give but one party then, I see."—Exchange.

Whirlicotes.

The first carriages used in Britain were called whirlicotes. They are mentioned as having been in use at about the middle of the fourteenth century. Edward III. drove up in one to a tournament at Smithfield, which seems to have had some claim to resemble a triumphal car. And when Richard II. was flying before Bolingbroke his mother rode in a carriage with a canopy supported on pillars and surrounded with curtains that could be drawn up at pleasure.—London Saturday Review.

Caught on the Rebound.

The old man was lecturing his more or less wayward son on the evils of getting up late in the morning.

"Remember," he said, "that it was the early bird that caught the worm."

"But how about the worm, dad?" queried the youth, who thought he had his sire up in the air. "Where did his reward for getting up early come in?"

"I am informed," replied the old man gravely, "that the worm was on his way home—hadn't been in bed at all."

And, there being nothing more to say, the young man said nothing.—Chicago News.

The Keys of the Universe.

In the year 1694 William Patterson, founder of the Bank of Scotland, conceived the grand project of planting on the isthmus of Darien a British colony which, in his own words, "should secure for Great Britain the keys of the universe, enabling their possessors to give laws to both oceans and to become the arbiters of the commercial world." This colony was actually founded at a place still known as Puerto Escoces, but its people were subsequently forced by the Spaniards to evacuate and return to Scotland.—Argonaut.

Talk and Money.

Talking about promises," said a promoter, "some of these moneyed men, with their mouths full of millions and their quite empty hands, reminded me of a barber. This barber said one day as he shaved me:

"'That's a fine pup of Simmons'. I'd give anything for it.'

"'Well, it's for sale, isn't it?' said I.

"The barber burst into sneering laughter.

"'Oh, yes, it's for sale,' said he. 'But do you know what Simmons wants for it? Why, $2!'"

Making Himself Solid.

"Step this way, ladies and gentlemen," exclaimed the lecturer in the dime museum, "and gaze upon one of the greatest wonders known to medical science—the ossified man, a human being, perfectly normal in every other respect, but who has turned to stone."

"How did he get that way?" came a voice from the awestricken throng.

"Love," replied the lecturer, lowering his voice confidentially; "love did it. He fell in love with a beautiful maiden, tried to make himself solid and overdid it. We will now pass on to the"—

A Hearty Welcome.

"Is it not true that you farmers are hostile to balloonists?" ventured the young aeronaut who had descended in the barnyard.

"Why, no, stranger," laughed the old farmer as he came forward with a pitchfork. "We are always glad to have a balloon land on our place."

"I'm certainly glad to hear it."

"Yaas; the last one that landed here came in handy. I used the ropes to tie the steers, packed corn in the basket and cut the gas bag up and made overalls for all the farm hands. Welcome, stranger, welcome!"—Exchange.

She Wanted a Title.

A title gives the right to embroider a coronet on the body linen. It is pleasant in a railway train to pour scent on a coroneted pocket handkerchief. La Marechal Niel thought so, I dare say, in the summer of 1859. Her husband escaped the carnage of one of the battles fought that year in Lombardy. He also assured against heavy odds and the terrible blunders of the general staff victory to the French. His wife was with him when his marshal's baton was brought in with a letter from Napoleon III. Niel thought Mme. Niel would have melted into tears from joy. Instead of that her mouth fell. "You are marshal, you are," she said. "That does not make me duchess."—London Truth.

The Blowgun.

The blowgun is still popular for hunting birds among the Koasati Indians of Louisiana. This weapon consists of a tube, usually of cane, about six feet long, rubbed smooth on the inside with an implement made for the purpose and carefully straightened with the aid of fire. Slender pointed darts about eight inches long are used as ammunition, each one wrapped neatly along a third of its length with thistledown or cotton to make it fit the inside of the tube. The hunter places a dart in the tube, which he raises to his lips and aims at his game; then a quick puff of the breath drives the little dart flying with sufficient force to impale and kill a small bird or squirrel.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

N. Y AMUSEMENTS.

Henry Miller attributes the success of his new play, "The Havoc," which is attracting capacity audiences at the Bijou Theatre, New York, to the fact that the author of "The Havoc" makes the husband in his stage story a sane, decent American business man. "For my own part," says Mr. Miller, "I am not so much afraid of the tired business man as of the tired theatre-goer; and I feel that Author Sheldon just had in mind the fact that the brutal husband had had his day at the theatre, and, as a novelty, he would introduce the kind husband. The public will accept fairy stories, and I don't think it is expecting too much to ask them to believe in the possibility of such a human being."

"Over Night," the new farcical comedy by Phillip H. Bartholemae, which opened at the Hackett theatre, with practically no preliminary exploitation, and which, owing to the large number of other openings was practically ignored by the New York press on the inaugural night, has made a remarkable hit, and is now creating more interest than any farce presented in recent years, with the exception of "Baby Mine," William A. Brady's other remarkable comedy success at the Nazimova. Not only the public, but also the newspaper critics have awakened to the fact that "Over Night," is an unusual play, and that, as a vehicle for creating laughter, it has an originality and individuality all its own.

POE ITEMS DISPOSED OF AT THE STEDMAN SALE.

Interesting Poe items were disposed of at the continued sale at Anderson's, New York, of the library and autograph collection of the late Edward Clarence Stedman, who at one time resided at Cedarbrook farm in Plainfield. A letter which attracted special attention was one of three pages written by Poe a week before Dr. Thomas Dunn English, of Newark, made his accusations against that author. In this letter, which was addressed to Joseph M. Field, the actor and journalist, father of Kate Field, Poe speaks of the impression caused by "The Raven" in England, and quotes Elizabeth Barrett Browning in admiration of his work. The letter brought $490.

A Poe letter written in answer to a charge of a young Philadelphia poet, Hirst, that Poe plagiarized Keat's "Endymion" in the poem, "Ulalume" was sold for $365.

A daguerreotype portrait of Poe in a morocco case, with a note inserted by Mr. Stedman, "This is the best portrait in all respects of Edgar Allen Poe This one went through the Boston fire when in the possession of Fields, Osgood & Co.," was sold for $250.

Edmund Clarence Stedman's original manuscript of "Alice of Monmouth," 117 pages, with the arthur's corrections, was sold for $605.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

At the Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night, Henry B. Harris will present what gives promise of being one of the great novelties of the season when Ruth St. Denis appears for the first time in this city in her new creation founded on the religion and customs of Egypt. The curtain rises at 8:30 sharp. Out of the large number of dancers brought fame within the past few years not many have survived and conspicuous among them is Miss St. Denis. Her Hindu numbers were of exceptional quality, artistic to a degree and offered a divertisement quite out of the ordinary. The new dances in which she appears this season are the second of a cycle of Oriental numbers she has in view and ancient Egypt was selected because of its great influence on modern civization, and for the fact that it was in the land beside the Nile that the art of dencing first reached its fullest perfection. There the dance was a part of every religious ceremony and many of the old wall pictures now extant show the dancing women about the altar.

HERE AND THERE.

Dr. Marshall H. Saville, professor of archeology at Columbia University, has just returned from the wild regions of Ecuador, bringing back the most complete collection in the world of relics of Ecuador's lost tribes.

The most interesting of the professor's narratives relates to a gold rush in the heart of Ecuador—a rush which his party profited by in a novel way.

In digging an irrigation trench near Angel, Carshe, laborers hit upon an ancient tomb containing not only some rare specimens of pottery, beads and other things usually buried with the bodies of the old-time Indians of that country, but many gold and silver ornaments as well.

The discoverers figured that the gold and silver made into ornaments were extracted from ore bodies thereabouts. Shortly the gold rush was on and the hillsides near Angel were soon lined with excavators.

Before the excitement subsided at least 3,000 tombs had been opened and sveral hundred thousand dollars in gold, silver and precious stones had been marketed. All the ornaments of gold and silver went into the melting pot, but other relics found in the tombs were not of a marketable value and thousands of them were gathered up by the Saville party.

The collection will probably go to the American Museum of Natural History. The data, secured by the party shows that the district explored was densely populated by a highly civilized people at some time prior to the beginning of the fifteenth century. The explorers came across the remains of stone forts commanding the summits of some of the passes, erected probably to resist the invasion of the Incas about 500 years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. James D. Atwood, of Wellsley, Mass., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Smith, of Grandview avenue.

Mrs. Alfred W. Dunavan, of East Second street, is visiting relatives at Summit. Mr. Dunavan will spend Sunday there, returning home Sunday evening with Mrs. Dunavan.

The Great Conservation Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

It was like breaking the price of an athlete, but little by little she forced upon her mother a realization of her true condition, and at last Lize consented to offer the business for sale.

Lee longed for the presence of Ross Cavanagh at this moment, when all her little world seemed tumbling into ruin, and almost in answer to her wordless prayer came a messenger from the little telephone office, "Some one wants to talk to you."

She answered this call hurriedly, thinking at first that it must be Mrs. Redfield. The booth was in the little sitting room of a private cottage, and the mistress of the place, a shrewd little woman with inquisitive eyes, said, "Sounds to me like Ross Cavanagh's voice."

Lee was thankful for the booth's privacy, for her cheeks flamed up at this remark, and when she took up the receiver her heart was beating so loud it seemed as if the person at the other end of the wire must hear it. "Who is it, please?" she asked, with breathless intensity.

A man's voice came back over the wire so clear, so distinct, so intimate, it seemed as if he were speaking into her ear. "It is I, Ross Cavanagh. I want to ask how your mother is."

"She is terribly disheartened by what the doctor has said, but she is in no immediate danger."

He perceived her agitation and was instantly sympathetic. "Can I be of use? Do you need me? If you do I'll come down."

"Where are you?"

"I am at the sawmill, the nearest telephone station."

"How far away are you?"

"About thirty miles."

"Oh!" She expressed in this little sound her disappointment, and as it trembled over the wire he spoke quickly: "Please tell me! Do you want me to come down? Never mind the distance. I can ride it in a few hours."

She was tempted, but bravely said: "No; I'd like to see you, of course, but the doctor said mother was in no danger. You must not come on our account."

He felt the wonder of the moment's intercourse over the wilderness steeps and said so. "You can't imagine how strangely sweet and civilized your voice sounds to me here in this savage place. It makes me hope that some day you and Mrs. Redfield will come up and visit me in person."

"I should like to come."

"Perhaps it would do your mother good to camp for awhile. Can't you persuade her to do so?"

"I'm trying to do that—I mean, to stop work—but she says, 'What can we do to earn a living?'"

"If nothing happens I hope to spend an hour or two at the Fork next Sunday. I hope to find your mother better."

Their words were of this unemotional sort, but in their voices something subtler than the electrical current vibrated. He called to her in wordless fashion, and she answered in the same mysterious code, and when she said "Goodby!" and hung up the receiver her world went suddenly gray and commonplace, as if a ray of special sunlight had been withdrawn.

CHAPTER X.

THE POACHERS.

ONE morning as he topped the rise between the sawmill and his own station Cavanagh heard two rifle shots in quick succession snapping across the high peak on his left. Bringing his horse to a stand, he unslung his fieldglasses and slowly and minutely swept the tawny slopes of Sheep mountain, from which the forbidden sounds seemed to come.

"A herder shooting coyotes," was his first thought. Then, remembering that there were no camps in that direction and that a flock of mountain sheep (which he had been guarding carefully) habitually fed round that grassy peak, his mind changed. "I wonder if those fellows are after those sheep," he mused as he angled down the slope. "I reckon it's up to me to see."

In less than three hours he was over on the trail in the canyon, quite certain that the hunters were still above him. He rode quietly up the valley, pausing often to listen and to scrutinize the landscape, but no sign of campfire and no further rifle shots came, and at last he went into camp upon the trail, resolved to wait till the poachers appeared, a ward which his experience as a soldier helped him to maintain without nodding.

In these long hours his thought played about the remembrance of his last visit to the Fork and his hour with Lee. He wondered what she was doing at the moment. How charming she had looked there at Redfields'—so girlish in form, so serious and womanly of face!

He felt as never before the ineludible loneliness of the ranger's life. The guardians of these high places must forever be solitary. No ranger could rightfully be husband and father, for to bring women and children into these solitudes would be cruel.

He put all this aside—for the time—by remembering that he was a soldier under orders and that marriage was a long way off, and so smoked his pipe and waited for the dawn, persistent as a Sioux and as silent as a fox.

At daylight, there being still no sign of his quarry, he saddled his horse and was about to ride up the trail when he caught the sound of voices and the sharp click of iron hoofs on the rocks above him. With his horse's bridle in his arm he awaited the approaching horsemen, resolute and ready to act.

As the marauders rounded the elbow in the trail he was surprised to recognize in the leader young Gregg. The other man was a stranger, an older man, with a grizzled beard, and tall and stooping figure.

"Hello, Joe!" called the ranger. "You're astir early!"

The youth's fat face remained imperturbable, but his eyes betrayed uneasiness. "Yes, it's a long pull into town."

"Been hunting?" queried the ranger, still with cheery, polite interest.

"Oh, no; just visiting one of my sheep camps."

Cavanagh's voice was a little less suave. "Not on this creek," he declared. "I moved your herder last week." He walked forward. "That's a heavy load for a short trip to a sheep camp." He put his hand on the pack. "I guess you'll have to open this, for I heard two shots yesterday morning up where that flock of mountain sheep is running, and, furthermore, I can see blood stains on this saddle blanket."

Gregg threw out a hand in command. "Open it up, Edwards!" he said sullenly.

Off came the outfit, and under the tent lay the noble head of a wild ram, a look of reproach still in his splendid yellow eyes.

Cavanagh's face hardened. "I thought so. Now heave it back and cinch up. It's you to the nearest magistrate, which happens to be Higley of Roaring Fork. I'll make an example of you fellows."

There was nothing for Gregg to say and nothing for Edwards to do but obey, for a resolute ranger with an excellent weapon of the latest and most approved angular pattern stood ready to enforce his command, and when the pack was reinched Cavanagh waved an imperative hand. "I guess I'll have to take charge of your guns," he said, and they yielded without a word of protest. "Now march! Take the left hand trail."

A couple of hours of silent travel brought them to the ranger's cabin, and there he ordered a dismount.

As the coffee was boiling he lectured them briefly. "You fellows are not entirely to blame," he remarked philosophically. "You've been educated to think a game warden a joke and Uncle Sam a long way off. But things have changed a bit. The law of the state has made me game warden, and I'm going to show you how it works. It's my duty to see that you go down the road—and down you go!"

Edwards, the guide, was plainly very uneasy and made several attempts to reach Cavanagh's private ear and at last succeeded. "I've been fooled into this," he urged. "I was hard up and a stranger in the country, and this young fellow hired me to guide him across the range. I didn't shoot a thing. I swear I didn't. If you'll let me off I'll hit the trail to the west and never look back. Don't take me down the road. Let me off!"

"I can't do that," replied Cavanagh, but his tone was kindlier, for he perceived that the old fellow was thin, hollow chested and poorly clad. "You knew you were breaking the laws, didn't you?"

This the culprit admitted. "But I was working for Sam Gregg, and when Joe asked me to go show him the trail I didn't expect to get cinched for killing game. I didn't fire a shot—now that's the truth."

"Nevertheless," retorted Ross, "you were packing the head, and I must count you in the game."

Edwards fell silent then, but something in his look deepened the ranger's pity. His eyes were large and dark, and his face so emaciated that he seemed fit only for a sanitarium.

The trip to the Fork (timed to the gait of a lazy pack horse) was a tedious eight hours' march, and it was nearly 7 o'clock when they arrived at the outskirts of the village.

The Good the Ill Wind Blew

By VIRGINIA BLAIR

[Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

"Nothing could be more unfortunate," said Miss Cynthia.

Mazie agreed dejectedly. "If she had come at any other time."

"She will expect to be entertained," Miss Cynthia chimed in.

Mazie, tying on her veil before the mirror, decided: "We can have some good times with the girls. But there won't be any men, and Constantia can't exist without men."

"Nonsense," said Miss Cynthia. "She'll have to when she comes to Hilton."

Mazie talked the situation over later with Serena Sears.

"You see, I met Constantia at the seashore the summer I went with the Merrills, and I had lovely clothes, and we lived at the best hotels and did everything in the most approved way.

"I told Constantia that when I was at home with Aunt Cynthia I didn't have all the advantages and that my outing with the Merrills was just their farewell treat before they went abroad. But Constantia can't understand what life at Hilton is, and she will expect a gay time."

"Well, it's an ill wind that blows nobody any good," said Serena sententiously. "Perhaps she will liven us up a bit."

"Constantia could liven up a nunnery," Mazie told her, "but Hilton is hopeless."

Letters coming from Constantia told of her preparations.

"She is getting lots of pretty clothes," Mazie reported to Serena, "and where is she going to wear them?"

But Serena, true to her name, would not worry. "She will delight our eyes with them," she said. "I haven't seen an up to date gown for so long that I'd rather gaze on it than on a Rembrandt."

The day of Constantia's arrival Mazie put the big old fashioned house in order, while Aunt Cynthia baked delectable things.

Serena Sears came in the afternoon. "If Constantia hasn't the good taste to enjoy this lovely old room and Aunt Cynthia's tea and muffins and cocoanut cake she's a benighted individual," said she.

"But think of Constantia trailing pale blue broadcloth on this old rug!" wailed Mazie.

Mazie walked to the station, but she brought Constantia back in the only cab the town afforded. It was shabby and ramshackle, but the little horse was plump, and so was the driver.

"We feed people and animals well in Hilton," Mazie explained to Constantia. "Eating is our only diversion."

Constantia dimpled. "I think Hilton is dear," she emphasized.

But after they had driven a little way she said suddenly, "Mazie Langley, I don't believe I have seen a single man since we left the station."

"There aren't any," Mazie informed her. "I warned you. I told you in my letters that Hilton was deadly dull."

Constantia's laugh rippled. "Oh, you goosie," she said, "as if I cared! It will be a rest, if the girls are nice—a sort of bachelor girls' paradise."

Mazie nodded. "There is nothing for men to do in these Hampshire hills," she said, "and except a few merchants and the minister and the doctor there aren't any."

"Well, I wish Bobbie Dwyer could hear that," Constantia murmured.

"Who is Bobbie Dwyer?" Mazie demanded.

"Bobbie," Constantia explained, with elaborate and strangely earnest scornfulness, "is a lord of creation. I was engaged to him until one day he tried to dictate to me! Then, of course, I broke it off and told him there were some worse things than being an old maid, and he flung back at me that he should live single, for he could never trust a woman again, and then I told him that an old maid was happier than a bachelor, and he said if I tried it I'd find out, and, oh, I wish you had heard us!" And in spite of the tragedy of her recital Constantia laughed. "And I'm glad there aren't any men here—I hate them!"

Mazie's face glowed. "We will have a lovely time if you feel that way," she said.

Just then the ramshackle cab rounded a curve, and there was the old house, with Aunt Cynthia at the window and the light shining out behind her, and they went in and had tea and muffins and little cakes, and Mazie feasted her eyes on the picture Constantia made in her modish gown.

The next day Serena Sears came over.

"Mazie told me how pretty you were," she said quaintly, "and I told her I'd rather see you than a picture, but you are better than a whole art gallery."

And that afternoon a lot of girls came, pretty and fluttering creatures, who hung about Constantia admiringly.

"I love girls," she said when they had gone away.

That night more girls came, and in the afternoon there was a girls' tea, and at night a feminine galaxy came over and sat around the fire and popped corn and sang college songs.

When Constantia and Mazie went to bed that night the pretty guest remarked, "I love girls," but her voice lacked eager enthusiasm.

Several days later Serena Sears gave a dance.

"Of course there won't be any men," she said, "but we can all dress up and dance with each other, and the girls are crazy to see that white chiffon of yours, Constantia."

But when Constantia was arrayed in all her glory she surveyed herself thoughtfully in the mirror. "It seems a bit wasted," she murmured. "Bobbie always liked me in white."

The dance was not a great success. It lacked something, and that something Constantia said equivocally was men.

In the days that followed the girls still fluttered and admired, but Constantia looked at them with speculative eyes.

"It's a pity," she said over the teacups to Mazie, "that so many lovely girls should not marry."

"I thought old maidism was the happiest state," Mazie ventured.

"Of course for me," Constantia said hastily, "but for you and Serena and the others—oh, you ought to meet some nice men"—

And all that evening she was dreamy, and before she went to bed she wrote a letter.

Then she planned to give a cotillion before she left town.

"I will have the favors and refreshments sent out from the city," she said. "Everybody here has been so kind that I want to be hostess before I go."

Aunt Cynthia was induced to consent, and the girls of Hilton got out their best gowns.

When the caterer came with his host of assistants Aunt Cynthia sought Constantia in a great state of excitement. "You have ordered far too much," she said.

There was a faraway look in Constantia's eyes. "They will eat it up," she promised.

"But girls have such delicate appetites," Aunt Cynthia protested.

"Oh, girls!" Constantia murmured and dropped the subject.

But when she came downstairs to greet her guests she was so radiantly beautiful in pink and silver, with her eyes like stars, that Mazie caught her breath as she looked at her.

"Constantia!" she cried. "What has happened?"

Just then from without came the "honk-honk" of a motor horn, which was echoed by another and another, and as Mazie flung open the door, with the bevy of pretty girls behind her, there rolled up to the step a big red car in which were half a dozen radiant youths, and in the second car and in the third and the fourth, so that in all there were twenty-four men to match the twenty-four girls that Constantia had invited.

"I told Bobbie to bring them," Constantia said as she made the introductions, and when they had all danced away together she said to Bobbie Dwyer, who was hanging over her adoringly, "Men have their place—at a dance."

"How about husbands?" he demanded very promptly and authoritatively.

Constantia dropped her lashes over her happy eyes. "Oh, well," she capitulated, "I should hate to condemn you to bachelorhood, Bobbie, dear!"

But it was Serena who summed things up when three months later half a dozen engagements were announced in Hilton, among them Mazie's and her own.

"I told you the ill wind would blow some good," she said. "It blew Cupid into Hilton with Constantia."

Tale of a Car Ticket.

There was a goodly proportion of young men in the Sixteenth street car when she got in. It was a car with seats running longwise, so that the doubly blessed youths on the opposite side of the car could gaze to their hearts' content. And gaze they did, for never did car carry lovelier freight. Unaware that her advent in the car had changed the heart action of any of its passengers, her glorious brown eyes glanced serenely along the palpitating line of masculinity opposite as she tore a ticket from her strip and placed it between her rosebud lips while she replaced the strip in her tiny purse. Lucky ticket!

The enraptured young man nearest the door would have parted with a five spot to possess that equivalent of four and one-sixth cents. But here comes the strangest part. The conductor also noticed this most delectable resting place of milady's car ticket. And the conductor was young and not half bad looking, and the conductor was also smitten. A tiny hand reached up to the distracting mouth and, removing the ticket, handed it to the conductor. It is said that he blushed. Certain it is that he took the fare tenderly between two fingers and glanced at it pensively. Then—and the young man nearest the door is ready to swear to it—he deposited it carefully in an inside pocket, far removed from the storing place of all common tickets. And the question is, What did he do with it?—Pittsburg Press.

In a Perfume Factory.

Musk is perhaps the most valuable and delightful of all perfumes, yet the refiner as he opens the musk pods must wear thick cloths over mouth and nostrils, so repulsive is the odor that the pods emit. Indeed, this odor, inhaled for any length of time, causes nosebleed. Civet, karagullue and ambergris have in small quantities a delicious perfume, but in large quantities they smell so abominable as to give the worker nausea. The hawthorn blossom is delicately sweet, and perfumers prize it highly, yet a roomful of hawthorn blossoms smells like a charnel house. This, too, is true of the tuberose.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

"GYM" CLASSES EXHIBIT

Y. W. C. A. Young Women Give Fine Program at Y. M. C. A.

BASKETBALL GAME EXCITING.

"Princeton" Team Defeated by "Yale" Representatives—Miss Mosher Receives Handsome Present.

The gymnasium classes of the Young Women's Christian Association conducted their annual exhibition in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last night. Folk and characteristic dances, class exercises and a basketball game between two association teams made up a program that was keenly enjoyed by a large attendance. All the numbers were good.

A feature of the affair not previously announced was the gift of a handsome gold watch and chain to Miss Margaret E. Mosher, the retiring physical instructor. The presentation speech was made by Mrs. Frederick G. Mead in behalf of the association, and the recipient responded in an appropriate way. Miss Mosher left today for Cleveland, O., where she is to become gymnasium instructor in the Central High School. Her successor here is Miss Mary O. Herbert, formerly of St. Louis.

Last night's program began with a grand march in which all the classes participated, after which the following numbers were given: Military drill, Tuesday afternoon juniors Highland schottische, Monday and Tuesday evening classes; willow wand drill, Friday afternoon juniors; Folk dances, Monday and Tuesday evening classes; dance of the jumping jacks, Tuesday afternoon juniors; Spanish dance, members of Tuesday evening advanced class; sailor's hornpipe, Friday afternoon juniors; snow storm dance, all classes. Miss Mosher gave a sailors hornpipe dance that was cleverly executed and warmly applauded. An encore was demanded, but she did not respond. Miss Florence Yaegar presided at the piano during the dances and drills.

The basketball game was given in conclusion and proved an exciting contest. The teams represented "Yale" and "Princeton," and the former won by a score of 16 to 14. At the close of the first half it stood 10 to 11 in favor of the same side. The "Princeton" aggregation tied the score just before the finish, but "Yale" manged to get the needed goals. The game was fast and splendidly played.

The teams were made up as follows: "Yale"—Miss Gertrude Mair, centre; Miss Helen George and Miss Ellen Dougherty, forwards; Miss Marion Mair and Miss Elizabeth Becker, guards; Miss Myrtle Feddermman, substitute. "Princeton"—Miss Lona Becker, centre; Miss Reba Kline and Miss Edna Snedicker, forwards; Miss Helen Southard and Miss Ida Englehart, guards; Miss Ida Himmel, substitute. Miss Herbert acted as referee and Miss Trembath was umpire.

Y. M. C. A.'S ATHLETES MAKE RECORDS IN COMPETITION.

The fourth series of the athletic events for the all-round championship of the Y. M. C. A., and the Sandford cup, brought out some good records at the association, yesterday, as follows:

Three standing broad jumps: Fritts, 28.7; Ricketts, 25.10; H. Vail, 25.6. Running high kick: Fritts, 8.5; Ricketts, 8.0; H. Vail, 7.9. The total points scored follows: Fritts, 156; Ricketts, 129; Vail, 121; Thompson, 119; Carson, 95; Willis, 89; Newmiller, 66; Sampson, 48. The total points scored up to January 26 follow:

Fritts, 660; Vail, 530; Ricketts, 512; Thompson, 388; Newmiller, 254; Carson, 254; Seal, 168; Richardson, 98; Willis, 89; J. W. Richardson, 80; Manning, 72. The next events will be on February 2, when there will be a 440 yard potato race and a 23 yard swim.

Hebrews' Reception.

The Hebrew Social Club will hold a reception and dance on Washington's birthday, Wednesday evening, February 22. The arrangements committee is comprised of I. Kunzman, chairman; J. Abrams; L. Rothberg, and J. Feldman. The list of patronesses will be announced in a few days. Saengerbund Hall has been engaged for the occasion and Suhr's Imperial orchestra will furnish the music. Butterfly and snow dances, together with changing color effects will be part of the program. The committee is also arranging for professional talent from New York city, to help entertain the guests with vocal and instrumental music. A large number of inviations have been issued and other social clubs are preparing to send delegations.

TAXPAYERS' ASSOCIATION

Suggested by Charles H. Hand to Investigate the Water Problem.

WANTS A NEW CONTRACT.

Will Defray Seventy-five Per Cent. of Legal Expenses—Hopes to See Consolidation of Borough and City.

That a Taxpayers' Association could guard the city from falling into an error regarding the proper thing to do in the matter of city water is the opinion of Charles H. Hand, who is opposed to the incurring of a large indebtedness by the city for the purpose of securing a municipal water plant. And to that end Mr. Hand suggests the formation of such an association, the retaining of the best legal talent obtainable and a thorough investigation of the rights of the Water Company in the premises. The subjoined letter plainly indicates Mr. Hand's position in the matter.

"There has been some discussion, a few letters and a very elaborate report furnished to the taxpayers upon the sbject of "Municipal Ownership of the Water Works" but as yet we have not obtained the required information as to what is to the best interests of the citizens and taxpayers of this city.

"I am strongly opposed to the city incurring a large indebtedness without knowing in just what position we are standing regarding the rights of the present water company. To this end, I would suggest that we form a Taxpayers' Association, procure the opinion of the most able lawyer in the state and pay him for his advice. I am willing to furnish seventy-five per cent. of the cost.

"I would like to see a contract made with the present water company for a term of ten years with the privilege of four ten-year renewals and with a clause inserted in each contract that the city could terminate the contract at any time upon giving he company one year's notice.

"I hope to see Plainfield and North Plainfield consolidated, our interests are the same, and if it can be proven at that time that it will be profitable to own our water plant, then I say go ahead."

MRS. BLIMM SURPRISED BY THE THIMBLE CLUB.

Mrs. Jacob Blimm, of the New Madison building, was given a surprise party by the Thimble Club, of which she is a member, at the home of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Joseph Blimm, of Darrow avenue, this afternoon. The affair was arranged in honor of her birthday and was in the nature of a handkerchief shower.

The participants fifteen in number, first met at the home of Mrs. Arthur McVoy, of West Fourth street, and then proceeded to the Blimm residence. Refreshments were served at the conclusion of an informal social program. The birthday is Mrs. Blimm's sixty-fifth.

Turkey Supper a Success.

Nearly as many people attended the turkey supper at Trinity Reformed church lecture room last night as were there on Thursday night. Over 250 suppers were served and everything on the fancy and other tables was sold out. It is believed to have been a larger success financially than the affair of last year. The women under whose supervision the supper was served were congratulated upon its success, especially Mrs. E. T. VanWinkle, who was general chairman.

Court Plainfield Prosperous.

Two candidates were initiated at the meeting of Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order Foresters, last night and two applications were accepted. The yearly report showed that forty-three members were initiated, three died and a large sum was paid out in funeral claims and relief for the sick. During the evening a gold past chief ranger's jewel was presented to E. J. McCue as a mark of appreciation. Court Deputy L. J. Feiring made the presentation speech.

Parent-Teachers Association.

Besides the address by Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews to the teachers of the Irving school on Monday evening, Mr. Mathiews will address the Franklin-Stillman-Whittier Parent-Teachers Association in the Franklin school on Tuesday evening. His topic will be "Training for Parenthood." All members of the association are urged to be present.

"Imperfect Theology no Bar to Salvation," will be the topic of the sermon by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss at the First Baptist church tomorrow morning. In the evening his theme will be: "The Footmen and Horses."

NOTED ACTRESS COMING

Mrs. 'Pat' Campbell to Appear at Plainfield Theatre Thursday, Feb. 9

WITH MR. EFFINGHAM PINTO.

Mrs. August Belmont and Princess Troubetskoy to Be Among the Patronesses—To Present the Princess' Plays.

Undoubtedly the most attractive and probably the greatest society event, theatrically speaking, will take place at the Plainfield Theatre on Thursday evening, February 9, when Mrs. Patrick Campbell and Effingham Pinto assisted by an exceptionally able supporting company will appear in two plays by Amile Rives (Princess Troubetskoy) author of "The Quick and the Dead" and one of the foremost writers of the day.

The first on the program will be the "Kid Faun," pastoral with incidental music by Bussy and dances arranged by Polaini. The second will be "The King's Garden" in which Mr. Pinto will appear to greater advantage than anything he has been seen in so far. The curtain will rise promptly at 9 o'clock and carriages may be ordered for eleven.

The engagement will be under the patronage of Mrs. August Belmont, Mrs. Archer Huntington, Mrs. Benjamin Guinness and Princess Troubetskoy, of New York and prominent Plainfield women. A complete list of patronesses will be published on Tuesday. Seats may be secured now by mail addressed to Ernest Shuter, care of the Plainfield theatre, and will be filled in the order received when accompanied by check or money order.

Mrs. Campbell and Mr. Pinto will appear under Mr. Shuter's management. The productions are new and complete in each detail.

COMMUTERS PROTEST AGAINST PROPOSED CHANGE IN TRAINS.

The commuters of South Plainfield are indignant over the proposition of the Lehigh Valley Railorad company to withdraw train number 40, leaving that place for New York at 6:45 o'clock in the morning, and running train number 6 thirty minutes earlier, which leaves South Plainfield at 7:34. The change would be a hardship to many of the commuters from South Plainfield and nearby towns, as their business interests require them to be in New York at 8 o'clock. If such a change is made many of the commuters will have to live near other railroads.

The commuters have drafted a petition which will be presented to the officials of the company with a view to having the schedule remain as at persent. The petition will also be sent to the railroad commission, protesting against the proposed action. It is believed that when the company understands the stiuation no change will be made.

Pack Property Sold.

George Viebrock, of Jackson avenue, has purchased the Pack property on Park avenue, where R. W. Barnes conducts a grocery, and after some alterations are made, his son, Henry Viebrock, will engage in the grocery business there. The property, considered one of the best in the busfness section of the city, is said to have been sold for about $12,500. Gerome Pack, the original owner of the property, lived there until his death. This is the first time it has changed hands since it came into the Pack family. Mr. Barnes has not yet decided upon his plans for the future. The present lease expires April 1.

Rev. Dr. Herring Improving.

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First M. E. church, who recently underwent an operation in Rochester, Minn., is reported to be steadily improving and will probably be able to return home within the next two weeks. The operation was performed by the Mayo Brothers, world renowned surgeons, who said that Dr. Herring did not come to them any too soon.

An Artistic Calendar.

The Woodhouse-Lough Engine Company, of this city, has issued an exceptionally attractive calendar, made by the Osborne Company, of New York. It is entitled "A Girl You Ought to Know," and is certainly an artistic piece of work.

Purchased 1911 Chalmers Limousine

Mr. C. B. Lawrence, Jr., of Madison avenue, has just received his 1911 Chalmers Limousine, purchased from Thompson Auto Co.

Edmund Pack, of Park avenue, is ill at home with the grip.

Judge W. R. Codington and his son, of Sandford avenue, are both detained at home with the grip.

WESTFIELD'S EDITORS IN FISTIC ENCOUNTER

Two blackened eyes, an injured nose, a cut lip and broken eyeglasses are the result of a fistic encounter between Watler J. Lee, editor and manager of the Westfield Leader, and Robert Hoffman, editor of the Union County Standard, in Westfield yesterday. Lee sustained all the injuries and damages, and his opponent is absolutely devoid of any battle scars.

The trouble arose over Hoffman's claim that Lee tried to take away the Standard's foreman.

Mrs. Lee saw the encounter, and rushing into the street, got her husband away.

Hoffman was formerly a reporter for a local paper.

THOUGHT THEY WERE STEALING HIS FOWLS

Joseph Kaminsky, of East Third street, who has been missing chickens daily for some time past, yesterday detected what he thought and still thinks is the gang which has been feeding at his expense. Calling Patrolman McCarthy the later gave chase to five boys, two white and three colored, and after covering a mile or so at a good clip through the east end of town and once or twice over the railroad tracks in the Netherwood district the patrolman captured three of the boys and they were brought to headquarters.

This morning Frank O'Brien, fifteen years old and Watler Robinson, whose father says is a "right smart conditioned boy," and James Ford, a southern colored boy, eighteen years old, denied that they were doing anything but riding on the switcher in the freight yards. They explained their running away by declaring that they thought the "cop" was after them for stealing rides.

Samuel Goerwitz, a boarder at the Kaminsky home, said he saw the young fellows acting in a suspicious manner in the rear of the house and saw one of the five boys in the crowd enter Mr. Kaminsky's chicken house with a bag over his shoulder. He could not say whether the bag contained chickens, but Mr. Kaminsky said he was four chickens short after the boys disappeared.

As only three of the boys were caught the police are looking for James Coleman, the alleged leader of the gang and who has but recently been paroled from Reform School. The fifth one of the gang is yet unknown,but will probably be caught. All five will have to face Judge DeMeza next Saturday morning.

STATE OFFICERS VISIT SAFETY ASSOCIATION NO. 12.

Safety Association, No. 12, National Association of Stationery Engineers, enjoyed a visitation for State officers and other members of the order at the regular meeting in Exempt Firemen's hall last night. Among those present were President Sears, of Newark; Vice-pre ident Krause, of Paterson; Edward Barley, of Newark, chairman of the educational committee; George Wilson, of Pittsburg, and Henry Fritts, of Hoboken, a member of the original State committee. All the visitors made addresses.

President Patrick Kellegher occupied the chair and spoke in behalf of Safety Association, as did several other officers. Refreshments were served and a general social time concluded the session.

Told of "Boice Memorial Hall."

Miss May S. Shreve read a paper on "Mission Work in Japan" at the meeting of the Young Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, yesterday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. David Sutphen on Madison avenue. She told of the Mary L. Colby Home in Yokohoma, Japan, under the charge of Miss Converse. One of the buildings she described was "Boice Memorial Hall" built by Miss Annie Boice and the late Mrs. John D. Runyon, of Park avenue, in memory of their mother, Mrs. David J. Boice. Mrs. Sutphen led the devotional services.

Juniors Defeat Midgets.

The Y. M. C. A. Juniors defeated the Midgets, of Westfield, in a fast basketball game on the local court, yesterday afternoon. The final score was 22 to 6. The line up: Y. M. C. A. Juniors — forwards, McNamee, Manley; centre, Dichemon; guards, Goldsmith, Kenney, Hetfield, Stewart. Midgets—forwards, Russell, Underwood; centre Kjelmark; guards, Foster, Rohn.

A Chimney Blaze.

The fire department was called out at 10 o'clock this morning on an alarm from box 52 for a chimney blaze in a house at Cottage place, near Richmond street. It was put out with hand extinguishers. There was no damage.

SENATOR'S CREDENTIALS

Impressive Scene When St. John Hands Martine His Certificate.

AN INFORMAL CEREMONY.

Brig. Gen. D. F. Collins and Joseph Tumulty Make Brief Remarks and the Senator-elect Replies.

From the hands of William W. St. John, at one time city editor of this paper, and now a newspaper correspondent at Trenton, James E. Martine yesterday afternoon received his certificate of election as United States Senator from New Jersey. The presentation took place at Mr. Martine's home in Kensington avenue, where the distinguished Democrat is confined to his bed recuperating from grip.

The scene was an impressive one when Mr. St. John, who induced Mr. Martine last summer to announce himself a candidate for the primaries in September, formally handed the farmer-orator his credentials. The sheepskin certificate, highly embellished, had been signed by Governor Wilson, President of the Senate Ernest R. Ackerman and Speaker of the House Kenney.

As a committee appointed by the Governor, former Assemblyman Mark Sullivan, a judge of the Court of Errors and Appeals; former Assemblyman Joseph Tumulty, secretary to the Governor; Brig. Gen. Dennis F. Collins, N. G. N. J., formerly Democratic county chairman, and Mr. St. John, arrived at the Martine home at 5:30. They were escorted by a committee of citizens selected by the senator-elect. In the party were Mayor Moy, of Plainfield, and Mayor Smalley, of North Plainfield. The others included David T. Kenney, William L. Saunders, A. H. Atterbury, John A. Gaffney, LeRoy J. Ellis, James F. Buckle and Joseph Harrigan.

It was peculiarly appropriate that Mr. St. John, Martine's stanchest supporter for years, should have been selected to make the presentation speech. In performing this duty, the gifted newspaper man said:

"Mr. Martine, we greet you as the United States Senator-elect from New Jersey. Upon this parchment which I shall present to you, is inscribed the credentials for your membership in that great legislative body at Washington. It is yours by virtue of an election by the New Jersey Legislature, the members thus asknowledging and vitalizing the principle of popular choice of Senators.

"An emblem of authority for you, its vitality and worthiness to the people will be in proportion to your honesty and fidelity in applying yourself, under its commission, to the common good. Your career as a member of the United States Senate will be honorable in the degree in which you serve the people.

"In this view, we who know you are firm in the conviction that as Senator you will measure up splendidly to a righteous conception of the ideals and needs of oru government.

"This commission from the people of New Jersey is the product of honorable politicss. You receive it untrammeled by any act on your own part or the part of friends that is not consistent with good government.

"You will enter upon the duties of a United States Senator a free agent of the people, because the people have selected you. May you always discern rightly the duties of your office, and, having thus apprehended, perform steadfastly and courageously to the end."

Deeply moved, the Senator-elect replied:

"I am thoroughly appreciative of the honor which has been conferred upon me by the Legislature of New Jersey and am deeply sensible to the responsibilities of the high office to which I have been elected. My life has been spent in an endeavor to improve the conditions of the bread winner and to make easier the task of those who are carving out life's fortune under the handicap of faulty economic conditions. Partisan though I am, as the Senator from New Jersey I shall not represent one party more than another, but will represent the whole people, rich and poor alike. It shall be my constant aim to serve the State in such a way as shall bring honor to it and to its people."

General Collins moved forward to say a few words of appreciation of Mr. Martine's services to the party. He referred to the many times Mr. Martine had been mustered into service to lead a forlorn hope always at a great personal sacrifice. He was followed by Mr. Tumulty who dwelt on Martine's steadfast loyalty to the cause which to him is a religion.

JOS. W. REINHART DEAD

Former Plainfielder Succumbs to Pneumonia at Kansas City.

ONCE RAILROAD PRESIDENT.

For Two Decades He Was One of the City's Most Prominent Residents—Leaves Wife and Four Children.

Joseph W. Reinhart, for many years a well-known railroad mangate, and for two decades a prominent resident here died last night in Kansas City, Mo., Pneumonia caused his death. He had been living in Kansas City during the past year, being connected in a confidential capacity with the Kansas City Viaduct & Terminal Company of that city. A fortnight ago he was in the East and was then enjoying good health.

Mr. Reinhart was born in Pittsburg, Pa., where early in his business life he held various positions with railroads in and about Pittsburg. Later he became prominent as the president of the Atchinson, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad, which position he held for several years. in the meantime he removed to Plainfild and purchased the handsome property on Belvidere avenue, where he and his family resided for nearly 20 years. Both Mr. and Mrs. Reinhart as well as their daughters, were prominent here in society.

During their residence here three daughters were married, they now being Mrs. Edward M. Buren, of this city; Mrs. J. A. Thayer, of Charlestown, W. Va., and Mrs. M. M. Corwin, who resides at Schnectady, N. Y. There is also one son, Frank O. Reinhart, who was famous as a golf player, having engaged in many of the big tournaments a few years ago. He is now connected with the New York Central Railroad. Upon receiving news of the death, the son left at once for the west to assist his mother in making arrangements for the funeral.

Mr. Reinhart's family entertained lavishly and were prominent in all the leading social functions in the city. The weddings of his daughters were considered the most brilliant affairs of recent times in which local society figured.

Prior to going to Kansas City, Mr. Reinhart was connected in the capacity of confidential man with several eastern roads, his expert knowledge in certain departments being much sought after.

Mr. Reinhart was an Elk, a member of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M., Jerusalem Chapter, No. 24, R. A. M., Trinity Commandry, No. 17, K. T., and Mecca Temple, of New York. He and Mrs. Reinhart gave up their residence here four years ago.

Besides a wife, one son and three daughters, Mr. Reinhart is survived by a sister, Mrs. C. C. Mellor and a brother, Abner Reinhart, both of Pittsburg, Pa. It is probable that the remains will be taken to Pittsburg for burial, as the family plot is in that city.

Cullen was warned and Coffey was placed in charge of assistant probation officer Hamilton.

AFFRONTED SAYS MAYOR

Mr. Moy Vigorously Resents Failure to Confirm His Appointments.

TO APPEAL TO THE PEOPLE.

Chairman Montgomery Leaves Committee Meeting When Told That His Questions are Peculiar.

Without mincing words, Mayor Moy expressed himself as to the action of the Common Council in not promptly confirming his appointments, at a meeting of the Councilmanic alms committee last night. At the request of the chairman, F. L. Montgomery, the mayor attended the meeting as did Rev. F. St. John Fitch, the latter the mayor's appointee to succeed Oversser-of-the-Poor Alexander D. Ayres.

According to reliable report, members of the committee, particularly the chairman, quizzed the clergyman as to his qualifications and as to other things. Then, it is reported, Chairman Montgomery had some questions to ask the mayor. His manner and his questions, the mayor's friends say, was displeasing to the executive, who brought them to an abrupt close. He let Mr. Montgomery know that his questions were objectionable and he asked why his appointments were being held up by the Common Council, and he, himself, thus cross-examined by a councilman. He asserted that it was a peculiar proceeding and that the attitude of the Common Council was without precedent.

When Mayor Moy stigmatized Chairman Montgomery's questions as peculiar, the latter is reported to have requested him to repeat the remark which the mayor did with some emphasis. Rising from his chair and taking his hat, the chairman, it is alleged, declared that there was no use of prolonging the proceedings and he promptly made his exit. The other members of the committee, Councilmen Tolles, Wilson and Taylor remained and the discusssion of this and other matters continued for some twenty minutes. Mr. Taylor wished it understood that he had never said that he would not vote to confirm the mayor's appointments. The other two, it is reported, were non-committal.

On good authority it is said that Mayor Moy told the alms committee that he considered the action of the Common Council in not promptly confirming his appointments as a personal affront to him. He added that the people so view it. As to what disposition the city fathers would make of his appointments, he let it be known did not materially concern him for he would appeal not to them but direct to the people. It is asserted that he reminded them that there is another elecion in the fall and that the people may see fit to send other men to the Common Council for next year. That he will go right on making appointments for other offices, he made clear, adding that this plan would be pursued even if he had to wait until next year to get confirmation made. Mr. Avres he said, was objectionable to him as overseer-of-the-the-poor and he proposed to put in his place one in whom he has confidence.

It was said today as predicted by this paper a fortnight ago that the Common Council will not confirm the appointment although some members will vote in favor of so doing.

Done Daily in Plainfield—Many Citizens Tell of It.

Nearly every reader has heard of Doan's Kidney Pills. Their good work in Plainfield still continues, and our citizens are constantly adding endorsement by public testimony. No better proof of merit can be had than the experience of friends and neighbors. Read this case:

Mrs. W. W. Mills, 304 West Second street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "A dull, heavy, bearing down pain in my back bothered me a great deal, especially when I caught cold. I also had frequent headaches and was at times so dizzy that I could scarcely see. If I did much stooping or lifting my back became very lame and though I used plasters, I was relieved only for the time being. Finally on the advise of a friend, I procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's Pharmacy and began their use. They acted in every way as represented and in a short time rid me of all symptoms of kidney trouble. I am pleased to recommend a remedy of such undoubted merit."

HERE AND THERE.

A. T. Stewart, the famous New York merchant, was shown one day by one of his confidential employes an amusing caricature of himself done in pencil, says an exchange.

"Good, good!" he laughed, "that's excellent. Who did it?"

"A young salesman at the linen counter. He scratched it off as you passed the other morning. I managed to get it from him and now he's scared stiff for fear you'll see it," was the laughing reply.

"Scared stiff, is he?" said Mr. Stewart, with a twinkle in his eye. "Just send him to me, will you?"

A little later a slim youth entered Mr. Stewart's private office and said he understood he had been sent for. "Yes," said Mr. Stewart gravely, and holding up the sketch asked, "Did you do this?"

The lad grew pale and stammered: "I—I beg your pardon, sir—it was only a bit of fun—I meant no offense."

"That's all very well, but you'll have to give up your job here."

The youth humbly protested, when Mr. Stewart burst out laughing and said: "Don't say any more, my boy; I'm only joking. Your sketch is excellent, and as it would be a sin to keep a man of your artistic talent behind a linen counter, I propose to supply you with the means to study art."

Mr. Stewart's propostion was gratefully accepted and it was thus that John R. Rogers, the sculptor, began his artistic career.

Rev. Dr. C. B. Mitchell, of Chicago, will preach at the First M. E. church, his former charge, on Sunday, February 5, morning and evening, and on the following Monday night he will deliver his lecture on "The Original Idiot," in that church.

N. Y AMUSEMENTS.

"Alma, Where Do You Live?" whose long run at Joe Weber's theatre continues with unabated success, will remain in its present house for the balance of the season. No production which has appeared on Broadway this year has won the popular favor accorded this interesting musical comedy. Bright lines, catchy music and laughable comedy situations are the foundations upon which this play is constituted, and so well has the author builded that the box office of the cozy Weber play house has enjoyed a season of almost unprecented prosperity. The featured principles, Truly Shattuck and John McCluckey, have won personal success in their parts, their beautifully trained voices blending most harmoniously in the duet numbers, and their artistic interpretation of the roles of Alma and Pierre compelling applause.

Apparently cast in a characteristic Otis Skinner part—that of Denis Roulette, clockmaker, strolling player roysterer, conspirator, in short, fearless adventurer, one to come life in a play and living merely a succession of fictitious parts—Mr. Skinner appears at the Criterion theatre in Henri Lavedan's "Sire." This is the newest of Henri Lavedan plays to find its way into Broadway since "The Duel," in which Mr. Skinner also performed four years ago. "Sire" is in four acts. Its story evidently took form in its author's fancy by the simple process of reflecting upon the drama and comedy that must actually have been enacted in many a Royalist French family because of the blind belief of its members that the son of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette did not die in the Temple, but survived and was still (1848) in hiding, ready to ascend the throne as Louis XVI. That is, "Sire" is not a historic drama or comedy; it makes no pretense at adding to the multitude of theories current in France, especially in Bourbon, France, concerning the fate of the lost Dauphin.

GLOUCESTER FISH MEN RISE UP TO PROTEST.

While flags on the fishing fleet were flown at half mast, union down, at Gloucester, Mass., yesterday, as a protest, those who oppose the agreement for reciprocity with Canada, including free fish, are planning a bitter fight before Congress. Gloucester fishing interests declare that they will be supported by the entire fishing interests in the country and that telegrams are pouring in from all ports on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts pledging aid.

A committee is to be appointed today to act with similar committees representing the Atlantic and Pacific cod, herring, mackerel and salmon fisheries in opposing the ratification of the agreement.

The Junior Epworth League of the First M. E. church met yesterday afternoon in Vincent chapel and enjoyed a special program under the direction of Miss May Randolph, superintendent.

Mrs. Broakwater has instituted divorce proceedings against her "illegal" husband, and the authorities are wondering what the next move will be.

Two mishaps befell coast vessels Thursday and the government crews were instrumental in helping both out of danger. The sloop Christine, from Atlantic City to Avalon, ran onto a bar off Townsend's Inlet and was in a fair way of becoming a prey to the breakers when the crew from the station worked the craft into deep water. The launch Court House, from Anglesea to Stone Harbor, sprang a leak and was wallowing in the sea with signals of distress when the coast guards boarded her. The Tatham Station crew, in a power boat, saved the craft and those on board.

SPORTS
News and Notes

BASEBALL.

The majority of fans judge a ball player by the number of errors he makes or doesn't make. Errors do count when a certain number is reached, but until they affect a player's fielding, which is seldom in a major league, they are only looked upon as incidents of the game.

Fred Tenney tells a story on Billings, one of the old Boston owners. Tenney was playing the greatest game of his career, when Billings summoned him to his office. The owner had a newspaper report of the two Boston club's fielding records.

"See here, Tenney," he said severely, "how does it happen that you are off in your fielding lately? La Chance is fifteen points ahead of you."

"Did you think my fielding was off color before you looked at the paper?" Tenney inquired.

"No," Billings replied, slowly. "But when figures are so plain as that——"

"Mr. Billings," said Tenney "the owners of the American League team would give you La Chance for me any time you want to make the proposition."

Billings never talked fielding averages with him again.

The franchise of the eight clubs in the New York State League, which expired yesterday, were renewed for five years, numerous constitutional amendments were adopted, John H. Farrell was relected president, secretary and treasurer, and the salary limit was fixed at $3,000, at the annual meeting of the organization.

It was decided that in the event of a club's retiring from membership and another being chosen to fill its place, the retiring club will not have a vote on the question.

Any club or officer carrying a dispute into court automatically forfeits the franchise and membership in the league. In case of a tie for the championship five games will be played, instead of three, as heretofore. The meeting adjourned, to meet in March at Binghamton. Manager Clark, of the Albany team, announced the purchase of Infielder E. S. Havel from the New Britain club of the Connecticut League.

President Lynch, of the National League, yesterday announced approval of the following contracts and releases: Contracts—With Boston, Charles E. Brown, Joseph J. Callahan, O. L. Herzog, Wilbur Goode, Bayard H. Sharpe; with Chicago, Harry McIntyre; with New York, Frank Forsythe, J. W. Jenkins, Jack Johnston, Frank Manush, Fred C. Merkle; with Philadelphia, F. Otto Knabe, 1911-1912-1913; Bert Humphries, W. R. Walsh, Waldo T. Jackley. Releases—By Cincinnati to Nashville, S. A., Wingo Anderson.

Arthur Raymond, who, since his reformation, does not like the nickname of "Bugs," sent in his signed contract to the New York National League club yesterday, the document being forwarded from Dwight, Ill., where Raymond will stay for three more weeks. If Raymond keeps in trim, he ought to shatter some pitching records next season. He has done marvelous work when he did not take proper care of himself, and there is no telling what he can do when he attends strictly to business.

The playing schedules of both major leagues are now practically arranged. Most of the work was done in Cincinnati, and since that time the committees of each league have been making some minor changes. The National League owners will meet in New York to adopt the schedule about the middle of February. At that meeting President Lynch will announce any changes that are to be made in his umpiring staff. It is expected that at least two new umpires will be appointed.

Manager Connie Mack and his bride arrived in New York yesterday on the Mauretania, which made a record-breaking run from Liverpool to New York. Connie was greeted at the pier by a number of his friends. It is not likely that he will return to Philadelphia before today or tomorrow.

Benjamin Kauff, an outfielder of the Parkersburg, W. Va. league team, was signed by the Yankees yesterday. Kauff is a left-handed batsman and is said to be something of a hitter. He will report at Athens, Ga., to Arthur Irwin for spring training.

GOLF.

According to Bernard Darwin, a well known English amateur, most golfers do not realize the fact that they are indifferent putters and that when they do putt well it is only through a fit of inspiration. Continuing, he says:

"We recognize the fact that we are radically bad putters and that we only putt well through a fit of inspiration. When the inspiration is on us we are afraid of wasting any our of good putts, and we know by bitter experience that the inspiration cannot last long. It is a terrible confession of weakness. I really do not know how much the very best of putters do practise. Tom Ball is reported to do so assiduously, I do not know with how much truth. Mr. Travis certainly practises enormously but he is a player with wonderful powers of concentration. I remember Mr. Tait putting hard at the practice holes at Hoylake, before a certain great match he played in the championship with Mr. Hilton, and Jamie Anderson, so we read in the "Badminton," used to play two rounds of the ladies' links at St. Andrews, which is a putting course, every day before breakfast.

A. H. Pogson, chairman of the Metropolitan Golf Association Handicap Committee, has sent out handicap blanks to all the clubs in the district with the request that they be filled out and returned not later than February 7. The clubs are requested to return handicaps up to eleven strokes, inclusive, based on par and prepared according to detailed instruction. The Handicap Committee is made up of A. H. Pogson, J. E. Erickson, F. J. Phillips, George H. Barnes and Wyatt W. Taylor.

MORE POLICEMEN FOR TOWNS, OSBORNE'S AIM.

Senator Harry V. Osborne had never given much thought to the number of policemen he met on his way home late at night until he moved to South Orange a year or two ago. Then he became aware that the minions of the law were pitifully few and far between, and started out to find the reason why.

Mr. Osborne found many of his fellow-citizens of the same mind as himself, but was confronted by the officials of the village with the information that a State law made it unlawful for any municipality to have more than one policeman for each 700 persons.

The Senator came to the conclusion that such interference as this by the State in the purely private affairs of a municipality was uncalled for and so he introduced in the Senate at Trenton, Tuesday a bill taking the restriction out of the present act and giving each city and town the right to employ as many police officers as its needs require.

A clause in the bill provides that nothing in the new measure shall restrict or diminish the number of policemen now serving in each municipality, or affect the appointment of superior officers.

Telephone Announcement
Change in Billing "Foreign Messages."

FOLLOWING the suggestion of many of our subscribers, that bills for tolls, or "foreign messages," be rendered as promptly as possible, we are adopting a new method of billing for such messages. Heretofore charges for "foreign messages" sent during any month have appeared on the bill for the second month following, or, some thirty days after the "foreign messages" were sent. After a careful study of the whole accounting problem, a change has been decided upon, by which the billing of "foreign messages" will be brought up to within ten days of the end of the month during which messages were sent.

To make this change effective at once, and to bring the billing up to date, the bills to be sent out February 1st will carry charges for "foreign messages" for the month of December, under the old method, and up to and including January 20th, under the new method. Subsequent bills will cover charges for "foreign messages" from the 21st of one month up to and including the 20th of the next month. For instance, the March 1st bill will include such charges from January 21st up to and including February 20th.

In addition to bills being rendered as promptly as possible after the "foreign messages" are sent, a memorandum will accompany the bill showing the dates on which the "foreign messages" were sent. The additional data will aid the subscriber in checking his accounts.

EAGLES' PAST CHIEFS' GATHER AT BANQUET

The Past Chiefs' Association, District No. 10, comprising New Brunswick, Plainfield and Somerville, held its annual meeting and banquet at the Hotel Waldorf last night. There were about fifty of the seventy-five members present, representing the three towns. Prior to the benquet, there was a short business meeting, when these officers were elected for the coming year:

President, Lewis C. Davis, of Golden Crown Castle, No. 52, Somerville; vice-president, William Day, Freedom Castle, No. 42, Plainfield; secretary, Granville Moore, New Brunswich Castle, No. 71, New Brunswick; treasurer, Robert V. Kinney, Freedom Castle, No. 42, Plainfield; sergeant-at-arms, Arthur Hardy, New Brunswich Castle, No. 71, New Brunswick. It was also decided to hold the next meening in Somerville on Thursday, March 30.

Completing this business the past chiefs adpourned to the banquet room of the hotel, where Henry Windham provided a fine repast for his guests. The dining-room was tastefully decorated for the occasion, while the menu left nothing to be desired. Mr. Windham was highly complemented in the speeches which followed.

The printed menu was a novel affair, having been arranged by Past Chief William Day, of this city. It was appropriately illustrated with cuts, and this paragraph amused the knights:

"Man is the only animal that was made to laugh. Laughter makes you healthy; it increases your blood circulation; it enlarges the heart; it expands the lungs; it jiggers the diaphragm; it promotes the diocculation of the spleen. Never trust a man who laughs from his neck up. An honest man laughs from his diaphragm, and there is much truth in this 'mirth cure.' It will never be advertiesd, because laughter is free and you can't sell it. "Laugh and the world laughs with you;' snore and you sleep alone. Smoke up."

After the banquet there were a number of excellent speechs prtaining to the welfare and progress of the association, as well as the order in general. Those who spoke were Past Grand Chiefs L. C. Davis, Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, Horace J. Martin, M. F. Gano, Granville Moore, William Day, Thomas Depew, Frank Bailey, and Fred Van Doren.

The affair was concluded with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne." The past chiefs present were:

Freedom Castle, No. 42—Past Grand Chiefs Dr. J. H. Buchanan, Horace J. Martin, R. V. Kinney and Past Chiefs W. E. Day, W. J. Allen, A. R. Vail, F. W. Bailey, S. Frank Runyon, W. W. F. Randolph, L. W. Niles, L. A. Hummer, L. M. Hummer, T. E. Currin, Jr., Clarence Van Doren, C. H. Lowrie, Walter Butz, J. O. Randall, A. B. Caleen, L. A. Martin. New Brunswick Castle, No. 71—Past Chiefs J. M. Stoetzel, G. L. Moore, Thomas DePew, John Hawks, J. Anderson, Arthur Hardy, P. V. Bergen, A. R. Reeves, M. Marks, Clifford Horner, Adam Krank, Robert Davison, John Horner. Golden Crown Castle, No. 52—Past Chiefs L. C. Davis, F. C. Benbrook, John VanFleet, L. G. Ayers, John Kline, Jr., Edward Doren, J. H. Gaston. Annandale Castle, No. 43—Past Chief M. F. Gano. ### 300 ON A STRIKE.

Punishment of Fellow Employee Causes Walk Out.

Camden, Jan. 28.—Three hundred men walked out on strike from the Victor Talking Machine drill press department yesterday. An attempt on the part of the foreman to discipline a workman for "beating the whistle," that is, stopping work in advance of the proper time, is said to have caused the trouble.

The local union held a meeting yesterday afternoon and put the matter in the hands of the Central Labor Union. Representatives of the company say that the other departments are not affected by the strike. The company has 3,000 employees. It is said the strikers will be taken back if they do not delay their return too long.

BOYS ASK SENTENCE.

Youthful Thieves Wanted to Go to To Reform School.

New Brunswick, aJn. 28.—Willie Finnegan, twelve years old, and Freddie Rosenberg, ten years old, yesterday became tired of a short career as thieves and applied to the police to send them to the reform school.

The boys a few nights ago tried to steal the opera house bass drum. Next they robbed John P. Flanagan's grocery store, and last night stole bottled beer from a wagon. They drank some of the beer and yesterday felt remorse.

The police turned the boys over to Probation Officer MacWilliam, and Judge Lyon sent them to the reform school in Jamesburg.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

More than passing interest attaches to the appearance at the Plainfield theatre, Saturday, February 4, matinee and night, of the popular American actor, Wilton Lackaye in Charles T. Dazey's latest comedy-drama "The Stranger." Like "In Old Kentucky," which still retains a following of generous proportions among discriminating theatregoers, "The Stranger" is a Southern play, the action being laid in a litle Georgian town. There is the true Southern touch which distinguished Mr. Dazey's earlier effort. The Characters are such as can be found almost anywhere in that part of the country, and they are drawn with fidelity to actual conditions. There is much good in the story.

Raising of the Maine.

The newspapers of Spain are giving much space to dispatches from the United States describing the investigations incident to the raising of the wreck of the battleship Maine in Havana Harbor. They appear peculiarly interested in anything in the way of evidence that the warship was lost as the result of an explosion from within. Moderate comments are made on the injustice of the Spanish-American War.

Stood many a bump and toss;
But now, b'jocks—hooray! hooray!
Old Jim put one across.

It's the U. S. Senate now for mine—

SCHENCK TURNS WIFE DOWN.

Says He Will Never Take Woman Back.

Wheeling, W. Va., Jon. 28.—In his first public interview since the arrest of his wife on the charge of poisoning him with arsenic and lead, John Schenck said yesterday that he would never take his wife back if she should eventually be acquitted of the charge. He was bitterly disappointed at the failure of the jury to agree on a verdict of guilty, and declared that he would not, unless forced to, stand any of the expense of his wife's first trial. Mr. Schenck declared with emphasis that he would never give up his children to the woman unless forced to by the courts.

Didn't Lose Pocketbook.

Judge DeMeza gave James Murray and Joseph Kerr ten minutes to leave town in yesterday afternoon. The two men were arrested on complaint of James Patterson who charged them with stealing his pocketbook while riding on a main line trolley car. As a matter of fact the pocketbook with its contents safe was found in the pocket of another pair of Patterson's trousers after the pair of alleged pickpockets had been thoroughly searched at police headquarters.

Says He is Incorrigible.

Michael Shapiro, an alleged incorrigible Hebrew boy, twelve years old, was put in charge of assistant probation officer Hamilton this morning. Max Shapiro, the boy's father, said that he was unable to control him although he had used moral suasion, and had even resorted to corporal punishment. The youngster was not at all feazed by his punishment and left the court smiling to give Mr. Hamilton his pedigree.

Saddening Effect.

She—I wonder what it is down here by the sea that makes one so sad?

He—I don't know unless it's because your pocketbook can't keep pace with the scenery.

Had to Talk.

He—I thought you said those two women didn't speak to each other?

She—They didn't, but one of them had a secret she couldn't keep any longer.

The Plainfield Lyceum will give o sacred concert at Bethel chapel, tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. A special musical program has been arranged. A silver offering will be received at the door.

THEIR SUDDEN CHANGES.

"We've had some sudden changes in the weather lately," remarked the butcher, as he delivered a porterhouse steak at the janitor's door.

"Yes," responded the janitor, who was watching the retrogressing hand on his heater gauge, "but they ain't nothin' to th' sudden changes that me tenants has."

"How is that?" asked the interested butcher.

"Why," explained the janitor, when he had hastened the speed of the hand on the gauge by closing the damper, "th' very exact instant me tenants gits cold they gits hot."

No Use for Back Numbers.

The up-to-date society maiden was having her palm read.

'And I see a handsome youth," confieded the fortune teller, "who will love you in the same old way."

But the society girl tossed her head with impatience.

"Oh, bother the same old way," she pouted. "I want the new-fashioned way. Motor-boat trips and aeroplane flights by moonlight and all those things."

Bright Lad.

The teacher was trying to familiarize her little pupils with the definition of the word "tame."

"And what do most animals become after they have been in the zoo a long time?" she asked her class.

Up went the chubby hand of the little boy in the blue reefer.

"Please, ma'am, I know," he chirped.

"What, Willie?"

"Peanut eaters, ma'am."

Historically Accurate.

Roman Citizen (just a few B. C.)—See hereibus! What do you mean by smoking? Don't you know that tobacco won't be introduced into Europe for 1,500 years?

Marcus Scrapicus—Oh, that's all right, old sportum! Roman soldiers smoke. Didn't I see one of 'em smoking a "perfecto" in the Hudson-Fulton carnival parade up in New York?—Puck.

HER PREFERENCE.

Lodger (chaffing)—Well, Biddy, wouldn't you like to marry a young man with a future?

Biddy—Sure, thin, I'd rather have an ould man without one.

Natural.

Now, when the wind, like icy bat,
Strikes my poor frame and leaves a sting,
I wish I had my ulster that
I gave away in balmy spring.

Getting Wise.

"Before I married," said Mr. Henpeck, "I didn't know what it meant to support a wife."

"I presume you know now?"

"Yes, indeed. I looked up the word 'support' in the dictionary and discovered that one of its meanings is 'endure.'"

Race Dangers.

"Pop!"

"Yes, my boy."

"This paper says that no race is safe from cholera."

"Is that so? Well, my son, you mustn't go in any more of those Marathons, then!"—Yonkers Statesman.

An Accident.

"There was a time," said the has been, "when I had the world at my feet."

"Well?" queried the man who had arrived.

"Then," concluded the other, "my foot slipped."

Literary Advice.

"I'm thinking of writing a novel."

"Don't do it."

"Don't write a novel?"

"No; don't think about writing it and then you may be able to turn out a best seller."

Trucking.

"I raised all the wood in that truck on my own farm," said the man on the wagon.

"Oh, I see; yours is a truck farm?" replied the innocent one.—Yonkers Statesman.

The Reason.

"When I was your age, sir, I got home early and did not spend money foolishly."

"You must have married mighty young, dad."

Appropriate Gardening.

"How many smoke trees there are in that garden!"

"Yes; it belongs to a tobacconist."

SHORT JACKETS.

Bid Fair to Be Leaders Among Early Spring Fads.

Odd Little Garments Add Much to a Smart Toilet—Fur a Much Used Trimming For Gowns and Mantles.

From now on look out for the arrival of the little jacket in endless shapes and developments. Winter is hardly the time to bring it in in pronounced and varied styles, but now that spring clothes may be looked for to crop out here and there the little jacket is sure to occupy a very important place, if not the center of the stage.

The jacket shown in the drawing is one of the early manifestations. Here it is of black velvet, a sleeveless affair with girdle of the same material and a wide band of fur to shorten the waist line. This band has a jaunty finish of tails and a fur covered ornament. The neck is plain, a mere crossover, which, with its hard outline, brings out the daintiness of the lace yoke underneath. The band of the skirt and the sleeves are of lace over gold tissue. The fur band at the hem of the skirt is too familiar these days to need comment. Street gowns, dinner toilets, dance frocks sometimes and even matinees all receive such treatment.

The long, all enveloping mantles are the most conspicuous things in any group of persons gowned or wrapped for evening. Some of the mantles are rich in the extreme. They are made of all fur, of velvet trimmed with fur, of costly brocades, of sheer stuffs with snug interlinings, of satins, silks and cloths. But one and all owe much of their effect to fur trimmings. These all enveloping mantles have all but taken the place of the tailor made coat and skirt suit this season, for they appear over gowns mornings and afternoons as well as evenings.

A new fancy in the linings of long coats is the use of a pale color in the upper part and a dark one at the bottom. The fad is certainly practical, for the long coats are subjected to soil from the pavements as much as a skirt and the dark lining at the bottom saves some of the murky appearance that is sure to appear in a light lining with a few times' wearing.

In the ermine furs that have been coming out for southern use—ermine is an ideal fur for sunny lands—some are made up in stoles and muffs with the little skins arranged to form a number of Vandyke points in the center, while the outer edges are bordered with another fur. Some such sets have linings of seal and facings of seal and may be worn either side out.

Fur is used in an endless number of ways by the milliner. A big picture hat covered smoothly with white kid and lined with brown velvet has a gold cord around the crown at the bottom, and around the high crown at the top there is a whole sable skin, the head at one side of the front and the tail and paws falling off at the other side of the front.

Coats and hats are the first interest of every one as a new season approaches, and this time the interest is unusually keen because there is a general feeling that a definite change of the styles is at hand.

The best argument against excess of physical training is the fact that few great athletes attain to great age.

There is no need for any one being excessively thin. Proper exercise, nourishing food and abundance of sleep will build up the emaciated body and develop arms that were thin, legs that were spindled and chests that were flat.

ATTRACTIVE KIMONO BLOUSE.

Large Variety of Materials Available, In Connection With Gold Lace and Embroidery, For Its Perfection.

This season the question of blouses is important, because every woman, whether she makes an attempt at elaborate dressing or strives only for plain effects, must give her waists special attention. This being the case, any model that has smart lines and is simple and easy to make will find many admirers, and the blouse pictured here fills all these requirements.

For wear with a coat suit this model will be attractive if developed in silk or in marquisette laid over a silk lining.

If this blouse is to complete a costume, broadcloth, cashmere, henrietta, challis, nun's veiling or some of the novelty silk and woolen weaves would be an excellent selection.

In order to cut the waist as pictured without piecing the goods must be thirty-six or more inches wide, and one and one-quarter yards will be needed.

To make a model in this type the trimming and yoke material are as important factors as the choice of the goods for the blouse.

As trimming for the garment bands of net braided or embroidered will be effective on chiffon or marquisette.

The yoke of such a blouse could be of net in a matching color laid over gold or silver cloth.

If the waist is to form part of a costume the banding could be of silk and the yoke of baby Irish or cluny lace. If an elaborate dress is wanted the yoke band of the silk could be shaped so it would extend in points on the front of the waist. The edges could be couched with heavy silk floss in the same color, but a shade or two lighter than the silk.

Hand embroidery, cleverly arranged so it lies over the edges of the silk bands and parts extend on the cloth, will add to the attractive appearance of the waist. If more elaboration is needed insets of lace that match in pattern with that used for the yoke would be effective and harmonious. This lace should be caught around the edges to the material invisibly and the goods cut from beneath.

ORIENTAL SASHES.

Fashion Decrees That They Must Be Tied to Give a Distinctly Japanese Effect.

This is the way to tie your sash. The effect is distinctly Japanese, especially the obi-like arrangement of the thick velvet ornamented with silver cords and cabochons.

But as they are the very latest from Paris these sashes will find favor with us, and some dresses past their first youth will gain a new lease of life from the sash with long wide ends which cover up such a multitude of discrepancies.

The illustration here shows that the waist line is still to be high, but it has always been noticeable that the minute a wide sash appears in the fashions the belt line comes down. This is because every woman likes to appear as slender as possible, and by just giving the sash a little point in the front and pinning it down she acquires the desired effect and lengthens the waist line.

The obi sash can only be worn by a very slight figure, for the double folds of chiffon velvet even in the finest quality cannot be said to diminish one's size. The upper part of the bow, which is fastened to the waist—in this case to the coat—is distinctly Japanese in appearance and has a tendency to make the back look wide, an effect not usually desired. However, it is smart and will be worn, like everything else that is new and unusual.

This model is of deep gray velvet, the obi and the bottom of the dress being the same color, while the coat itself is of a dull rose colored cloth embroidered in silver and hose. There is a band of fur around the bottom of the dress and another band of blue fox at the hem of the coat. A large black velvet hat trimmed with dull rose wings completes the costume.

There is, besides, the "pinwheel" bow, made of soft satin, with six large loops arranged to resemble a child's pinwheel around a central piece of stiffening covered with a chou of the same satin.

There are other arrangements in bows, some being stiff little affairs for afternoon dress, others being chiffon bows draped on the frock. A butterfly bow in black crepe de chine without ends is also suggested. The bow is securely fastened to the dress at all points.

MILKING A KICKER.

An Arrangement of Boards That Will Protect the Milker From Injury.

Many devices and suggestions are annually brought forward for the best method of milking a kicking cow. All of them are good, and the selection of one of the methods depends merely on its convenience to the individual.

Here is a suggestion which may prove effective with a great many dairymen:

Tie the cow in a stall, allowing her no surplus rope. To the right hand manger post bolt (loosely) a board that will reach to opposite left hand post at rear of cow. The board should be a little springy, but strong. A simple catch will hold the board in place. Since all stables are not made alike the general principles can only be given. But the main point is to have the board so adjusted as to press firmly against the cow's right side. Thus a wedge shaped space between board and partition is obtained in which the cow is securely held.

In the illustration the right hand partition is removed to give a better view of device. A hook made of heavy wire serves to hold board up out of the way when not in use.

SCOURS IN CALVES.

A Good Method of Prevention of and Cure For This Infectious Disease.

Scours, or calf cholera, is a serious complaint and very difficult to overcome.

It is an infection caused by one of two or three different specific germs which gain access to the blood of the calves through some wound or broken skin surface. The germ is present some place in the barns or lots. First thoroughly clean and disinfect all calf pens, barns and sheds inhabited by the calves. Keep the calves out of mud or wet stalls. These considerations are incidental to the main preventions, but must be given very careful attention. It will be found a hard fight, and every precaution must be taken in a thorough manner.

The main operation in preventing the disease is to watch closely for the birth of all calves. Have a strong string soaked in a solution of creolin or lysol, and just as soon as the youngster is born thoroughly bathe and disinfect the umbilical cord and tie the string tightly around the cord close to the body. This is the usual source of infection.

Without these precautions the disease will probably never be eliminated, but where all of them are carefully observed, and especially in the latter, the trouble will soon die out. The infection is not caused by the feed. Experienced breeders have found that to prevent scours in young calves an excellent plan is to feed a teaspoonful of blood flour, which can be purchased direct from the packers, in each feed of milk given to each calf.

COMFORT FOR COWS.

Neglect Will Rapidly Result In a Decreased Production of Milk.

If stock is made uncomfortable by being fed at irregular times, so that they spend a great deal of their time expecting to be fed, the discomfort shows in lower production. If they are made uncomfortable by having a poor bed, by being roughly handled, by having a dog set on them or by being left out in the cold or allowed to go thirsty, these conditions result in decreased production.

One of the great advantages of weighing the milk every day from each cow is that it gives one a quick check on any condition that brings about discomfort to his animals. If any cow shows a dropping off of the milk flow, as a rule, a little observation will show that she has been made uncomfortable in some of the ways mentioned above, and, knowing these facts, the farmer is able to check these unfavorable conditions quickly.

If you want to know how long to allow cows to stay out in the winter just take off your coat and go out into the yard and stand around awhile. When you begin to feel uncomfortable and feel like going into the house put the cows in the barn.

DAIRY NOTES

It is not good business judgment to expect good results from dairy cows without a pasture for the animals. You will be disappointed if you do.

Johnson grass hay when properly cured is a good roughage for the dairy herd. The best way to dispose of Johnson grass is to cut it for hay and feed it to your animals.

Plenty of good water is essential to the success of dairying. An abundance of water is required, not only for the animals, but to take care of sewage and to cleanse the dairy vessels. Cleanliness is godliness in the dairy.

The DAIRY

DAIRYING IN WINTER.

The Advantages That Can Be Derived Therefrom if Proper Methods Are Pursued.

Those having cows giving milk this winter are fortunate, as there is a good demand for all dairy products at excellent prices. Besides this, there is generally an abundant supply of feeding material for the production of milk throughout the country. In New England there was a large crop of hay, at the west the crop of corn was the greatest ever grown, while over the country generally the several grains have yielded well.

Silos have also been increasing in number, which shows the continued interest that is manifested in the value of the corn plant in the form of ensilage for the dairy.

With this combination of the different kinds of feeds, along with proper barn arrangements and good care, the cows should be made to do their best in the production of milk even in winter.

With these conditions cows can be made to do nearly or quite as well as in the summer season, while the prices for dairy products will as a usual thing be quite a little higher. But for some reason there is now not as much winter dairying practiced as was the case ten or twenty years ago.

It would be better if more attention were given to this kind of work at least in that part of the country where the conditions are the most favorable. Of course there needs to be good barns with convenient, comfortable stables for the purpose both for the cows and those who have the care of them. Then with a variety of suitable fodder there should be the best of success.

More grain has been raised, which will be of help to the farmer. With milk and butter at high prices it certainly will pay to feed liberally—not to waste, but as much as the cows can make a good and profitable use of.

There is usually plenty of time to attend to this kind of work, more than in the busy season of the year. Another advantage is the rearing of calves in winter for the use of the dairy.

With proper feed and care from the first these little animals will grow and thrive just as well as in warm weather and by next May will be large enough to turn to pasture and care for themselves.

Every farmer should endeavor to do a little better the coming year than the last, making such progress as will be fully discernible not only to himself, but also to others.

A BAG FILLER.

A Very Simple Way to Make Work of Storing Potatoes, Apples, Etc., Lighter.

It very often happens that one wishes to fill sacks with small grain, apples, potatoes, etc., but has no one to help hold the bag. An excellent method of doing this is to procure an old wooden or metal bucket and knock out the bottom. If it is a metal bucket, file the edges smooth to prevent its tearing the bag. Set the bucket in the mouth of the bag as shown in the illustration and you will have no trouble in filling it.

SKIMMILK.

Its Value as a Marketable Commodity and as a Feed Is Generally Underestimated.

Comparatively few people appreciate the value of skimmilk when properly used. If we refer to experiments that have been conducted with skimmilk we find prices put upon it varying from 15 cents to over a dollar per hundred. It depends upon the kind of live stock that receives the skimmilk, with what feeds it is mixed, how it is handled, etc., as to the amount received for it.

When tankage sells for $40 per ton skimmilk is worth 15 cents per hundred for feeding pigs. When a well bred grade dairy calf is raised on skimmilk it easily returns to the farmer 50 cents per hundred, for grade dairy calves readily sell for $25 apiece at six months of age. If fed to pure breds the skimmilk amounts to considerably more.

When skimmilk is fed to poultry it is worth at least a dollar per hundred. It is plain, therefore, that much depends upon how the skimmilk is used as to what return it gives.

Some farmers are beginning to realize that they have not the comprehension of farm products that will lead to get all out of the farm that is in it. Before farms are organized to yield the highest profit it is going to take earnest thought and co-operation of the farmers.

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

The Great Conservation Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

To the casual observer in a town of this character there was nothing specially noticeable in three horsemen driving a pack horse, but to those whose eyes were keen the true relationship of the ranger to his captives was instantly apparent, and when they alighted at Judge Higley's office a bunch of eager observers quickly collected.

"Hello, Joe! What luck?" called Ballard.

"Our luck was a little too good—we caught a game warden," replied the young scapegrace.

The ranger was chagrined to find the office of the justice closed for the day and, turning to his captives, said: "I'm hungry, and I've no doubt you are. I'm going to take you into Mike Halsey's saloon for supper, but remember you are my prisoners."

In fifteen minutes the town was rumbling with the news. Under Ballard's deviltry all the latent hatred of the ranger and all the concealed opposition to the forest service came to the surface like the scum on a pot of broth. The saloons and eating houses boiled with indignant protest. "What business is it of Ross Cavanagh's?" they demanded. "What call has he to interfere? He's not a game warden."

"Yes, he is. All these rangers are game wardens," corrected another.

"No, they're not. They have to be commissioned by the governor."

"Well, he's been commissioned. He's warden all right."

"I don't believe it. Anyhow, he's too fresh. He needs to have a halt. Let's do him. Let's bluff him out."

Lee Virginia was in the kitchen superintending the service when one of the waiters came in breathless with excitement. "Ross Cavanagh has shot Joe Gregg for killing sheep!"

Lee faced her with blanched face. "Who told you so?"

"They're all talking about it out there. Gee, but they're hot! Some of 'em want to lynch him."

Lee hurried out into the dining room, which was crowded with men and voicing deep excitement.

A half dozen men were standing before the counter talking with Lize, but Lee pushed in to inquire with white, inquiring face: "What is it all about? What has happened?"

"Nothing much," Lize replied contemptuously, "but you'd think a horse had been stole. Ross has nipped Joe Gregg and one of his herders for killing mountain sheep."

"Do you mean he shot them?"

"Yes; he took their heads."

Lee stood aghast. "What do you mean? Whose heads?"

Lize laughed. "The sheep's heads. Oh, don't be scared! No one is hurt yet."

The girl flushed with confusion as the men roared over her blunder. "One of the girls told me Mr. Cavanagh had killed a man," she explained. "Where is he?"

Lize betrayed annoyance. "They say he's taking supper at Mike Halsey's, though why he didn't come here I don't see. What's he going to do?" she asked. "Won't the marshal take the men off his hands?"

"Not without warrant from Higley, and Higley is out of town. Ross 'll have to hold 'em till Higley gets back or else take 'em over to Chauvenet," Lize snorted. "Old Higley! Yes, he's been known to disappear before when there was some real work to be done."

Lee went back to her own task with a vague sense of alarm. "Certainly they will not dare to interfere with an officer in the discharge of his duties," she thought. She was eager to see him, and the thought that he might be obliged to ride away to Chauvenet without a word to her gave her a deeper feeling of annoyance and unrest. That he was in any real danger she could not believe.

It was disheartening to Cavanagh to see how some of the most influential citizens contrived to give encouragement to the riotous element of the town. A wink, a gesture, a careless word to the proper messenger, conveyed to the saloon rounders an assurance of sympathy which inflamed their resentment to the murderous point. It was confessedly one of the worst communities in the state.

"Let's run Cavanagh!" was the suggestion of several of Gregg's friends.

The fact that the ranger was a commissioned officer of the law and that the ram's head had been found on the poacher's pack made very little difference to these irresponsible instigators to assault. It was wonderful how highly that loafing young rascal Joe Gregg was prized at the moment. "It's an outrage that the son of a leading citizen should be held up in this way by one of the forestry Cossacks," declared one of the merchants.

The discussion which took place over the bars of the town was at the riot heat by 9 o'clock, and soon after 10 a crowd of howling, whooping bad boys and disreputable ranch hands were parading the walks, breathing out vile threats against the ranger.

Accustomed to men of this type, Cavanagh watched them come and go at Halsey's bar with calculating eyes. "There will be no trouble for an hour or two, but meanwhile what is to be done? Higley is not to be found, and the town marshal is also 'out of town.'" To Halsey he said: "I am acting, as you know, under both federal and state authority, and I call upon you as a law abiding citizen to aid me in holding these men prisoners. I shall camp right here till morning or until the magistrate or the marshal relieves me of my culprits."

Halsey was himself a sportsman—a genuine lover of hunting and a fairly consistent upholder of the game laws; but, perceiving that the whole town had apparently lined up in opposition to the ranger, he lost courage. His consent was half hearted, and he edged away toward the front window of his barroom, nervously seeking to be neutral—"to carry water on both shoulders," as the phrase goes.

The talk grew less jocular as the drinks took effect, and Neill Ballard, separating himself from the crowd, came forward, calling loudly: "Come out o' there, Joe! Come out and have a drink!"

His words conveyed less of battle than his tone. He was, in fact, urging a revolt, and Cavanagh knew it.

Gregg rose as if to comply. The ranger stopped him.

"Keep your seat," said he, and to Ballard he warningly remarked, "And you keep away from my prisoners."

"Do you own this saloon?" retorted the fellow truculently. "I reckon Halsey's customers have some rights. What are you doing here, anyway? This is no jail."

"Halsey has given me the privilege of holding my prisoners here till the justice is found. It isn't my fault that the town is without judge or jail." He was weakened by the knowledge that Halsey had only half consented to aid justice, but his pride was roused, and he was determined upon carrying his arrest to its legitimate end. "I'm going to see that these men are punished if I have to carry them to Sulphur City," he added.

"Smash the lights!" shouted some one at the back.

Here was the first real note of war, and Ross cried out sharply, "If a man lifts a hand toward the light I'll cut it off!"

There was a stealthy movement in the crowd, and, leaping upon the counter, a reckless cub reached for the lamp.

Cavanagh's revolver shattered the globe in the fellow's very palm. "Get down from there!" he commanded.

CHAPTER XI.

LIZE PLAYS A MAN'S PART—ALSO LEE.

THE mob besieging Cavanagh in Halsey's saloon had not found its leader. It hesitated and blustered, but did not strike and eventually edged out of the door and disappeared. But the silence which followed its retreat was more alarming to the ranger than its presence. Some slier mischief was in these minds. He feared that they were about to cut the electric light wires and so plunge him into darkness, and to prepare for that emergency he called upon the bartender (Halsey having vanished) for a lamp or a lantern.

The fellow sullenly set about this task, and Ross, turning to Gregg, said, "If you've any influence with this mob you'd better use it to keep them out of mischief, for I'm on this job to the bitter end, and somebody's going to be hurt."

Gregg, who seemed quite detached from the action and rather delighted with it, replied: "I have no influence. They don't care a hang about me. They have it in for you, that's all."

Edwards remained silent, with his hat drawn low over his eyes. It was evident that he was anxious to avoid being seen and quite willing to keep out of the conflict; but, with no handcuffs and the back door of the saloon unguarded, Ross was aware that his guard must be incessant and alertly vigilant.

"Such a thing could not happen under the English flag," he said to himself, and at the moment his adopted country seemed a miserable makeshift. Only the thought of Redfield and the chief nerved him for the long vigil. "The chief will understand if it comes up to him," he said.

Lize Wetherford came hurrying in, looking as though she had just risen from her bed. She was clothed in a long red robe, her grizzled hair was loose, her feet were bare, and she carried a huge old fashioned revolver in her hand. Her mouth was stern.

Stopping abruptly as she caught sight of Ross standing in the middle of the floor unhurt, she exclaimed: "There you are! Are you all right?"

"As a trivet," he replied.

She let her gun hand relax. "What was the shooting?"

"A little bluff on my part."

"Anybody hurt?"

"No."

She was much relieved. "I was afraid they'd got you. I came as quick as I could. I was abed. That fool doctor threw a chill into me, and I've been going to roost early according to orders. I didn't hear your gun, but Lee did, and she came to tell me. Don't let 'em get behind you. If I was any good I'd stay and help. What you going to do—hold your men here all night?"

"I don't see any other way. Halsey turned the place over to me, but"— He looked about him suspiciously.

"Bring 'em into my place. Lee has had new locks put on our doors; they'll help some."

"I don't like to do that, Mrs. Wetherford," he replied, with greater respect than he had ever shown her before. "They may attack me there."

"All the better; I'll be on hand to help. But they're less likely to boil in on you through a locked door."

"But your daughter? It will alarm her."

"She'll be in the other house, and, besides, she'd feel easier if you are in my place. She's all wrought up by the attack on you."

Ross turned to his prisoners. "Follow Mrs. Wetherford and—eyes front!"

"You needn't worry about me," said Joe. "I won't run."

"I don't intend to give you a chance," replied Ross.

Edwards seemed to have lost in both courage and physical stature. He slouched along with shuffling step, his head bent and his face pale. Ross was now profoundly sorry for him, so utterly craven and broken was his look.

As Ross brought his two prisoners to the Wetherford House Lee was waiting on the porch of the hotel, tense with excitement, straining her ears and eyes to see what was taking place.

The night had started with a small sickle of moon, but this had dropped below the range, leaving the street dark save where the lights from the windows of the all night eating houses and saloons lay out upon the walk, and while she stood peering out the sound of rancorous howling and shrill whooping came to her ears with such suggestion of ferocity that she shivered.

A few of the hotel guests had gone to bed, but the women were up, excited and nervous, starting at every fresh outburst of whooping, knowing that their sons or husbands were out in the street "to see the fun" and that they might meet trouble.

At last Lee discerned her mother returning from Halsey's, followed by three men. Withdrawing from the little porch whereon she had been standing, she re-entered the house to meet her mother in the hall. "Where is Mr Cavanagh?" she asked.

"Out in the dining room. You see, Mike Halsey is no kind of use. He vamoosed and left Ross down there alone with his two prisoners and the lights likely to be turned out on him, so I offered the caffy as a calaboose. They are sure in for a long and tedious night."

Lee was alarmed at her mother's appearance. "You must go to bed. You look ghastly."

"I reckon I'd better lay down for a little while, but I can't sleep. Ross may need me. There isn't a man to help him but me, and that loafer Ballard is full of gall. He's got it in for Ross and will make trouble if he can."

"What can we do?"

"Shoot!" replied Lize, with dry brevity. "I wouldn't mind a chance to plug some of the sweet citizens of this town. I owe them one or two."

With this sentence in her ears Lee Virginia went to her bed, but not to slumber. Her utter inability either to control her mother's action or to influence that of the mob added to her uneasiness.

The singing, shouting, trampling of the crowd went on, and once a group of men halted just outside her window, and she heard Neill Ballard noisily, drunkenly arguing as to the most effective method of taking the prisoners.

"Come on, boys!" said Ballard, his voice filled with reckless determination. "Let's run him."

As they passed the girl sprang up and went to her mother's room to warn her of the threatened attack.

Lize was already awake and calmly loading a second revolver by the light of the electric bulb. A jarring blow was heard. "Hear that? They're breaking in!" said Lize. She started to leave the room.

Lee stopped her. "Where are you going?"

"To help Ross. Here!" She thrust the handle of a smaller weapon into Lee's hand. "Ed Wetherford's girl ought to be able to take care of herself. Come on!"

With a most unheroic horror benumbing her limbs, Lee followed her mother through the hall. The sound of shouts and the trampling of feet could be heard, and she came out into the restaurant just in time to photograph upon her brain a scene whose significance was at once apparent. On a chair between his two prisoners and confronting Ballard at the head of a crowd of frenzied villains stood the ranger, a gleaming weapon in his hand, a look of resolution on his face.

What he had said or what he intended to do she did not learn, for her mother rushed at the invaders with the mad bravery of a she bear. "Get out of here!" she snarled, thrusting her revolver into the very mouth of the leader.

They all fell back in astonishment and fear.

"THERE YOU ARE! ARE YOU ALL RIGHT?"

Ross leaped to her side. "Leave them to me!" he said. "I'll clear the room."

"Not on your life! This is my house. I have the right to smash the fools." And she beat them over the heads with her pistol barrel.

Recognizing that she was minded to kill, they retreated over the threshold, and Ross, drawing the door close behind them, turned to find Lee Virginia confronting Edwards, who had attempted to escape into the kitchen. The girl's face was white, but the eye of her revolver stared straight and true into her prisoner's face.

With a bound Ross seized him and flung him against the wall. "Get back there!" he shouted. "You must take your medicine with your boss."

The old fellow hurriedly replaced his ragged hat and, folding his arms, sank back into his chair with bowed head, while Lize turned upon Joe Gregg. "What did you go into this kind of deal for? You knew what the game laws was, didn't you? Your old dad is all for state regulation, and here you are breaking a state law. Why don't you stand up for the code like a sport?"

Joe, who had been boasting of the smiles he had drawn from Lee, did not relish this tongue lashing from her mother; but, assuming a careless air, he said, "I'm all out of smokes; get me a box, that's a good old soul."

Lize regarded him with the expression of one nonplused. "You impudent little cub!" she exclaimed. "What you need is a booting!"

The ranger addressed himself to Lee. "I want to thank you for a very opportune intervention. I didn't know you could handle a gun so neatly."

She flushed with pleasure. "Oh, yes, I can shoot. My father taught me when I was only six years old."

As she spoke Ross caught the man Edwards studying them with furtive glance, but upon being observed he resumed his crouching attitude, which concealed his face beneath the rim of his weather worn hat. It was evident that he was afraid of being recognized. He had the slinking air of the convict, and his form, so despairing in its lax lines, appealed to Lee with even greater poignancy than his face. "I'm sorry," she said to him, "but it was my duty to help Mr. Cavanagh."

He glanced up with a quick sidewise slant. "That's all right, miss. I should have had sense enough to keep out of this business." He spoke with difficulty, and his voice was hoarse with emotion.

Lize turned to Lee. "The doc said 'no liquor,' but I guess here's where I draw one. I feel faint."

Ross hurried to her side, while young Gregg tendered a handsome flask. "Here's something."

Lize put it away. "Not from you. Just reach under my desk, Ross; you'll find some brandy there. That's it," she called as he produced a bottle. Clutching it eagerly, she added, "They say it's poison, but it's my meat tonight." Little remained of the woman in Lize, and the old sheep herder eyed her with furtive curiosity.

"I was afraid you'd shoot," Lize explained to Ross, "and I didn't want you to muss up your hands on the dirty loafers. I had the right to kill. They were trespassers, and I'd 'a' done it too."

"I don't think they intended to actually assault me," he said, "but it's a bit discouraging to find the town so indifferent over both the breaking of the laws and the doings of a drunken mob. I'm afraid the most of them are a long way from law abiding people yet."

Joe, who did not like the position in which he stood as respecting Lee, here made an offer of aid. "I don't suppose my word is any good now, but if you'll let me do it I'll go out and round up Judge Higley. I think I know where he is."

To this Lize objected. "You can't do that, Ross; you better hold the fort here till morning."

Lee was rather sorry, too, for young Gregg, who bore his buffeting with the imperturbable face of the heroes of his class. He had gone into this enterprise with much the same spirit in which he had stolen gates and misplaced signs during his brief college career, and he was now disposed (in the presence of a pretty girl) to carry it out with undiminished impudence. "It only means a fine, anyway," he assured himself.

Cavanagh did not trust Gregg, either, and as this was the first time he had been called upon to arrest men for killing game out of season he could not afford to fail of any precaution. Tired and sleepy as he was he must remain on guard. "But you and your daughter must go to bed at once," he urged.

FIRE LAID TO BOY.

Benz Sets Torch to Mother's Home for Revenge.

Elizabeth, Jan. 28.—Conrad Benz, nineteen years old, who has a bad record in this city and who has served a term in the State Home for Boys at Jamesburg School, was yesterday arraigned in the City Criminal court and held in $500 bail to await the action of the grand jury on each of tow charges of arson. Benz set fire to the home of his mother at 931 Olive street.

It is claimed that young Benz asked his mother for money and when she refused he started the fire for revenge.

The fire Thursday he caused by setting fire to a bundle of newspapers in an egg box in a clothes closet on the top floor of his mother's house.

MRS. HETTY GREEN'S NEW TRUST COMPANY

A trust company organized to take care of the business of a single family is soon to be added to the long list of financial institutions in New York. When it is known that the family in question is that of Hetty Green, one of the several "richest women in the world," the fact that a trust company is needed to look after the property is not surprising.

With the formation of the company, Mrs. Green, now seventy-five years old and for more than half a century recognized as the shrewdest business woman in the country, will retire from the active management of her $75,000,000 estate. After a tryout of eighteen years in Texas, Mrs. Green is at last convinced that her only son, Colonel Edward H. R. Green is qualified to assume control of the vast property and will turn over the management to him.

All the Green properties, including real estate holdings in New York Chicago, San Francisco, Boston, Toledo, St. Louis and throughout the Southwest, paper mills at Bellows Falls, Vt., cotton mills at New Bedford, Mass., gold mines in California, stocks and bonds in nearly every railroad of consequence in the country and the various Texas properties, will henceforth he managed from an inside room of the new trust company.

"Actual experience has shown me," Colonel Green said yesterday, "that the best use of inherited wealth is that which will create the largest number of life jobs rather than satisfy the hunger of a day.

OFFICIAL WILL NOT SURRENDER BOOKS.

Rahway, Jan. 28. — Yesterday things assumed an active turn in the office of the Board of Assessors when Clerk Robert D. Gibby received th following communication:

"Robert Gibby;

"Dear Sir:—You are hereby notified that if you have any personal property in the City Hall to have the same removed at once,

"CHARLES W. LUDLOW,

"Chairman of city property committee."

Later Mr. Gibby was waited upon by the newly appointed Board of Assessors, consisting of Charles A. Grove, Peter Tillman and Nathan V. Compton. Mr. Grove served the following notice:

"R. D. Gibby, Esq.;

"Dear Sir:—Having assumed the duties as clerk of the Board of Assessors I respectfully request that you turn over to me at once all of the city property now in your possession, consisting of books, papers, etc., appertaining to the assessor's office. Very truly yours, "C. A. GROVE, "Clerk of the Board of Assessors."

Mr. Gibby said: "Your demand or your request I positively decline to accede to. These books can be had from me only by due process of law as I am a member of the Board of Assessors and clerk of that board."

Mr. Gibby says that he will fight for the retention of the office. As he believes that he is the only clerk of the board and that the new board was unlawfully appointed.

GOES AGAINST OWN RULING.

Court, However, Holds Ex-Judge's Decision Correct.

New Brunswick, Jan. 28.—Former Judge C. T. Cowenhoven had one of his own court rulings cited to him yesterday in opposition to a motion in the county court. Mr. Cowenhoven, as counsel for Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Murphy, held in jail for keeping a disorderly house, was opposing an order of the court that no visitors, outside of counsel, be permitted to see the Murphys at the county jail, unless on written order of the prosecutor.

Mr. Cowenhoven said that he did not think that prisoners should be placed incommunicado; in fact, that was one of the things the French revolution had aimed to abolish.

"I remember a precedent in this court," interposed Prosecutor Theodore B. Booraem. "When I was somewhat younger I applied to Judge Cowenhoven, who was then on the bench, for permission for certain parties to see a certain prisoner, and Judge Cowenhoven promptly ruled against me."

"I was younger, too, then, and did not know as much as I know now," promptly rejoined Mr. Cowenhoven.

The court declined to vacate his ruling.

Rev.Dr. W. S. Wing, of the New York East Conference, who was well-known here among Methodists, died early this week in Brooklyn. He was superintendent of the Brooklyn Church Society.

P.H.S. TEAM CHAMPIONS

Win the Deciding Basketball Game From North Plainfield Boys by Score 36 to 24.

STUBBORN FIGHT NEAR END.

Withdrawal of Leal's School Leaves Two Teams in Final Struggle —Ricketts, Karr and Bristol the Stars.

The Plainfield High School basketball team clinched the inter-scholastic championship yesterday afternoon by decisively defeating the team from the North Plainfield High School by a score of 36 to 24 in a fast, clean and stubbornly contested game. Owing to the withdrawal of the Leal School team, the championship lay between these two. The borough boys have held the championship for two successive years so yesterday's victory of the local boys has caused general jubilation.

In the first few minutes of play so close was the guard kept on the basket that scoring was impossible for either team until Stine, of North Plainfield scored the first goal on a fowl. Ricketts started the scoring for P. H. S. a few seconds later and the ensuing struggle was one pretty to witness and one which brought forth cheers from the assembled rooters. The game was played on the Y. M. C. A. floor and the rafters fairly rang with the encouragement shouted at the players.

Ricketts was on the job for his team,scoring two goals in quick succession and enthusing the whole team into greater effort. Some admirable short pasing which the borough lads tried in vain to break followed Ricketts' spurt and the score climbed up so that at the end of the first half P. H. S. led by 26 to 6.

North Plainfield took a decided brace in the second half, scoring 18 to P. H. S.'s 10, but they could not overcome the long lead the locals had taken in the earlier part of the game. Captain Stine started the rally making a basket from the foul line which he soon followed with two field goals. This spirited play rallied the energies of the boys from "across the brook" and some splendid team work ensued. Toward the end Wyckoff and Taylor replaced Townley and Walker, but the fresh muscles and eager work were unable to alter the final score and the team work was not much improved. The score: Plainfield, field goals, Ricketts,5; Karr, 5; Bristol,3; Manley, 2; Clarks, 2; fouls, Bristol and Manley. North Plainfield, field goals Stine, 4; Wyckoff, 3; Taylor, 2; Walker, 1; fouls, Stine, 5.

The line up:

TAGGART RETIRES.

To Relinquish Place on Democratic National Committee.

Indianapolis, Jan. 28.—The chief topic among Democrats here yesterday was the speech at the banquet tendered last night to Senator-elect John W. Kern, by the Indiana Democratic club, of Thomas Taggart, who pointed to the election of Mr. Kern as one of the happiest of all the successes of the party in the State. He announced that he has decided to withdraw entirely from the active field of political life and that he would not serve again on the Democratic National Committee, nor in any way participate actively in political campaigns, although he assured Democrats of Indiana that he would always be interested in the success of the party.

Rev. Dr. E. W. Davis, of the Shiloh Baptist church, will preach tomorrow morning on the subject: "Man's First Interest on Earth and in Heaven," and in the evening, he will deliver a special sermon to the missionary society. At 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon the women will hold their platform meeting.

STATE PRISON FOR HIM

Horace Codington May be Taken to Trenton to Serve His Term.

NOW IN THE SOMERSET JAIL.

Lawyer Convicted of Misappropriating Funds of Warren Township—Brother Now Home Again.

After fighting in the higher courts of the State a year for his liberty, Horace Codington, of Somerville, a lawyer, well known throughout this section of the State, and formerly a political leader of Warren township, is in the Somerset county jail today, with a prospect of being removed to the State prison at Trenton during the present week to serve a sentence of eighteen months for misappropriating the funds of Warren township unless his counsel succeeds in again securing his release under heavy bail, pending the appeal of his case to the court of last resort.

Joel Codington decided to serve his sentence rather than to continue the legal fight for his liberty. After serving eight months of his sentence, he was pardoned. He returned to his old home in Warren township, where he is now treated as a martyr by the political faction which he formerly controlled.

Horace Codington, his brother, Joel Codington, formerly the treasurer of Warren township, were sentenced by Judge Louis H. Schenck in the Somerville circuit court about a year ago, to serve eighteen and twelve months, respectively, in the State prison for misappropriating the funds of the township, after one of the most sensational trials in the history of Somerset county.

Horace Codington appealed to the supreme court to have his sentence set aside on the novel ground that Justice Parker had discharged two members of the grand jury selected by the sheriff of the county to consider his case before the members of the jury had been sworn. Justice Parker discharged the jurors for reasons which he failed to make public, after a former grand jury had failed to indict the Codingtons. The supreme court, after considering this and other technicalities and points in the case, sustained the conviction of the lower court a week ago, but Codington, who was out under bail, made no move to surrender or to carry his case to the court of errors and appeals, so he was arrested in his office, and is now making an effort to secure his release on bail.

Received Annual Reports.

The annual meeting of the Sunday-school of Trinity Reformed church, for the reading of reports of the secretary and treasurer, was held at the close of the session yesterday afternoon. The report of the secretary, Chauncey F. Colthar, showed the school to have an enrollment of 661, not including the home department, which has a membership of 350. The average attendance for the year was 354. Charles M. Dolliver, treasurer, reported receipts and expenditures of over $1,300 during the year

Celebrated Birthday Anniversary.

Mrs. John Getjleen, of 404 East Fourth street, was given a surprise party at her home, last night, in honor of the fifty-sixth anniversary of her birthday. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Charles Johnson, of South avenue, and was attended by a number of members of the Swedish Lutheran church, who also remembered Mrs. Getjlesen with gifts. She also received a money order for a substantial amount from her son, Joseph, who resides in Salt Lake City. At 10:30 o'clock supper was served.

FROM THE STABAT MATER

Selections Brilliantly Sung by Quartet at Crescent Avenue Church.

ROSSINI'S IMPRESSIVE MUSIC.

Interpretation By Local Talent Gives Pleasure to Large Audience—Repetition May Be Asked.

The choir of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church was compelled to hold a short levee after the special musical service in that church last night. The singing of selections from Rossini's Stabat Mater having aroused the congregation to a marked degree of religious fervor. Following a brief sermon by the minister, Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, the quartet under the direction of Organist Alexander Russell, began with the introduction "'Lord Most Holy," singing with utmost ease and with beautiful expression the difficult passages of this magnificent portion of the composition. Le-Roy Pilcher, tenor, sang the Cujus Animum carrying with absolute fidelity to tone and expression this supreme effort at church music to a finished performance, being particularly pleasing in the recitative portions.

One of the features which was most gratifying to the musical sense was the duet, for soprano and alto "Power Eternal," sung by Miss Lillian V. Watt and Miss Grace Carroll. Much of this selection is unaccompanied and the blended voices of the two young women made an exceptionally brilliant impression. They have never before been heard to better advantage.

A. E. Betteridge, the baritone, in "Thro' the Darkness" outdid any previous performance. Purity of tone and splendid phrasing marked his work and audible murmurs of approbation followed the concluding notes.

The Inflammatus sung by Miss Watt with the other three voices was an impressive and heroic rendition. Miss Watt's resonant and highly trained voice was heard to distinct advantage in this selection.

To Alexander Russell, the organist, much of the credit of the rendition of this music is due. The whole performance showed careful and conscientious preparation and it would be a splendid thing if the music could be repeated for the benefit of those whom the stormy weather kept at home last evening. However, the congregation probably numbered two hundred persons in spite of the rain.

ARRESTED FOR RESISTING PATROLMAN; FINED $3.

William Gray, colored, of Plainfield avenue, got drunk on Saturday night and a friend, Homer Ashley, tried to get him to go home. Gray resisted and in a minute or two the air was filled with loud and profane language emanating from Mr. Gray's protesting person. Patrolman McCarthy heard the disturbance two blocks away, and seeing the cause of the disturbance, placed both men under arrest. He had plenty of trouble getting the men to a patrol box, but managed to signal for the wagon.

While awaiting the wagon both men made a break for liberty, but only Ashley was successful. He was arrested an hour later by McCarthy at his home. Both men were fined $3.

Rev. Broek Had Busy Year.

During the past year, Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, preached eighty-eight sermons, administered five communions and five private communions, delivered thirty-five special addresses in and out of the city, delivered forty-two prayer meeting addresses, officiated at eight weddings, conducted twenty-three funerals, received thirty-three members in the church on confession and twenty-two by baptism, baptized twenty-four children and seven adults and made 558 pastoral calls.

His Excuse Failed.

John O'Brien, a tramp, who gave his address as New York city, was given a half hour to get out of town this morning by Judge De Meza in the city court. O'Brien said he came to Plainfield to cut ice, but the judge told him he didn't "cut much ice" here and in fact wasn't needed as the ice was all melted. O'Brien vanished.

MRS. CRAGIN FILES BILL

Wife of a Tennis Player Brings a Counter Suit for Divorce.

ALLEGES HE WAS CRUEL.

Denying Desertion, Claims Husband Was Frequently Drunk and That He Knocked Her Down.

Denying that she deserted her husband, William B. Cragin, Jr., of this city, and charging in a cross bill that he treated her with such extreme cruelty that she was compelled to leave him, Mrs. Maysie Bruce Cragin, of Trenton Junction, has filed in the Court of Chancery at Trenton her answer to the husband's suit for divorce. They were married in New York in 1901 and lived together in Plainfield, according to the husband's petition, until October 12, 1908, when he charges that his wife deserted him and has since refused to live with him. Cragin asks for a separation and that he may have the custody of their daughter, Marguerite, aged three years.

Mrs. Cragin, in her answer, denies the desertion on the date mentioned, and claims that she was compelled to leave her husband June 3, 1908, taking the baby daughter she came to Trenton Junction and has since resided there with relatives. She charges that Cragin was frequently drunk, that he abused and beat her, knocking her against the wall and ill-treating her in other ways. A short time before the daughter was born Mrs. Cragin declares that her husband flew into an ungovernable rage and knocked her down. Then he left the house.

Another charge of the defendant is that she was attacked with appendicitis and that Cragin neglected her and did not call a physician. She asks for a divorce and that the custody of the daughter be given her, and that Cragin may be compelled to support her. Cragin also denies her charges.

SHERMANS TELL COURT THEY ARE TO SEPARATE

Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Sherman, of Harmony street, engaged in a family scrap Saturday afternoon, during which the husband playfully slapped his wife in the face and then chased her outdoors, throwing her clothes after her. Mrs. Sherman appealed to Chief Weiss and the latter attempted to straighten out the domestic tangle, but without success. The husband ranted around, declaring the house was his and he could do as he liked with it, until the officer was compelled to arrest him on a disorderly charge.

Sherman was arraigned before Recorder Dolliver this morning, but the wife refused to appear against him. The prisoner explained to the court that they had agreed to separate and with this understanding the recorder suspended sentence. The thirty-six hours he had spent in a cell was considered sufficient punishment for a lot of sass he had given the chief when he first entered the house.

It is understood that the trouble between the pair grew out of the husband's objection to the way his wife danced with another man at Saengerbund hall, Friday night. They had an argument at the close of the affair and the wife went that night to the home of her mother, fearing to return. She went back to Harmony street Saturday and warfare began in earnest. Mrs. Sherman was formerly Miss Gertrude Coddington.

Violated Ordinance.

Victor Salzman, an umbrella maker, of East Third street, was fined $3 this morning in the city court by Judge DeMeza for selling goods without a license. He was reprimanded for not telling the truth about his business. Salzman was arrested by Patrolman Charles Flynn, who collected evidence from residents of the West End before placing Salzman under arrest.

ST. STEPHEN'S PARISH CAKE AND CANDY SALE

Under the auspices and for the benefit of St. Stephen's church, a successful cake and candy sale was held Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. K. Tetsuka, of Belvidere avenue. There was a large attendance and Mrs. Tetsuka provided delightful entertainment for the guests, receiving the praise of all present. She was assisted by Mrs. Lewis Geary, who poured tea and Mrs. Robert MacCready, who poured chocolate.

The candy and cake tables were in charge of Mrs. F. W. Carlisle, Mrs. W. W. Coriell and Miss Leslie Curtis. The decorations, which were elaborate, comprised white carnations and maiden-hair fern. The net proceeds from the affair amounted to $65, which will be placed in the church treasury.

FLOOD OF INVITATIONS FOR SENATOR MARTINE

The congratulatory message stage of a victorious candidate being in a transitory stage, United States Senator-elect James E. Martine finds himself in the midst of the invitatioin phase just at present. From all sorts or organizations, religious, political, literary and what not, the senator is receiving pressing invitations to attend some function—and make a speech.

Having broken all records established by him for keeping silence, Mr. Martine says that he will continue to forego making speeches until he has fully recovered his physical strength. Even the invitation of the famous Gridiron Club, of Washington, to be its guest on Monday night, February 13, does not appeal to him, however much he would enjoy being present. So it is as to invitations received from organizations in Philadelphia, Baltimore, Wilmington and elsewhere. None can be accepted; the physician so orders and the patient accordingly obeys.

Among the recent messages of congratulation received by the senator is one he particularly appreciates. It was a cablegram from former State Senator Everett Colby, who is now in France. Another equally enjoyed came from Mayor Speer, of Denver, Colo., who is himself a candidate for the United States Senate.

Mr. Martine sat up for an hour or so yesterday afternoon and today felt none the worse. His hearing in one ear still bothers him but in the course of a fortnight, the senator believes he will be able to be about again as strong and well as usual. "In a week or two," as he expressed himself yesterday, "I hope again to be the fortunate possessor of very good health."

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BANQUET TICKETS GOING FAST

Judge John Ulrich, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, received this morning assurance from John W. Perkins that he would be on hand and deliver a short address at the banquet to be held on February 13 in Truell Hall.

Judge Ulrich declares that those who wish tickets for the affair should obtain them at once as disappointment awaits those who leave the matter until the last moment. It is not possible to issue more than 300 tickets for the dinner and they are rapidly being bought.

Delinquents Urged to Settle.

Tax Collector W. R. Townsend stated today that on February 6 he would file the delinquent tax list with County Clerk J. C. Calvert, after which time the delinquents will be obliged to pay an additional forty cents in settlement of their bills. Those wishing to save the extra expense should see Mr. Townsend before February 6.

Suffrage Literature on Sale.

Saunders before the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield, has been published in pamphlet form and is now on sale at the stationery stores of Estil, Laing, Field and Olmstead. It is published by the local suffrage league.

In the Borough Court.

DEATH OF MISS CRAMER

Well Known Trained Nurse Succumbs Suddenly of Peritonitis.

GRADUATE OF MUHLENBERG.

Survived By Parents, Two Sisters and a Brother—The Funeral Services On Wednesday.

Miss Margaret Cramer, well-known as a trained nurse, died at 1 o'clock this morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Henry Squires, on West Eighth street, following an illness which began a week ago Saturday. She was engaged in nursing in a family at South Plainfield, when she was taken ill with what she believed to be billious attack. She left her case, going to the home of Mr. Squires thinking that she would be all right in a day or two. Suddenly peritonitis developed, and her condition was such that she could not be removed to the hospital or undergo an operation.

Miss Cramer was born in the vicinity of Somerville and during the past year and a half she had been making her home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Cramer at 20 West Cliff street, Somerville, while she was engaged in private nursing. Miss Cramer prepared for her chosen profession at the training school at Muhlenberg Hospital, being graduated in the Class of '01. A little later she became associated with Dr. G. W. Endicott, assisting him in his operations and attending to other cases of more or less importance where the services of a trained nurse were needed. A year and a half ago she gave up that position and resumed private nursing.

Miss Cramer leaves her parents, two married sisters, one being Mrs. McMurtry, of Mendham; an unmarried sister, Miss Oliver Cramer and a brother, Frank Cramer, both of Somerville. The remains were taken to the home of her parents this afternoon and the funeral will be held from that place Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The burial will be at Pluckemin.

STRANGE DISAPPEARANCE OF BARTHOLD DAHLGREN

The strange disappearance of Barthold Dahlgren, son of Mrs. Clara Dahlgren, of Sweden, who came to this country in April of last year, has prompted the youth's mother to take up a search which the police of the various cities where the boy has worked have failed in.

Mrs. Dahlgren formerly lived in this city and she gives the only information that can be gathered in regard to her lost son. Upon his arrival in New York he went to Waynesburg, Pa., to learn electrical engineering. From there he went to Rochester, N. Y., thence to Buffalo, where all traces of him have been lost. In Buffalo he was employed in the United States Light, Heat and Power Company.

Young Dahlgren's letters to his folks in Sweden ceased last November, and cable messages and letters sent to him failed to bring any replies. His mother is determined to prosecute the search until definite news of her son is obtained. He is described as being six feet, two inches tall, with brown hair and heavy dark eyebrows. It is not recorded that the boy was ever in Plainfield.

Reward for Dog Poisoner.

Charles Meyer, of Scotch Plains, in today's Daily Press offers a reward of $25 for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who poisoned his English fox hound on Friday night. The dog was a valuable one and Mr. Meyer feels the loss keenly. It never annoyed anyone and Mr. Meyer did not know that he had an enemy mean enough to poison his dog.

STATE Y. M. H. A. ELECTS

Louis A. Miller Chosen President of Organizations' State Federation.

PLANS FOR A BIG BANQUET.

Delegates From Newark, Jersey City, Bayonne, Hoboken, Trenton and Plainfield Present.

The presentation of interesting reports for the year, together with a discussion of plans for the future and election of officers comprised the chief business at the second annual meeting of the State Federation of the Young Men's Hebrew Association held with the local association yesterday afternoon. The meeting was held in the Y. M. H. A. building on Grove street. There were about fifty delegates present representing the Plainfield, Newark, Jersey City, Hoboken, Bayonne and Trenton associations. The two last named associations were admitted to membership at this meeting.

Samuel Rothberg, State president, presided at the session. The early part of the meeting was taken up with reports of officers, including that of Mr. Rothberg, which was an excellent one. The finances were also reported to be in good condition. The literary committee through its chairman, Louis A. Miller, reported that plans were underway to hold debates, and among the questions suggested were the following: "Shall United States Senators be Elected by Direct Vote?" and "Shall We Restrict Immigration?" Debates will be held monthly.

THOUGHT HE WAS RICH; MUST PAY CAB MAN.

What he had imbibed on Saturday made John Kovata, of Fanwood, think he was a millionaire and in pursuance of the idea he hired a cab driven by Richard Kea at the North Avenue station and was driven to his home. Arrving there he decided that the ride had not been lengthy enough and ordered the cab man to return to this city.

At the end of the journey Kea demanded his fare, $2, but John apparently had not the wherewithal to pay, so he was driven to police headquarters, where he was put to bed to sleep off the effect of his potations. This morning Judge De Meza decided that Kovata had been punished enough, but ordered him to pay Kea the ?? or stay in a cell until it is paid.

In the Toils Again.

James Coleman, the alleged chicken thief, who was recently paroled from the Reform School, was arrested yesterday and remanded for a hearing until tomorrow morning at the request of Chief Kiely. ## SABBATH LAW ENFORCED

Mayor Moy Closes up Stores as Statute and Ordinance Provides.

PROTESTS ARE TO BE HEARD.

Unfamiliarity With Laws Causes Confusion of Ideas—Statutes Plain To His Honor, Who Issues Drastic Order.

Under orders from Mayor George W. V. Moy, the police notified store keepers throughout the city on Saturday that they must not open their places of business on the Sabbath under penalty of punishment as provided in section 3 of the amended ordinance of January 4, 1875. As a consequence it was impossible to obtain anything in the way of creature of comforts at any time after 12 o'clock on Saturday night. Not a cigar or package of tobacco was sold in the city and many a sigh was heaved in consequence. Those who had neglected to procure their necessities on Saturday had to forgoe the pleasure of a smoke or go out of town to buy it.

There was one notable exception to the general rule, however, it was found on the dividing line between this city and the borough. A small store kept by John Consoli is directly on the county line. Part of it in Somerset county and the other part in Union. Consoli took the precaution of moving his stock to the Somerset side and with bare walls showing in Plainfield did a splendid business all day in North Plainfield unmolested. Of course, Consoli had advice in the matter before making the change with his stock and it is said that never in his life did he do so much business as yesterday.

What looked like a guide to Consoli's store was a young fellow aged twenty years who stood at the corner of Front and Somerset streets answering those who wanted cigars and tobacco with precise directions as to where they could be obtained. But many who did not get as far as the corner took trolleys for Scotch Plains and other points where their wants were supplied.

This morning much controversy was heard as to the actual maening of the law. Some went so far as to say that if the stores must be closed then the cabs, railroad trains automobile garages and trolley must quit their business on Sunday, because the law makes it illegal for them as well as storekeepers to do business for a revenue on the Sabbath.

As to the interpretation of the ordinance by Mayor Moy, he takes it that the day set aside for religious observances means a day from 12 o'clock Friday night to 12 o'clock on Saturday night and not from sundown to sundown at it is interpreted by the Hebrews and Seventh-Day Baptists. He believes he has no choice in the matter and that the law is clear on the subject. Under the old interpretation those who closed their places of business on Friday at sundown opened them again on Saturday at sundown and on Sunday as well, thus having the time on Saturday evening which would make the day less than twenty-four hours long from a law viewpoint.

The business men have engaged counsel to fight the ordinance as construed by the mayor and will bring some action to test its validity before a tribunal whose decision will be final. Today the prime movers in the scheme to test the laws are collecting the sinews of war and some interesting delevopements may be expected shortly. It goes without saying that the deprivation of the Sunday income will make a big hole in the incomes of those who have been accustomed to do business on Sunday and for this money a strenuous fight will be conducted.

The test of the ordinance under which Mayor Moy acted follows:

"No person shall cry or openly expose for sale any wares, merchandise, fruits, herbs, meats, fish, goods or chattles, or keep open any shop, store or place in which said articles are sold, or in which the occupation of barber, shoemaker, blacksmith, silversmith, or other trade requiring the exercise of manual labor is carried on, on the first day of the week commonly called Sunday, except in case of necessity and the sale of milk and medicine. And any person violating this section shall upon conviction thereof be fined in a sum not exceeding twenty-five dollars, or be imprisoned in the city or county jail not exceeding ten days, or both, in the discretion of the court. Provided, however, that this section shall not apply to any person who habitually observes the seventh-day, commonly called Saturday as the Sabbath and who carries on his business within his premises in such a manner as not to disturb the religious observance of Sunday as the Sabbath."

Again, the State law of 1893 up-

MRS. SCHENK IS OUT OF PRISON.

Mrs. Laura Farnsworth Schenk, wife of John O. Schenk, whom she was charged with attempting to poison, was released on her own recognizance by Judge Jordan in the Criminal Court, Wheeling, Va., Saturday, the bail being left at $10,000. A few minutes before she had been served with papers in a divorce action filed by her husband in which it was stated that application will be made February 4 for an injunction to restrain her from communicating with or harassing her husband, or from interfering in any way with her children, Virginia and Robert Schenk, or from entering their house on the island there. The amount of alimony will also be argued at that time. A counter suit for divorce is being prepared by Mrs. Schenk's counsel, and the papers, it is said, will be served early next week. Since John O. Schenk neglected to announce that he would not be responsible for the debts contracted by his wife, it is held that he will be called upon to pay the costs of the late trial, about $100,000.

Immediately after the announcement that she was at liberty Mrs. Schenk, accompanied by her counsel, went to her tower-room in the jail, where plans for her immediate future were made. Soon afterward she entered the automobile of Attorney J. J. P. O'Brien and was driven to the residence of Mrs. Lasch, her island neighbor, who had testified for her during the trial. It is said that she will make her home there for the present.

BASEBALL.

Mike Donlin is through with baseball for good. This declaration was drawn forth by Fred Tenney's recent attempts to bring the former Giant back to the diamond as a member of the Boston National League team. Mangaer McGraw had given his consent to the negotiations. Donlin, who returned to New York Friday, says Tenney began writing appealing letters while Donlin was appearing in vaudeville in Chicago. "He even wanted to come over to Chicago and argue it out with me," Donlin said. "But I wired him to save the trouble and expense if his only business was to try and convince me that 'Boston' would look good on my manly chest. I am done, and that goes."

Catcher Bill Carrigan, the star backstop of the Red Sox, will not play ball this year, according to the last word from Boston. A few days ago President Taylor sent the catcher an ultimatum, asking him either to sign his contract or else announce his intention of quitting organized baseball. Mr. Taylor received a letter Friday stating that under no consideration would Carrigan accept the terms of the contract and that all negotiations might as well be called off. This means that Carrigan probably will remain in Lewiston, Me., this summer.

A "rump" parliament of the I. I. I. League, held in Chicago, has deprived Waterloo, Ia., of its franchise, given it to Quincy, Ill., and adjourned, subject to the call of the chairman, without in the least disturbing the equanimity of the owners of the Waterloo franchise and the three clubs aligned with them. According to those engaged in the matter of ousting Waterloo, the action settles the squabble in the league. According to Waterloo and the clubs on its side, the action merely throws the fight into the courts.

Eddie Karger signed up with the Boston Red Sox Friday. He was the twenty-third player to sign a contract. The men are falling into line rapidly, so as to be on the band wagon when the big trip to the coast starts.

Harry Schlafly, second baseman of the Newark Indians, who, with Charley Dooley, owns the Troy club, expects to start the season with the following lineup: First base, Claude Rossman, formerly of Detroit; second base, George Smith, formerly of Buffalo; shortstop, Schlafly; third base, Eddie McDonald, of Toronto; outfielders, Duffy, Corcoran and possibly Jimmie Jones, now with Montreal; catchers, Vandegrift and one to be obtained from Buffalo. First Baseman McGamwell may be traded to Scranton.

President Charles H. Ebbetts, of the Brooklyn National League club, who is now in Porto Rico, is quoted as saying that he will try to take his team to Porto Rico after the 1911 season. The plan includes a visit to Bermuda and Cuba, and if carried out will be the first time an American club has played in Porto Rico. Incidentally Ebbets was pressed into service as umpire of games between local nines at San Juan.

Walter Johnson, the Washington pitcher, says he will not sign a contract unless he receives a salary of $7,000 for the coming season. Johnson hung up the world's record for strikeouts last year. The Washington club has agreed to pay $6,500 to Johnson, but the big pitcher remains obdurate and declares that the other $500 must be handed over before he will agree to go South.

GOLF.

According to a man who attended the recent annual meeting of the Western Golf Association everything went through as per program agreed upon at a protracted conference held prior to the main session. All were of one mind that it would be foolish to urge the continents of North America and South America and islands pertaining thereto to join, but there was considerable discussion as to whether the amendment should be so worded as to take in all of the United States as well as Canada. It was finally decided that for the present, at least, it would not be advisable to annex more than Canada.

There is a general feeling in the Western association that Silas H. Strawn, the Chicago man recently elected president of the United States Golf Association, should have a chance to "make good"—in other words, get the parent organization out of the narrow rut through which, according to the West, it is now laboring.

A rather important resolution drafted by Crafts W. Higgins, was adopted without a dissenting vote, which means that it is practically certain to be passed at the next meeting. It will have the effect of making the Western Golf Association an association of associations. The resolution follows:

Be it resolved, That the president be and is authorized and instructed to appoint a committee of three to prepare for submission to the next annual meeting an amendment to Article 8 of the constitution of this association to this effect:

"That the majority of the board of directors of this association shall be composed of representatives of other associations within the territory of this association; that each of such associations shall have the right to nominate respective candidates to represent them on the board of directors of this association in such manner as they severally shall determine; that the names of such representatives shall be filed with the secretary of this association not later than the 1st day of October in each year, and be by him immediately reported to the chairman of the nominating committee of this association; that the said nominating committee shall select from these various representatives named by the several associations the candidates for a majority of the board of directors of this association, provided, however, that in case a sufficient number of associations have not filed with the secretary of this association by October 1 the names of enough representatives to afford such majority the nominating committee shall have the power to select from among the officers and directors of other associations which have not filed the names of representatives the remaining number of candidates necessary to make a majority of the board of directors of this association."

GRAND JURY FINDS NO EVIDENCE OF BRIBERY.

The Union County Grand Jury made a presentment Saturday to the effect that it had investigated the story of attempted bribery in connection with plans for the proposed Eliabzeth High School and found no proof which would warrant it in finding an indictment. It had been reported that attempts had been made to bribe Commissioner Wenke, late president of the Board of Education. In its presentment the grand jury said:

"The statements of Commissioner Wenke are unsupported by any authentic facts or corraborative evidence. We believe such statements were indiscreetly made and without sufficient warrant."

THREE FUNERALS IN PHILLIPSBURG FAMILY.

The funeral of a mother, sister and daughter was conducted with one service in Wesley M. E. church, Phillipsburg, Saturday. The three women were victims of asphyxiation from gas in their home last Tuesday night. Three hearses conveyed the bodies to the cemetery.

The dead were Mrs. Rebecca J. Robinson, Miss Jennie Osborne and Mrs. Joseph Freyberger. Rev. O. M. West officiated and twelve relatives of the victims acted as pallbearers.

The Junior Mission Band of the First Baptist church, will give an entertainment at the church on Saturday, February 11.

Rainy Day Specials
The inclement weather of the past few days has given us an opportunity to test our new "RAINY DAY SPECIAL" idea.
These "RAINY DAY SPECIALS" of ours, as we told you Sunday, are placed on sale whenever it rains or snows. Our buyers usually have a good thing or two in reserve for such purposes, but if they don't happen to have any special merchandise on hand when the drops begin to fall they go to work and MAKE a special—they reduce some article from regular stock. Mind you, "RAINY DAY SPECIALS" are never advertised in the papers—we simply put them on sale without saying a word. You, of course, must have confidence enough in us to take our word for it when we tell you they're worth coming for.
All day Friday and Saturday groups of people could be seen here and there throughout the store LOOKING FOR THESE SPECIALS, and every table or counter that displayed a "RAINY DAY SPECIAL" was the centre of attraction.
Whenever it rains come to the Bamberger store and look for the red girl with the umbrella. Get the RAINY DAY HABIT—It's a good one.

THE FORUM.

FAVORS MUNICIPAL CONTROL.

Editor, The Daily Press:

I notice with much surprise your editorial of a few evenings since advising the Council to enter into a new contract with the water company for another term of ten years with a privilege of three or four more ten-year terms.

Of course, you attended the conference when Mr. Bergen was present and heard him say that under no circumstances would they cease supplying our underground waters to outside towns and cities as far as Elizabeth. You well know that this underground supply has not been sufficient for ten years past for Plainfield and those outside towns.

These cities and towns are growing very rapidly and will draw more and more on Plainfield's supply.

We have but a small water pressure now in our hydrants, although the city pays the water company a good round sum for it. We are not getting what we pay for and we can point to the loss of VanDeventer Hall, the Babcock block and other buildings by fire for the lack of the promised pressure.

Where will we be in ten years from now unless something is done at once to curb the capacity of this company.

They absolutely refused to make a new contract on the condition of supplying Plainfield alone with its own waters.

The Council should either dig its own wells for the city or go to the Lamington River and at the same time start an injunction proceeding against the water company, and see if we cannot stop this diversion to other towns on the strength of the case of Meeker vs. City of East Orange.

WILLIAM M. STILLMAN.

SUNDAY CLOSING.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Our Mayor states that he has been placed in power by the citizens of this city to enforce the laws as he finds them and therefore he is closing up certain stores on Sunday.

He states that he has no discretion in the matter, and must enforce the laws as he finds them. He should therefore stop the sale of all Sunday newspapers, close all automobile garages, stop every freight car and all passenger trains, except two each way, arrest every automobile driver and bicycle rider, send every golf and tennis player to the city jail whether they are playing on their own private grounds or on public grounds, stop every trolley, arrest every dentist and lawyer who works in his office on Sunday, and stop any factory working over time; in fact, to carry out his policy he has assumed a large contract. He has no right to stop and persecute a few and let the mass go without attention.

As to Seventh-Day Baptists there are but two stores here of that persuasion so far as I can find out. These are exempt if they in the words of the statute habitually abstain from following his or her occupation or business, and uniformly keeps the Seventh day of the week as the Sabbath.

There is no decision in this State as to the word Sabbath. In Connecticut and New England Sunday by law is a solar day; viz., from daylight on Sunday to dark in that day.

We must go to the Bible for the interpretation of the word "Sabbath."

This begins Friday at sundown and ends on Saturday at sundown.

Our statute has used the word "Sabbath" and we must be governed by the highest authority as to the meaning of the word; viz. "God's word," the Bible. He instituted it for the good of man, set its boundaries and man cannot change the divine law one iota.

At the present time matters of immense interest are before us for proper settlement, city water, sewerage and other city improvements must be settled to the city's advantage. It would seem that it would be good policy for our Mayor to join hands with the Common Council and the various city departments and all seek to work harmoniously for the city's best interests. We need at the present time above everything else harmony, and concerted intelligent action by our city government if the important problems before us are to be properly solved.

If our Mayor would drop the little things and attend to the large problems before us he would best serve the city's interest at the present time.

WM. M. STILLMAN.

A MONTCLAIR MOUSE HAD TOBACCO HABIT

The young men employed in the office of Kenneth D. Owen, former Town Surveyor of Montclair, in that town, have been puzzled for the last several weeks b ythe mysterious disappearance of their cigarettes. If one of the young engineers laid a "butt" aside for a moment it would disappear, and on several occasions even the packages in their pockets were rifled.

The mystery was solved yesterday when Alfred Barr, one of the office force, found that a mouse had made a nest in an empty milk bottle that was hidden in a corner of the closet which the engineers used as a wardrobe. The milk bottle was snugly lined with the cigarette paper and tobacco and a whole mouse family was comfortable in the cleverly-constructed warren. Barr killed the entire family by stopping up the bottle and turning into it a stream of illuminating gas.

IN HOBBLE SKIRTS MEN MOB NEGRO SNEAK THIEF

Three Keyport young men, dressed as women in hobble skirts and peach baskets hats, with handbags dangling from one arm, started out last night in an effort to capture the sneak thief who held up eight women and girls last week at Keyport.

George M. Mason, Sallas T. Young and Judson Hopla, the three "women," walked down the darkest streets in Keyport, where these holdups have occurred. Not long after parting Mr. Young, the originator of the scheme, was walking between Church and Cross streets when a negro sprang behind him and threw his arms around his waist, at the same time trying to wrench the handbag from his arm.

Mr. Young got a firm grasp on the thief and said: "You're the very man I'm looking for." A struggle ensued, but Mr. Young proved more than the negro's match, and when the thief found his would-be victim was a man he begged his captor to let him go. Mr. Young signaled to his companions, who were only a block away, and the three "women" took the thief to the jail.

The negro was Henry Johnson, 40 years old. Over 200 people gathered at the Town Hall at the hearing held before Justice of the Peace A. M. Walling, and some of the husbands and relatives of the women who had been held up, presumably by the negro, were so wrought up over the matter that there were rumors of lynching. Justice Walling held the negro for the Grand Jury without bail and later he was taken to Freehold, it being thought the county jail would be a safer place under the circumstances.

Among those who have been held up recently, some of whom were robbed, were Mrs. Thomas Walling, Frances Sproul, May Boice and Myrtle Walling.

CHAMOIS COLLAR CASES.

Stiffen two chamois disks with cardboard and lace them to a sidepiece two inches deep. Lace by punching both disks and sidepiece with round holes (use a paper punch or a nutpick if you haven't the former useful article), and then threading with silk cord the color of the chamois.

Overcast lacing on the sidepiece along its top edge, and within this tack a chamois-color silk bag drawn up with ribbons.

Make this of a size to hold collars and you have a little gift that bachelor maid and bachelor man will find equally useful and acceptable.

HE WANTS AFFIDAVITS AS BAD EGG REMEDY

Written guarantees as to the age of eggs, backed by affidavits if necessary, are the best tonic for the egg-producing industry of New Jersey, according to Professor H. R. Lewis, of the State Agricultural College, who addressed the Farmers' Institute in Roseland at Caldwell, Saturday night.

Professor Lewis said the single combed white leghorn was the star of the poultry farm, for its eggs commanded the best prices in the markets. New Jersey, owing to its nearness to great markets and its soil and climate, is one of the best poultry States in the Union, equalled only by Rhode Island and California. In ten years, Professor Lewis said, New Jersey's production of poultry has grown in value from $4,000,000 to $10,000,000.

LEGISLATURE TO GET SUNDAY OPENING BILL

With the opening of the Legislature tonight for the fourth week of the session, the lawmakers are expected to get down to the actual business of passing bills which the Senatorship contest held up.

It is expected that the Senate and House will sit tonight and Tuesday morning and afternoon, when adjournment will probably be taken for the week. There is a disposition in the Senate to do away with the Monday night sessions, but the House will not consent, the Assemblymen thinking too highly of the evening opportunity of speaking to crowded galleries.

A Local Option bill and an Anti-Cigarette bill are likely this week to follow Assemblyman Bunn's bill to prohibit treating in saloons, and then the temperance reform movement of the session will be well in hand. It is expected, too, that representatives of interests in the larger cities and the summer resorts will be on hand with an "open Sunday" measure or two, just to keep things lively. It is doubtful, however, if any raid on the excise regulations will be accomplished in either direction. Gov. Wilson would not sign an "open Sunday" bill and the Democratic House would never pass a Local Option act.

Tonight will doubtless bring in a flood of bills. Real work of the session will not get under way until the middle of February, and then it will be a case of hustle until late in March or early in April when final adjournment will be reached.

Mrs. Alfred P. Palmer, of this city, is registered at the Chalfonte, Atlantic City.

THIEVES PROTECTED, A RECTOR CHARGES

Thieves who recently looted churches in Englewood and Tenafly were able to command political influence which prevented their indictment by the Bergen County Grand Jury, according to charges made public Saturday by the Rev. A. E. Montgomery, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Atonement, at Tenafly. A copy of the charges has been sent to Governor Wilson, with a request that he order an immediate inquiry.

The Rev. Mr. Montgomery did not attempt to place the responsibility for the political influences at work with the Grand Jury, but he characterized their results as a sad miscarriage of justice. He declared that he was well advised in making his charges and that his charges had been read and approved by the recorder at Tenafly, who as justice of the peace had held several confessed thieves for the Grand Jury, only to find that they were released.

"I am not basing a condemnatory conclusion upon an isolated instance," Mr. Montgomery said. "The situation of which I complain is a continuing one, with many examples to bear out the charge that something keeps thieves who operate here out of jail when the Grand Jury at Hackensack takes over the power of prosecution.

"I cannot fix the responsibility. That is why I am appealing for full publicity. And I hope after general attention has been focused upon the matter that a determination may be had which will terminate the present scandalous situation. It extends not only to the thieves from whom our church has suffered, but to men reputed to be receivers of the goods stolen from the church. In one specific case which I mention in my formal letter of protest the stolen goods were wraps of members of the congregation, and I know that the Presbyterian church and parish house have suffered as badly as ourselves."

Prosecutor Wright said last night that the charges of the rector are false. He said that in the last year only one case had been thrown out, and that because there was not sufficient evidence. "These charges are based on cases two and three years old," he said. "There has been nothing of that kind as long as I have been prosecutor and as there will not be."

BOROUGH BOYS PILFER A SUNDAY DINNER ORDER.

John Colder, Edward Colder and Andrew Judge, three borough boys, were arraigned before Recorder Dolliver this morning on a disorderly charge preferred by the police. The three were arrested by Chief Weiss after they had stolen nearly the entire Sunday dinner grocery order, left on the rear porch of a Grove street residence, Saturday afternoon. It is alleged that they had repeatedly annoyed the housekeepers in this way and other residents near Grove street and Linden avenue.

The boys were lectured by the court and promised not to repeat the offense. To make sure that tabs were kept on them, Judge was ordered to report regularly to Rev. Father Miller and the Colder boys to Rev. J. O. McKelvey, acting as probation officers.

PARALYSIS FATAL TO MRS. CHARLOTTE BARBER.

Mrs. Charlotte Barber, widow of Nelson Barber, died shortly before noon today at her home, 336 Somerset street. Death was the result of a paralytic stroke which she suffered two weeks ago.

Mrs. Barger was a native of Asbury, Warren county, but had lived in this vicinity for twenty years. She had many friends in both the city and borough. Surviving her are one son, Johnson Barber, and a daughter, Mrs. William Schenck, both living at the mother's address. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

An Organ Recital.

The music at Grace P. E. church yesterday afternoon in the 42nd organ recital by S. Frederick Smith, organist and choirmaster, was beyond reproach. Mr. Smith thrilled the congregation with the two numbers by Guimant, sonata and pastoral. Dubois' "Messe de Marriage" was also beautifully played.

Musical Service at Bethel.

A musical service was held at Bethel chapel last night under the direction of the choir. Several special anthems and solo numbers were rendered in a manner that pleased the large audience. A silver offering was received at the door.

WILL INTRODUCE BILL TO AMEND DEATH ACT

Assemblyman Charles M. Egan, of Hudson county, will at tonight's session of the Legislature, at Trenton, introduce a bill to amend the death act, so as to wipe out in New Jersey the doctrine of law which Justice Gummere was once severely criticised for following.

The death act provides, as it now stands, that in the event of the killing of a person by accident the person responsible shall be liable for the amount of the pecuniary loss to the next of kin, by the death of the victim, and no more.

Thus, in the case of a very young child, who earns nothing and is, on the contrary, an expense to the parent, or in the case of an aged man who has become too feeble to work, the recovery in a suit of damages would be merely nominal, or, as the sensational newspapers misstated when Justice Gummere gave his decision in the case of the killing by a trolley car of the boy of Abraham Graham, the amount to be recovered cannot be more than $1.

Assemblyman Egan says he believes that this theory of law is all wrong and that New Jersey should recognize the life of a child as of greater value. His amendment to the death act will provide that the minimum amount to be recovered in a suit for the killing by accident of a human being, whether it be an infant in arms or one tottering to the grave, shall be $10,000.

Senator Leavitt, of Mercer, will introduce a bill to permit commercial travelers to carry more baggage than at present without paying for the excess. The real purpose will be to permit them to carry their sample trunks as ordinary baggage.

GOVERNOR WILSON'S MANY APPOINTMENTS

Interest in the appointments that the Governor may make has been revived by the passing of the United States Senatorship. Needless to say, the Governor is confronted with a mountain of applications. There will be no lack of material when it comes to filling any vacancy.

Governor Wilson has probably had less to say regarding patronage than upon any other of the important subjects that he has been called upon to consider since his election. In this connection he has emphasized only one point, that fitness will be a matter of first consideration. No doubt he will give weight to the recommendations of county organizations and influential Democrats in making his appointments, but the indorsements even of organizations will be futile unless the Governor is first convinced that the indorsed has special fitness for the job.

HORTICULTURE

FERTILIZING THE GARDEN.

With Waste Material and Stable Manure It Can Be Made Very Productive.

A variety of plants with a variety of plant food requirements are grown in the garden. To meet the growing needs of all these different plants many different kinds of fertilizers must be used on the garden soil. The garden gives large yields in proportion to the area cultivated, and no labor and means should be spared to make it yield abundantly.

It is well to begin to fertilize the garden soil early in the winter—in fact, just as soon as the crops are harvested in the late summer and fall. Ashes are very good to use for fertilizing the garden.

The winter and spring rains leach out mineral elements of the ashes and carry them to the roots of the fruit trees, bushes and vines for early feeding when spring growth begins.

The dirt waste about the dwelling can be utilized in the garden soil better than in any other way, and in a few years the fertilization amounts to considerable.

About twice each week the cow lot can be cleaned with the rake and shovel, and the scrapings should be removed to the garden and dumped in piles. By spring gardening time these small piles are decomposed and in a fine condition for working into the soil either for vegetables or for the flower beds.

Cow manure is mild and safe to use with the tenderest of plants, as very little heat is given off in decomposition. That which has remained in small heaps over winter in the garden works up in the spring as fine as the finest garden loam and is one of the best all around garden fertilizers that can be used.

The droppings from the poultry houses should also be cleaned out regularly during the winter and either applied direct to the garden soil or mixed with stable manure and applied thinly over the surface.

Where coal ashes or other similar absorbing material is used with the droppings there is less danger of overfertilizing the soil with them. The ashes absorb and hold fertilizing elements, and when they are worked into the soil they give up these fertilizers as plant foods and at the same time improve the texture of the soil, making it light, friable and very easy to work. Absorbing material should always be used with poultry droppings, since it makes the poultry house more sanitary and almost doubles the value of the manure.

Where not enough refuse about the home can be secured to properly fertilize the garden during the winter, use manure from the animal stables. In the spring all the coarsest portion should be raked from the garden and hauled to the fields.

HOWELL PEAR A FAVORITE.

A Beautiful Fruit With a Good Taste That Has Always Proved a Good Seller.

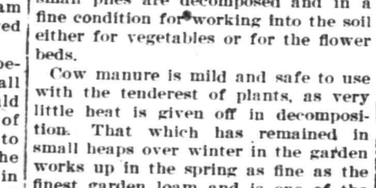
This attractive group of pears are of the Howell variety and are ideal for early autumn use. In appearance they are soft, light yellow in color with occasional handsome, finely shaded cheeks. They are thickly sprinkled with minute russet specks, which often grade into darker patches. The flesh is quite firm, moderately rich, but somewhat variable in quality, due probably to difference in soil conditions. The Howell has a pleasant aromatic taste and melts like butter when eaten. The tree is a good, vigorous grower, with erect branches, and the fruit is remarkably fair and a good seller.



The Howell Pear.

Use of Good Seed.

It is very important to use grass and clover seed of good quality. The best grades of all seeds are always cheapest in the end. The weed seeds so commonly present in the cheaper grades of seeds, together with the low vitality of these cheaper grains, especially among the grass seeds, are responsible for a large percentage of the pasture and meadow troubles.

Hauling Manure Regularly.

Manure can be hauled and scattered over some portion of the farm every month of the year to good advantage. It is much better to leave it on the land than in the barnyard or in piles near the farm buildings. The manure spreader is a wonderful help in lightening the work of unloading and obtaining an even distribution over the soil.

Pear Blight.

Pear blight very often affects apple trees, and whenever it is discovered every particle of the diseased parts should be cut out, or if very bad the entire tree should be burned.

LOW BRIMMED HATS

They Are Not Suitable to All Types.

New Late Winter Models Show Large Quantities of Feathers—Most Popular Shades Are Gold and Yellow.

Women have often been accused by men of making themselves look ridiculous with their clothes, but this is the first time they have laid themselves open to the charge of hiding their light under a bushel, of concealing their charms to the extent of making themselves unrecognizable. Yet some of the winter hats are more like extinguishers than anything else. Often it is impossible to tell who's who under the hat.

Besides the fact that you can't recognize the person beneath without bending down and peering under the brim, the capotes are made of the craziest combinations of material. A hat seen in a shop window recently had a foundation which was an old brocade sofa cover veiled with chiffon in a Parisian design. The inevitable fur edging was present, of course, and this was further graced by a square piece of gold embroidery at the side. At the edge of the square of embroidery was sewed a gold tassel, and the heterogeneous combination was not only pronounced exceedingly smart, but was very expensive. It found a buyer at once, and many like unto it from other pieces of the sofa cushion sold like hot cakes.

Odds and ends of cretonne pieced out or with the flowers of the cretonne applique on a velvet foundation have also turned up as hats this season, and the very latest idea is flowers made of little pieces of fur sewed or glued upon petal foundations.

It seems that the milliners have had rather an easy time of it this year, for we have never come to a time in the history of fashions when so much individuality was allowed and so little was displayed. Most of the women one sees on Fifth avenue or in the tea rooms at 5 o'clock might be twins except for disparity of age and size. But the black velvet suit and the close fitting hat, fur edged and coming down well over the face, have become almost uniform, these suits and hats having been turned out by the million by calculating merchants for an unthinking public.

The prevailing fashions of today are made for the so called new type of American girl, who is smaller than the Gibson girl of ten years ago and who in appearance suggests Slavonic ancestry more than Anglo-Saxon. She is supremely well suited to the Russian and Japanese effects in dress which are now so apparent. The moujik cap and the Cossack bonnet bring out all the interesting beauty of her face and seem to belong to her. The barbaric colors and embroideries are hers by right of inheritance, and she should continue to wear them. The Celtic type looks out of its element peering from a sinister frame of fur. It takes larger and more flowing styles to set off the beauty of the Anglo-Saxon type.

The new hats for late winter show quantities of these charming feathers on wide shaped black velvet hats.

The most popular shades are gold and yellow. The French ostrich plume or short ostrich feather is also expected to be very popular and to replace the willow.

Using Old Wool.

Don't you who crochet and knit often have odd lengths of wool of various colors left over, so small you can do nothing with them? Of course you do, especially now that the Christmas deluge has just subsided. Well, here is a way to get rid of them and to make things worth while in the bargain.

Tie the pieces together haphazard, but keeping the same weights together. Take long needlefuls and work in the shell stitch such articles as hug-me-tights, tea cozies, cushion covers, bed throws, etc., according to the weight and amount of wool you have.

A word as to the various varieties of crocheting and knitting wool might not come amiss. Shetland zephyr, Shetland wool and ice wool are of about the same weight; so are cashmere yarn, Spanish worsted and Dresden Saxony, and Germantown zephyr, Shetland floss and knitting worsted. With this as your guide you can utilize your old wool if you make only children's reins with it.

NEW TURBANS.

They Are Particularly Conspicuous on Account of the Lavish Display of Feathers.

Of course the little "top" hat, as a few milliners call the closely fitted turban of fur and velours, has had its day, and it is not surprising that, the price having reached the attainable, makers are exploiting new and more expensive models.

Wings are the most general trimming, such lovely wings that one's appreciation of the beauty submerges the humane instincts — iridescent wings, snowy feathers and all the made varieties that are more attractive than ever.

Some of the turbans are combinations of fur and wings, each being applied in square or pointed tabs that are turned back over a malines or satin foundation.

Breasts are run through slots in fur crowns and on brims. Feathers are used to edge fur wings, and fur edges feather forms.

As to the place at which wings rise to the millinery occasion it would be difficult to say. They are everywhere, of all sizes and shapes, and give a fairly durable ornamentation for hats. They are decidedly less expensive than plumes and are invariably becoming. So what more can you require?

FOR THE STOUT WOMAN.

An Attractive Advance Model of Spring and Summer Skirts For Conservative Dressers.

The new skirts for spring and summer are interesting, and some models are so attractive that even the most conservative dressers will not hesitate to copy them. Such a design, and one that is not difficult to complete, is pictured here.

This model may be effectively developed in silk, woolen or tub materials and is especially desirable for the latter, as it is not difficult to launder.

To make the skirt from any material all the pieces of the pattern should be laid on the goods and cut out before commencing to baste. The gores are joined according to the notches, beginning with the front gore and working toward the back on either side. The plaits at the side of the front gore are pinned, basted and pressed in position before the skirt is tried on.

If it is necessary to make any change in the skirt in order to have it fit over the hips the material should be taken up or let out, as the case may require, at the side gores. If considerable alteration is required the result will be more satisfactory if the goods are taken up or let out a little at each gore; otherwise the change will throw the lines of the seams out of proportion at the waist line.

The seams can be effectively finished in the regular way, then opened and pressed flat, or they can be stitched flat in tailor fashion.

The waist may be finished with a narrow belt or with a facing. The latter is preferable for stout figures, as it is flat and does not increase the waist line.

The lower edge of the skirt must be turned up the desired length and hemmed.

A pretty and serviceable skirt for wear with tub waists could be made from dark blue serge in one of the new weaves. It would be quite attractive developed in broadcloth, cashmere or cheviot.

To develop this skirt four and one-eighth yards of thirty-six inch material or three and one-quarter yards of forty-four inch fabric will be needed.

Household Glue.

To make a liquid glue that will keep for years break some pieces of glue and put them into a bottle, adding to them a little whisky. Cork the bottle tightly and set it aside for a few days, when the glue will be ready for use without the application of heat, except in very cold weather. In this case the bottle should be placed in hot water for a few minutes before the glue is used.

German Steak.

To a pint of cold minced lamb add two stalks of finely chopped celery and a tablespoonful of parsley. Stir in a tablespoonful of melted butter, the crumbs of three large crackers, half a teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper, one teaspoonful of green mint chopped fine, one beaten egg and enough water to moisten. Shape into a steak and place in buttered pan. Bake for thirty minutes, basting three times. Use two tablespoonful of vinegar to which a tablespoonful of melted butter has been added. Cover the top of the steak with cracker crumbs mixed with egg yolk and replace in oven to brown. Serve with a garnish of parsley and sliced lemon.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Another Insomnia Cure.

For sleeplessness fill a hot water bottle and place it under the ankles. It works better there than at the soles of the feet. Put a rather small amount of very cold water in another rubber bottle and lay it on the head. The cold water is more comfortable than ice, which seems exciting rather than soothing. At first, says a woman who has tried this cure, I would get to sleep in about an hour and wake again as the water heated. The cold water would have to be changed four or five times during the night. Then once changing was enough, and now if the brain begins to spin after I lie down for sleep I put on the cold water bottle and am asleep soon for the whole night.—Harper's Bazar.

Beards and Barristers.

In England barristers were at one time strictly prohibited from wearing beards. In the "Black Books" of Lincoln's inn there is an order, dated "All Saints' day, 1542," which enacts that "Mr. Germyn, oon of the Felawship, shall before the xiith day of the instant moneth of November shave off his bearde and afterwards to kepe the same in like sorte, upon the payne to be exiled from the Felawship." A few years later, in 1557, the order was somewhat relaxed: "Item, that none under the degre of a knight or bencher ware any bearde above iij. weakes' growinge, upon payne of XLs. for every weake after monycion."—London Chronicle.

Ceremonial Citron.

A valuable and somewhat curious variety of citron is cultivated along the shores of Albania, western European Turkey. It is known as the "Casenia" or "Esrog" (Hebrew). It is a small citron, weighing not more than twenty-five drams, just large enough to be held in the hand, and is thus used in the religious ritual by the Jews all over the world during the celebration of their feast of tabernacles. Such a citron, if sufficiently small, without blemish and possessing a somewhat extended nozzle, is valued at from $4 to $10 each. These citrons are mostly exported from Parga, Turkey, and not from Corfu, as is generally supposed. A few are said to grow near Diakovto, Greece.

He Backslid.

An Atchison man who recently "confessed religion" and became a member of the church says his family, and not his associates downtown, are responsible for the backsliding that followed within three weeks. He says his wife and the girls were in a conspiracy to impose upon him, to work him for money, to make him do more work around the house and to submit to all sorts of tyrannies without grumbling. "He can't object," he overheard his wife say, "for he has religion now and is bound to be meek and humble." Three weeks of this drove him into a frenzy, and one day he backslid so vehemently and forcibly that his wife and daughters were left speechless.—Atchison Globe.

A Lover of Candor.

Impecunious Man—I wish you would be so kind as to lend me a sovereign. I'll pay you back in a few days.

Candid Friend—If you had asked me for the loan in a candid and straightforward manner I would have loaned you the money, but asking me in the way you did causes me to distrust you.

"I don't understand you."

"You asked me to be so kind as to lend you a sovereign?"

"Yes."

"If you had been candid, you would have said to me, 'Be so stupid, be such an ignominious ass, such a hopeless idiot as to lend me a sovereign,' and you might have got it."—Pearson's Weekly.

A Joke on Offenbach.

Offenbach, the famous opera bouffe composer, had an insatiable thirst for success and fame combined with a vanity that occasionally played him a sorry trick. Once he was going down the Rhine on a steamer, among whose passengers was the Duke of Nassau, a fact of which the composer was in blissful ignorance. As the steamer approached its last stopping place the bank of the river was seen to be covered by a dense throng of people, who were shouting and waving their hats. A band on the pier was playing a march from one of Offenbach's operas. As the boat touched the pier Offenbach stepped to the rail and bowed and waved his hat to the people in acknowledgment of this flattering ovation.

"It is glorious to be received in a foreign land like this!" he remarked to his companions.

But his self complacency received a rude shock the next instant when the duke's adjutant appeared and said in a rough and unfeeling manner:

"Get out of the way, will you, and let his highness show himself!"—London Standard.

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

The Great Conservation Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

Lize, under the spur of her dram, talked on with bitter boldness, berating the town and its people. Gregg listened to her with expressionless visage, his eyes dreamily fixed on Lee's face, but his companion, the old herder, seemed to palpitate with shame and fear. And Ross had the feeling at the moment that in this ragged, unkempt old hobo was the skeleton of one of the old time heroes. He was wasted with drink and worn by wind and rain, but he was very far from being commonplace.

CHAPTER XII.

THE LAW STEPS IN.

"HERE they come again!" called Lize as the hurry of feet along the walk threatened another attack. Ross Cavanagh again drew his revolver and stood at guard, and Lize, recovering her own weapon, took a place by his side.

With the strength of a bear the new assailant shook the bolted door. "Let me in!" he roared.

"It's dad!" called young Gregg. "Go away, you chump!"

"Let me in or I'll smash this door!" retorted Gregg.

"You smash that door, old Bullfrog," announced Lize, "and I'll carry one of your lungs away. If you want to get in here you hunt up the judge of this town and the constable."

The old rancher muttered a fierce curse, while Ross explained the situation. "I'm as eager to get rid of these culprits as any one can be, but they must be taken by proper authority. Bring a writ from the magistrate and you may have them and welcome."

Gregg went away without further word, and Lize said: "He'll find Higley if he's in town, and he is in town, for I saw him this afternoon. He's hiding out to save himself trouble."

Lee Virginia, with an understanding of what the ranger had endured, asked: "Can't I get you something to eat? Would you like some coffee?"

"I would indeed," he answered, and his tone pleased her.

She hurried away to get it, while Cavanagh disposed his prisoners behind a couple of tables in the corner. "I guess you're in for a night of it," he remarked grimly, "so make yourselves as comfortable as you can. Perhaps your experience may be a discouragement to others of your kind."

Lee returned soon with a pot of fresh coffee and some sandwiches, the sight of which roused young Gregg to the impudent remark: "Well, notice that! And we're left out!" But Edwards shrank into the shadow, as if the light hurt him.

Ross thanked Lee formally, but there was more than gratitude in his glance, and she turned away to hide her face from other eyes. Strange place it was for the blooming of love's roses, but they were in her cheeks as she faced her mother, and Lize, with fresh acknowledgment of her beauty, broke out again: "Well, this settles it. I'm going to get out of this town, dearie. I'm done. This ends the cattle country for me. I ought to have turned you back the day you landed here."

The feet halted. A sharp rap sounded on the door.

"Who's there?" demanded Lize.

"The law!" replied a wheezy voice. "Open in the name of the law!"

"It's old Higley," announced Lize. "Open the door, Ross."

"Come in, law," she called ironically as the justice appeared. "You look kind of mice eaten, but you're all the law this blame town can sport. Come in and do your duty."

Higley (a tall man with a rusty brown beard, very much on his dignity) entered the room, followed by a short, bullet headed citizen in a rumpled blue suit with a big star on his breast. Behind on the sidewalk Ballard and a dozen of his gang could be seen. Sam Gregg, the moving cause of this resurrection of law and order, followed the constable. Higley opened upon Cavanagh. "Well, sir, what's all this row? What's your charge against these men?"

"Killing mountain sheep. I caught them with the head of a big ram upon their pack."

"Make him show his commission," shouted Gregg. "He's never been commissioned. He's no game warden."

Higley hemmed. "I—ah—oh, his authority is all right, Sam; I've seen it. If he can prove that these men killed the sheep we'll have to act."

Cavanagh briefly related how he had captured the men on the trail. "The head of the ram is at the livery barn with my horse."

"How about that?" asked Higley, turning to Joe.

"I guess that's right," replied the insolent youth. "We killed the sheep all right."

Higley was in a corner. He didn't like to offend Gregg, and yet the case was plain. He met the issue blandly. "Marshal, take these men into custody." Then to Ross: "We'll relieve you of your care, Mr. Cavanagh. You may appear tomorrow at 9."

It was a farcical ending to a very arduous thirty-six hour campaign, and Ross, feeling like a man who, having rolled a huge stone to the top of a hill, has been ordered to drop it, said, "I insist on the maximum penalty of the law, Justice Higley, especially for this man!" He indicated Joe Gregg.

"No more sneaking, Higley," added Lize, uttering her distrust in blunt phrase. "You put these men through or I'll make you trouble."

Higley turned and with unsteady solemnity saluted. "Fear not my government, madam," said he and so made exit.

After the door had closed behind them Cavanagh bitterly complained. "I've delivered my prisoners over into the hands of their friends. I feel like a fool. What assurance have I that they will ever be punished?"

"You have Higley's word," retorted Lize, with ironic inflection. "He'll fine 'em as much as $10 apiece and confiscate the head, which is worth fifty."

"No matter what happens now, you've done your duty," added Lee Virginia with intent to comfort him.

Lize, now that the stress of the battle was over, fell a-tremble. "I reckon I'll have to go to bed," she admitted. "I'm all in. This night service is wearing."

She did indeed resemble the wreck of a woman as she lay out upon her bed, her hands twitching, her eyes closed, and Ross was profoundly alarmed. "You need the doctor," he urged. "Let me bring him."

"No," she said huskily, but with decision; "I'm only tired. I'll be all right soon. Send the people away. Tell 'em to go to bed."

For half an hour Cavanagh remained in the room waiting to see if the doctor's services would be required, but at the end of that time, as she had apparently fallen asleep, he rose and tiptoed out into the hall.

Lee followed, and they faced each other in such intimacy as the shipwrecked feel after the rescue.

When they were quite alone Lee said, "You must not go out into the streets tonight."

"There's no danger. These hoodlums would not dare to attack me."

"Nevertheless you shall not go!" she declared. "Wait a moment," she commanded and re-entered her mother's room.

As he stood there at Lize Wetherford's door and his mind went back over her brave deed, which had gone far to atone for her vulgarity, his respect for her deepened. Lee Virginia opened the door and stepped out close beside him.

"Her breathing is quieter," she whispered. "I think she's going to sleep. It's been a terrible night! You must be horribly tired. I will find you some place to sleep. Please don't go till after breakfast," she smiled wanly. "I may need you."

He understood. "What did the doctor say?"

"He said mother was in a very low state of vitality and that she must be very careful, which was easy enough to say. But how can I get her to rest and to diet? You have seen how little she cares for the doctor's orders. He told her not to touch alcohol."

"She is more like a man than a woman," he answered.

She led the way into the small sitting room which lay at the front of the house and directly opposite the door of her own room. It was filled with shabby parlor furniture, and in one corner stood a worn couch. "I'm sorry, but I can offer nothing better," she said. "Every bed is taken, but I have plenty of blankets."

There was something delightfully suggestive in being thus waited upon by a young and handsome woman, and the ranger submitted to it with the awkward grace of one unaccustomed to feminine care.

They faced each other in silence, each filled with the same delicious sense of weakness, of danger, reluctant to say good night, longing for the closer touch which dawning love demanded, and yet something in the girl defended her, defeated him.

"You must call me if I can be of any help," he repeated, and his voice was tremulous with feeling.

"I will do so," she answered.

Still they did not part. His voice was very tender as he said: "I don't like to see you exposed to such experiences. It angers me to think that the worst of these loafers, these drunken beasts, can glare at you, can

. They have no right to same air with one like smile at this. His voice, re filled with the gravity whose passion is not humorous. Again, under the training of his judgment, he was being drawn into closer and closer union with this daughter of violence, and he added, "You may not see me in the morning."

"You must not go without seeing my mother. You must have your breakfast with us. It hurt us to think you didn't come to us for supper."

Her words meant little, but the look in her eyes, the music in her voice, made him shiver. He stammered: "I—I must return to my duties tomorrow. I should go back tonight."

"You mustn't do that. You can't do that. You are to appear before the judge."

He smiled. "That is true. I'd forgotten that."

Radiant with relief, she extended her hand. "Good night, then. You must sleep."

He took her hand and drew her toward him; then, perceiving both wonder and fear in her eyes, he conquered himself. "Good night," he repeated, dropping her hand, but his voice was husky with its passion.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE OLD SHEEP HERDER.

THE ranger was awakened in the first faint dawn by the passing of the girl's light feet as she went across the hall to her mother's room, and a moment later he heard the low murmur of her voice. Throwing off his blankets and making such scant toilet as he needed, he stepped into the hall and waited for her to return.

Soon she came toward him, a smile of confidence and pleasure on her lips.

"How is she?" he asked.

"Quite comfortable."

"And you?" His voice was very tender.

"I am a little tired," she acknowledged. "I didn't sleep very well."

"You didn't sleep at all," he declared regretfully.

"Oh, yes, I did," she replied brightly. These two ardent souls confronted each other in absorbed silence with keener perception, with new daring, with new intimacy, till he recalled himself with effort. "You must let me help you if there's anything I can do. Remember, I'm your big brother."

"I remember," she answered smilingly, "and I'm going out to see what my big brother is to have for breakfast."

* * * * * * *

Cavanagh found the street empty, silent and utterly commonplace. He went forth to his duties with a deepened conviction of the essential lawlessness of the state and of America in general, for this spirit of mob law was to be found in some form throughout the land. He was disgusted, but not beaten. His resolution to carry out the terms of his contract with the government remained unshaken.

He carried with him also a final disturbing glimpse of Eliza Wetherford's girl that did indeed threaten his peace of mind. There was an involuntary appeal, a wistful depth, to her glance which awakened in him an indignant pity and also blew into flame something not so creditable—something which smoldered beneath his conscious will. She had not escaped her heritage of passion, and her glances, innocent as they were, roused even in him something lawless.

His pony plodded slowly, and the afternoon was half spent before he came in sight of the long, low log cabin which was the only home he possessed in all America. For the first time since he built it the station seemed lonely and disheartening. "Would any woman for love of me come to such a hearthstone?" he asked himself. "And if she consented to do so could I be so selfish as to exact such sacrifice? No; the forest ranger in these altitudes must be young and heart free; otherwise his life would be miserably solitary."

He was just dishing out his rude supper when the feet of a horse on the log bridge announced a visitor.

With a feeling of pleasure as well as relief he rose to greet the stranger. "Any visitor is welcome this night," he said.

The horseman proved to be his former prisoner, the old man Edwards, who slipped from his saddle with the never failing grace of the cow man and came slowly toward the cabin. He smiled wearily as he said: "I'm on your trail, Mr. Ranger, but I bear no malice. You were doing your duty. Can you tell me how far it is to Ambro's camp?"

There was something forlorn in the man's attitude, and Cavanagh's heart softened. "Turn your horse into the corral and come to supper," he commanded with western bluntness. "We'll talk about all that later."

Edwards accepted his hospitality without hesitation. "I'm going up to take Ambro's place," he began after a few minutes of silent eating. "Know where his camp is?"

"I do," replied Ross, to whom the stranger now appeared in pathetic guise. "Any man of his age consenting to herd sheep is surely hard hit by the rough hand of the world," he reasoned, and the closer he studied his visitor the plainer he felt his ungoverned past.

"I suppose Gregg paid your fine?" he said.

"Yes."

"In any other town in the state you'd have gone down the line."

He roused himself. "See here, Mr Ranger, you've no warrant to believe me, but I told you the truth. Young Gregg got me to ride into the range and show him the trail. I didn't intend to get mixed up with a game warden. I've had all the confinement I need."

"Well, it's a closed incident now," interposed Ross. "We won't reopen it. Make yourself at home."

The stranger, hungry as he was, ate with unexpected gentility, and as the hot coffee sent its cheerful glow through his body he asked, with livening interest, a good many questions about the ranger and the forest service. "You fellers have to be all round men. The cowboys think you have a snap, but I guess you earn your money."

"A man that builds trails, lays bridges, burns brush, fights fire, rides the roundup and covers seventy-five miles of trail every week on $80 per month and feeds himself and his horses isn't what I would call enjoying a soft snap."

"What do you do it for?"

"God knows! I've been asking myself that question all day today."

"This playing game warden has some outs too. That was a wild crowd last night. The town is the same old hole it was when I knew it years ago. Fine girl of Lize Wetherford's. Lize has changed terribly. I didn't expect to see her have such a skein of silk as that girl. She sure looks the queen to me."

Cavanagh did not greatly relish this line of conversation, but the pause enabled him to say: "Miss Wetherford is not much western; she got her training in the east. She's been with an aunt ever since her father's death."

"He's dead, is he?"

"So far as anybody knows, he is."

"Well, he's no loss. I knew him too. He was all kinds of a fool. He got on the wrong side of the rustler lineup. Them Wetherford women think a whole lot of you. 'Pears like they'd both fight for you. Are you sweet on the girl?"

"Now, see here, old man," Ross retorted sharply, "you want to do a lot of thinking before you comment on Miss Wetherford. I won't stand for any nasty clack."

Edwards meekly answered: "I wasn't going to say anything out of the way. I was fixing for to praise her."

"All the same, I don't intend to discuss her with you," was Cavanagh's curt answer.

The herder fell back into silence while the ranger prepared his bunk for the night. The fact that he transferred some of the blankets from his own bed to that of his visitor did not escape Edwards' keen eyes, and with grateful intent he said:

"I can give you a tip, Mr. Ranger," said he, breaking out of a silence. "The triangle outfit is holding more cattle on the forest than their permits call for."

"How do you know?"

"I heard one of the boys bragging about it."

"Much obliged," responded Ross. "I'll look into it."

Edwards went on: "Furthermore, they're fixing for another sheep kill over there too. All the sheepmen are armed. That's why I left the country. I don't want to run any more chances of being shot up. I've had enough of trouble. I can't afford to be hobnobbing with judges and juries. I'm just a broken down old cowpuncher herding sheep in order to keep clear of the liquor belt."

This seemed reasonable, and the ranger remarked by way of dropping the subject: "I've nothing to say further than this—obey the rules of the forest and you won't get into any further trouble with me. And as for being shot up by the cowmen, you'll not be disturbed on any national forest. There never has been a single herder shot nor a sheep destroyed on this forest."

"I'm mighty glad to hear that," replied Edwards, with sincere relief. "I've had my share of shooting up and shooting down. All I ask now is quiet and the society of sheep. I take a kind of pleasure in protecting the fool brutes. It's about all I'm good for."

He did indeed look like a man in the final year of life as he spoke. "Better turn in," Cavanagh said in kindlier tone. "I'm an early riser."

The old fellow rose stiffly and, laying aside his boots and trousers, rolled into his bunk and was asleep in three minutes.

Cavanagh himself was very tired and went to bed soon after to sleep dreamlessly till daylight. He sprang from his bed and after a plunge in the stream set about breakfast, while Edwards rose from his bunk groaning and sighing and went forth to wrangle the horses, rubbing his hands and shivering as he met the keen edge of the mountain wind. When he returned breakfast was ready, and again he expressed his gratitude.

"Haven't you any slicker?" asked Cavanagh. "It looks like rain."

"No; I'm run down pretty low," he replied. "The truth is, Mr. Ranger, I blew in all my wages at roulette last week."

Ross brought out a canvas coat, well worn, but serviceable. "Take this along with you. It's likely to storm before we reach the sheep camp. And you don't look very strong. You must take care of yourself."

Edwards was visibly moved by this kindness. "Sure you can spare it?"

"Certain sure; I've another," returned the ranger curtly.

LET GEORGE DO IT.

If you want a paper Sunday,
A shoe shine or a smoke,
You'll have to get it Saturday,
Or the dealer will get "broke."

For thus the mayor has ordered
And to him we must bow
He was elected mayor
And sales, he'll not allow.

But there's kicking and there's squealing,
And they're knocking him for fair,
But to him they all are kneeling
And crying "George, Be Square."

They wanted him for mayor
So he would clamp "the lid"—
They said "Let Georgie Do It!"
And Georgie surely did!

BOY A LIVING TORCH.

Rushes to Street, Clothing Ablaze—Painfully Burned.

Six-year-old Domenico Palo, of Bloomfield, is suffering from painful burns about the face and chest, the result of his clothing catching fire in some mysterious way Saturday.

With his clothing making him a living torch the youngster ran into Bay street, that place, while his mother stood by, too terrified to assist him. Walking along by the Mountainside Hospital William H. Pierson, of 40 Park avenue, Bloomfield, saw the burning youngster. Quickly taking of his coat he wrapped it round the boy and then rolled him on the ground. The flames were soon smothered and the boy taken to his home.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Mr. Wilton Lackaye's new play, "The Stranger," in which he will be seen at the Plainfield theatre Saturday matinee and night, February 4, 1911, is conceded to be a success in every particular. Its atmosphere is southern; Danville, Ga., is the scene of a struggle between the new south and the old, and the story unfolded has to do with the rivalries of business men trying to shake up the sleepy town and those who want to have no change from the ancient conditions. Mr. Dazey has surpassed himself, master as he is of stagecraft and especially of southern character and speech. The lines abound in wit and wisdom—in dialect and opportunity for illustration of mind ranging from the statesman to the colored mammy who is the finest kitchen queen in Georgy, suh.

In "The Stranger," Mr. Lackaye has a play in which his talents are seen at their best. He acts with a finish, refinement and yet a power that suggests still greater power in reserve and that makes his work a delight. He is receiving the most cordial receptions and no end of congratulations over the assured success of his comedy-drama. The scene of the play being Southern, gives opportunity for picturesque stage embellishments and L. S. Sire, under whose management Mr. Lackaye is appearing, has taken full advantage of this fact, while the company in support of Mr. Lackaye includes such talented artists as Muriel Starr, Edna Conroy, Frank Burbeck, H. S. Northrup and others.

MANY SEEK $6,000 JOB.

Candidates for Jersey Road Commissionership Await Wilson's Action.

Fifty or more Democratic candidates are anxiously awaiting Gov. Wilson's announcement of the appointment of a State Road Commissioner to succeed Col. Frederick Gilkyson, whose term has expired. The office is worth $6,000 a year, with an automobile and chauffeur maintained by the State. The post has been held by Mercer county men ever since its creation, and an effort is being made to land the place for Joseph S. Hoff, of Princeton, chairman of the Mercer County Democratic Committee.

The Democrats are afraid to urge their claims too strongly, for the Governor not long ago declared that he would not appoint to office any man who thrust himself forward, declaring that good men could be found without self-advertisement.

Robert Adrain Dead.

Robert Adrain, considered one of the most brilliant lawyers in the State and at one time a State Senator, died this morning at his home in New Brunswick after a long fight with a mortal illness. Mr. Adrain was city attorney of New Brunswick, and his reputation as a lawyer was State-wide.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Newton Drake, of Verdon street, were in Trenton Saturday bidding goodby to their daughter, Mrs. Thomas Davis, who with her husband, an engineer, left yesterday morning for Oklahoma to stay for some time.

PARALYZED GIRL WALKS AFTER PRAYERS FOR HER

Friends of Miss Gertrude Neeb, of Reading, Pa., believe in the efficacy of prayer as they never did before. Miss Neeb was employed in a department store here last Christmas. She fell and was removed to her home. Local physicians treated her and a doctor from the University of Pennsylvania was called, but none could give her relief. The case was diagnosed as a congestion of the spine and Miss Neeb lost the power of her lower limbs.

Several days ago the family heard that miracles were performed through prayer, and at length they called in a local religious worker to pray with them. The girl was healed in about four minutes, being able to walk downstairs and about the house ever since, which she had not done since the fall. The religious worker takes no credit upon himself for the healing, but says it is simply a direct answer to the prayers that were offered up for the girl by her many friends.

Rev. J. Wallace Matin, the minister in charge of the Christ Episcopal church, Reading, often visited the girl before the healing took place, and also since. He, too, it is said, is convinced that the girl was healed through prayer.

UNION POULTRYMEN TO FORM AN ORGANIZATION.

An association is to be organized of the poultry raisers of Union county for mutual education and assistance. The meetings are to be conducted along the lines adopted by States institutes of poultry husbandry. One or more meetings will be held each month, when timely subjects will be discussed, bulletins read, questions answered and experiences exchanged.

Any one raising poultry will find these meetings both interesting and instructive, and it is hoped that a large number of people will attend. The first meeting will be held Wednesday, February 1, at 8 p. m., at the courthouse, Elizabeth, in the Union County Board of Agriculture room No. 12. Further information can be secured by communicating with F. Warren Sumner, 456 Rahway avenue, Elizabeth.

GOVERNMENT PREVENTS HER MARRYING INDIAN.

Intervention of the Federal authorities has prevented the marriage of Miss Madeline Sullivan, the pretty daughter of well-to-do Chicago parents, to Plenty Hawk, a rich Crow Indian ranchman.

According to messages received by the girl's mother, Plenty Hawk has been placed in jail on the Crow Agency, near Cheyenne, Wyoming, while the young woman has been ordered to leave the reservation and sent back to relatives in Sheridan.

Upon receipt of the message Miss Sullivan's mother wired her daughter to return to Chicago, her home. Ever since she has been a child Miss Sullivan has declared she would marry an Indian, and she was determined to wed Plenty Hawk, even though her parents opposed.

Will Organize Building Loan.

Garwood, Jan. 30.—Garwood is shortly to have a building and loan association. Councilman Albert J. Beckley, Fire Chief Frederick J. Dushanek, Tenement House Inspector Richard Watt and other prominent men of the borough are hustling to organize what will be known as the Garwood Building and Loan Association. With the rapid development here and the prospects of many people building homes in the future the need of a local building and loan association has been felt and the idea originally started in the fire department. The men interested in forming the association have already sold over 300 of the necessary 500 shares to start the association. When 500 share are sold a meeting will be called for organization.

Elizabeth Baker Arrested.

Elizabeth, Jan. 30.—When the bail of Enrico Russo, a baker, who is charged with conducting a house in Court street, Elizabeth, was increased, he was unable to raise the amount, $3,000, and was taken into custody on a sheriff's pacias by Detectives O'Brien and Mulcahey and Constable Seeland of the sheriff's office. He and a half dozen other men were arrested a week ago in the Court street place. The young women claimed they were being detained by force. They are being held as witnesses.

Milk Co. Employe Reports Hold-up.

Learning of the trolley hold-up Thursday night, William Kebler, a driver for the Borden Milk Company, Friday reported that he was held up in Westfield avenue, Roselle Park, early Thursday morning by two young men answering the description of the trolley bandits. Kebler was on his way to Elizabeth, when the men stopped his horse and one clambered into the wagon. He drove them off.

Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, will hold a dime social tonight at the home of Mrs. Terry 331 East Third street. There will be a musical program and refreshments will be served.

IN COURT FOR SELLING CIGARETTES TO BOYS.

Francis J. Skinner, a store-keeper of West Third street, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning charged with selling cigarette tobacco and papers to boys under the age of 18. Skinner was arrested by Detective Sergeant John Flynn after special warnings had been given against the practice.

It is Judge DeMeza's intention to break up the practice now obtaining among small shop keepers of selling cigarettes and tobacco to minors and the next prisoner convicted of the offense will be severely dealt with. Skinner was allowed to go with a warning.

COLORED YOUTH RELEASED; COURT GIVES COUNSEL.

James Coleman, the colored youth, who with three others was suspected of attempting to rob the hen roost of Samuel Berkowitz, of East Third street, was arraigned this morning and discharged by Judge DeMeza. Coleman denied any attempt to steal the chickens declaring that he was leading an exemplary life and was steadily employed.

The court advised Coleman to keep away from bad company as it might lead him into doing things for which he would repent too late. Coleman is out on parole from the Rahway reformatory.

DEMOCRATS SUPPORT THE MAYOR'S POLICY

Owing to the fact that several members, including officers, were unable to attend the meeting of the Democratic Club, last night, it was decided to adjourn the meeting to next Monday evening. There were eight or ten members out last night and there was an informal discussion regarding the action of Mayor G. W. V. Moy, relative to his appointments and the Sunday closing order, and while no action was taken the sentiment of those present was in favor of Mr. Moy's position on both matters.

Resolutions were prepared in advance endorsing the Mayor's appointnext Monday night, when it is expected that they will be adopted. It was the opinion of those present last night that the Mayor's action in regard to Sunday closing was right, that he was simply following the provisions of the law and should be supported.

It will be recalled that, although Mr. Moy was always identified with the Republican party, being a member of the city executive committee, he accepted the nomination for the Mayoralty on the Democratic ticket, in his own primary for the nomination by B. Frank Coriell. The Democratic club has ever since been strong in its support of the Mayor.

PHYSICIAN'S PROMPT ACT TO PREVENT DIPHTHERIA

On Sunday, while the three children of W. Townley, of Scheelen road, were ill with diphtheria, announcement was made to Overseer of the Poor, August Klemser, of Scotch Plains, for relief for the family. Mr. Klemser could not offer the relief unless instructed by Justice of the Peace, Joseph Clark. Therefore Justice Clarke was consulted.

The Justice after mature thought called upon Patrolman Rabig to produce Townley and an investigation would follow. The limb of the law went to Townley's house which, of course, was quarrantined, and brought the unhappy man before the investigating committee where after the necessary interrogatories were answered the prayed for relief was granted.

But, here is the sorry part of the actions of the authorities; Townley was brought to the place of meeting which was a public buliding in Scotch Plains. The trip was made in a trolley car in which were as usual a large number of passengers. The hall is frequented by many people at times during the day and evening. How many of the people in the trolley car were exposed to the contagion and how many since have been in the danger zone at the public building.

When Dr. F. W. Westcott heard of the occurance he had the hall fumigated, but no one knows whether this was done in time to prevent others taking diphtheria germs with them out of the building. Unfortunately the number of the trolley car was not taken so it was impossible to fumigate that. Some of the people who have heard the story are wondering how such a thing could happen in this enlightened age.

Mallery, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest.

MR. ATTERBURY'S LECTURE

Talk on Origin and Development of the Social and Religious Ceremonies.

TO MONDAY AFTERNOON CLUB.

An Absorbingly Interesting Address Is Heard at the Hartridge School Auditorium.

The members of the Monday Afternoon Club and an equal number of invited guests listened with interest yesterday to an address given at the Hartridge School auditorium by their fellow townsman, Albert Hoffman Atterbury, on "The Origin and Development of Social and Religious Ceremonies." Ceremonial institutions, Mr. Atterbury said, are the earliest and most universal method of regulating human conduct, preceding law and political power as a regulating force. Similarity of ceremonies of races widely separated by time and space show that they must have grown out of the needs of human society and not from chance or initiation.

In treating of social ceremonies the lecturer gave the family as the unit, growing into communities, tribes and nations. As the result of warfare between these primitive people, the natural boast of the victor must have proof to be believed, and taking of trophies securing some part of the body, head, heart, etc., became universal. Slavery, he said, originated in the war for captives and was a great advance, mitigating trophy taking.

Obeisances of all kinds, Mr. Atterbury said, have arisen from prostration as an act of complete submission. Later prostration was abridged to crouching, kneeling, bowing and finally bowng the head as a mark of subordination, then of respect, and finally of courtesy. It was a long step from the prostrate savage to the modern bow, but the savage act was the origin of all salutations.

The removal of clothing from enemies, according to the lecturer, marked the victor's claim, and its voluntary surrender became a sign of submission, which later changed to respect and then to courtesy, symbolized by the present day custom of removing the hat, or touching it with the hand.

The giving of presents, Mr. Atterbury said, arose from the desire of the conquered to placate his victor by the means of gifts. It has changed into an act of courtesy between equals.

Shaking hands, he described as an abridged remnant of an act by which the victim raised the victor's hand to place it on his heart or to kiss it as a mark of submission. Between equals, the other party would seek to withdraw his hand, these oscillations finally developing into our present practice.

Among minor ceremonies, were mentioned the monarch's sceptre and the gentleman's cane as an outgrowth of the sword and spear which were badges of the successful warrior.

In treating of the second part of his subject, Religious Ceremonies, Mr. Atterbury claimed not to deal with religious beliefs, but merely religious forms common to all people. He said they were evolved by man in a state of nature, surrounded by the mysterious wonders of nature teaching him to a notion of spirits, ghosts and deities. All religious ceremonies, he said, have arisen from primitive funeral rites and Christianity took over these rites from panagnism. Obeisances, mutilations, church, temples offerings, incense, sacrifices and other religious observances, according to Mr. Atterbury, had their origin in pagan minds.

The meeting, which was an informal one, occuring on the fifth Monday of the month, concluded with a tea, Mrs. Otis E. Hovey, of West Seventh street, and Mrs. Frederick W. Yates, of Kensington avenue, presiding.

Y. W. C. A. Elect Officers.

The Board of Directors of the Young Women's Christian Association, at its regular meeting, yesterday, elected these officers for the coming year: President, Mrs. Frederic G. Mead; first vice-president, Mrs. Percy H. Stewart; second vice-president, Mrs. James R. Joy; secretary, Mrs. Frank W. French; treasurer, Mrs. Elliot T. Barrows. No other business was transacted.

Chamber of Commerce to Meet.

The February meeting of the Chamber of Commerce will be held Thursday night, when it is expected that the banquet committee of which former Mayor William L. Saunders is the chairman, will make a report on the progress of the arangements for the affair and give the list of speakers and other details.

GAVE A NOVEL DINNER

Young Men's Bible Class at Park Ave. Baptist Church Prepare and Serve Menu.

W. N. RUNYON AS TOASTMASTER.

Excellent Addresses Given by Former City Judge, Rev. G. R. Maguire and Others at the Feast.

For the purpose of promoting sociability among the members and making the newer ones better acquainted, the young men of Judge William N. Runyon's Bible class at the Park Avenue Baptist church gave a dinner in the Sunday school rooms last night. An excellent menu, prepared by the members themselves, was provided and a short, informal session of speech-making at the close, composed a most enjoyable evening. The attendance numbered sixty in all, comprising the class and invited guestss.

The dinner itself was all that could be desired, demonstrating forcibly that the young women of the congregation have no monopoly in this respect. Delicious grape fruit headed the course on the list and was closely followed by bouillon, tasty shired ham and mutton, crisp potatoes, beans a la Boston, ice cream and cake, coffee and all the "fixin's," everything meeting with emphatic approval. A corps of waiters from the class gave commendable service. The tables were garnished with carnations and decorations of pink about the room enhanced the general appearance.

Judge Runyon opened the speechmaking and afterward acted as toastmaster. In his address, he outlined the purpose of the gathering and stated it would probably be the predecessor of several others of a similar nature. The class, he said, has gotten to be one of the most important departments of the Sunday school and the young men are seeking to make it still more so. New members are being added all the time and the dinner served the double purpose of bringing all more closely together and interesting possible recruits in the church. The speaker paid a warm tribute to Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, the pastor, who has been working hand-in-hand with him to make the class second to none, and also to Superintendent George E. Hall, who he described as being one of the best posted and most capable Sunday school workers in the State.

Mr. Hall was the second speaker and beside priasing the class for its support and activity related a number of anecdotes, one of which illustrated what it meant to a superintendent to have two such men as Mr. Maguire and Judge Runyon as co-operators. Mr. Maguire was called upon and spoke in his typical happy manner, mixing wholesome advice with breezy stories. Brief addresses were also made by George Place, Howard Mason, Thomas M. Muir and J. Henry Crane. When the last man had spoken, Judge Runyon said "mix," and his command was obeyed to the letter, an informal social session followed that lasted an hour and at its conclusion if anyone went away unacquainted it was his own fault.

The committee from the class which prepared and served the dinner was composed of Howard Mason, chairman; Aaron D. Thompson, Jr., E. F. Dorman, George Place, Jr., Chester A. Gaskill, Nelson VanWinkle and Charles Daltby. They were very ably assisted by Mrs. Howard Mason and Miss Marguerite Phillips in the kitchen; Harry Cuming, president of this class, was a very busy reception committee of one.

Mr. Kinsman, who is well-known here, is a graduate of the Plainfield High School and Cornell University. He has been engaged in engineering work since leaving college and has been located in Kansas City. The couple will make their home in Braddock, Pa.

Rev. James Harvey, of Crossingville, Pa., has returned home after spending a few days with Philip T. Maguire, of Park avenue.

VETS AT A CAMP FIRE

Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R. Guest of Plainfield Council Jr. O. U. A. M.

GOOD SPEECHES AND MUSIC.

W. S. Angleman Presided—Presentation of a Badge to A. K. Fleming for Getting Membership Candidates.

The members of Plainfield Council, No. 294, Jr. O. U. A. M., provided the annual "camp fire" entertainment for Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., in their rooms, last night, and the affair proved to be an enjoyable one. The post was largely represented and the veterans not only were pleased with the entertainment, but also enjoyed the opportunity of giving short sketches of army life, which were interesting to the younger men present.

The council first held a short business meeting and then received the veterans. The stacks of muskets, the army tent and camp fire kindlded the enthusiasm of the veterans. W. S. Angleman, who presided, gave the veterans a hearty welcome in a short address, adding that he hoped that as long as there was one single survivor of the Civil War the annual reception would be held.

Then followed brief responses by Comrades William C. Smith, H. C. Smith, Townley, Henry Drake S. R. Struthers, Isaac E. Houston and other veterans. W. C. I. Cubberly sang a solo, Joseph D. Moon gave a recitation and sang a solo and a quartet comprising W. C. I. Cubberly, J. G. Williams, Joseph D. Moon and Charles Mumford sang a patriotic selection.

An interesting feature was the presentation of a Jr. O. U. A. M., badge to A. K. Fleming, a member of the council, for securing the greatest number of members in Plainfield Council during the past year. The presentation was made by Col. Oakley, of Elizabeth, on behalf of the council. The badge came from the State Council which offers them as an incentive for greater effort. In responding and thanking the members, Mr. Fleming said that he would try and organize a uniform rank the coming year.

Col. Oakley also made a stirring address which interested both young and old. During the rendition of the solo numbers and the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner," Clarence Hoffman presided at the piano.

After the entertainment refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed. The committee in charge comprised Frank W. Downs, J. G. Williams and George Cratsley.

ST. MARGARET'S GUILD AT ST. STEPHEN'S PARISH.

At a meeting of the women of St. Stephen's parish yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. K. Tetsuka, St. Margaret's Guild was organized with Mrs. Tetsuka president and Mrs. Louis Geary treasurer and Mrs. R. T. Letcher, secretary.

The organization will perform the duties of caring for the parish house and assisting the rector, Rev. Elory G. Bowers. There were about fifteen members of the church present and besides the officers mentioned included Mr. F. W. Carlyle, Mrs. Banks, Mrs. J. C. Haywoood, Mrs. Robert McCready, Mrs. S. S. Schuyler, Mrs. gardus.

It was announced by the rector that a kindergarten class will be added to the Sunday-school the sessions of which will be held at 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoons. This department will be in charge of Mrs. Bowers and the organist will be Mrs. Banks.

"An Evening of Wizardy."

Prof. Henderson, a well-known magician from New York, will give "An Evening of Wizardy," at the parish house of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Clinton avenue, tomorrow night, followed by his famous "Punch and Judy" show. After the entertainment there will be a dance and an enjoyable evening for both young and old is assured. The proceeds will be for the benefit of the church and the affair will be held under the auspices of the board of trustees.

W. T. Pelletier in the Cast.

The character of Jules Faubert, the detective in the play, "The Money Spinner," which is to be given by the Park Comedy Club at the Park Club, Saturday evening, February 25, has been recast and will now be played by William T. ## NEGRO THREATENED TO CHOP UP HIS WIFE

For threatening to carve his wife with an axe, Charles Hawkins, colored, was given sixty days in the county jail this morning by City Judge William G. DeMeza. The complaint was made by Mrs. Hawkins who declared that since last Friday her spouse had been drunk and had made life for her and her boarders one continuous hades on earth.

When Hawkins was asked to explain his conduct he said "Judge I think this thing can be settled all right, I and my wife want a bill of separation from you and if you'll make it out we'll both sign it."

"I'll give you a separation, all right," declared the court, "It's sixty days for yours."

"Say, Judge," interrupted Mrs. Hawkins, "Ah don't lub dat man no mo', he done do to me all I'se goin' to stan' fo'. He tuk de axe an' brung hit up stairs and stood hit along side de do' and swah he gwine kill me an' de whole fambly. I sho' doan want tuh lib wif him no mo'."

"Maybe he'll behave himself better when he comes out," responded Judge DeMeza. "You'd better wait."

"That woman sure don't like me any more," ejaculated Hawkins as he was led away.

WILLIAM M. STILLMAN IS SADLY MISINFORMED

The attention of Frank Bergen, president of the Plainfield-Union Water company, was called today to the letter of William M. Stillman relating to the water question and published in this paper yesterday. Mr. Bergen read the letter, and then said:

"It is hard to understand how Mr. Stillman managed to get so many mis-statements in less than half a column. What I said at the meeting," he continued, " was taken down by the official stenographer of the city, and I am quite willing that my remarks shall be written out and published. If that is done it will appear that Mr. Stillman has not only misstated the facts, but has ascribed to me at least one important statement which I did not make, and which is exactly the reverse of what I said repeatedly."

Referring to the pressure in the hydrants, Mr. Bergen said: "The contract between the company and the city provides the following test for hydrants: 'Five streams shall be thrown, each eighty feet high to extreme drops, at one and the same time, each through fifty feet of two and a half inch hose, with one and one-eighth inch straight conical nozzles, from any five hydrants on the mains of the company within that part of the city bounded by Richmond street, Green brook, Grant avenue and Ninth street, to be designated by the Common Council, or committee, or chief." This test was prescribed by the city, and is a fair one.

"There has never been a moment during the period of nearly nineteen years since the contract was made when the hydrants would not stand that test and more, except two or three evenings last summer when, on account of the excessive heat and drought, water was being taken, mostly for irrigation purposes, at the rate of 168 gallons per capita per day; and so soon as that misuse of the water works was stopped the pressure was restored. There are two recording pressure gauges in Plainfield which show the pressure on the mains constantly, and there is no excuse for any reckless misstatement on the subject.

"The losses by fire in Plainfield, compared with the losses in similar cities, is very creditable to the efficiency of the fire department and of the water company."

Dog Kills Deer.

A couple of stray dogs invaded the premises of Louis McIntosh, on Arlington avenue near Arlington place, on Sunday evening and killed a buck deer. One of the dogs was shot but the other escaped by jumping the fence. A close watch will be kept for the other dog which according to all precedents should return for another chance at the quarry.

Strayed from Narrow Path.

Willis Waller, colored, fell from grace yesterday owing, as he said, to a slight injury sustained early in the morning. He resorted to the universal 'cure' whiskey and was unable to steer a straight course for home. He was lectured by Judge DeMeza and let go with a suspended sentence.

Lotus Concert Tonight.

WILL DEFY MAYOR MOY

Some Storekeepers Resolve to Ignore Sabbath Ordinance and Open Their Places

HIS HONOR UNCONCERNED.

Determination to Rigidly Enforce the Law is Unaltered—"It is My Duty," He Says.

Notwithstanding Mayor Moy's edict concerning the observance of the Sabbath, there are a few of the smaller shop-keepers who are determined to take the matter into their own hands and disregard the Mayor's order. At a meeting held last night about twenty of the Hebrew retailers declared their belief that the city's chief executive's act was unconstitutional and that they had for their authority the definition of day which means a solar period and not one confined to the limits of the twenty-four hours between midnight and midnight.

These men base their opinion on the dictionary as well as the Bible and it is their belief that the Supreme court will uphold their views They propose to close their places of business at sundown on Friday and re-open at sundown on Saturday. In closing during these hours they claim to have complied with the law and having done so are entitled to keep open for regular business hours on the day commonly observed by Christians as Sunday.

When seen this morning Mayor Moy was apprissed of the contemplated action of the men referred to. His Honor replied that he was not at all surprised, and that perhaps they would open, but that did not alter his determination in the least to see that the laws were compiled with in every detail.

"I am not the aribter of the beliefs of those who observe the Sabbath in different religious manners," he said, "what I am here for is too see that the laws are enforced and this I propose to do without fear or favor."

One law as it stands spread upon the statute books since March 24, 1874, reads in part as follows:

Section 13, of the Vice and Immorality Act of 1874. Page 3711 of General Statutes. That no transportation of freight, excepting milk, on any public highway, railroad, or canal, shall be done or allowed by any person or persons, within this State, on the first day of the week commonly called the "Christian Sabbath;" provided that nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent the transportation of the United States Mails, or regular trips of ferryboats.

Section 1. "After prohibiting all sorts of worldly employment or businesses and sports of all kinds and traveling" says as follows: "That no person or persons going to or returning from any church or place of worship, within the distance of twenty miles, or going to call a physician, surgeon, or midwife, or carrying mails to or from any postoffice, or by order of any public officer shall be construed as traveling within the meaning of this act, and provided also that nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit the dressing of victuals, in private families or any lodging houses, inns and other houses of entertainment for the use of sojourners, travellers or strangers, and provided further that it shall and may be lawful for any railroad company in this State to run one passenger train each way over the roads on Sunday for the accommodation of the citizens of this State."

It would look from careful perusal of the law mentioned above that the closing of small stores is not the only thing that Mayor Moy will have to do if he carries out his intention of enforcing all the laws relating to the Sabbath.

Signers for Licenses

It appears that there is some question as to the necessity for holders of liquor licenses to procure signers for renewal petitions. Some of the members of the Councilmanic excise committee hold to the view that it is not essential that the present licenses be put to the trouble and expense of getting the signatures of ten freeholders.

Fire Dep't Budget.

A meeting of the Councilmanic fire committee was held last night for the purpose of fixing up the fire department budget for the coming year. It was agreed to make the budget approximately $96,500, which is a $1,500 increase over the expense for the present year.

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

WESTFIELD.

Westfield Police Department is starting a crusade against those places in town where beer is sold without a license. Out-of-town detectives have been working in the town for a couple of weeks and have completed their work, placing the facts in the hands of the officers. Out-of-town wholesalers who drive in town and deliver the goods and make a quick getaway have also been watched and the names of several conducting that business have been turned over to the police.

Andrew Carnegie has notified the trustees of the Westfield Methodist church that he will donate $1,500 toward the new organ that is to be installed in the new church when completed. The instrument will cost $7,500. The money will be paid when the balance of the amount required has been subscribed.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

A special meeting of the Board of Health was held last night in Excelsior Hall for the purpose of taking action towards preventing a spread of diphtheritic sore throat which is prevalent in town at the present time, a number of cases being reported. The malady is not confined to any particular section of the town. All the cases are being looked after by the board and the houses quarantined and there is no fear of an epidemic as all the cases are light. The Library rooms have been quarantinued by order of the board of account of Charles Townley, of Graceland, one of whose children has the disease, being summoned to appear before Judge Clark Saturday in an overseer of the poor case. On account of the rooms being public the board took this action in order not to run any risk.

The condition of George Henry, who has been ill for several weeks at his home on Park avenue, Fanwood, remains about the same, no improvement being noticed.

SEEKING LIGHT AS TO BLOCK SIGNALS

The Board of Public Utility Commissioners has determined to make a systematic inquiry into the operation of railways by block signals. With this end in view notices have been sent to each railroad operating in the State requiring it to furnish data showing the total mileage of railways operated in New Jersey, mileage operated by block signals, and the proportion of mileage, so protected, and operated by automatic block signals.

The railroads have been given thirty days within which to furnish this data. When it has been collected the board will take up for consideration the question of requiring the installation of block signals upon all lines. The railroads will be given an opportunity to present such arguments as they desire in favor of or against the block signal system.

The elder Kipling won considerable renown in his profession as architectual sculptor and illustrator. He illustrated a number of his son's books. He was seventy-four years old and had spent most of his life in India, where he estblished several schools of art and museums. Mrs. Kipling, mother of the author, to whom, as "the wittiest woman in India," he dedicated "Plain Tales from the Hills," died only a few weeks ago.

BASEBALL.

Lewis McCarty, of Danville, Pa., the young giant secured by Manager Joe McGinnity to do the receiving act the coming season, is touted as being well qualified to earn a berth in the Eastern League. The new backstop of the Indians worked behind the bat for Floyd Kroh, the Chicago Cubs' twirler, in the Keystone State before the big hurler landed with the Windy City nine. Kroh recommended McCarty to Manager Frank Chance and the great leader had a man looking the young receiver over. Cy Parkin was doing scout duty for Newark at the same time, and he succeeded in getting McCarty to accept terms with the Braves.

McCarty is twenty-two years old and stands five feet eleven and a half inches in his stocking feet. He weighs 192 pounds. McCarty started out with the Benton team in the Susquehanna League in 1909. Last year he worked half of the season for the Huntington professionals and finished the season with the Danville club in the Susquehanna League.

Manager Joe McGinnity believes that he has secured a star in McCarty. The "Iron Man" said yesterday that he considered Cy Parkin a great judge of ballplayers. When the Hudson hurler flashed word to Newark from the wilds of Pennsylvania last season that he believed he had uncovered a catching marvel, the leader of the Redskins wired him to close the deal. McCarty is also rated to be a good slugger.

The report that Henry, the star fielder of the Bloomsburg team of the Susquehanna League last season, has been signed by Baltimore, of the Eastern League, for $350 a month, is surprising news to Manager Clymer, of the Wilkes-Barre team of the New York State League, as he says that Henry accepted Wilkes-Barre's terms several weeks ago and is the property of Wilkes-Barre.

Pittsburg fans believe the Pirates have landed a first-class man in Hunter, of Kansas City, who will play first base. Since the release of Bransfield to Philadelphia the Pirates have been weak at this corner of the diamond. Hunter made a fine record last year, both in batting and fielding, according to the official averages of the American Association.

Those in touch with National League affairs seem to think that President Lynch will appoint the veteran Jack Doyle to the umpire staff. Doyle will be remembered as first baseman of the Giants, Baltimore, Brooklyn, Washington and other teams.

Clark Griffith, manager of the Cincinnati National League team, has been indulging in a little speculation as to the order in which the National League clubs will finish the coming season. He says Chicago and Cincinnati will fight it out for first place, New York will finish third and Pittsburg fourth.

Art Brown, a former Newark player, will cover first base for Albany next season again, according to Manager Clarke, who turned down offers of trade from several New York State League managers. Brown went from Newark to Detroit but was sold later to the Montreal club.

GOLF.

After enduring the putter controversy in silence for several weeks some of the long suffering golfers, unable to stand it any longer has risen to make a few remarks. He would like to know when a mallet is not a mallet? The anonymous one then draws an interesting parable, as may be seen by the following:

"We have been told by St. Andrews or as near as we can get in this country to that august body, that a certain 'note or interpretation' regarding mallet headed clubs is a part of the rules. Then a later and more elaborate manifesto tells us it isn't a part of the rules. From the same source we also learn that a mallet is a mallet and also that a mallet is not a mallet—that, if we like, we can call it one or the other, or any old thing we prefer, even a Schenectady putter, provided we sail under St. Andrews flag. Which somehow recalls the story of the farmer who had a herd of cows, and very fine cows they were, nice, gentle things, excepting one, which bellowed and rampaged to beat the band just about milking time. But when the bars were let down and the cows were milked the farmer noticed that the more this particular cow bellowed the less milk she gave."

Eight Big Carloads Arts and Crafts Furniture
In Our February Furniture Sale at One-Third Less Than Usual
Enormous Purchase of Surplus Stocks from Famed Factories of Stickley Bros. Co., Grand Rapids; Where Our Representative Now is Superintending Further Shipments

Wednesday we begin what will be the biggest and best sale of "Arts and Crafts" or Mission Furniture that we have ever conducted. This movement is based on a daring purchase of all the surplus stock and discontinued patterns in the Stickley Bros. Co. factories—some of the parts are not yet assembled—but all included in our purchase and to be forwarded as rapidly as completed.

Of course, every piece in these many carloads—eight cars of which are here already, is of high character, perfect in construction and finish, and easily salable at the regular fixed prices to which we adhere, except on occasions such as this, when we cut a full third from every price.

The quaint "Arts and Crafts" Furniture produced by Stickley Bros. Co., of Grand Rapids, is known far and wide as the most artistically designed, most perfectly made and most beautifully finished of any furniture produced in the class popularly known as "mission."

We have long represented the Stickley Bros. Co. in this section of New Jersey. Their product can be seen in no other Newark store; the moderate regular prices have been rigidly adhered to, it being Stickley Bros.' wish that the dignity their furniture deserved be well maintained in a price way.

This tremendous purchase embraces furniture for all sorts of rooms, so that one may furnish an entire home, an office, club or cafe, and have it in perfect harmony at one-third off usual cost.

Halls, Dens, Libraries, Dining-Rooms, Bedrooms, Living Rooms, Offices, Clubs, Cafes, Taprooms—all may be furnished from this surpassingly large collection of quaint mission pieces, which combine utility, comfort and art.

The woods are carefully selected, quarter-sawed Indiana White Oak, fumed a rich brown shade—different from almost any mission furniture you know of, a color that will harmonize readily with almost any decorative scheme. Solid woods are used throughout in every piece —there are positively no veneers.

In construction the best methods of cabinet work are employed. All joints are mortised and tenoned. Only the most skilled labor is employed in the Stickley Factories. We have never known a joint to open in any of this furniture.

The finish is with wax, that makes a hard surface that is not easily scratched and improves with age, maintaining the beautiful nut-brown shade which distinguishes the "Arts and Crafts" furniture.

The leather used in the upholstering and cushions is genuine Spanish Morocco, tanned and finished in the Stickley Bros.' Factory; fully guaranteed to be the highest standard of leather it is possible to obtain for upholstering. The color is of a shade that harmonizes perfectly with the warm browns of the wood itself.

There are many applicants for positions at the new immigrant station at Gloucester, who look with anxiety upon the operation of preparing the old Thompson home for the administration building.

Thomas C. French, a Camden lawyer, acting for Joseph Thompson, Clarence L. Cole and Maud Emily Frick, made the only bid Saturday when a large section of Inlet front property, Atlantic City, was sold by Judge Aller B. Endicott, master in chancery, for $25,000.

Former Governor Edward C. Stokes was the speaker Sunday evening in Trenton at the First Baptist church services, which were attended by the members of the Free and Accepted Masons representing the third Masonic district. Mr. Stokes delivered an eloquent talk on "What Masonry Stands For."

In Ewing James M. Donald, a New York banker, has equipped his country place with a searchlight for protection against chicken thieves. He has also armed his employes with rifles and instructed them to shoot invaders. The wiring system is arranged so that any movement of doors or windows will turn on the light.

Andes E. Budd, one of the leading farmers and dairymen of the Woodbury section, has been a patient sufferer for a long time from rheumatism. Since Saturday the pains have all left him and he attributes his relief to the fact that in taking a seat in a chair he sat on a needle. He jumped several feet instantly and his rheumatic pains have not been felt since.

Elsie Sigel Case Clue.

The police departement has received evidence which, the officers say, may go to help in clearing up the mystery surrounding the murder of Elsie Sigel, whose body was found in a trunk in the room of Leon Ling, a young Chinaman, who has been missing since the finding of the body, in June 1909. The new evidence is said to be contained in letters and other data, written in Chinese characters, which were found in one of the opium dens raided by custom inspectors last week. The police say that the letters are likely to afford important clues to the whereabouts of Leon Ling. Evidence in other crimes is said to be included in the mass of Chinese letters.

THE FORUM.

UPHOLDS THE MAYOR.

Editor, The Daily Press:—

The action of Mayor Moy in stopping a lot of needless traffic on Sunday seems to me should be commended by every good thinking person. If a few shall disregard the Sabbath and are allowed to do business, why not let every one open up. The cigar and candy stores and others of like nature are not a necessity and a supply can be had on a Saturday. Just the same as a family buying provisions, there are, of course, other branches seems to be useless also.

Some say that those renting property cannot pay these rents if made to close on Sunday. If Sunday opening is necessary in order to keep in business, then the sooner they are closed the better. There is a lot of inconsistent theories advanced always by some people if things don't go their way. There are branches of business which are a direct necessity, milk, there is hardly a supply to meet this demand and failure to supply this community on Sunday would result disastrous to little ones, whose only existence depends entirely upon the supply and to deprive them would be a crime as death would probably ensue upon such failure. When the public good is depending, then such matters should have due consideration.

The running of trolley and steam cars are a necessity—not particularly to everyone—but thousands depend upon them as their only means of travel either to reach some for aff destination or the only conveyance in order to attend public worship. And then I cannot see where a municipal government has any power to regulate them, both have their franchises and no restriction upon them operate. Can you say what anyone would gain or any good be derived in trying to place certain restrictions upon them, let us confine our restriction to our own city government and there will be time for other considerations.

J. TRIMMER.

Borough Board of Education.

The borough Board of Education held a regular meeting last night, but beyond routine business transacted little of importance. Bills to the amount of $18,000, of which $12,500 was on notes, were ordered paid.

Preparatory services will be held at Warren chapel, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock and the Lord's Supper will be celebrated Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

A meeting of unusual interest will be held at the Salvation Army Hall this evening by the young people. A floral bower drill will be given by the children and stereoptican views of "The Pilgrim's Progress." Admission free and a cordial invitation is extended to all.

LUMBAR TALKS BEFORE LEAVING

As an echo to the controvery which led to the severance of his pastoral relations with the church, came a formal statement yesterday from Rev. W. T. Sherman Lumbar, former pastor of the Mt. Pleasant Baptist church, Newark.

Mr. Lumarb, who will leave Newark for Canada today, explained that his statement was prompted by the fact that he had learned more fully, on his return to the city the latter part of last week, of the misconstruction of his attitude during the recent agitation. That, he added, was his excuse for appearing before the public at this late day. Continuing, he said:

"I sent a request to the permanent council December 27, for a committee to be appointed to confer with me about the whole matter under dispute. The request was not granted. Had it been I feel sure a satisfactory conclusion would have been reached.

"It was, perhaps, unfortunate that I had my name dropped from the church roll during the recent trouble. The decision was not a sudden one, though it came unexpectedly at most. It had long been known to some of my brethren in the ministry that because of changing religious views, I contemplated leaving the ministry. It had been even longer known to some of my church members that for the same reason I expected to leave both the ministry and denomination. Notwithstanding this, had my request for the appointment of a committee been granted by the council, I would have remained in the church until the controversy was settled.

"I have purposely refrained from a denial of the many charges made, because I am convinced that those who need a denial would not and do not accept one when made. That is human nature.

"These few words are not written in any spirit of criticism, but merely to state to the public my past attitude and some of its reasons."

EVENING CIRCULATION AT PUBLIC LIBRARY.

In order to extend the library's service toward the commuter and those engaged in local business, books will be circulated every evening from 7:30 to 8:30 on and after February 1. For the present the Saturday evening circulating hours will remain the same, namely from 7 until 9 o'clock.

It is expected that those heretofore prevented from using the library on account of the lack of evening circulation, will avail themselves at once of this new privilege.

TYLER AGAIN HEADS WHITE PLAGUE SOCIETY

Officers were elected and reports presented at the annual meeting of th trustes of the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield, held in the rooms of the Charity Organization Society in the Babcock building, last night. The reports all showed that the league has been making excellent progress and has much cause for gratification.

The treasurer, James P. Murray, reported a balance of $200, and the Red Cross Stamp committee reported the gross receipts from the sale were $435.72. The State and National Red Cross societies received 18 per cent. of that amount leaving the local league $357.29. This is $100 more than last year.

These officers were chosen, all being re-elected, except George L. Babcock, who succeeded Charles Dutcher, who retires on account of illness: President, William S. Tyler; first vice-president, George L. Babcock; second vice-president, Leighton Calkins; secretary, Dr. F. E. DuBois; treasurer, James P. Murray.

Dr. Edward Krans reported for the tuberculosis class, stating that three meetings and socials have been held, with an average attendance of fourteen. Miss Kathleen Ryder attends to the social features at these meetings.

The Park Comedy Club has promised to give one and possibly two plays after Easter for the benefit of the league and this will be a great help in carrying on the work during the coming year.

THE SHADES OF BLUE.

Blue, that color that both blonde and brunette can wear with becoming results, is a color that will be continued into the early spring.

A peculiar green blue, named for the sea, is being shown in Paris. It is iridescent and therefore friendly when the question of alliance with other shades is considered.

Gendarme blue has a greenish cast and shows up well under artificial light. It is the color of the uniforms of the French soldier.

Gobelin blue bids fair to have a tremendous adoption. It is soft and combines with nearly every other shade.

Sapphire blue, especially in satin and velvet, will be a favorite in trimmings. Jewels of this shade will be extensively used.

There is the king's blue, or "bleu de roi," as you have perhaps seen it. It is between a sapphire blue and sky blue and is a delightful compromise. It is particularly good for trimming in pipings, bands, bows or braiding.

MINISTER'S ADDRESS ON PARENTHOOD TRAINING

An enjoyable session was spent at the Franklin School last evening by the Parent-Teachers Association of that school when nearly 150 members and friends of the association gathered to hear an address by Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church. A program of vocal and instrumental music was rendered and a social hour was spent and refreshments served.

Rev. Mr. Mathiews spoke on "Training for Parenthood" giving views on the necessity of parents understanding their children. He said that boys would be boys no matter what their environment, and it is the duty of parents to study their offspring with a view to learning more about the real nature of the boy. The father should represent the sterner part of the household, but his sternness should not be of the kind that frightens, but rather the kind that reveals dignity with love. The mother's duty is naturally of the tenderest nature and a careful study and admonishment will do much more toward building up her children's character than will nagging.

During the evening Charles L. Lewis sang as did Mrs. Charles Shreve. Miss Slight rendered piano solos.

Modern Possibilities.

"Doing well, young man, I see."
"No, just struggling along."
"But that fine adding machine?"
"A demonstrator left it for trial."
"That new typewriter?"
"An agent forced it on me for a month."
"At least those expensive cigars denote ready money."
"No. I smoke ten and return the rest."

Universal Activity.

Everybody does his best,
Human life is void of rest,
Some strive to do some simple thing,
And they who shun endeavoring,
E'en though they strike a restful pose,
Are very busy, heaven knows,
From early morn to set of sun,
Still knocking what the rest have done.

Advice.

"That man always seems willing to give advice."

"Yes. He's one of those people that you esteem much more highly for the kind of advice they give than for the kind they take.

Husband—I hear that Miss Burton has made up her mind to go in the chorus.

MEASURES INTRODUCED IN SENATE AND HOUSE

The Assembly held only a brief session yesterday at Trenton, the principal business being the introduction of a big batch of bills, including sixteen measures put in by the majority leader, Mr. Matthews, for all kinds of fish and game reforms.

Assemblyman Meyer, of Sussex, put in a bill appropriating $15,000 for the survey of an automobile road along the Delawar River from Trenton to the New York State line. This would be an ideal route to Delaware Water Gap and other mountain resorts.

State Controller West sent to the Senate and House a statement showing that the State will need for the fiscal year, beginning November 1, 1911, $5,370,917.03, with a supplemental appropriation of $1,592,151.05 for the current year, ending October 31 next.

The House received from the Senate a message asking for the naming of a committee to confer on the subject of cutting off the introduction of bills several days before the end of the session, with final adjournment at the exact hour agreed upon. This is a move to end the night long sessions of recent years, when bills have been rushed through without the proper attention from sleepy lawmakers. The House filed the message, but is expected to act upon it favorably when the right time arrives.

In the Senate the Republicans took another big stride toward "progressivism," when the majority received from committee bills providing for direct primary nomination of candidates for Governor and Congress. These measures are in line with Governor Wilson, and the Republicans are determined to snatch the glory for them from the Democrats.

Senator Nichols put in the direct primary act for the election of United States Senator, as now in force in Oregon. It abolishes party lines, and only one candidate's name will go before the Legislature.

The Finance Committee favorably reported the bill introduced by Senator Nichols to ratify an act of Congress to provide for an income tax amendment to the constitution..

A resolution protesting against the admitting of non-resident automobiles for fifteen days each year without payment of a fee was offered by Senator Gaunt, of Gloucester. Senator Leavitt introduced a joint resolution reciting the fact that at the deeper waterways conference a committee, consisting of David Baird, of Camden; Samuel Heilner, of Spring Lake; Peter Campbell, of Newark; Benjamin F. Brown, of Matawan, and F. W. Donnelly, of Trenton, was named to present to the Legislature a plan for a deep waterway across the State to be free to the commerce of the world, when dug by the federal government, and urging the Legislature to approve the scheme and appropriate up to $500,000 for buying of the site, which is to be presented to the government on the pledge that no tolls shall be exacted by any one when the canal is built.

The majority leader, Dr. Prince, put in an honest weights and measure bill, providing for the creation of a State department to prevent the use of short weights by food dealers.

Senator Fielder introduced a bill providing for the abandonment of the Morris and Essex Canal within the boundaries of Jersey City. Similar bills for the abandonment of the whole canal have been defeated in several recent Legislatures.

A joint session will be held on February 7 for the election of a State Controller and several hundred Commissioners of Deeds. Edward I. Edwards, a Jersey City banker, will be chosen as Controller.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

George Meyer, an employe at the bakery in the Goth building, was arrested by Marshal Benson, on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct by the proprietor. Meyer became decidedly abusive to the complainant's wife and, it is alleged struck her several times. The defendant was arraigned before Recorder Campbell and after promising to behave himself in the future was fined $3.

Dunellen residents who were inconvenienced by the enforcement of the Sunday closing laws are now laughing in their sleeves at Plainfield's plight. Through the ruling of Mayor Moy, the same condition of affairs prevails there only a little worse, and the Dunellen people are beginning to believe they are not so bad off after all.

The heavy wind of the past few days almost wrecked a large plate glass window in the McVey store of the W. G. Runyon building. It bulged so badly that a support had to be placed about it. The glass catches the full force of the wind because of an eddy caused by swirling in a deep entrance.

Harry Piddington, of New Market, has returned to work at the J. D. Loizeaux plant on Rock avenue, after several weeks detention because of an injury to his hand.

Dunbar Brothers, proprietors of the local cag service, have added a six-cylinder automobile to their equipment.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nonnumacker, of the borough, wer guests of friends in Elizabeth Sunday.

CALVIN B. ORCUTT DIES.

Death Comes Unexpected to An Elizabeth Man.

Elizabeth, Jan. 31.—Calvin B. Orcutt, president of the Newport News Ship-Building Company and of the Baltimore and Ohio Coal Company, died yesterday afternoon at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, where he had gone for an operation. His death was unexpected. Word of his demise reached Elizabeth last night and W. W. Willett, a relative, went at once to Baltimore to make arrangements for the funeral.

Mr. Orcutt had been ailing for some time, having recently been confined to a New York institution. He had lived in Elizabeth all his life and rose to a position of wealth and prominence through sheer ability. He was president for many years of the local Y. M. C. A., an elder in the Second Presbyterian church and also Sunday-school superintendent.

His home was at 1019 East Jersey street. A wife and two daughters survive him. One of the daughters is Mrs. Washburn, wife of a flour manufacturer. Mr. Orcutt was considered an expert in the ship-building line and his advice was often sought by naval architects. He was noted for his philanthropy, having given a building for use of the nurses at the Elizabeth General Hospital. He was the donor of a yearly gold medal to the nurse who most excelled at her work.

BROCADE MUFFS, FUR EDGED.

Some of the quiet patterned brocades when just trimmed with a narrow edging of fur are being used with much success as wraps and muffs, and are, moreover, rather pleasantly novel when worn with tailor-made suits. The tailored suits grow more informal every week—it seems a long cry from the severe suit of masculine cut whose correct accompaniments were a linen col'ar and tie and a severe hat, to the time.

Added to these advantages we are now permitted by fashion to drape any and every variety of scarf upon our costumes ,except, of course, those of lace and filmy materials; this is doubtless due this season in some measure to the reign of the long coat and cloak, which takes the place of the tailor suit for outdoor wear, and allow of much latitude in one's general dress. Some of the results have already proved different from the general costumes of winter.

The flannel shirt blouse is not to be seen very much, the graceful long coats being sufficiently cosy to permit of dainty frocks and blouses being worn with comfort beneath them. This has had the effect of encouraging hats of a much less heavy and wintry type; the dull felt hat at times takes some quite astonishingly skittish forms; as, for example, when a knob crown has several frilly brims of silver and white lace hanging it lamp shade fashion around the face.

NOTES OF INTEREST TO COLLEGE GRADUATES

The University of Michigan claims a larger alumni delegation in Congress than any other university, twenty-seven former students of the university, four of whom are Senators and members of the present Congress.

Harvard has sixteen of its alumni in Congress and Yale and the University of Virginia have fifteen each. Ten members of the alumni of the University of Iowa are in Congress; the University of Wisconsin and Cumberland University have nine each; Georgetown University eight; Columbia University and the University of Georgia, seven each; Washington and Lee University, six; University of Pennsylvania, aVnderbilt University, University of Missouri and Cincinnati Law School, five each; Princeton, Amherst, Trinity, University of South Carolina, Dartmouth, University of the South, University of Arkansas, Tulane University, Bowdoin, Albany Law School and the University of Texas have each four members of their alumni in Congress.

The University of Pennsylvania has 5,389 students and 499 officers of instruction. This is a gain in students over last year of 356. The proofs of the catalogue, from which these figures have been taken, show that the men come from every State in the United States with the exception of Oklahoma, and from forty-five foreign countries. Philadelphia contributes 2,240 students, and Pennsylvania, outside of Philadelphia, 1,497. This makes the total for the whole State 3,737, which is a little more than two-thirds of the entire registration. The registration of the college is 3,730, a gain of 443 over last year. New Jersey contributes 477 students and New York State 283.

Country boys make better students than their city cousins, if one may judge from an analysis of the fellows working under the Harrison Foundation at the university. This shows that out of thirty-two persons holding fellowships or scholarships, sixteen come from towns of less than 6,000 inhabitants, four from towns of less than 15,000, three from cities under 50,000, four from cities of more than 100,000, four from Philadelphia and one from a suburb of Baltimore. The men holding these scholarships are representative of the best students not only at the university but also in the United States. Each of the four Philadelphians who are holding fellowships was graduated from the university, and for this reason gives his residence as Philadelphia. One of these, however, has only adopted Philadelphia as his home. This makes the total number of Harrison fellows coming from large cities seven, as against a total of twenty for towns under 15,000.

Dean George E. Fisher, in discussing this matter, said that, while he had made no analysis of his records, he had noticed that as a general rule the men from the smaller towns were good students. "This is probably due to the fact that the boy in a country town is more observant than his brother in the city," he said. "Furthermore, the boy from the country comes to the university to study, whereas in many cases the Philadelphians attend the university simply for the sake of going to college. One thing is certain. The country schools do not offer as great opportunties as the city schools. But perhaps it is for this very reason that the country boy appreciates opportunity when he finds it and studies the harder."

PRETTY OPERA BAG.

About the simplest possible opera bag is made of a piece of satin, linen of moire, sixteen by seven inches, with a lining of china silk the same size.

Sew bag material and lining together and stitch up the sides. Make slots for the draw strings, thread silk cord through them, and there you are!

Of course, if you wish to be a little more elaborate, embroidery and hand-painting are in order; and then there are the little pockets inside for powder puffs, mirror, theatre tickets, etc. But the bag is certainly most easily made, and a very pretty and dainty one it is.

Mighty Structures.

"I never could understand why those great pyramids were built in Egypt."

"It never occurred to me to figure that far back. I can't even understand why some of those western millionaires built palaces in New York.

BLOUSES IN FAVOR.

Form an Important Part of the Afternoon Costume.

Many of Them Are Veiled and Harmonize With the Coat and Skirt With Which They Are Worn.

One does not hear very much about shirt waists nowadays, though those practical garments still have their uses, but the blouse is a very important item in the fashionable wardrobe despite the vogue of the one piece trotting frock.

Under a fur coat or a separate coat the one piece frock is charming and satisfactory, but there are many days in New York's changeable weather when a fur coat is too warm for comfort, and the coat and skirt suit is as desirable as it ever was. This winter it is even more popular than ever, for the vogue of the velvet coat and skirt makes such a costume suitable for occasions when one might not consider the less dressy cloth tailored costume appropriate.

Many of the smartest tailored models in velvet are of the three piece type, a misnomer since the model is usually a one piece frock with coat. To avoid uncomfortable warmth all the upper part of the bodice is made of chiffon lace or other sheer stuff.

More thoroughly practical is a real three piece model with coat, skirt and separate blouse, for with such an arrangement the degree of elaborateness in the costume may be adjusted to a sliding scale.

As a rule, however, the blouse of today is not what people once understood by a separate blouse. It must match the costume or at least harmonize with it so admirably that it seems an integral part of it. All of which does not mean that the suit material or trimming must enter into the composition of the blouse, though this arrangement is popular, and where the three pieces are turned out by one maker one is likely to find this note.

The designers have taken up this problem of the chic blouse so earnestly that it is now possible to obtain ready made things of the kind in almost any modish color and in all degrees of elegance, and of course these models, while harmonizing with the coat and skirt, do not repeat their materials.

Chiffon is the most important of the blouse materials, with marquisette and nets, charmeuse, meteore and the various exquisite supple silken stuffs helping in the good work.

There are many good blouse models in combinations of satin and chiffon, the satin being of the very supple, light crepe kind. A good blouse of this class is illustrated here and may easily be copied.

In this as in almost all the season's blouses the sleeve and body or yoke are cut together.

Occasionally one sees a hemstitched sailor collar or soft revers of chiffon in brilliant color upon a dark chiffon or crepe blouse, and hemstitched bands, or, rather, hems of contrasting color, may be the only trimmings upon a dark or neutral toned blouse.

The collarless neck is seen in these models as in many other blouse models, but when this is not desired a high collar of the material may be used, or a transparent collar of plain white chiffon or net is in order. One good black model has the satin running to the base of the throat, where it is finished by a turndown collar three inches wide at back and sides and running to rather deep points in front.

For youthful or very slender wearers the blouses with basques are becoming, and some of these are exceedingly good looking. In line they remind one of the once popular jersey, but resemblance ceases there, for these new models are of silk, almost entirely covered by fine embroidery design of cord and braid and silk.

The Last Chinese Actor.

Many visitors to the Celestial kingdom have noted the absence of women from the stage. All the roles in a Chinese play are taken by men. This singular custom is traced back to a woman's whim. The Emperor Yung Tsching married an actress at the beginning of the eighteenth century, when women were allowed on the stage. The emperor died, and the empress dowager ruled the country for her son, the Prince Kim Sung. To satisfy her vanity this shrewd and most peculiar woman issued a decree in the year 1736 forbidding, under penalty of instant death by the sword of the executioner, any member of her sex to appear on the Chinese stage. "After me, no one," said the empress dowager, and since her day no woman within the reach of Chinese law has dared to test the strength of her decree.

The Boy Told Them.

"An odd incident happened in Albany a number of years ago, when I was a member of the legislature," said a judge. "One day for some reason a member wanted to verify a certain passage from the Ten Commandments, but when a Bible was handed him he did not know where to look. Neither did any of his colleagues know. Nearly everybody was aware that the divine laws were somewhere hidden away in the Old Testament, but this was the end of the combined knowledge of the assembly. At this juncture a meek faced little page, a youngster of some twelve summers, piped up that if the gentleman would look in the twentieth chapter of Exodus he would find the commandments. It was a rather disconcerting thing that a chamber of grown men had to acknowledge the superior information of a child."—Baltimore American.

Out and In Politics.

Newspaper men in a large city of the middle west have had a difficult time trying to elicit political information from a certain politician in that town who in answer to all questions invariably offers the stereotyped response, "I am out of politics."

Inasmuch as the man is an important figure in the local political turmoil, this response is not taken seriously by the interviewers, to whom, indeed, its repeated utterance has become a trifle monotonous.

Not long ago a veteran reporter succeeded in gaining the presence of the politician, to whom he put the query, "What's going on in politics?"

"Oh, I'm out of politics," he said.

"That's understood, of course," quickly responded the scribe. "Would you mind letting us know what progress you're making toward breaking in again?"—Exchange.

Then She Fainted.

Little Mr. Crumpson arrived home one evening rather earlier than usual to find his wife away on a shopping expedition. He picked up a ladies' paper and was soon interested in a recipe for making ginger biscuits.

"Happy thought!" said Crumpson. "I'll give the missus a pleasant surprise." And when the lady arrived home she found a nice plate of biscuits on the table.

"Splendid, George, dear!" she said as she nibbled one of the dainties. "What do you call them?"

"Ginger snaps, pet; all my own make," was the proud reply.

"Where did you get the ground ginger, George?"

"In the cupboard, darling. That green tin, you know."

"Cupboard! Green tin!" came the exclamation. "Oh, George, that was roach poison!"—London Scraps.

A Freak of the Cards.

It is well known to card players that the number of combinations that can be made with a deck of fifty-two cards is practically unlimited, and many stories of freak hands at poker have gone the rounds for years. It is probable, however, that five hands dealt at a "family" game in Germantown one evening will stand as the most remarkable on record. In the game were three women and two men, and the pack had been in use for half an hour when each of the players picked up a "pat" hand, which resulted in some lively betting of penny chips. When the showdown came it was found that the hands in order from the dealer were an eight full, a seven full, a six full, a five full and a four full. As the dealer had the lowest hand he was not under suspicion, but the five hands were kept as a curiosity.—Philadelphia Record.

A "Pretty Compliment."

Aaron Bancroft, the father of the great American historian, was a Massachusetts clergyman who revolted against the stern theology of the day. The young minister found himself held at arm's length by the surrounding clergy. In "The Life and Letters of George Bancroft" Mr. M. A. DeW. Howe quotes the following item from the old minister's "Memoranda:"

"An honest but not very intelligent farmer of my parish some ten years ago accosted me in this manner:

"'Well, Mr. Bancroft, what do you think the people of the old parish say of you now?'

"I answered, 'I hope something very good.'

"They say, 'If we find fault with him he does not mind it at all, and if we praise him he does not mind it, but keeps steadily on his own way. We therefore have concluded that it is best to let him alone.'

"The farmer mentioned the fact as a subject of laughter, but I thought and still think that, taking the declaration in its bearings, it was the prettiest compliment I have received through my whole life."

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

The Great Conservation Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

It was hardly more than sunrise as they mounted their ponies and started on their trail, which led sharply upward after they left the canyon. The wind was strong and stinging cold.

Taking pity on Edwards, who was shivering, Cavanagh turned off the trail into a sheltered nook behind some pine trees.

"How do you happen to be reduced to herding sheep?" he asked. "You look like a man who has seen better days."

Edwards, chafing his thin fingers to warm them, made reluctant answer. "It's a long story, Mr. Ranger, and it concerns a whole lot of other people—some of them decent folks—so I'd rather not go into it."

"John Barleycorn was involved, I reckon."

"Sure thing. He's generally always in it."

"You'd better take my gloves. It's likely to snow in half an hour. Go ahead. I'm a younger man than you are."

The other made a decent show of resistance, but finally accepted the offer, saying: "You certainly are white to me. I want to apologize for making that attempt to sneak away that night. I had a powerful good reason for not staying any longer."

Ross smiled a little. "You showed bad judgment—as it turned out."

"I sure did. That girl can shoot. Her gun was steady as a doorknob. She filled the door. Where did she learn to hold a gun like that?"

"Her father taught her, so she said."

"She wouldn't remember me—an old cuss like me—but I've seen her with Wetherford when she was a kidlet. I never thought she'd grow up into such a queen. She's a wonder. Lize looked sick to me. She ought to send her girl away or get out. As you say, the Fork is no kind of a place for such a girl."

He spoke with a good deal of feeling, and the ranger studied him with deepening interest. He had taken on dignity in the heat of his protest, and in his eyes blazed something that was both manly and admirable.

"You're just the kind of a figure to catch a girl's eye. She likes you. I could see that, but you've got a good opinion of yourself. You're an educated man. Do you intend to marry her?"

"See here, Mr. Sheep Herder, you better ride on up to your camp." And Ross turned to mount his horse.

"Wait a minute," called the other man, and his voice surprised the ranger with a note of authority. "I was terribly taken with that girl, and I owe you a whole lot, but I've got to know one thing. I can see you're full of her and jealous as a bear of any other suitor. Now, I want to know whether you intend to marry her or whether you're just playing with her."

Ross was angry now. "What I intend to do is none of your business."

The other man was suddenly ablaze with passion. His form had lost its stoop. His voice was firm. "I merely want to say that if you fool that girl I'll kill you!"

"I'M HER FATHER!"

Ross stared at him, quite convinced that he had gone entirely mad. "That's mighty chivalrous of you, Mr. Sheep Herder," he replied cuttingly, "but I'm at a loss to understand this sudden indignation on your part."

"You needn't be. I'm her father!"

Cavanagh fairly reeled before this retort. His head rang as if he had been struck with a club. He perceived the truth of the man's words instantly. He gasped, "Good God, man, are you Ed Wetherford?"

The answer was quick. "That's who I am!" Then his voice changed. "But I don't want the women to know I'm alive. I didn't intend to let anybody know it. All the same, I mean it. If you or any man tries to abuse her I'll kill him! I've loaded her up with trouble, as you say, but I'm going to do what I can to protect her now that I'm in the county again."

Ross, confused by this new complication in the life of the girl he was beginning to love, stared at his companion in dismay. Was it not enough that Virginia's mother should be a slattern and a termagant? At last he spoke. "Where have you been all these years?"

"In the Texas 'pen.' I served nine years there."

"What for?"

"Shooting a man. It was a case of self defense, but his family had more money and influence than I did, so I went down the road. As soon as I got out I started north—just the way a dog will point toward home. I didn't intend to come here, but some way I couldn't keep away. I shied around the outskirts of the Fork, picking up odd jobs of sheep herding just to have time to turn things over. I know what you're thinking about—you're saying to yourself, 'Well, here's a nice father-in-law!' Well, now, I don't know anything about your people, but the Wetherfords are as good as anybody. If I hadn't come out into this cursed country, where even women go shooting wild, I would have been in congress; but, being hot headed, I must mix in. I'm not excusing myself, you understand. I'm not a desirable addition to any man's collection of friends, but I can promise you this—no one but yourself shall ever know who I am. At the same time, you can't deceive my girl without my being named in the funeral that will follow."

"You are only a distant and romantic figure to Lee—a part of the dead past," said Cavanagh. "She remembers you as a bold rider and a wondrously brave and chivalrous father."

"She must never know. You must promise never to tell her."

"I promise that," Cavanagh said, and Edwards went on:

"If I could bring something to her—prove to her I'm still a man—it might do to tell her, but I'm a branded man now and an old man, and there's no hope for me. I worked in one of the machine shops down there, and it took the life out of me. Then, too, I left a bad name here in the Fork. I know that. Those big cattlemen fooled me into taking their side of the war. I staked everything I had on them, and then they railroaded me out of the county. So, you see, I'm double crossed, no matter where I turn."

Every word he uttered made more apparent to Cavanagh that Lee Virginia would derive nothing but pain and disheartenment from a knowledge that her father lived. "She must be spared this added burden of shameful inheritance," he decided.

The other man seemed to understand something of the ranger's indignant pity, for he repeated: "I want you to swear not to let Lee know I'm alive, no matter what comes. She must not be saddled with my record. Let her go on thinking well of me. Give me your word." He held out an insistent palm.

Ross yielded his hand, and in spite of himself his tenderness for the broken man deepened. The sky was darkening in the west, and, with a glance upward, he said, "I reckon we'd better make your camp soon or you'll be chilled to the bone."

They mounted hastily and rode away, each feeling that his relationship to the other had completely changed. Wetherford marveled over the evident culture and refinement of the ranger. "He's none too good for her, no matter who he is," he said.

CHAPTER XIV.

PLAGUE AND MURDER.

UPON leaving timber line Cavanagh and Wetherford entered upon a wide and sterile slope high on the rocky breast of the great peak whose splintered crest lorded the range. Snow fields lay all about, and a few feet higher up the canyons were filled with ice. It was a savage and tempest swept spot in which to pitch a tent, but there among the rocks shivered the minute canvas home of the shepherd, and close beside it, guarded by a lone dog and lying like a thick spread flock of rimy bowlders (almost unnoticeable in their silent immobility) huddled the sheep.

"There's your house," shouted Ross to Wetherford.

The older man, with white face of dismay, looked about him, unable to make reply.

"Hello, there!" shouted Ross, wondering at the absence of human life about the camp. "Hello, the house!"

Receiving no answer to his hail, he turned to Wetherford. "Looks as if Ambro has pulled out and left the collie to tend the flock. He's been kind of seedy for some days."

Dismounting, he approached the tent. The collie, who knew him, seemed to understand his errand, for he leaped upon him as if to kiss his cheek. Ross put him down gently. "You're almost too glad to see me, old fellow. I wonder how long you've been left here alone."

Thereupon he opened the tied flap, but started back with instant perception of something wrong, for there, on his pile of ragged quilts, lay the Basque herder, with flushed face and rolling eyes, crazed with fever and entirely helpless. "You'd better not come in here, Wetherford," Ross warned. "Joe is here, horribly sick, and I'm afraid it's something contagious. It may be smallpox."

Wetherford recoiled a step. "Small pox! What makes you think that?"

"Well, these Basques have been having it over in their settlement, and, besides, it smells like it." He listened a moment. "I'm afraid Joe's in for it. He's crazy with it. But he's a human being, and we can't let him die here alone. You rustle some wood for the stove, and I'll see what I can do for him."

Wetherford was old and wasted and thin blooded, but he had never been a coward, and in his heart there still burned a small flame of this youthful reckless, generous daring. Pushing Cavanagh one side, he said with firm decision: "You keep out of there. I'm the one to play nurse. This is my job."

"Nonsense! I am younger and stronger than you."

"Get away!" shouted the older man. "Gregg hired me to do this work, and it don't matter whether I live or die. But you've got something to do in the world. My girl needs you, and she don't need me, so get out of here and stay out. Go bring me that wood and I'll go in and see what's the matter."

Cavanagh looked him in the face an instant. "Very well," said he, "I'll do as you say. There's no use of our both taking chances."

It was beginning to rain, and the tent was dark and desolate, but as the fire in the little stove commenced to snarl and the smoke to pour out of the pipe the small domicile took on cheer. Wetherford knew how to care for the sick and in the shelter of the canvas wall developed unforeseen vigor and decision. It was amazing to Cavanagh to witness his change of manner.

Soon a pan of water was steaming, and some hot stones were at the sufferer's feet, and when Wetherford appeared at the door of the tent his face was almost happy. "Kill a sheep. There isn't a thing but a heel of bacon and a little flour in the place."

Twenty miles of most difficult trail lay between Cavanagh's cabin and this spot. To carry the sick man on his horse would not only be painful to the sufferer, but dangerous to the rescuer, for if the Basque were really ill of smallpox contagion would surely follow. On the other hand, to leave him to die here unaided seemed inhuman, impossible.

"There is only one thing to do," he called to Wetherford, "and that is for me to ride back to the station and bring up some extra bedding and my own tent and so camp down beside you."

"All right, but remember I've established a quarantine. I'll crack your head if you break over the line an inch."

There was no longer any feeling of reaching up or reaching down between the two men—they were equals. Wetherford, altogether admirable, seemed to have regained his manhood as he stood in the door of the tent confronting the ranger. "This Basque ain't much of a find; but, as you say, he's human, and we can't let him lie here and die. I'll stay with him till you can find a doctor or till he dies."

"I take off my hat to you," responded Cavanagh. "You are a man."

Once back at his cabin after leaving Wetherford, Cavanagh set himself to cooking some food to take back with him to the peak. He brought in his pack horse and burdened him with camp outfit and utensils and extra clothing. He filled his pockets with such medicines as he possessed, and so at last, just as night was falling, he started back over his difficult trail.

Wetherford met him at the door, no longer the poor old tramp, but a priest, one who has devoted himself to Christ's service.

"How is he?" asked the ranger.

"Delirious," replied the herder. "I've had to hold him to his bed. I'm glad you've come. It's lonesome up here. Don't come too near. Set your tent down there by the trees. I can't have you infected. Keep clear of me and this camp."

"I've got some food and some extra clothing for you."

"Put 'em down here, and in the morning drive these sheep away. That noise disturbs the dago, and I don't like it myself; they sound lonesome and helpless. That dog took 'em away for awhile, but brought 'em back again. Poor devil, he don't know what to think of it all."

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

On Saturday next, matinee and night, L. S. Sire, manager of the Bijou Theatre, New York City, and controlling the production of Miss May Robson and other successes, will present Wilton Lackeye in his play, "The Stranger," at the Plainfield theatre. The work is by C. T. Dazey, a well known playwright, and deals, in part, with politics and corporations. Mr. Lackaye is conceded to be one of the very best actors on the contemporary stage; convincing evidence of this having been demonstrated by his portrayals of Sevengali in "Trilby," "The Baron Chevrial," the Rabbi in "The children of The Ghetto," "The Pit," "The Law and the Man," and "The Battle." It was his success in each of these plays that gained him the reputation he enjoys among the local theatre-goers and in "The Stranger," he sustains his reputation for clever impersonation of character studies, by portraying a physically strong and rugged American, typical of the men who force their way to recognition by untiring energy.

CLERGYMAN'S ACCUSATION STIRS UP HORNET'S NEST

Prison for contempt of court may be the fate of those who were instrumental in making public charges against the administration of justice in Bergen county. Justice Parker, sitting with County Judge Demarest, at Hackensack, held an informal investigation of the charges made by the Rev. E. A. Montgomery of Tenafly, and forwarded to the Governor and given to the press. Governor Wilson has turned the charges over to the Attorney General for investigation, but any action by that officer will be in addition to that which may be taken by Justice Parker. If the Justice remains in the same mind as he was today, it is likely it will be many days before such charges are again hurled at the administration of justice in that county.

Before opening court Justice Parker directed that the Rev. Mr. Montgomery and Recorder Maughan of Tenafly be in court yesterday afternoon. They were on hand, and the Supreme Court and County Judges took their places on the bench, while Prosecutor Wendell Wright took his place before the bar.

Dr. Montgomery said he had no personal information about the three cases to which he referred as instances of the failure of justice. He based his assertions on hearsay information. Much of this was given to him by Recorder Vaughan. He did not know that the case of the man accused of attacking his niece occurred seven years ago nor that the case of a man stealing lumber was three years old, while Wright had been in office since September, 1909.

Recorder Maughan said he firmly believed personal and political influence caused miscarriages of justice in Bergen county. He said he never sent cases to Hackensack for adjucation when he could dispose of them himself. He did this because he did not want to burden the Grand Jury with small cases and because he believed the system of drawing grand juries was wrong, and that the jurymen, being politicians, were susceptible to influence.

Justice Parker said Judge Demarest agreed with him that the whole matter savors strongly of contempt of court. He regretted that Montgomery, who was supposed to preach justice and charity, should have been the one to voice such charges, when there was no adequate basis for them. He was also inclined to hold the recorder and those responsible for the circulation and publication of the charges for contempt. He would leave the institution of proceedings with Prosecutor Wright Wright took the ground that as he was concerned he would rather the court would order him to take action, and the court made such an order.

THE COLONEL DECLARES HE IS A 'PROGRESSIVE'

Much enthusiasm was stirred up at the fifth annual dollar dinner of the Progressive Republicans of Hudson county, at Grand View Hall, at Jersey City, last night, by a message from Colonel Roosevelt. The message was in the form of a letter to Colonel George L. Record, and 600 Progressives made a big noise when it was read. The colonel wrote as follows:

"My Dear Mr. Record:

"I am sorry not to be able to accept your invitation to sepak to the Progressive Republican league of Hudson county, at your dinner next Monday night. As I have said elsewhere, 'I am a Progressive; I could not be anything else.' For the Progressives are those who really believe in the people, who stand for the fundamentals of popular rule.

"We must work and we must fight for the restoration of popular rule, striving to secure the adoption of such instruments of popular rule as the direct primary, strict election laws, and corrupt practices acts, the popular election of United States Senators, the direct nomination of delegates to presidential conventions, and, with careful limitations and safeguard, the referendum and initiative, where they are shown to be needed.

"But we must not forget that these things, after all, are merely means and not ends in themselves. These means are good only if, when they are adopted, we use them so as to secure the true object of government by the people, which is the welfare of the people. The true end is the development of the right kind of private citizen, and the right kind of public servant.

"Yours faithfully,

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

United States Senator Clapp, of Minnesota, as the first speaker, said: "If Lincoln were living today he would be laboring for the freedom of the white men, as he labored for the freedom of the blacks, and if McKinley were living today, he, too, would be dealing with the problems of today and tomorrow."

Gifford Pinchot said the movement is bigger than old political parties, and he believed the hope of the Republican party lies with the Progressives.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Miss Marion Lynn, second vice-president of the Junior Epworth League of the First M. E. church, is preparing an interesting program for the meeting to be held Friday afternoon in Vincent chapel.

The First Baptist, New Market, Scotch Plains and Temple Baptist churches will unite with the Park Avenue Baptist church, in an all-day prayer service on Friday. There will be a basket lunch at the noon hour.

The Sunday-school of the Park Avenue Baptist church will have charge of the prayer-meeting at the church, Wednesday evening, February 15. George E. Hall has charge of the program now in preparation, and it will be especially attractive.

Under the direction of Mrs. J. M. McNaughton, Mrs. G. M. Rittenhouse and Mrs. Samuel Bingaman, one of the chain of teas will be held in Vincent chapel of the First M. E. church, Thursday afternoon, February 9. The women are requested to bring their fancy work.
